The Brandon negro school is expected to have lights within a short time, according to Principal A. J. Finch. "With electric lights" Finch says, "we can have many programs with ease that we have long neglected. This convenience will enable us to use our building for many more purposes. The new trend in education places special emphasis upon supervised recreational activities, and fortunately, our building is so constructed that we can use it for auditorium purposes as well as skating, indoor tennis, and the like. This will make possible a decrease in crime in sundry ways in view of the fact that we plan having different types of programs at least twice weekly. This will keep both mind and body busy and clear the streets of unbecoming happenings that inevitably must come unless the negro youth is considered in our social and human problems."

Finch solicits the aid of every one who is interested in this type of development of the Negro youth in Brandon. Several white friends have already pledged themselves to sponsor the basketball team, as well as the proposed football organization, now under study. "Any cooperation given us," Finch says, "will be a great contribution toward the future happiness and safety of our community."

The Brandon negro school has to its credit, four volunteer negroes now in government camps. Its graduates have made exceptionally high marks in leading schools. Recently a good report reached Brandon from Grossmont, Cal., regarding the progress of Sam Nathan, former negro boy of this town.

New Negro School May Be Delayed

An unfortunate delay is holding up construction of the new $75,000 colored school building in Aberdeen. It is a WPA project, and the architectural design has been apprved. The location has been secured—a most desirable one, too—and the project has been approved, all the way up to President Roosevelt. Nothing remains but to get a "work order." This is done upon the recommendation of the WPA office at Tupelo, and an O. K. from Hon. Roland Wall, WPA Administrator at Jackson. The school Trustees have made two trips to Tupelo to get the work order released, and one trip to Jackson, Miss. They were told that WPA funds were likely to be cut down, and the school would have to wait until July 1st, when new funds would be available. As we understand it, work orders will be given for WPA projects where no material is to be bought, and the latter is what is holding up the Aberdeen school project. It is to be a concrete outer wall like the New Armory. Sand and gravel are plentiful and cheap in this locality. WPA labor can haul it from the nearby gravel pits. They can also mix the concrete, and put it into place. With the help of 3 or 4 skilled men, WPA labor can do the entire job. The negro school is badly needed. Present building is badly over-crowded, a dangerous fire hazard exists. Our people have had two crop failures in a row; they need work badly —whites and blacks. It has been a long time since there was so much unemployment here. No building work is in progress, of any consequence. Carpenters, plumbers, electricians, bricklayers, concrete workmen must leave home and work at some army camp in distant states, if they get anything to do. We do not believe the WPA authorities would hold up this job, if they knew the true conditions here. If a word could be gotten to President Roosevelt, or to Mrs. Roosevelt, setting forth the bad economic conditions here, and the glaring need of this new school for the negroes, we believe somebody would "touch the wires" and a work order would be issued. If some of our colored friends could enlist the support of prominent men of their race, and get them to intercede with Washington for this project it might help.

New Warren County Negro School

HEARTY EATERS

These boys are 2 of the 109 children who are served well-balanced meals at lunch time each day by the WPA school lunch project at Heck's Grove, near Warrenton. The WPA, in 255 school lunch units, served 566,790 lunches to Negro children at school each month in North Carolina.

New School WPA-Built

The school is one of the many facilities for the education of Negro children where the county commissioners or county school board sought the helping hand of WPA to assist them with the dual problem of providing jobs for their needy unemployed and school buildings for Negroes.

Negro children from the surrounding countryside are, like their white neighbors, conveyed to and from school in busses. At school, a corps of competent teachers, headed by the school's principal, Charlie I. Martin, are raising the educational level of 120 children of their race.

No school in the state can boast of being kept cleaner or better arranged than the one at Heck's Grove.

The average daily attendance at the school is 109 pubils. Possibly one item found there is not duplicated in any other school in the state; all of the children eat their lunches in the school's lunchroom. For those children whose parents cannot pay for their noon-day meal, the lunches are free. The school lunch program carried on at Heck's Grove is one of the 255 school lunchrooms operated under the WPA school lunch endeavor. During the month of March, 1941, 566,790 school lunches were prepared and served by WPA workers to Negro children in schools throughout the state.

The school has a library of well selected books. In all, it is a complete unit.

Work Started On New Negro School At Statesville

The brick structure, estimated to cost approximately $20,000, will be erected on the lot at the corner of Elm and Garfield Streets. The grounds include a tract of five and a half acres to Garfield.

It is expected that the new building will be ready for use when the Fall term opens in September.

HICKORY NEGRO SCHOOLS GIVEN TWO TEACHERS

Increases City Total From 116 To 118; County Off One

By the addition of two teachers in the colored schools, the Hickory city school faculty will be increased to 118 in the 1941-42 term, as compared to 116 for the past year, Superintendent R. W. Carver said today in commenting on the allotments by the state school commission.

Dr. Carver also annocnced that the city school board has decided to re-instate physical education in its curriculum, with a teacher whose name will be announced within the next several days.

Catawba county schools were given 200 teachers, one less than last year, while Caldwell lost two, going down to 190 and Burke added one for a new total of 150. Cleveland's allotment was increased from 305 to 306; Lincoln's was reduced from 128 to 127; while Alexander and Iredell kept the same totals, 110 and 221 respectively.

Morganton had an increase of one teacher, going from 68 to 69; Shelby lost one of the 89 it had last year; while Lincolnton lost one of its 47.

Other city units in the Hickory area kept their 1940-41 allotments—Lenoir, 60; Newton-Conover 55; Statesville 83; and Glen Alpine 31.

Hickory did well to receive an increase, in view of the inroads made on attendance by influenza during the Winter, the superintendent stated. Dr. Carver is pleased to see the increase for the colored schools, as the enrollment there has grown steadily until it is about 640 now.

Presumably, one of the new teachers will serve the elementary grades while the other will be at Ridgeview High school.

SCHOOL NAME MAY CHANGE

Negro Students Like Bullock School For New Name.

Majority of students at Centerview Colored School prefer the W. J. Bullock school as the new name for that institution, it was revealed yesterday by a look into the ballot box in the school hall.

It was decided some time ago to change the name of the school, which was never officially named but bears the appelation of the section in which it is situated.

Students were given the privilege of selecting names, their suggestions to be decided on at the next meeting of the school board which is scheduled for some time within the next ten days.

Trailing the name of the W. J. Bullock school in popularity is that of the George Washington Carver school. Dr. Carver is the distinguished Negro scientist at Tuskeegee Institute in Alabama who has brought the lowly peanut into the limelight with an innumerable list of by-products which he has developed in the laboratory from the "goober".

Mr. Bullock has always been a favorite with the Centerview colored children, his frequent visits to the institution regarded as an "occasion." He is never too busy to shop and chat with the children and listen to their interests, and occasionally visits with them in their classrooms. 4

Better Negro Schools

Action by the Vance County Board of Education looking toward better school facilities for Negro children ought to meet with general approval of citizens, both white and colored. Improvements are long overdue, and condition of most of the Negro schools is such that it has been criticized by more than one grand jury in recent years.

Just how much money would be required to do what should be done will not be known definitely until the proposed survey, or prospectus, of a program is ready. That is expected at the March meeting of the school board.

It is hardly to be anticipated that everything will be undertaken at one time. But it is not too soon to make a beginning. And plans must be made before that.

Consolidation of the many small one, two and three-room schools scattered about over the country ought to make for economy of operation and maintenance. Certainly the children could do better work under more desirable circumstances and conditions. Their personal safety while in the care of the county or State would be greater if adequate housing were provided.

Congestion in Central colored school in the city is so great that it would not for a moment be tolerated in any of the white schools. The fire hazard there is immense, and if a blaze were to gain headway in the building, numbers of children would almost inevitably lose their lives or be injured in trying to escape. This condition ought not to be.

Fire hazards may not be as pronounced in the rural schools as in this city building, but the congestion may be. The survey that is proposed will probably furnish adequate data in this regard.

It seems to us the condition should be approached by county authorities in serious manner. It ought not to be looked upon as something that can be ignored and postponed indefinitely. A very real need exists, and the county ought to resolve immediately to do the very best it can financially and otherwise in trying to meet it. We believe the program, in reasonable measure, would be approved by most citizens; we know it ought to be.

TOWARD SKILLS IN INDUSTRY

High Point City Schools have fitted their courses to serve the practical. While not decreasing emphasis in any way upon its academic departments, the school heads and officials, quietly and efficiently in the last four years, have developed pre-vocational and vocational departments, which take care of the needs of both white and Negro students in this city, and which reach out further to embrace, with adult evening trade classes, many individuals who may improve their skills in their present employment, or who may secure training denied them as they passed through public schools, because it was unavailable to them.

With such a program in effect, designed not to meet emergency needs, but definitely to function in normal times, impact should be felt sooner or later on unemployment in the city. On the other hand, there should be more skilled workers to fill the demands of local industries, and fewer furrowed brows among school teachers, who have long been handicapped in dealing with groups, creating problems, simply because they do not take to academic training with relish, and because their talents do not lie in that line.

The whole purpose, explains Superintendent Charles F. Carroll, stimulating influence in this undertaking, is to build better citizens, who know how to live and how to make a living.

With the Junior High School as a laboratory, where children may be permitted to find their interests and pursuits in pre-vocational courses, and where they can intensify training and interest through vocational classes in the Senior High School, there should be less cause for maladjustment and unhappiness among the future citizens of High Point.

Council Will Be Asked To Put Negro On City School Board

Committee On Negro Affairs To Make Request At Next Council Meeting

The City Council will be asked to appoint a Negro to the Board of Education to fill one of two vacancies caused by the expiration this Spring of the terms of W. H. Wannamaker, chairman, and M. A. Briggs.

C. C. Spaulding, chairman of the Durham Committee on Negro Affairs, said yesterday that the request will be made at the next meeting of the City Council.

He said that the Durham Committee on Negro Affairs went on record a few days ago as favoring appointment of a Negro to the school board because it has not been able to get a hearing before the board in matters concerning the Negro schools, and it believes that the Negroes, constituting a third of the city's population, should have some representation.

The committee chairman took the position that the Negro group by its very nature has a better understanding of the problems of the Negro community than the white members of the school board. For that reason, he said, he thought his committee had a right to object when it was not consulted in Negro school matters.

He charged that the school board's disregard of opinion in the Negro community was resulting in an attitude of indifference on the part of Negroes toward their schools.

The City Council can make the school board appointments at the next meeting, but it does not have to. Pending action by the Council, the incumbents will continue in office.

Probably the Council will wait until after the elections to make the appointments.

There was no indication yesterday that organized labor will ask formal representation on the school board, a request that has been made in the past.

One labor leader said that as far as he knew, there was general satisfaction with the present composition of the board.

Negro Gymnasium Will Be Dedicated

The new Negro gymnasium at the Fifth Street school will be formally dedicated at exercises to be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

An appropriate program has been arranged and a large number of white as well as colored citizens are being invited to attend and take part.

Although the building has been practically completed for some time and has been used on occasions such as for the Negro Birthday ball the formal dedication has been deferred until tomorrow.

The building will be presented by representatives of the three agencies which made it possible to secure the structure. Lee Wallace, WPA area director of Williamston, will represent that agency, Wiley Norcott, president of the Civic League, will speak for his group, and Col. E. G. Flanagan will represent the Board of Trustees of the Greenville schools, of which he is chairman.

The building will be formally accepted by Prof. C. M. Eppes, supervising principal of the Greenville Negro schools.

Dr. James E. Sheppard, preside of the North Carolina College Teachers, will make the principal address, after which remarks will be made by Mayor B. B. Sugg and J. H. Rose, superintendent of Greenville schools.

The program also includes special music by the joint choruses of the Grimesland and Greenville schools

Immediately above may be seen the new Elon negro school, which will bring about the elimination of four one-room structures which have been in use in the county. The dilapidated structures surrounding the new edifice are the units now being discarded in the advance and include at the right, the old Elon school at the top and the Gravely Hill unit at the bottom; at the left, the Hall's school at the top and the old Ossipee school at the bottom. The new building was constructed by NYA labor under a project by which materials were furnished by the county.

First Unit Of Negro Consolidation Program In County To Be Dedicated Tomorrow With Ceremonies At Elon

County and School Officials To Participate in Dedication Program; Four Units To Be Discarded

Tomorrow afternoon negro school patrons of the Elon section, with the aid of prominent county and school officials, will dedicate the new Elon Negro school, the first unit to be completed in the consolidation program which has been mapped out by the county board of education for the negro schools of the county in a construction program in cooperation with the National Youth Administration.

In the complete program, plans call for the construction of three units which will eliminate approximately a dozen one-room negro schools which have been in operation in the county.

Students to attend the Elon school, the first to be completed under the program, will come from the Hall's, Gravely Hill, Ossipee and old Elon schools, which will be discontinued. Classes in the new building, with teachers formerly connected with the four one-robm units making up the faculty of the enlarged school, will begin Monday after the keys are turned over to officials in the ceremonies tomorrow.

Attending tomorrow afternoon's program will be several hundred negro residents of the community as well as others from other communities, whose representatives will participate in the program.

Principal address of the program will be made by Supt. M. E. Yount of the county system, with other talks by C. M. Williams, chairman of the county board of commissioners and Dr. T. E. Powell, chairman of the county school board.

Words of appreciation for the new building will be presented for the negro people of the community who purchased the land for the structure, by Slyvester Summers, a patron of the school. Sallie Fitzgerald, a member of the faculty, will be in charge of the program which has been arranged by Maude Ivey, negro supervisor of teachers. Music for the occasion will be presented by the Junior Chorus of both the Elon and Mebane schools, the Pleasant Grove Glee club and the Graham girls and boys glee club.

Dedicatory Exercises at Perry's School Will Be Held Sunday Afternoon

Louisburg, Oct. 22.—This coming Sunday at 2:30 in the afternoon, the Franklin County boards of commissioners and of education will mark another stride forward in its school system. At that time the new building at Perry's School will be dedicated.

Constructed by WPA, Franklin County's school building for Negroes of the Centervil' section is the 187th new school building to be completed by WPA workers in North Carolina.

State WPA administrator C. C McGinnis will present the structure to Franklin County. The acceptance talk will be by W. R. Mills. superintendent of Franklin County schools.

With the school's principal, Emanuel Wilson, as master of ceremonies, Dr. J. L. Tilley, dean of the school of religion of Shaw University, is scheduled for the dedicatory address. Other talks will be made by members of the board of education, the board of commissioners, Public Welfare Superintendent of Franklin County, Mrs. J. F. Mitchiner and A. F. Johnson, editor of the Franklin Times.

Perry's School has an enrollment of over 200 pupils. It is staffed by six teachers. Besides the seven classrooms, the school contains a large auditorium with a stage.

Schools At Pendleton Have Shown Great Progress In Recent Years

Many New Features Introduced In Educational System By Brown

Great progress has been made in erection of new buildings, the addition of new courses, the promotion of enlarged programs and the advancement of new ideas in Hunter School District No. 24 during the past four years under the leadership of George A. Brown, superintendent.

Completing his sixth year of connection with the Hunter District Schools, Mr. Brown also is prominently engaged in the church, civic, county, educational and athletic activities. He is superintendent of the Sunday School of the Pendleton Presbyterian Church, president of the Pendleton Lions Club, vice-president of the Anderson County Education Association, a member of the Council of Delegates of the Anderson County Education Association, and served last year as [illegible] of the County Basketball Tournament Committee.

Since Mr. Brown became superintendent of Hunter District, several new building projects have been completed, including the erection of a beautiful new grammar school at LaFrance, a Junior High School at Pendleton, a Vocational Building at Pendleton High, a Potato House and a Negro High School.

Already approved for construction are projects for the remodeling of the Negro grammar school and the gymnasium of the Pendleton High School. An application has been filed for the erection of a N. Y. A. shop for the Negro High School.

The schools have grown considerably in the past four years. During Mr. Brown's administration, six additional white teachers and three additional Negro teachers have been placed on the faculty of the Hunter District Schools. Several new courses have been added to the High school curriculum: art, arts and crafts and industrial shop.

The athletic program has been enlarged and a well balanced schedule is now followed, including baseball, football and basketball.

National Defense training in woodwork and operation, care and repair of tractors, trucks and automobiles, is being given in the schools to approximately sixty persons.

Mr. Brown has sought and received the full cooperation of nearby Clemson College in both grammar and high school programs. The high school now has two practice-teacher classes in vocational industrial shop, one in vocational agricultural education, one in mathematics and one in science. In grammar school the student-teacher program includes supervised playground work and assistance with a remedial reading program.

The Negro schools, Oak Grove, the Anderson County Training High School and the grammar school are developing a broad curriculum designed to fit these pupils into a better democratic pattern of life. The Glee Club of the Anderson County Training School has proved to be one of the finest in the state, particularly in the rendition of spirituals.

PENDLETON, July 14 — Work is progressing satisfactorily on the new $6,000 Negro School auditorium which has been under way since April, and the program of improvement and enlargement is expected to be completed early in September, Superintendent C. B. Pruitt, in charge of the WPA project, said today.

The building is forty by sixty feet, two stories, and in addition to the auditorium, will provide three large class rooms. The first floor is of concrete construction, the second of wood, and is located near the present school structure, which has also been enlarged and improved by the addition of a number of class rooms.

Construction of Batesburg Colored School to Start Soon

Batesburg school officials have been assured that construction will begin on the Batesburg colored school within the near future. Practically all the preliminary work has been approved by federal government officials. S. C.

The building is designed to meet the needs of negro boys and girls from a practical educational standpoint. Large rooms are planned for manual training (including woodwork and training for the skilled and semi-skilled occupation), home economics and agriculture. A central heating plant is in the plans, as well as indoor toilet facilities and installation of varied electrical appliances, an auditorium, which will also be used for a gymnasium, will be included. The seating capacity will be approximately 350. A spacious library and study hall will be located conveniently to all pupils. The library is expected to become more and more valuable and useful in the lives of the negro children and adults. Six regular classrooms, an office and supply room are also included in the plans. The building will then include 10 rooms, auditorium-gymnasium combination, central heating system, indoor toilet facilities, and office and supply room.

The purpose behind this planning is to set up a physical plant conducive to meet the needs of students to make them more practical and raise their economic status.

When the present building is completed, the Negro school plant will be ample to care for the needs of the community for some time to come, school leaders said. About sixteen WPA workers are employed regularly on the project.

Oconee County Colored Schools Are Making Very Good Progress

(By Catherine B. Johnson, Jeanes Teacher.)

All schools are now open and running on scheduled time. The teachers are trying in every way to make this a banner year.

In order that there might be a greater interest aroused in the production of farm foods, and that a friendly spirit be created, two schools have held "Community Fairs." The first one was October 30 at the Retreat school, Margie and Velma Childers, teachers. There was a fine array of farm products, canned fruits and vegetables, also needle work. The rooms were very attractive. No prizes were given. At the evening program Professor D. .H. Thompson, of the Westminster school, was the main speaker.

The second was held on November 13, at the Richland school, Willie Mae Rudledge and Bessye M. Thompson, teachers.

The exhibits were good and were seen by a number of white and colored people of the Richland communities and other adjoining communities. At the evening program, Mr. D. W. Stribling, agriculture teacher of the Westminster high school, was the guest speaker. He delivered an informative address on the part that the farmer can play in the National Defense program.

In connection with the celebration of "American Education Week"—Inspiration Week" was celebrated at Oconee County Training School, under the principalship of Professor R. L. Finley. Inspirational messages were delivered; Monday, Rev. J. S. Mattox; Tuesday, November 11, at 11 A. Park Station Colored School In Demonstration

Teachers from many of the colored schools of Maury county and interested white friends and teachers yesterday attended the demonstration in the modern unit method of elementary teaching staged at the Park Station Colored School, where William Jennings is teacher for all eight grades.

The demonstration was at the conclusion of the first phase of a demonstration which is being conducted throughout the year under the supervision of Dr. J. N. Redd of Fisk University, who attended, as did Stella Smith, colored supervisor for Maury county, both making talks in the afternoon.

In the morning actual teaching by the unit method, centering around a home life project, was seen, and in the afternoon songs and poems, some of them original, were presented by the pupils, after all had been served lunch at the cafeteria.

A short talk was made also in the afternoon by County Supt. J Rufus Baker, and by other visitors to the demonstration.

GILBERTSON BIDS LOW ON NEW NEGRO SCHOOL

Building Planned At Kerr And Wilson

H. J. Gilbertson & Co., with a bid of $132,378, is the apparent low bidder for the general construction of a new negro school at Kerr and Wilson.

The bids were opened last night by the City Board of Education. The board also voted to change the name of the grammar school from Greenwood to Hamilton at the request of negroes in the community.

G. P. Hamilton was connected with the public schools for 41 years.

Other apparent low bidders and their bids were: Ideal Heating Co., (heating contract), $23,658; Fischer Heating & Plumbing Co., (plumbing), $16,425, and W. L. McBride (wiring), $7435.

Raymond Spencer is the architect and Harry N. Howe is the engineer. The school will provide for about 1000 students.

New Gymnasium Is Sought for Negroes At Holloway School

The proposed construction of a gymnasium and additional classrooms at the Holloway Negro High School was discussed last night at a banquet honoring members of the city and county boards of education and other business and civic leaders.

Tentative plans call for the construction of a gymnasium with two classrooms and a workshop in order to take care of the overflow of students at the institution, which is the only high school for Negroes in Rutherford County.

The plan was advanced by Dr. E. A. Davis and details of construction were explained by Dr. James R. Patterson, both leaders in the promotion of education for Negroes in Murfreesboro.

A. W. Wilson, supervisor of the National Youth Administration, pledged support of his division in the construction of the building with the understanding that a Negro supervisor and Negro boys will be used on the job.

He said that the N. Y. A. will furnish all labor and common tools. If N. Y. A. labor is used on the job, the building will be constructed of concrete blocks, which have been used satisfactorily on several projects of this nature in the county.

City Manager Sam Cox said that the city would do all in its power to construct the building. It was explained that the city would more than likely finance the project with the help of the county.

George Osborn served as toastmaster. Spirituals were sung by the quartet of the New Farmers of America and the Harmony Kings.

The banquet is an annual affair with the students, teachers and other Negroes of Murfreesboro serving as hosts.

COLORED SCHOOLS OF CITY SHOWING A STEADY GROWTH

BY LEE F. RODGERS

There are seven public schools for colored children in the City of Portsmouth. The Truxtun school is located at Deep Creek boulevard anl Gosport Road, is constructed of brick, and was erected in 1919. The total valuation of the plant and location is placed at $58,000. Prof. W. H. Willis is principal.

The Brighton school is located at Highland and Lansing avenues, is made of brick, and was erected in 1907. The property is valued at $19,000. Prof. W. H. Willis is principal.

The Pinners Point school is located on Booker street, is of brick, and was built in 1922, with a total value of $14,000. Prof. J. H. Carey is principal.

The Mt. Hermon school is situated at Douglas avenue and North street, is constructed of brick, was built in 1907, and has a value of $52,350. Prof. J. H. Carey is principal.

Chestnut street school is located at Chestnut and Bart streets, is of brick and stucco, built in 1878, and has a value of $18,400. The principal is Prof. S. H. Clarke.

The Peabody school is situated at Chestnut and Clifford streets, is built of brick and stone, was erected in 1919, and its value is placed at $106,250. Prof. S. H. Clarke is principal.

Norcom high school is located at Chestnut and South streets, is constructed of brick, erected in 1937, and has a value of $125,063. Prof. W. E. Riddick is principal.

The total value of these seven public schools, including values placed upon buildings, equipment, and lots, is $393,063.

Chestnut Street School Oldest

The newest construction in the colored system is the new six-room annex at the Mt. Hermon school. The new Norcom high school building was erected in 1937, a building program that resulted in the transfer of Prof. S. H. Clarke from the principalship of the Mt. Hermon-Pinners Point schools to the principalship of the George Peabody school.

Peabody school was the old Norcom high school until the new Norcom was built, and Prof. W. E. Riddick centered his administrative control in the new Norcom building after his long principalship of the old Norcom-Chestnut street schools.

Chestnut street school is the oldest colored public school in the city, having been erected as early as 1878, just thirteen years after the Civil War. It has the distinction of having been "the first school built by the city under our present system," according to a historical sketch prepared by Miss Zaidee H. Smith, head of the History Department in Woodrow Wilson high school.

Prof. I. C. Norcom was the now almost legendary principal of the old Chestnut street school. He died in 1916, and the high school, built in 1919, was named for him. For many years, Chestnut street school was known as Chestnut Street Academy, and in its classrooms, in its corridors, and on its grounds there linger old memories of other days that many like to recall.

There was a time when the home-making department and the industrial school were located just around the corner on South street in a one story structure and extension still standing and which were reached through a gate in the north fence of the Chestnut street school grounds.

Many who attended Chestnut street school in the old days recall that they were required to stay in the eighth grade for two years. They were the days of that famous teacher, Miss Ida Barbour, now deceased.

High School's Humble Beginning

Mt. Hermon as a county community had a high school before Portsmouth for colored children. Following the extension of the city's boundary, all high school students were required to "come down town" for their high school work.

The first high school classes in Portsmouth proper were held in the old High street school building near the corner of High and Chestnut streets, familiarly known in those days as "Pepsi-Cola College" because of the large advertisement on the east side of the building. The building now houses a soft drink concern.

High street school, of which Prof. W. E. Riddick was principal, offered two years of high school work. The first colored high school class in Portsmouth's history graduated in June, 1915, under Prof. Riddick. Four such classes graduated, until the new Norcom high school was erected in 1919. The first four-year class of the high school graduated from Norcom in 1921.

Schools Reflect City's Growth

In 1909, the year Superintendent H. A. Hunt became head of the local public school system here, there were 1010 colored children registered in the colored schools. Ten years later, there were 3677 colored school children registered in public schools. This latter enumeration was during the peak years of the post-war period of 1919-1920.

Following the busy years of the immediate post-war era, Portsmouth's population shrunk, with a consequent reduction in school registrations. But with another war era and the present feverish national defense activities, the city's population is again shooting upwards. During the school year 1939-1940, there was a total of 3897 registered in the colored public schools. Fifty years ago there were about 600 colored children in local schools. In 1872, six years before Chestnut street school was erected, there were 283 colored children in colored public schools here, and four colored teachers employed.

Today there are about 100 colored principals and teachers—the number of principals is four—in the colored public schools of the city. Colored school teachers of the city received an average of $933.33 during the 1939-40 school term. The average cost per registered pupil in the public schools during last term was $33.22.

Much of the data contained in this article has been taken from the 1939-1940 annual report of the local public schools through the courtesy of Superintendent Hunt.

Rev. Robert Patton Retires from Church Institute for Negroes

NEW YORK. — The Rev. Robert W. Patton, director of the American Church Institute for Negroes which operates under the Episcopal Church eight normal and industrial schools for Negroes in as many States was retired January 1, 1941.

One of the most widely known and best loved of the leaders of the church Dr. Patton, militant and picturesque, is also one of the few remaining links between this generation and the ancient regime of the Southland.

Kin Was Aide to Washington

His great-grand-father, General Hugh Mercer, emigrating to colonial America following border warfare between England and Scotland, served as an aide to George Washington in the Revolutionary War. His father John Mercer Patton, one time Governor of Virginia, and associated in Congress with Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun and Daniel Webster, was a member of the staff of Stonewall Jackson in the war between the States.

Sarah Church Lindsay, his mother, numbered among her ancestors James Madison and Zackary Taylor. She was a belle in Richmond during the Civil War. It was from the porch of the Patton home in Richmond that Webster, in the late fifties, delivered a now famous oration directed toward reconcilation of the differences between North and South which were then driving forward to the "irrepressible conflict."

When Dr. Patton was born on the family plantation of 1000 acres at Lindsay, Va., in 1868, most of the former slaves still lingered about the place. At the age of ten, "Father Bob," as he has come to be affectionately known, opened a school for Negro children. It was one of the first efforts toward the education of the freed men following the close of the war. Since that day Dr. Patton has devoted his life to the welfare of the Negro.

His family planned a political career for him. Instead, graduated from the University of Virginia, Patton turned to the church. The Episcopal Church had been active since Appomattox in work among the former slaves; but it was not until 1906 that effective organization of this work was achieved in the creation of the American Church Institute.

Eight years later Dr. Patton took over its direction; and in the interim this son of a former slave-owner had expanded the institution's operations from three schools to eight, including Payne Divinity School, Petersburg, Va., St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, N. C., St. Paul Normal and Industrial School, Denmark, S. C., Okolona Normal and Industrial School, Okolona, Miss., Gailor Industrial School, Mason, Tenn., Gaudet School, New Orleans, and the Fort Valley College Centre, at Fort Valley, Ga.

Total Enrollment of 6,000

These institutions today have a total enrollment of 6,000, and an aggregate of 30,000 Negro children from ignorant and poverty-stricken homes have been graduated from them under Dr. Patton's administration, and are usefully employed as farmers and artizans, as teachers among the race, as priests of the church and in public service.

It illustrates "Doctor Bob's" type of note that, taking time out from his insitute work, in 1915 went up and down the country on an eloquent mission which culminated in the Nation Wide Campaign of the Episcopal Church in 1919, adding thousands to the Church's membership and increasing annual contributions to its work by approximately ten million dollars.

It also led to a complete modernization of the Episcopal Church organization of today.

In 1934, vacationing in Africa, "Doctor Bob" discovered that active trading in Negro slaves was rampant in Liberia. Single handed he laid the facts before President Hoover and induced the Governments of the United States and Great Britian to ake action which put an end to the traffic.

Short and sturdy, eloquent with an inimitable drawl his sunny disposition endears him to thousands of friends the nation over. A step or two past seventy, Dr. Patton is retiring to the old plantation at Lindsay. He will be succeeded by the Rev. Cyril E. Bentley, associate director of the Institute, and here's the catch in "Doctor Bob's" retirement.

Mr. Bentley is a reserve officer in the United States Navy, and gathering war cluods hint that he may be called into service at any time; in which event Dr. Patton will come back on the job — at least for the duration.

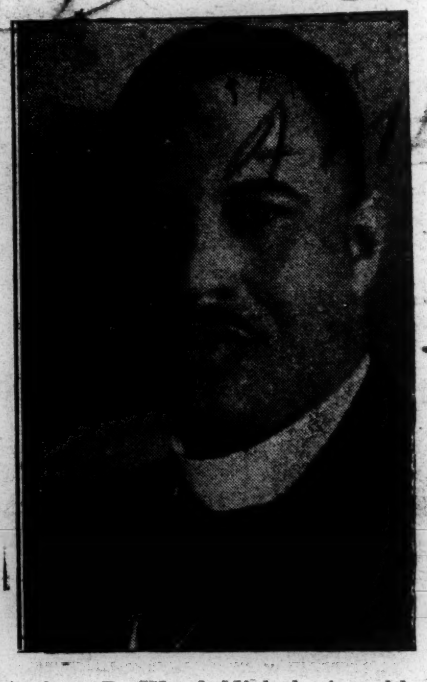
BISHOP NICHOLS, MASTER FINANCIER

Reduces Debt at Greater Payne $35,000

By J. S. Brookens



Bishop D. Ward Nichols is a blessing to the church and a financial giant who knows how to make the most difficult jobs look easy.

Not only has he been able to catch the imagination of the people of Alabama and gain their unfeigned confidence, their unswerving loyalty but he has demonstrated his business acumen by recently having the $83.000 mortgage indebtedness of Greater Payne Junior College reduced to $50,000! To [illegible] the contract Bishop Nichols paid $2,000 cash on the new mortgage of $50,000, leaving a balance of $48,000 owed on our school property which consists of valuable real estate in Selma, Alabama, the original site of Greater Payne, and Birmingham, Alabama, its present location. The Bishop called on Mr. Jones, the president of the corporation holding the mortgages against our school after office hours, and held a lengthy conference with him; during the course of their deliberations Mr. Jones, who is in very poor health, asked the Bishop to pray for him. Bishop Nichols offered to have prayer with Mr. Jones which offer was instantly accepted by Mr. Jones. They knelt down on their knees, a church executive and a business executive [illegible] in prayer! God touched the hearts of both and they wept. And after prayer the white man promised to help Greater Payne by accepting Bishop Nichols' plan to refinance the debt.

Rate of Interest Reduced

He kept his promise and sent Bishop Nichols an air mail special to Oklahoma City, the seat of the recent Bishops' Council, notifying him his terms were accepted which not only cut the debt to $50,000 but also cut our rate of interest from 8% to 5%.

Now, Jehovah God, our Captain who has never lost a battle has given Alabama African Methodism another great victory through the sagacious leadership of his consecrated servant, Bishop D. Ward Nichols, through whom he reduces our debt $35,000 in one effort.

Mid-Year Council

An electrifying mid-year council was held by our Bishop, his twenty one Presiding Elders, Pastor and lay members Thursday, July 3rd, at St. John A. M. E. Church, Montgomery, Alabama, Dr. John Dawkins. pastor.

All phases of the church's program was thoroughly covered during the day's meeting which was widely attended from all parts of the state.

Every presiding elder reported progress and a quickening of interest among our membership with whom our Bishop is very popular.

The startling news by the Bishop that at one mighty sweep of Divine Providence, he was able to cut off $35,000 from $83,000 mortgage of Greater Payne literally amazed his hearers, who quickly realized that this act would be a great boom to our faithful membership which has patiently followed our leaders through all these years, and who are now being led to great success by the senior of the Class of Bishops of 1940.

Dates Changed

The Council changed the dates for the Conference Branch Missionary Societies from the time of the Annual Conferences to dates preceding the holding of Annual Conferences.

Dr. John Dawkins, and the great people of St. John proved themselves to be a great host for the occasion. We were not able to consume all the good things they prepared for our entertainment.

The latest issue of the Alabama African Methodist, our official organ was turned over to the Presiding Elders by Editor Brookens to be distributed throughout the State.

Livingstone College

When this reaches you Livingstone College will have again opened her doors for another annual session. With Hood Theological Seminary, the College represents the major effort of Zion Methodism to provide educated and consecrated leadership for the great denomination, which from its humble beginnings of nearly a century and a half ago now reaches from New York to Monrovia, Liberia, westward to the Golden Gate, southward to St. Croix and Demerara; and from a single congregation in the City of New York to more than three thousand congregations in the United States with more than half a million members.

Livingstone College, which is the first permanent college established by Negroes, and which through the years has been maintained by them, is the pride of the denomination. We know quite well that it has not had the support that it deserved and which the thousands of graduates would justify. But we are happy in the knowledge that it has now reached the highest degree of efficiency, both in faculty and curricula, and that the outlook was never brighter than now.

The indebtedness which has hampered its operations for a number of years has been well-nigh liquidated, and the completion of Price Memorial Building is now within reach; indeed, work upon the building may be started at almost any time.

President Trent and Dean Satterwhite have steadily improved the facilities with which the work at Livingstone may be done, and they in turn have received increased support and confidence from the alumni, the students and the hundreds of leaders and members of the churches throughout the denomination, who are the chief supporters of the College.

We are happy to facilitate the College upon the opening of another session and to assure those who labor there that the Star of Zion finds unlimited pleasure in performing its duty to the College of giving the fullest publicity to the things which are done there that will provide for Zion Methodism that type of competent Christian leadership, which our fathers envisioned in the establishment of Livingstone College and Hood Seminary.

Colored Baptists Open Seminary Here Monday

The Bryant Theological Seminary, located in Fairview, had its formal opening yesterday. The school of religion which is permanently located here is operated by the General Missionary Baptist Convention of Georgia and is destined to be a great incentive in preparing Negro ministers and religious workers for efficient service.

The exercises began Monday at noon at the Shiloh Baptist Church, Rev. L. T. Sanders, pastor. Rev. F. N. Mashburn of Macon, director of religious education, presided. Rev. J. T. Saxon, also of Macon, presented the president, Dr. J. H. Gadson, who delivered a brief but forceful address. He touched on the purposes and needs of the school.

The main address was delivered by Dr. A. W. Caraker, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Cordele. His message was dynamic. He spoke pointedly on "Christianity's Great Task," and showed that Christian Education would fit us for life's far-reaching service.

Luncheon was served at three o'clock.

At 4:30 o'clock the trustees held a meeting to complete plans to operate the daily classes for the next three months, beginning today. In this meeting all affairs pertaining to the administration, salaries of the faculty, board, tuition, etc., were agreed upon. Prof. W. L. Hughes of Dublin presided. The president discussed the great need of a co-operative and understanding spirit between the institution and the people of Fitzgerald. It is his hope as the school shows progress and local interest grows, that the Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations will share in this worthy undertaking. Part scholarships save been arranged for boarding students.

The president recommended a state-wide club movement where clubs may be formed in each locality to send in regular contributions of one dollar per week.

At eight o'clock last night at Shiloh, welcome speeches were heard. Rev. P. N. Anderson, pastor of the First Baptist Church here, spoke for all the white churches of the city. Rev. I. R. Hobby also brought greetings and good will from the Ben Hill-Irwin Association. Each spoke very befitting.

Rev. N. C. Campbell spoke for all Negro Baptists and Elder M. C. Pettigrew represented all other churches.

The business men were represented by George Riggs and Prof. T. H. Chatfield spoke for the Colored schools.

The faculty was introduced: Rev. J. H. Gadson, president; Rev. O. M. Collins and Rev. F. N. Marshburn instructors and Bessie Cunningham, secretary to the president.

This closed the historic setting of what we trust will be an enduring institution for great good to our state and city.

A new school to train negro Baptist preachers will open in Fitzgerald Monday when exercises are conducted for Bryant Theological Seminary at Fairview school and the nearby Shiloah Baptist church, under auspices of the General Missionary Baptist Convention of Georgia.

The seminary will open in one now unused room on the Fairview campus with a faculty of three employed by the Baptist convention. Plans are drawn for a separate building when funds can be obtained. The school building is owned by the convention, four rooms being used as a county elementary school for negroes.

White friends of the new project will take part in the exercises which begin at 10 a. m. Monday. A. N. Seward, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and the Rev. P. H. Anderson, Jr., pastor of Fitzgerald Baptist church, and the Rev. Andrew Caraker, Cordele Baptist pastor, are among speakers listed. Dr. L. A. Pinksten, is president of the convention.

This Date In Alabama History

BY W. J. BOLES

Realizing the need of theological training for their ministers, following the liberation of Negroes in the state from slavery and their attendance at services in white churches stopped the Negro Baptists of Alabama established a "university" at Selma to teach theology normal and preparatory grammar together with primary departments.

When it opened its doors in 1878 the school was officially known as the Alabama Normal and Theological School, with the Rev. H. Woodsmall as president, and W. R. Petticord, assistant.

The first sessions were held in the St. Philip Street Baptist Church, Selma. In 1885 the name was changed to Selma University and a more complete course in English, the sciences, theology and teacher training embraced.

The first approach toward the foundation of the school was made at the Alabama Baptist State Convention (colored) at Tuscaloosa in 1873, but some opposition appearing, no action was taken at the time. In 1877, at the state convention in Eufaula, it was definitely decided to the establish the school and Selma was selected as the place for it.

After opening in the St. Philip Street, Baptist Church in 1878 officials and others interested in the school began a campaign to raise money for buildings of its own. Enrollment grew year by year and it was only a short time until the institutions was housed in buildings of its own.

CATHOLIC

World's Richest Nun Observes 50 Years Of Education Among Negroes, Indians

By MARTIN FIELDS

Hundreds of people from every race and section of America gathered at St. Elizabeth's Convent, Cornwells Heights, last week-end to assist in the public celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the founding of the Order of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament as well as the anniversary of the profession in the religious life of Rev. Mother Katherine Drexel.

Mother Katherine, sometimes called the world's richest nun, is the daughter of the late Francis Drexel, banker, and inherited from him, along with two other sisters, an income which has been estimated at $1000.00 daily. This inheritance has been used even before the past fifty years in the work of educating Negroes and Indians.

Sunday's celebration, beginning with a Pontifical Mass sung by His Eminence Cardinal Dougherty, began the last of three days' public celebration of the historical event. It is estimated that the Drexel daughters, Mother Katherine, Mrs. Edward Morrell and the late Mrs. George Walter Smith, have spent $15,000,000 setting up schools—day, boarding, industrial and agricultural—for Negroes and Indians in this country. Mother Katherine is one of the few women in the history of the church who has founded and managed a religious order. She is probably the only one ever to have financed one.

Tells of Wide Interests

The Reverend foundress has continued her work throughout the years without great publicity and greatly dislikes anything like a fanfare. This quiet and untiring work in its fiftieth year today finds itself spread over seventeen states with a University at New Orleans, several industrial and agricultural schools and 34 day schools. Even before a day in 1888 when Katherine Drexel purchased a house on Pine street for the establishment of a mission which is now St. Peter Claver's, the stream of millions of dollars of the Drexel fortune had begun its way into the lives of thousands of Negroes.

Various activities at Cornwells last Sunday bore eloquent witness to, not only the care taken by the Sisters in the rudimentary and necessary educational pursuits, but to the cultural growth of their students as well. Students from Xavier University sang the second act of "Carmen" with professional delineations. The first half of their musical program included numbers by Dett, Mendelssohn, Verdi, Rossini, Schubert and included the sextet from "Lucia."

Another highlight of the day was the Chicago Glee Club. This group, composed of students from St. Elizabeth's High School in Chicago, sang a group of spirituals and jubilee songs. Their rendition of "The Ballad For Americans" was noteworthy. Indians from the Pueblo and Navajo tribes sang their tribal songs and danced. In both the cases of the Negro and Indian it was indicated that the Sisters were attempting to inculcate an appreciation in their charges for the cultural heritage that these songs and dances represent.

Rev. Vincent Smith, colored priest of the Order of The Divine Word, was present throughout the entire celebration. A number of Negro nuns from Louisiana and Baltimore were also present.

Until her retirement from active direction in 1937, Mother Katherine travelled over the country twice annually, three months a year, to inspect the progress and see the needs of her many establishments. Travelling always in a day coach, the Reverend foundress disdained the comforts she forsook years ago . . . to serve the humblest of the poor. The schools and churches which have been erected because of this first-hand knowledge evidenced a monumental service in behalf of the poor and neglected.

Francis Drexel died before Mother Katherine entered the religious life. As a result, the principal from which this vast revenue has come to her to support her work will not benefit the Sisters of The Blessed Sacrament. It was left to the Archbishop of Philadelphia to be used for designated charities.

Through the years Mother Katherine has been honored by several Popes for her work. With her sister, Mrs.

Edward Morrell, she has evidenced a keen interest in the problems of the Negro outside her classroom. While speaking over the radio in March 1934, Mrs. Morrell said: "I believe that the intelligent Catholics, once they know the facts, must be the first, to sympathize with the hardships and discriminations which fall to (the Negroes') their lot."

Paid Income Tax

It was Senator George Wharton Pepper, who taking cognizance of the fact that Mother Katherine paid income tax on the money she used for charity, introduced a special rule to exempt her from those taxes. This resulted in the present law exempting gifts for charity of more than 90 per cent.

The little band of twelve who began with Mother Katherine Drexel fifty years ago has grown to a religious community of 450 women. They teach a total of 15,000 annually. Xavier University is their best known institution, famous for its runners coached by Ralph Metcalfe.

The Motherhouse at Cornwells is a spacious place, housing a school and home for two hundred children (some of whom are without parents), the convent, a training school for the nuns, a laundry and a chapel. Both Cornwells and Xavier are valued at two million dollars each.

EDUCATORS MEET AT LANE COLLEGE

General Conference Board of Education Analyze New Educational Problems As They Affect Christian Colleges and Negro Students, Graduates and Parents.

APR 5 - 1941

JACKSON, Tenn., April 3—One of the most significant meetings in the national racial effort in relation to the National Defense program was held at Lane college recently under auspices of the General Conference Board of Education of the C. M. E. Church, following the theme: "The C. M. E. College and National Defense."

During this one day session, devotions were led by Dr. P. A. White, with a welcome given by Dean P. R. Shy, both of Lane College. A round table discussion followed, led by President Lane.

A general session presided over by Bishop Hamlett, considered "The Progress of C. M. E. Colleges in National Crisis and National Defense."

APR 5 - 1941

Bertram W. Doyle, Secretary, Board of Education, spoke on "The Problem of Endowment for Negro Colleges;" Pres. W. A. Bell of Miles Memorial College discussed "Experience With An Inter-Racial Trustee Board." After the War, What?" was the theme used by President W. M. Frazier of Mississippi Industrial College; President E. C. Peters of Paine College, Augusta, Ga., on "The Christian Church Related College; Its Distinctive Opportunities." The closing address was made by President Glass of Texas College.

Among the many persons responsible for this significant meeting were: Bertram W. Doyle, Secretary of Education, the C. M. E. Church, President; President W. A. Bell, Miles Memorial College, Secretary; from the Board of Education, C. M. E. Church, Bishop J. Arthur Hamlett, President; Bish- R. A. The Negro Denominational Schools

LAST WEEK A GROUP of representative leaders of the Episcopal Church, Negro division, of this district and area, met in Jackson to consider ways and means of raising money to repair, improve and continue Rust College, located at Holly Springs, Mississippi, and belonging to that denomination.

In recent months it was our opportunity to have visited Rust College, spending the night in one of its dormitories, and to say that Rust College is in urgent need of repairs and improvement is putting it mildly.

While the meeting above referred to was called for the sole purpose of considering matters pertaining to Rust College, it again brings to focus the plight of the Negro denominational schools throughout Mississippi and the South.

Most of these schools were built more than a quarter of a century ago, and with some notable exceptions, they have been used all these years without any worthwhile improvement or repairs and today their property is sadly run down, and in many cases their buildings have become a hazard to human habitation and use.

In those isolated instances where there has been any notable improvement in the property of the Negro denominational schools, most, if not all the money came from sources outside the Negro group.

To picture a condition existing in a more or less degree in most of these schools, while traveling quite extensively over the South some months ago, we visited a large number of them and saw their condition at first hand. Observing and studying the living conditions of the students in what is reputed to be one of our oldest denominational schools, how any youth, after spending four years amid such ruin and dilapidation could come out with a high ideal for the home and its surroundings, simply defies the imagination.

But largely with money furnished by white people North and South, in the past, the Negro denominational schools have been of vast importance in the social, religious and cultural development of the race and can play a still more important part in the future.

It was through the Negro denominational schools that, as a group, we were able to obtain a sort of balance between the education offered by the public supported Negro schools, and the higher classical education, and from them have come our most outstanding leaders.

The question now arises: What is the future of the Negro denominational schoools?

Since the great stock market crash and the depression which caused the loss of many great fortunes, and the impairment of many others, there has been a marked decline in gifts to Negro schools and other organizations, aside from which there is a growing opinion among those who used to give us, that we should now be able to do something for ourselves.

Viewed in their proper plight, the Negro denominational schools belong to the whole race, regardless of difference of denomination, and their condition, continuance and improvement should be of the most vital concern of all of us and on the question of their future, unless there is a growing realization and understanding on our part, that our days of looking to other people for help are about over, and that we must bear our responsibilities alone. Speaking frankly, the future of the Negro denominational schools looks almost hopeless.

NOV 23 1941

'He Just Swept Me Off My Feet,' Blushing Wife Tells Reporter; Plan 40 Days of Prayer

FORT WORTH, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Evangelist Raymond Vann, 25, and his bride, a grey-haired little missionary of 70, Sunday interrupted their honeymoon (40 days of prayer) long enough to announce their plans for the future.

They'll build and conduct a negro school in Fort Worth's Lake Como addition to be called the "Negro Baptist Bible Institute," where they will teach negro leaders to carry on the work the bride started 10 years ago.

The bridal couple, sitting side by side in the tiny bedroom at 1800 Broadus street, reluctantly revealed their plans to a reporter despite their request that they be let alone to spend their honeymoon in prayer.

The Bride Blushes

Private contributions and maybe federal aid will build their school, said Mrs. Vann, who until Friday was Miss Lou Wilkins, missionary and former schoolteacher at Coleman and Bronte.

Mrs. Vann was not averse to talking, but she blushed, literally, at any mention of her wedding 24 hours before. Vann doesn't talk. He has started a permanent program of self-discipline in which he writes answers to any questions that he can't answer with "God bless you," "Amen" or some other scriptural phrase.

'She Wasn't Quite Ready'

She was embarrassed and smiled shyly when she looked at her new husband in the presence of a stranger. Then she confided to the reporter.

"He just swept me off my feet. I wasn't ready to get married quite yet."

Young Vann, tall, black-haired street preacher and jail evangelist, started to scribble something on his pad of paper but stopped. Then he started again, writing that their plans for the negro school must await the end of their honeymoon period, raised from one week to 40 days.

Neither Married Before

A former University of Oklahoma and Conners college student, young Vann met his bride 10 months ago when he was ministerial student here.

Neither has been married before, and Mrs. Vann smiled gaily as she said "He's my first and last and I'm his first and last."

The bride is an author and before the reporter left she gave him a copy of her book, "How to Win," and pamphlets entitled "How to Lick the Devil" and "The Christ—You."

Then the bride and groom prayed, with downcast eyes, that the report they had just given would have good effect on others.

Seven Additions To Faculty Lutherans Of State Hold Historic Conference

SEP 19 1941

Lutherans Of State Hold Historic Conference

The first Lutheran Conference of Colored Missions, held at Tuscaloosa, Alabama, September 10, 1941, was formally opened by Rev. Herman C. Schulz, President of the Board of Colored Missions. He used as his theme, "United With Christ—One With Christ—Through Christ" and emphasized that fact that unity is based on love.

Prof. Theodore R. Speigner, President of Martin Luther Institute, delivered the welcome address to the delegates. He expressed the necessity of Christian fellowship and cooperation in the face of growing world crisis. He held that Christian leaders should present to the world a consecrated and inspired life in these troubled times.

Rev. W. Edward Austin, Secretary of the Board of Colored Missions, responded and expressed the opinion and confidence that this gathering marked the beginning of what would become an annual affair. He paid high tribute to the hospitality of the people of Tuscaloosa.

The Weekly Review

Rev. W. Hieronymous, Director of Parish Education spoke to the conference on "Basic Principles in Parish Education and Its Set-Up In the American Lutheran Church." The work of education is a life-long process which aims to make people wise unto salvation and to create a well-rounded Christian personality. Lutheran parish education is Bible-based, Christ-centederd and pupil-adjusted. In their discussion of these statements, the delegates raised the question of correlating secular and religious education in southern parochial schools and the means of applying these principles.

Rev. P. W. Stephens, Anniston, Alabama, preached the evening sermon on, "The Fatality of Impatience."

Rev. G. P. Kreb in a persuasive manner described the work of the American Lutheran Church, basing his address on the theme, "We Are Laborers Together With God."

The morning devotion of the second day was opened by Mr. George Freeman, seminarian from Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, on the theme, "Thy Word Is A Lamp For My Feet."

The morning paper was presented by Rev. H. C. Schulz, of Baltimore, Maryland, on, "The Bible History and Its Use in the Week Day School." The purpose of Bible History is to give individuals a deeper sense of the nearness of God and a closer relation to Jesus Christ.

Rev. A. M. Fiedler, Baltimore, Maryland, in a paper on, "Visiting the Sick," showed the need of preparation in advance, the opportunity to give guidance to every member of the family, and the importance of leaving something with the sick.

Rev. P. W. Stephens, Anniston, Ala., who has been a very successful missionary spoke on "Meeting the Prospect,' a'nd analyzed the different types of prospects, stressed the need for perseverence in the work, and the importance of faith that the work will succeed.

The afternoon devotion was conducted by Mr. R. S. Tarrant, who preached on, "The Rich Fool," and emphasized the importance of saving souls.

Rev. Hieronymus presented a paper on, "The Graded Sunday School Series," and explained the use of the graded literature and the importance of trained teachers.

Prof. T. R. Speigner then spoke on "The Practical School", and stressed the correlation of educational work and the need in the future of providing training for Lutheran teachers.

Mrs. Fay E. Harris, secretary of the conference, presented her report. The program committee presented a report which made suggestions for the next conference based on a closer adherence to Lutheran practice.

Prof. Speigner preached the closing sermon, "The Growth of The Master's Kingdom." Rev. Herman Schulz then closed this inspiring and history-making conference in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

The conference was a religious milestone in the progress of the Negro in the South.

Methodists Lay Plans for Education

Kansas City, Mo., March 28—A Methodist Conference on Higher Education concluded a two-day meeting here Wednesday afternoon with the decision to hold similar conferences annually. The conference was one of a nation-wide series of four and drew an attendance of 200 educators and churchmen from the midwest section. States represented were Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Colorado, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

Dr. H. W. McPherson, of Nashville, Tenn., executive secretary of the Division of Educational Institutions of the Board of Education of the Methodist Church, under whose direction the regional conferences have been conducted, expressed the opinion that the reunited Methodist Church, "faces educationally the greatest educational opportunity it has ever had. Now we have a challenge as wide as our nation," he commented.

Dr. John B. Magee and Dr. John H. Reynolds, presidents of Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Ia., and Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., respectively, were the program speakers for the closing session. Bishop W. C. Martin, of Omaha, was the presiding officer.

Report of the Findings Committee as adopted put the body on record as favoring: Greater emphasis on a trained ministry and better support of the church's program of ministerial training.

Better educational advantages for Negroes and better church support of Negro institutions of learning which belong to the Methodist Church.

Reassertion of the educational leadership of the Methodist Church through a restudy of its basic educational philosophies and appointment of a commission to make a study of the religious functions and objectives of the church-related college, Wesley Foundation, students' guidance programs and educational philosophy of the Methodist Church and to report their findings to succeeding regional conferences.

"The present national emergency," the report of the Findings Committee stated, "not only presents ominous possibilities for a depletion of enrollment and as a character hazard for our Christian youth, but also presents a challenge to every character building and educational agency that our colleges pledge themselves irrevocably and unceasingly to seek the Christian interpretation of life and a steadfast Christian poise among our college young men."

Members of the findings committee: Benj. F. Schwartz, Lincoln, Neb., chairman; George A. Bowles, St. Louis, Mo., secretary; Paul W. Quillian, Houston, Texas; Charles Schofield, Denver, Colo.; Walter Hearn, University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.

Noted Educator Urges Development Of Race Pride In Speech to Students

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Secondary school teachers in the 1941 Hampton Institute workshop were strongly urged recently by Arthur P. Davis, professor of literature at Virginia Union University and member of the Summer school staff at Hampton Institute, to introduce Negro literature into their high school curricula. "When you are teaching Negro literature, you are not teaching un-American literature, you are filling in the gaps that have been present already too long in the English courses of our American institutions," he said.

Mr. Davis gave four objectives for teaching Negro literature to Negro children. "The first of these is to develop in them race pride," he said, "by off-setting for them the prevalent misconceptions of the Negro as presented in the movies and in so many novels by white authors." The second objective, he said, is to develop race criticism. "We need frank criticisms of the shortcomings of the Negro in all his relationships." He names as a third objective the developing of race militancy by "calling attention dramatically to the great injustice committed against the Negro." He stated as the fourth objective, the teaching of the Negro in his contributions to modern America.

Mr. Davis outlined for the Workshop teachers a tentative course in literature that includes writings from the poetry of Phyllis Wheatley to the recent famous novel of Richard Wright which Mr. Davis described as "a high water mark in American literature.

"No course in Negro literature should be devoted entirely to the writings by Negroes," added Mr. Davis. "It should include the sensitive and deeply understanding works of Paul Green, Erskine Caldwell and other honest white writers."

DEMOCRACY CREDO GIVEN TO TEACHERS

Marshall Offers It, Stressing Respect for Individuals and Equality of All Men

HOLDS IT VITAL IN CRISIS

Says Incompatibility of Our Ideals and Dictators' Must Be Always Remembered

A four-point credo of democracy in the present world crisis was offered yesterday by James Marshall, president of the Board of Education, in a message to New York City's 35,000 school teachers who returned to their classrooms this week.

No compromise between the dictators' world and this country is possible, Mr. Marshall asserted. Calling for the teaching of democratic principles, he held that they were founded upon "faith in man and acceptance of the Golden Rule."

American democracy means in essence these four things, Mr. Marshall said:

"Respect for the integrity of the individual.

"Respect for the variations among individuals.

"Equality of treatment of every person by those with authority.

"Equality of opportunity to develop individual capacities and realize individual interests."

Worth Sacrifice of Life

"For these things we are ready to sacrifice our substance and our lives," Mr. Marshall declared. "We can never accept the overlordship of supermen or the supremacy of any group or race or class of men. The totalitarian state does not respect individuals; it finds its doubtful safety in favoring the members of the party of the bureaucracy and denying equal consideration to others."

Viewing the schools as missions and the teachers as missionaries, Mr. Marshall urged the professional staff not to think of democracy merely in terms of a list of rights—the right to vote, the right of free speech, free press, freedom of worship or freedom from want—but to go beyond these things and lead the children to an understanding of the reasons for these rights.

"To understand our democracy and its underlying ideals," Mr. Marshall said, "is to recognize that they are mutual obligations and that it is these mutual obligations which we implement with rights and freedoms. Without this understanding our rights and freedoms cannot free us from confusion or save us from peredition no matter who wins the war."

Teachers were urged not to cling to the word "democracy" as though it were a rabbit's foot, "the touch of which will of itself bring us the luck to see us through," but to look at its implications and recognize what aspirations and ideals lie behind the word. He warned against the confusion that arises when lip service only is given to democracy, and "our acts are in contradiction to our words."

"It is time for each American to give thought to his and her credo of democracy," Mr. Marshall added. "To the teachers of our schools I offer my own, not as the only credo, but as a point of departure which you can consider and discuss, or from which you can each proceed to develop your own."

It is to the developing of individuals and giving them equality and respect, despite variations, that education in a democracy must address itself primarily, he asserted, adding that if these obligations were met by all, "there would be no need to trouble or teach about rights."

"It is in behalf of democratic ideals that we seek freedom from aggression from beyond our borders and from within, that we make as principles of government the maintenance of rights and freedoms," Mr. Marshall continued.

Many New Students

What is your guess on the total number of students that will be enrolled in the white and Negro city schools this fall and winter?

According to estimates heard, there will probably be more pupils enrolled in the first grade perhaps than in any of the other grades. There are a large number of youngsters who have reached the school age of six years, and there are quite a few who will reach school age long before the next session. Some of these will be sent to the private schools in order that they be able to enter the second grade when the 1942-3 city session opens.

It would be interesting to know what percentage of the students who enter the present session of the various schools will learn to love their books and heed the discipline imposed, remarked a father the other day. While he believed in sports and play facilities provided by the local authorities, he was inclined to think that more stress is put on sports than on books.

A few years ago a father here was asked about the progress his son was making in college. "Well, if you refer to sports, he is making A grade, but in most of his book studies, they vary from C to D."

The Age Of Lethargy.

The South Carolina Cotton Manufacturers association paints a rather disillusioning picture of South Carolina in a recent issue of its Clipsheet:

"Too few people in South Carolina care whether government is efficient or inefficient, too few care whether illiteracy is high and soils are depleted.

"Thousands of men and women in this state are concerned with the fact that our per capita income is lower and that resulting insufficient diets often leave a portion of the population physically unable to earn a decent wage.

"Thousands of others deplore the fact that educational facilities for Negroes are wholly inadequate.

"But for every thousand of those who care there are other thousands too apathetic to give the situation a passing thought.

This puts the finger on South Carolina's failure to make the progress governmentally that might have been expected. For the reason is not that South Carolinians do not know what needs to be done and what could be done. There have been competent studies made revealing the need for reform and outlining the measures necessary to accomplish these reforms. South Carolina politicians have never been aroused about them for the simple reason that they know that a great majority of the voters are not concerned about them. In the political campaign the candidates talk about other things, ignoring these fundamentals which should be the issues, but the blame is not theirs but the voters'.

And so the state muddles through, awaiting the day when some of these things must be done because there will then be no choice left even though the doing will cost the state a great deal more money than would have been the case had justice and common sense prevailed now instead of politics. But until then lethargy and indifference are the rule

FACTS AND TRENDS ON 1941-42 SCHOOL ENROLLMENT

U. S. Office of Education School Enrollment Estimates for 1941-42

Elementary	20,707,000
Secondary	7,334,000
Higher Education	1,450,000
Nurse Training	100,000
Business colleges (day)	75,000
Evening and part-time	1,850,000
All other schools	50,000
Total	31,566,000

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18—America's peace army of education is again on the march back to school—an army probably greater in enrolled strength than the combined military armies of the Axis and democratic countries. This fact is pointed out in a statement issued this week by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt.

A total of 31,566,000 persons are enrolled in the 1941 educational army; 20,707,000 are in the kindergarten-elementary school divisions; 7,334,000 in the high schools, and 1,450,000 in the college-university contingents. More than 2,000,000 will fall into the educational line of march back to evening and part-time schools, business colleges, nurse training institutions and private trade schools.

Patterned by Defense

"This will be a critical year John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education, in a special report to Administrator McNutt. "Schools will face new responsibilities growing out of national defense demands.

"Preparation of workers for service in defense industries will be a continuing challenge. During the past year Federally-aided vocational schools alone trained more than a million persons for defense vocations. This year's program of defense training in Federally-aided vocational schools should more than double the 1940-41 record training accomplishment.

"Colleges and universities will organize more short-course defense training classes in an endeavor to help meet a national shortage of engineers, chemists, physicists, and production supervisors. Plans call for training approximately 150,000 technicians in these essential defense vocations.

Public schools and private schools may be expected to adapt their programs in 1941-42 to stress health and physical education, citizenship training, community-national-and international relations, with particular emphasis upon hemispheric solidarity. Schools this year will emphasize conservation of national resources more than ever before. They will explain in more detail the difference between dictatorships and democracies. Educational radio programs and forums will help to identify and endeavor to solve through public enlightenment and discussion major problems affecting our citizens in this defense period. Defense savings programs also will be inaugurated.

More Women Teachers and College Students

"We may expect a rise in number of women teachers this year. Men teachers going into the army or taking defense jobs will be replaced in many instances by women teachers.

"College enrollments will also be affected. Enrollments of fewer men students and a larger number of women students are anticipated. Improvement in the financial income of many families will help to pay the cost of a college education for additional thousands of young people.

"Needs for school facilities in defense boom towns, possible shortages in certain school supplies and equipment because of defense priorities, emergency educational demands that cannot be foreseen, all are on the 1941-42 educational calendar."

Facts and Trends

Kindergarten: Estimated enrollment 625,000. This is a drop from last year's 640,000. This decrease is due to the low birth rate from 1930 to 1935. Although the total number of children in kindergarten is smaller, the percentage of children enrolled in kindergartens is larger. The nation's birth rate is again on the upturn. About one of every three children who have reached the age of five will be going to kindergarten this year.

Elementary Schools: Public and private elementary schools will enroll approximately 20,707,000 children. This is also a decrease from the 20,717,000 estimated for 1940-41. Here again we see the effect of the drop in birth rate several years ago which has affected private school enrollment the same as those in public elementary schools.

High Schools: The estimate for this year's enrollment in public and private high schools is 7,334,000. Last year it was 7,234,000 The drop in high school enrollments anticipated for this period by educational statisticians several years ago has not yet appeared. The full effect of fewer children born in the depression years of the early thirties has not been recorded in secondary school registrations.

Scarcity of jobs for younger people previous to the defense program, a higher compulsory school attendance age in many communities, more high school emphasis upon vocational guidance and preparation for occupations, and financial aid to students and families under the NYA and Social Security programs are some of the reasons why high school enrollments have continued upward. About 7 of every 10 young people of high school age are now enrolled in high school classes.

Vocational Education: Federally-aided vocational schools and classes, which increased from 1,247,000 in 1935 to 2,290,000 in 1940, are expected to increase proportionately during the coming year. These enrollments include all persons in day, part-time and evening schools and classes reimbursed under provisions of the Smith-Hughes and George-Deen Acts for promotion of vocational education in agriculture, the trades and industries, home economics and the distributive fields.

College and Universities: Despite predictions by some educators that college and university registrations would be hard hit by the selective service draft and more jobs for young men, the U. S. Office of Education sees a possible slight rise in college and university enrollments. The estimate made in face of unique problems facing higher education this year, foresees fewer men students, especially in liberal arts colleges, but a record enrollment of women. There will be a general step-up in demands for technical training growing out of national defense needs.

R. O. T. C.: Although the number of R. O. T. C. schools has not been increased in the past five years. R. O. T. C. enrollments have jumped from 168,000 in 1939-40 to 197,000 in 1940-41. One hundred twenty-five civilian colleges and universities register 11,000 R. O. T. C. enrollees. Eighty-two schools have an R. O. T. C. enrollment of 59,631.

Teachers: There will be 25,000 fewer teachers in elementary schools this year, it is estimated, but this will be offset by an equal rise in high school personnel. The elementary school drop is due to fewer pupils and fewer schools. Small groups of children formerly taught by individual teachers in one or two-teacher schools are now attending larger and better-equipped consolidated schools in many rural communities. The number of teachers, therefore, is smaller.

Greater public demands for high school education, as shown by the continuing increase in high school enrollments and the defense training program, are expected to bring employment to 25,000 additional teachers in the nation's high schools.

One-Teacher Schools: These schools are gradually disappearing from the educational landscape because of improved roads, better transportation, and more efficient school administration. Seven thousand small and ill-equipped school buildings will be affected by consoldations during 1941-42. One modern consolidated school building usually displaces every four small schools that pass out of existence. In 1920 there were 190,000 one-teacher schools in the United States. This year there will be only 115,000.

Pupil Transportation: During the past fifteen years the number of pupils transported to and from schools at public expense has increased 350 percent. U. S. Office of Education records show 2,400,000 children were provided transportation in 1932. This year approximately 4,600,000 pupils will be numbered among those given free transportation daily.

Readiness Is Up to Us

The collaboration of the U. S. department of education in a national broadcast dedicated to and descriptive of the nation's citizens of color is another indication of the fast changing times. The imminence of war has given impetus to inter-racial accord. But the speed of the movement indicates that it is proceeding with the trend, not against it. That fact is significant.

A generation ago the peerless entertainers, Williams and Walker, were limited in their appearances. Their like are heard and seen so generally nowadays that many of them are introduced without racial identification, and none with an explanation which means they are good—for a Negro.

Government sponsorship of a Negro program is proof of the shift in public opinion. For all the professed democracy this country has, it is still a land where the majority is the voice that is heard. That majority must be willing, or adept interpreters of it would not affront it.

The next thought follows logically—how ready are Negroes for the greater day about to dawn? We have been saying for years that we want an even break for employment. Back in the days when Samuel Gompers lived and the American Federation of Labor was the one workmen's organization, we asked and he said repeatedly that we were entitled to share. But we did not get ready! For all our clamor about work, we let ourselves be crowded out of crafts. The result is that today when the heads of both great labor groups are members of the commission to bring about our employment, we not only are not ready to go to work, but we are slow about taking training

Training That Counts

Dean T. D. Brooks, of the Texas A. & M. College, chairman of the Committee on Graduate Aid for Negroes in that state, has just issued a leaflet setting forth the annual expenditures of the State of Texas on out-state scholarships for the fiscal year ending December 1940.

MAY 24 1941

The report shows that for the long session 1939-40, 71 application were approved. For the summer session of 1940, 126 applications were approved and for the long session of 1940-41, 96 applications were approved.

The average grant for the long session of 1939-40 was $189.83; for the summer session of 1940, $90.84 and for the long session of 1940-41, $209.33; a total of $16,744.33. The total appropriation allowed by the Texas legislature for the bienium was $25,000.

But the interesting bit of information included in the little leaflet issued by Dean Brooks relates to the fields of work for which these grants were made. They follow: Medicine, Pharmacy, Dentistry, Public Health Nursing, Costume Designing, Art, Music, Statistics, Child Welfare, Social Service, Library Science, Accounting, Architecture and Dramatics.

The reports also show that other grants were allowed in such academic fields as History, Science, Foreign Languages, Physical Education, English, Adult Education, Mathematics, and Poultry Hunbandry.

The Black Dispatch will always be on the side of those who argue that Negroes should have access and exposure to all types of knowledge and training, so that what we shall say here should not be interpreted to mean that we would casterate and cut out certain types of training in Negro schools. In fact, what we shall say relates to the question of adding to the already accepted type of training now taught in our schools.

In this present moment when the world is aflame with war, everyone has suddenly awakened to the fact that we live in a mechanical world. Present day civilization is going to live or die in proportion to ability of the warring powers to best one another in the field of mechanics.

Never before has it so clearly dawned upon everyone that Negroes need a type of education having to do with trades, industry and the various techniques in our complex mechanical social structure.

Having said this we want you to go back a paragraph or two in this article and study carefully the major fields in which Texas teachers are taking graduate work. Study their trends in education to determine whether these teachers show inclination toward improving their knowledge in the mechanical sciences.

Understand now; we would not deprive anyone of the type of training desirable to take, but do you not think future Texas youth would have a firmer economic underpinning if the Negro teachers, who are utilizing the tax stipends set aside for graduate training, were some of them, preparing to come back home and develop Negro youth in technical fields of trade and industry?

Just now in Oklahoma with the government placing mechanical workshops in many large centers for the training of Negro youth, there is not in this state a Negro instructor who can give Negro youth training in aircraft, woodwork or aircraft motor assembly. In addition there is limited knowledge in the hands of only a few instructors relating to welding, sheet metal work, pattern making and other kindred machine shop processes. Will anyone argue that Negroes should not have this type of instruction? Should this type of instruction be received from Negro schools?

Sometime ago a principal of one of the important schools in this state presented a view regarding this serious question upon which this writer had not previously contemplated. He pointed out that the average Negro teacher who showed lack of interest in industrial education and the technical training of Negro youth, was indifferent because he had not been trained to teach the things we are talking about.

"The Negro teacher has somewhat a proprietary interest in teaching what he knows and when you start talking about teaching what he does not know, you are in fact talking about getting rid of him," declared this instructor.

We will admit that up to the time of this conversation we had not thought through this angle of the subject. We can see that point clearly now and we can sympathize with anyone caught in the vortex of such a situation, but on the other hand we believe the trend shown in the work being done by the Texas teachers in graduate fields indicates Texas teachers are not making preparation to teach some things they should teach.

The body of every race must be industrialized if that race is to be prosperous and self-sustaining. The Division of Engineering at the Oklahoma A. & M. College issues a directory of Oklahoma manufacturers and in this bulletin one can get illumination on the subject we are discussing.

We are going to list some of the industries located in Oklahoma and as you read this list try to determine the Negro school or college in Oklahoma that is preparing Negro youth to work in such institutions: fire and mantle brick, fruit jars, poultry and dairy feeds, beverages, butter, mattresses, laundry, stoneware, cement plant casting, brick cottonseed products, work clothes, tanks, gutters, skylights, brooms, bakery products, candy, ice cream, planing mill, ice, gas stoves, cigars, nut crackers, potato chips, awnings, tents, sheet metal products, marble works, feed, meal chops, auto tops, auto trailers, tin products, electro-plating, blue prints, photostats, window shades, boilers, pillows ,cosmetics, insecticides, signs, millinery, fences, wire, caulking screens, weather strips.

We are going to stop the enumeration right here. In this directory before me is catalogued almost every conceivable endeavor in which modern day society engages in order to live an effective existence. White schools are fitting and blocking white youth into every-day life situations with knowledge of how to conquer and control the environment where they live. What is the Negro school and the Negro school teachers doing about this?

The Negro school must get away from academic mathematics and conquer the applied use of numbers. The Negro college must become an institution of research and experimentation, not a mere purveyor of known truths and knowledge. Agronomy, Animal Husbandry, Chemistry, Economics, and Engineering must mean something more in the Negro school than it has in the past. The Negro teacher must cease looking at, but must look through life and the stuff people must handle and should control.

The presidents of Negro land-grant colleges will convene in Chicago for their 28th annual meeting on November 11, 12 and 13 at the Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A. Sessions are open to the public.

This group of 23 institutions of higher learning is called "land-grant" colleges because of their being supported in part from grants of land given to the several States by Act of the U. S. Congress in 1862.

The president of the association, Dr. F. G. Clark, of Southern University, has announced a program for the meeting that anticipates contributions from national leaders that are vital to the welfare of Negro people everywhere, educational and otherwise. Among anticipated contributors, according to Clark, are the following: Report of recent studies on Federal aid for cooperative agricultural extension work, by Professor Doxey Wilkerson, of Howard University, who is also author of a staff study on Negro education for President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Education headed by Floyd W. Reeves, of the University of Chicago. The elimination of any existing unfair distribution of Federal funds in this area has long been a project on which the association has worked and this contribution is designed to further progress along this line.

Alderman Earl Dickerson, of Chicago, who is now a member of President Roosevelt's Committee on Fair Employment Practices, is expected to speak to the association on this work and what these colleges may do in a helpful way.

"What Now, Class of 1941?"

By R. O'HARA LANIER
Dean of Instruction, Hampton Institute

EDITOR'S NOTE: With thousands of high school and college graduates beginning the task of job hunting this month, these remarks, made by Dean R. O'Hara Lanier at the "Senior Career Week" of Hampton Institute can well be read and considered by every young man and woman looking for a job. Senior Career Week at Hampton brought scores of outstanding personalities to the Hampton Institute campus to advise and consult with every member of the senior class on their careers and plans for the future.

FOR MOST of you the immediate problem is to find a job.

In seeing you off to a good stairt I wish to point out a few things that will help you, particularly on your first job. There must be a willingness on your part to assume, even under difficulties, a positive approach to your problems, your prospective employer, and your job possibilities.

DEAN LANIER

Because first impressions are of great importance, any applicant should try to cultivate a cheerful, friendly approach to prospective employers. An employer is not likely to hire an applicant who appears worried or downcast or bewildered, even though the person may have just cause to feel that way. The employer can seldom take the time to investigate the applicant's home-life—he is interested ONLY in filling a vacancy with the person best fitted for that particular job.

An applicant must take the initiative in bringing his qualifications to the attention of the prospective employer, and he must sell himself. An applicant is usually very nervous when applying for a job. One reason may be that he needs employment and feels that he must secure the particular job for which he is applying. Because of the ever-present feeling that he must not fail, he becomes nervous and restless. His carefully planned method of procedure leaves his mind and words fail him. What can a person do to regain poise?

ANALYZE YOURSELF

One of the best ways of gaining poise starts at home with the applicant analyzing himself—even listing the things he has to offer an employer. Now suppose you are the applicant. Ask yourself: Would I be cooperative? Do I have the ability to get along well with others? Do I know how to meet people? Ask yourself what you can offer an employer in personality, education, experience, health, ambition, any special training, and the knowledge of the particular job you want.

By preparing yourself in this way for an interview you are able to answer the prospective employer with positive statements concerning your abilities and interests and specific details of your training and experience; you will know certain important facts about the job for which you are applying, compensation offered, etc. By having in his posession all the facts he will need, the applicant will feel confident and more at ease because he will be anticipating the questions the prospective employer will ask him.

INFORM RELATIVES AND FRIENDS

It is a good idea for the out-of-work person to keep his relatives and friends informed of his need of a job, of his qualifications, training, and special abilities, for often they are able to give information of a vacancy where they work, or have heard through friends of openings in various places. Former teachers, priests, rabbis or ministers, business associates, fellow church members, fellow club members, YMCA and YWCA secretaries, neighbors, and merchants, prove valuable aids in suggesting prospective jobs.

One characteristic which employers especially look for in those they hire is the ability to get along with others. The importance of a positive outlook-determination to succeed—cannot be overemphasized because you still need it after your job is landed. It's this positive approach that helps you, first to do the job well and, second, to get along with all of your associates, employers, co-workers, and subordinates.

Learn to take orders cheerfully, and to carry them out promptly and well, especially when you would rather do something else. When you do something you do not like, remember that that is what you are paid for. There are often jobs which have to be done—jobs which are outside your daily routine, jobs which you did not expect to do when you were hired, jobs you may think no one should ask you to do.

GET ALONG WITH EMPLOYER

But if you want to get along with your employer, do them. No employer likes the person who has to be treated with gloves on. Every boss likes the person who will do promptly and well whatever is assigned to him. Every unpleasant task gives you another chance to show your boss that you are the kind of person he wants to have around.

Your boss has a job to do. You have been assigned to him to help him get that job done. He is held responsible for your work as well as for his own. That is why he must watch you and see that you do your work right. Usually he will know more about the job than you do. If he tells you to do something a certain way, do it that way, even if you think you know a better way. Try his way first. Study it. Try to understand it yourself. Beware of any suggestion that will make your work easier by making his work harder.

You will make a mistake some day and your boss will have to tell you about it. There is no need to tremble, or weep, or act like a whipped cur; your boss has made mistakes, too. All he wants is to be sure you know that what you did was wrong and that you will avoid doing it again. The best thing to do usually is to admit whatever you did and indicate your desire not to make the same mistake again, even though it may not be altogether your fault.

CAN YOU FURNISH REFERENCES?

When you go to look for another job you will be asked for references, especially from the last place where you worked. If your last employer will not recommend you, your chances of getting another job will be much poorer.

It may be you cannot undo all the habits and attitudes learned in the years you have been in school, but you can at least re-examine your philosophy of life, your plan for the future, check and double check them, and talk with people who have had experience, so that you will be prepared to get and hold that job!

The Right to Work

Perhaps the most significant statement written in connection with Negro education comes to our desk in the May issue of the Interracial Review and falls from the pen of George Streator.

Mr. Streator's logic is convincing. We wish every adult black man and woman in America could read what he says. It follows:

THE RIGHT TO WORK

The kind of education that a group or race receives determines in the long run its economic and social position. Because Negro leaders have known this, they have tended to shy away from industrial education, feeling that too great emphasis on tools and machines would make us the laborers of America. That danger passed—if it ever actually existed—and Negroes are now received in the professions, the arts and sciences. All is not settled, however, since education is a part of the civilization now in process of being formed the world over. In the brief discussion that follows, a few of these challenging problems are reviewed in outline.—G. S.

The controversy over the kind of education to be given in Negro schools reached its climax in the decade that preceded World War I. It was in 1916, indeed, on the eve of that war, that Dr. W. E. B. DuBois let loose a blast against the administration of Fisk University for what he saw as an attempt to destroy Fisk as a college and to convert it into an industrial school. Blood ran hot in this controversy, but since that time, instead of Fisk becoming an industrial school, Tuskegee Institute—Booker T. Washington's school—has become a liberal arts college, with its critics arguing that more emphasis has been placed upon "drawing room culture" than on industrial education.

Of course, industrial education is more complicated today than the ideas formulated by Mr. Washington. It is doubtful that any technical school can match the training gained through actual participation in factory work. Nevertheless, there are certain fundamentals that a good school can impart, and chief among these is mathematics. In all my experiences, there was never a more detester course of study in Negro schools. As a teacher at St. Paul school it was looked upon as something that everybody took but nobody wanted. And at Bennett College for Women, the President accepted it, but most of the faculty fought it more or less on the principle that girls should learn to cook, sew, can, knit, clean . . . without realizing that an organized and thorough mental discipline fits-in any place!

Obviously, this may stir up a hornet's nest. I admit this, but my eyes tell me that colleges all through New England are teaching girls to handle machinery. And to handle machinery—to say nothing of improving on it—mathematical reasoning is required.

The point of view that I am setting forth is in direct opposition to the dream that floats out of Columba's Teachers' College, the fountain head of Negro education and its direction. Up at Teachers' College the great drive has been on "methods"; that is to say, it is easier to get a degree in "how to teach a subject" than it is to take one in that subject itself. This has meant the death knell for most Negro colleges which tried to break through and teach a few fundamentals. It was easier to teach "how to teach."

But to get back to the start. Negro skilled mechanics will not be developed without strong mathematical discipline, no matter how it is imparted, whether by NYA or WPA. And unless real emphasis is placed on giving Negro youth this kind of training, there is no use talking about trade-union segregation. It is true that Negro workers have been, and still are, victimized by race prejudice. To meet this condition, most of the older workers have shunted their children into the "cultured" fields, mainly into the teaching profession, most of them holding a distorted point of view on the organization of human society.

It is true that white trade-unions have made the going hard, but the defense has been more futile than the attack. What better could be the jobs we demand. The real bottle neck for Negroes right now, is hostile Northern trade-unions want, but that there are so few skilled Negro mechanics to worry about. What is more disastrous than to have trained a generation of Negro leaders—mainly primed for politics —with no stable class of workers to lead?

When we agitate for equal opportunity we must train people for

"Negroes Are Mere Figure Heads In New Deal," Says Washington

JAN 24 1941

NEW YORK (By John H. Thompson for ANP)—"All America from the top down is guilty of excluding the American Negro from the main stream of culture", Forrester B. Washington, director of the Atlanta School of Social Work, told an audience of 215 persons at the 21st annual dinner meeting of the New York Urban League in the Royal Palm Room of Child's Restaurant Wednesday evening.

"In all of Washington in the New Deal setup, to my knowledge, there is not a single Negro on any of the policy-making bodies", he further astounded his audience by saying "Show me a Negro who is on the inside and I will say the Negro is in the main stream of culture". (Mr. Washington was employed as a specialist and adviser on Negro affairs under Harry L. Hopkins and should know of what he speaks. He claimed in an interview following the meeting that all Negroes employed in the New Deal were mere "figureheads" and "rubber stamps".)

Judge Myles Paige, chairman of the meeting, told members that the Urban League is busily engaged in breaking down precedents in New York, and they had done so when they held this meeting in Child's Restaurant, who have been notorious for their many refusals to serve Negroes in their dining rooms.

Describing the Negro as the "Little Man Who Wasn't There", Mr. Washington emphasized that the method which majority groups use to keep minority groups down is by excluding them from the cultural streams. "The action of the government in excluding the Negro from full participation in our defense programs has weakened the Negro", he continued. But he assured his audience that the Negro himself had something to do with his exclusion for some "1200 Jews in Atlanta raised more than $1,200,000 within a year to fight anti-Semitism—but more than 12,000,000 Negroes in the country could not raise this sum to aid the NAACP. The Chinese of Atlanta, a very small group, raised $150 per month in an effort to aid their country. This was more than 100,000 Negroes in Atlanta raised to aid themselves."

Jarring New Yorkers from their smug attitude in assuming it was only in the South that the Negro was backward in getting in the stream of culture, Mr. Washington told them that New York was not immune "for business is one of the main streams of culture—and where is business in New York? On Wall street, Broadway, and there are no Negroes there . . . The Urban League should strive to get non-racial jobs in the down town area. It should be ready to meet new challenges."

Condemning the selection of Bill Robinson as "Mayor of Harlem," he told his audience that they should "pick out the richest Negro in the community—not rich in worldly goods but rich in thought, achievements, ability to help his people, and elect this sort of man as 'mayor', not the best tap dancer in the world."

Dallas Martin To Make Survey To Discover Applications For Recent Audio-Visual Developments

More general application to Negro educational institutions of modern audio-visual developments in education is the aim of a nation-wide survey among prominent Negro educators to be conducted during 1941 by the RCA Manufacturing company.

Dallas A. Martin, St. Louis born, Lincoln university-educated Negro, is soon to leave RCA Victor's Camden, N. J. headquarters on the first leg of a trip which will carry him into the executive offices and classrooms of hundreds of Negro schools, colleges and universities. The survey is being made under the direction of Ellsworth C. Dent, Director of the RCA Educational Department.

In addition to conducting the on-the-scene survey, Mr. Martin will lecture on such subjects as television, recorded music, how a radio receiver is built, the new RCA Electron Microscope, the uses of a school sound system, and a merchandising presentation for business students. In addition, he will use several sound motion picture films.

"I am tremendously enthusiastic about the possibilities of supplying modern teaching aids to our own people in our schools," Mr. Martin said. "I have been privileged to go through te famed RCA research laboratories, tour the factories, and talk with the men who direct these activities, and I am literally overwhelmed with the far reaching technical developments that are now available to schools and colleges.

"Oved a period of 30 years RCA Victor has pioneered in the development of apparatus and teaching aids which have proven of great value to educational institutions. Now the Company has decided to expand its activities still more in this field, and to devote more attention than ever before to the Negro educational field."

Mr. Martin holds a Bachelor of Science degree in physics from Lincoln University, Jefferson City Mo., and is a member of Kappa Alpha Psi. He has attended RCA Institutes, a radio technical school in New York, and spent several months studying radio's practical applications. During the 1940 New York World's Fair was employed at the RCA Exhibit as receptionist for visiting Negroes He has also visited the U. S. Office of Education and other Federal Bureaus to become acquainted with their activities in the audio-visual field.

An Open Letter to the Negro People of Adel

It would seem that our community and most certainly our school here have fallen into bad times. It is truly most unfortunate that for twice within two years, the eyes of the whole state should be turned on us here as the sources of evil and crime.

While we regret that all of us here must bear the stigma of disgrace that comes from crime perpetrated by a few of us, it is still true that we must also bear the responsibility that results from it. The question now is, Where do we go from here? Do we not admit that we are groping around at the bottom of the hill? That admitted, there seems to me no place to go but up the hill, if we want to go. If we are not interested in going forward and making progress, we can simply stay where we are.

Do you, with me, see that this is the time that all hands must be turned to the wheel in order to save ourselves and our souls, and to make secure our children's future? Then we have no time for petty gossip. All we have time for is to see that our school is manned by competent, straightforward teachers, that our children are in school to receive the benefits therefrom, and that we give our faithful and unstinted support to the program.

The Cook County Board of Education has worked to place the kind of teachers in our school that we need, and so has taken that responsibility from our shoulders. It is up to us to see that our children are in school, and that we are loyal to the cause of education.

There are those of us who have already begun to arouse enmity by laying the blame on certain persons for the exposal of irregularities in the Training School. That is far from the question at hand. THE question is, Were there irregularities? and not who exposed them.

Turn to your Bibles and re-read the story of Jonah as told in Chapter 1. The story goes that the Lord sent out a great wind into the sea, a mighty tempest. And what a tempest it must have been, to have come from the hand of the Lord. Lots were cast, and the lot fell on Jonah Verse 15 tells what brought calm to the sea that raged with tempests. Read the story.

The forces of evil have worked against our school here from without; they have worked from within. If we can somehow manage now to conquer with good the evil that has befallen us we should be able to place our school on the front row with other schools in the state. Those of us who can see a little farther than our noses still have a vision of what is possible for us here. Let us not become blinded now, but let us continue to see, to work, and to help our fellows see that we can make progress, and let us make it. We must not waste our time in pettiness. We must work, work hard, work long. With things straight on the outside, and straight on the inside, what hinders us from going up the hill? My answer is "Nothing". Let that answer come from the hearts of all of us. More anon.

Americans Polled On Education

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 3—Secretary Frank L. Grove, of the Alabama Education Association, stated today that the American public approves equal per pupil expenditures for the education of Negro and white school children. Grove was discussing the December issue of The Education Bulletin, published by the Association, which summarizes results of a recent Gallup poll on public education. "The Bulletin shows", said Grove, "that 78 out of 100 Americans favor equal expenditures for the education of each white and Negro child. Only 16 per cent are opposed to such equality."

Strange as it seems, according to the Bulletin, only 46 per cent of adult Southern whites are opposed to equality of per pupil educational expenditures for white and colored children, while 45 per cent of Southern whites favor such equality. A majority of 56 per cent of all Southern people approves equality of educational expenditures for the races.

The Bulletin shows that 73 per cent of the public approve the modern emphasis on education while only 23 per cent feel that education today is being given so much importance. In addition to approving the modern stress on education, 83 per cent of the people think that schools have improved and that children are today getting a better school training than their parents received before them.

"It is significant", Grove said, "in view of the domestic and world situation that a majority of 73 per cent of all Americans approves freedom in discussion of controversal issues by young people, and 68 per cent approve freedom of discussion for teachers". However, 26 per cent of the people felt that teachers are unfair in their discussion of disputed questions and present only one side of the case.

According to the Gallup survey, almost one person in five feels that too little is being spent on education while 47 per cent feel that the amount spent is about right.

Moreover, 50 per cent of the public feel that certain states are unable to finance adequate schools and more than one person in four would pay higher federal taxes to aid such states. A majority of 72 per cent of the public approves government aid to help educate the children of poor parents and 58 per cent would be willing to pay higher taxes to give this aid.

As to the worth of high school training, the Gallup findings show that a majority of 54 per cent of the public feels that many of the pupils now in high schools should quit and go to work; that they would be better off at work than in school. Eighty-two per cent of the people feel that the government ought to provide a part-time work and training program for youth.

Speaks At Arkansas Conference On Race Relations

Special to The Commercial Appeal

CONWAY, Ark., Feb. 14.—Inequalities in Arkansas public education between white and negro races, particularly in Eastern Arkansas areas in which the colored population is large, might well become the target of pressure groups if industrialization is advanced rapidly in the South by national defense manufacturing, according to Ed McCuistion, state supervisor of negro education, who spoke Friday at the Arkansas Conference on Education and Race Relations at Arkansas Teachers College.

Solution of the problem, he added, rests largely with counties and school districts, which control disbursement of public education funds. Such control accounts for the wide variations of educational effort among counties.

Mr. McCuistion cited one county which in 1940 expended $87 per white child and $5 per negro child. At the other end, however, one county expended $25 per white child and $21 per negro child.

His address also related to other factors such as number of pupils per room, salaries paid teachers and investments in school buildings and equipment.

For the state as a whole, the 1940 report showed 47 negro pupils per teacher and 36 while pupils per teacher as the Arkansas average.

Although wide variations are in evidence, he said, the report as a whole shows an increasing awareness of the need of providing better public schools for negroes, and considerable progress has been made in the past half century. The size of the job head, however, is indicated in the summary to show the educational effort on behalf of the state's negro population which is one third of that for the white population.

Religious Training

SUPERINTENDENT William H. Johnson of the Board of Educaton has announced a plan, subject to public approval, to include in the high school curriculum a course in religious education and training for which full credit will be given. According to tentative plans the courses will be conducted in neighborhood churches by trained religious leaders and each student desirous of taking such a course will attend the church of his choice two hours a week. Churches of all denominations are to be included in the training of such students.

We can see no objections to the proposed plan of Superintendent Johnson. If the proposed schedule is carried out all denominations will be included in the religious training of the students and thus, permit each student to study at the church of his choice.

We think the introduction of religious training into the curriculum of Chicago high schools is commendable, to say the least. Our present generation is badly in need of the application of those Christian principles that strengthen the moral fibres of our society and that combat the evils of our community life which has taken such a hold on the tender minds of high school students.

The introduction of such a program in the schools would afford an opportunity for the students of the southside to spend their idle time in productive activities. It would be a worthy use of their leisure time and should produce results calculated to make for better citizens.

A well rounded educational program should include character and moral training in its curriculum. Of late years that phase of the educational process has been sadly neglected. That neglect has been revealed in the activities of high school students in numerous instance when their conduct has demonstrated a gross lack of moral training and understanding.

Under the half-day-school setup that faces students on the southside a good deal of idle time is given to them with no opportunity for adequate recreation. With no religious training at home and no moral training at school, it is little wonder that the minds of such students follow the paths of least resistance that lead, oftimes, to pool-rooms, gambling places, dives, and not infrequently, to inevitable ruin.

We heartily endorse the religious training program as proposed by Superintendent Johnson and hope that it will be introduced in the curriculum during the next semester.

The Student-Aid Deficit

With the legislature in session Negroes over the state interested in student-aid legislation should get busy attempting to secure funds to cover the $13,000 deficit now existing. It will be recalled that some time ago the Black Dispatch openly denounced the Ritzhaupt bill which so inadequately provided for out-state scholarships and at that time predicted a deficit would occur of the size named above. At that time the Black Dispatch was roundly berated by many who felt Senator Ritzhaupt had done something worth while.

In spite of this ill-advised criticism one can find all over Oklahoma Negro teachers and students who spent their hard earned money in out-state schools only to be later advised the state had no funds with which to reimburse them. The records in the state department of education show the first year of the binneum a deficit of $13,000 exists and it is certain that a deficit in larger amount will pile up in 1941.

We assume that a larger deficit will develop this year by reason of the fact that many desiring graduate work would not leave home last year for fear there might occur what did happen. If the state legislature makes proper arrangements to care for the current deficit we are sure claims totaling more than $20,000 will be filed during 1941.

But getting back to the Ritzhaupt bill. Unquestionably somebody fumbled the ball. We are loath to feel that a deliberate attempt was made to double-cross the Negroes of the state, but the bald truth is Senator Ritzhaupt passed the amended student-aid bill in the last legislature without inserting a section providing for an appropriation.

All Senator Ritzhaupt did was to revise and amend Section 590 of Article XL, leaving Sections 591, 592 and 593 intact. Now Section 593 in the old student-aid bill provides for $10,000 to be expended during the years of 1936 and 1937. The only way for the new student-aid bill to be operative and effective would be for Senator Ritzhaupt to have revised Section 593 so as to provide another additional and identical appropriation for 1940 and 1941.

"Well," says one, "I received money. From whence did it come?" The answer to the above question is this: Superintendent Crable, when he discovered the law had been passed without appropriating money to make it operative, tacked $10,000 to his departmental budget and the five thousand dollars distributed to the Negroes of the state has been received solely through the foresight and interest the State Superintendent has in Negro education.

It is illegal to tack appropriations relating to special legislation to departmental budgets, but when the administrative forces were told the bill as passed was worthless Superintendent Crable was allowed to stretch the law to a point where the Ritzhaupt mistake, or the Ritzhaupt "turkey" could be salvaged.

As a matter of fact it was Superintendent Crable who recommended to the legislature that $25,000 be appropriated annually for student aid, but this was turned down by those who drafted the bill. The Crable proposals were declared preposterous. The wisdom of the Crable view is now exposed.

As the situation now stands there is need of special legislation providing for the present deficit of $13,000 and for the anticipated dificit which will occur during the present year. An appropration of not less than $25,000 will be necessary for this purpose, and we are of the opinion that it will take much more.

SAYS WE SHOULD FORGET BOOKER T. WASHINGTON'S 'WORK WITH HANDS' IDEA

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — After painting a very dismal picture of employment and economic conditions among American Negroes, Dr. Abram Harris stated, in the third seventy-fifth anniversary lecture at Lincoln university of Missouri last night, that the sooner we forget the 19th Century Booker T. Washington philosophy of "working hands", the better able we will be to develop the necessary program and facilities for equipping Negro youth for some of the skilled jobs in present-day industry. Dr. Harris, professor of economics at Howard university, addressed an overflow audience of students, faculty, and townspeople on "The College and Negro Labor Problems."

The role of the college in contributing to a program of mechanical and industrial education of Negroes, he said, can be only indirect. It could provide, "through continuous research and study of industrial relations and economic changes," "knowledge of industrial organization and the effects of technological changes on the labor market." Such knowledge, stated the speaker, is necessary for proper leadership in devolping a program of increased skilled employment among Negroes.

Claiming that the chief responsibility for training Negro skilled workers falls upon the technical and industrial schools, Dr. Harris charged the Negro industrial schools, with on eor two exceptions, with being unprepared to provide modern technological training.

"Much of the current talk concerning the Negro's lack of industrial education has as its frame of reference the old Hampton-Tuskegee program of vocational education. That program was in no way designed to meet modern requirements. It sought to meet the needs of the passing era of handicraft industry in which the skilled craftsman worked with relatively simple tools. But what modern technology with its minute division of labor demands is skill in the manipulation of complex tools and macninery and a knowledge of industrial processes."

The Negro skilled worker has all but disappeared, he declared, because of his failure to keep abreast of the changing requirements for employment in modern industry occasioned by technological development.

Negro domestic and personal service workers are in dire need of training, stated the Howard educator. "In this field the changes in the standards of proficiency and the Negro's lack of training to meet them are party responsible, first, for his displacement in hotels and wealthy households, and, secondly, for the virtual confinement of the Negro female domestic to "day's work." He urged intensive training in household management, child care, economic and nutritive value of foods buying and selection of foods, and, emphatically, personal hygiene and personal apperance. He chided home economists for neglecting this type of training in the face of a declining demand for teachers of home economics.

Given a good supply of skilled Negro workers and a change in the attiude of white employers and employes respecting the Negro's place in the industrial system, the future advancement of Negrose, and of white men as well, "will depend upon the continued expansion of private enterprise economy."

Dr. Harris discounted the claims of those who contend that capitalist enterprise has reached its end as well as of those who look to the Russian model of "collective ownership through class struggle and the dictatorship of the proletariat."

"There is nothing in the experience of the Soviet Union where collectivism is being tried which convinces me that the collectivization of property naturally leads to the society of the free and equal, and thus, automatically, solves the problems of Negro labor. What the Russian experience seems to show is that the destruction of private enterprise and, more especially the system of free markets for goods and services inevitably leads to bureaucracy, political tyranny, and economic spoliation of the masses of the people."

The contention of Communists and their apologists that Bolshevism would have proved more successful had the revolution only taken place in an advanced capitalist country like the United States is untenable, he stated. "....the outlook, practices, and policies and its leaders of American labor," he explained, "give little comfort to this view. They rather suggest that the "totalitarian gang-rule" which has followed the dictatorship of the proletariat in Russia would just as readily follow a workers' dictatorship in this country."

"THE AMERICAN CASTE SYSTEM"

FEB 20 1941

The Council Congregational Christian Churches, 289 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.—Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, author of the January SOCIAL ACTION, The American Caste System, writes from experience and conviction. He has been president of Talladega College since 1933, and, as Mr. Edwin R. Embree states in his foreword, "is devoting his life to trying to bring real independence to Negroes, and to creating an atmosphere where there will be fair opportunities for all the diverse peoples who make up our nation."

What can be done about our immoral caste system? Dr. Gallagher lists three points of procedure and authoritatively discusses each:

1. We must know the facts of the day in which the caste system shapes race attitudes and prejudices. . . . Racial attitudes are not inborn; they are learned. The individual merely takes on the racial notions which are dominant in his home, in his home town, and in his immediate countryside.

2. We must know the various possibilities of racial realignment and make an ethical choice between these alternatives. Dr. Gallagher lists and describes seven such possibilities.

3. We must discover significant points at which to begin to work in effecting a change. The Christian must address himself to this task as a Christian, not as a member of a given racial group or as a resident of a certain section of the nation, for it is clear that the lines of separation are not geographical or racial; they are human.

Study and research must be placed first on the list of things to do. Comprehensive reading of The American Caste System is a start in the right direction.

"The caste system will be broken only if we break it. We have a Christian obligation to release our minds, our energies, our time and our money for this cause. In a warfare of this sort, there can be no neutral ground. He that is not for us is against us."

Alabama Equalizes Teachers' Pay

However, Peculiar Evasions Noted In "Parity" Plan

MAR 1 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP)—The Alabama State Board of Education voted to equalize salaries between white and Negro teachers at is meeting here recently. The board adopted a single uniform minimum salary schedule for teachers irrespective of race, to replace the former separate schedules for white and colored teachers.

A total of $500,000 was voted to care for this equalization during the 1941-42 term, $200,000 of this sum to go to boost the salaries of Negro teachers up to the minimum and $300,000 to go to teachers, mostly white, who have qualified by experience or adtional training to receive salaries above the minimum.

EVASIONS NOTED

The new single schedule whicl by law creates the same salarie for teachers who have the sam training and experience regardless of race was put into effect t meet the recent decision of th U. S. Supreme court that states could not have separate salary schedules based on race. There are several peculiar angles to the Alabama practice, however.

The new schedule fixes a minimum which represents [illegible] for Negroes but it is a reduction for whites. Thus while the new minimum of $40 is $2.50 above the $37.50 which was the previous minimum for Negroes; it is also $10 below the former minimum of $50 for whites.

Where the inequality is continued by this clever law evaof the spirit of the law, is, as Dr. A. Collins, state superintendent of education, announced: none of the whites who were getting $50 per month will be reduced. The effect, therefore, will be to still pay whites $10 more than Negroes are to receive.

SALARY SCHEDULE

The new minimum salaries are as follows: Rank 1, master's degree and five years of college training, $70; Rank 2, college graduation with four years of training, $60; Rank 3, three years of college training, $50 per month; Rank 4, two years of college training, $45 per month, and Rank 5, less than two years of college training, $40 per month.

County and city boards may supplement these salaries out of local funds.

TENNESSEE MAKES PLAN FOR GRADUATE COURSES

FEB

NASHVILLE, — (ANP) —Tennessee has joined the ranks of southern states planning to offer graduate training to Negroes in compliance with the Supreme court decision that states should offer equal educational facilities to Negroes and whites.

FEB 21 1941

The Tennessee board of education has already made plans to make such training possible at the colored state college and at Meharry Medical college, both located near Nashville. Beginning next fall masters of arts and of science degrees in medicine, dentistry and pharmacy will be made available.

Previously Tennessee had been awarding out-of-state scholarships to Negroes who wished to pursue degrees on the graduate level Administration-sponsored legislation to comply with the court ruling has passed the state senate and is pending in the house.

At Knoxville, Chancellor A. E. Mitchell has under advisement a petition of six Negroes asking admission to the University of Tennessee. The state has presented its argumets for a demurrer to the bill.

Schools Fail To Serve, Claims Noted Educator

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va., July 24—"The plight of youth is that schools have taught subject matter instead of youth," declared Dr. E. V. Hollis, regional director of the Commission on the Teacher Education Study of the American Council on Education, in speaking to the Secondary School Workshop at Hampton Institute.

Dr. Hollis pointed out that there seem to be four causes for the failure of the traditional present day school. The tendency of weak teachers to accumulate degrees, the seeking of teachers of degrees in work unrelated to the professional jobs at home, the failure of schools to have a common everyday understanding of life situations, and the tendency of politics to have a demoralizing influence in some localities.

He advised the teachers and principals to change their attention from theoretical to laboratory courses; to take advantage of in-service teacher training through summer schools, workshops and work conferences.

DR. CALIVER SAYS TEACHERS COULD DO A BETTER JOB

AUG 24 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va., Aug. 21—Dr. Ambrose Caliver, senior specialist in Negro education in the Federal Office of Education at Washington, D. C., told a Hampton Institute workshop recently that: "We haven't done what we could do with what we have. In spite of low salaries and inadequate facilities we could do a better job. We must teach pupils to read, to figure—we haven't done a good job in this area. We must close the chasm between where we are and where the people in the majority group are by pul ing ourselves up by our own boot straps."

Dr. Caliver spoke informally in the auditorium of the Phenix high school building, the headquarters of the Workshop for the summer.

He gave an account of the College Study now being made by the government, evaluated the study in terms of the information it was giving to officials, and predicted resulting federal action. He listed the work being done in the southern states by officials and by educators toward equalizing salaries. He scored Negro teachers for their shortcomings in meeting pupil needs and urged them to provide an education that will prove more functional for Negro boys and girls.

Dr. Caliver challenged the listeners to be good leaders. The greatest need today in America among Negroes is intelligent emotionalized leadership, but it has been too intellectual, too scientific. We need leadership with a driving force."

WPA Adult Education Helps Negro Role In Defense

The WPA Adult Education program is enabling thousands of negroes in every part of the country to assume an increasingly important role in the democracy, James A. Atkins, specialist in negro education, said today. Figures recently released by the WPA division of the statistics reveal, he said, that negroes are participating actively in many WPA training programs which increase their usefulness to the nation during the emergency.

Regular vocational training which has now taken front-line position in the defense effort accounts for 1,981 WPA trainees enrolled for courses in radio engineering. Of this number 3.8 per cent are negroes. The 48 negro trainees enrolled in aeronautics are 2-8 per cent of the total of 1,712. The 6,399 negro students in WPA commercial training classes represent 9 per cent of the 71,448 total participants. Negro trainees in other vocational training classes aggregate 12.4 per cent of the total enrollment, or 7,506 out of a total of 60,658.

Has Part In Defense

Training in social rehabilitation also plays a vital part in the "home-from defense," of the nation, Mr. Atkins continued. Out of a total of 143,710 students reported in homemaking and education classes, 17.5 per cent, or 25,123 were negroes. Other adult education classes in specialized fields accounted for the enrollment of 67,750 negro students who constituted 13.2 per cent of the total 512,661 enrollees. Taken as a whole, negro students in all WPA adult education classes were 19.1 per cent of the total of 956,163 participants. In literary classes alone negro students constituted 46.3 per cent of the total enrollment.

Percentages which negro enrollees were to the total enrollment in other phases of the education program were: Nursery schools, 19.2 per cent; instruction for handicapped and institutionalized persons, 14.8 per cent; instruction for insolated persons, 19.5 per cent; workers service programs, 27 per cent; classes in art instruction, 25.9 per cent and music classes, 16.7 per cent.

The figures also reveal that WPA Region VI has the largest number of negro enrollees in all phases of the adult education program. This figure is 62,959. The States of Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas are represented in this region.

Figures Significant

"These figures are significant from two points of view," Mr. Atkins stated. "Foremost is that of an all-inclusive program of human rehabilitation. This program touching all age levels was planned well in advance of the present emergency which now calls upon an intelligent and trained citizenry to turn all efforts toward building national unity and placing practical skills at the disposal of those in charge of the total defense effort. And this is an effort which is just as important in the home and the community as it is in our major defense industries.

"The other significant point is that race, color or creed play no part in the democratic extension of training and services of the WPA to those citizens who would have been otherwise neglected. Thus the democracy which all citizens within this nation are called upon to defend because something real and vital well in advance of the present threats that would destroy it."

Conference of Youth Leaders To Meet at Fort Valley State

The Fort Valley State College, in co-operation with the American Youth commission, proposes to assist older youth, both in and out of school, to find themselves.

The school is taking steps to develop a project which would institute a study of rural and urban Negro youth in the state of Georgia, which will be a movement in the direction of training leaders equipped with a point of view in such matters.

A number of leaders of the state are being asked to meet, June 2, at Fort Valley State College for the purpose of discussing problems affecting the youth. The them will be Utilizing Youth Agencies for Community and Personal Improvement.

The opening ceremonies will be held at 9 a.m. Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president, will bring greetings from the school. The purpose of the conference will be outlined by W. S. M. Banks Jr.

Other speakers asked to appear are the Rev. A. V. Edwards, Religious Aspects of the Individual and Community Life of Youth Which Should be Considered; Home Management, Miss Camilla Weems, assistant state extension worker; Youth Problems Confronting Work, Mrs. Minnie D. Singleton; Some Short Comings of the Social Science Textbooks Now Being Used in High Schools, Prof. Samuel Hubbard, principal of Hubbard Training school; The NYA As a Factor in Community and Personal Improvement, Prof. H. E. Bryant; Some Aspects of Farm Life Among Negroes Which Should Be Considered, O. S. O'Neal, Alva Tabor and A. Hurst; The Extension Service As An Aid to Youth Development, P. H. Stone.

The purpose of the conference is to begin by making a survey of conditions among Negro youth in the state. During the summer students in several selected areas will be placed to develop, with the assistance of the local people, a program of recreational, educational, individual and service activities among the older youth.

Tolerance Upheld

LOVERS OF TOLERANCE and common justice regardless of race are naturally elated over the vindication of Dean Walter B. Cocking, by the Georgia State Board of Regents. Dean Cocking, who is a former state school superintendent and an educator of national reputation, was cited by Governor Talmadge as a person advocating practices contrary to southern traditions. This charge was amplified to state that Dean Cocking was not "regular" on the race question.

The leaders of the Board of Regents demanded a hearing and in that hearing Dean Cocking won a vote of confidence which is a tribute to his broad spirit as well as a mark of justice and fair play for those who appeared in his behalf. Outstanding among these were Dr. McCain of Agnes Scott, Dr. Caldwell of the University of Georgia, Dr. Harvey W. Cox of Emory University, and Dr. Willis A. Sutton of the Atlanta system, all fine and strong men.

All in all, the little fracas incited possibly by politicians who desired to "sick" the Governor on Dean Cocking for his broad and tolerant spirit, did the state no credit. It did, however, help our whole educational system, in that it showed the world that those who sought the scalp of Dean Cocking were not in the majority in Georgia.

Students of Georgia's educational system and its history know that we have come a long way from the old days. There are those in this generation who remember when there was not a single state supported high school. It was the early pioneers, through such men as Dean Cocking who have brought us over the long and trying trail to what we have today.

In Georgia there are many fine young men in the educational system of the Walter Cocking brand. From one end of this state to the other they have met in colored meetings of teachers, given them wholesome suggestions and used their good offices for the betterment of the school system.

Never will the people of this state forget Walter B. Hill, M. L. Brittian and J. C. Dixon. All have left the shining tracks of educational emphasis on our red soil.

In the voting for the exoneration of Dean Cocking, young men of his school find nothing to fear. Had the matter gone the other way, notice would have been set up for such men in the system to mind what they are doing especially in the field of the preachments of common justice for the underprivileged.

Dean Cocking is a great man, muchly in demand and whether he remains in the state or not, the attempt to crucify him on the old cross of race prejudice will rebound to the everlasting chagrin of those behind the matter.

We are engaged in a great struggle—a struggle to save our democracies from totalitarian ghouls and this is an occasion of united sentiment and those who would exhibit the existence of such racial intolerance are no friends of the President's good neighbor policy and those who are striving night and day for unity at home.

MORE GRADUATES

This is graduation season—the season in which young people are given diplomas and certificates which is a stamp of approval by high schools, colleges and universities that they are prepared to do a certain type of work out in the world among men.

To the thousands of young Negroes who will receive their diplomas the future does not offer them the opportunity which perhaps they have dreamed about during the period of their study while in school. They, no doubt, have heard speakers and those who give advice say that the only thing necessary is to make preparation and the world would give them reward in proportion to their preparation. The writer of this editorial can advise that that is true in part and very much untrue in other parts.

As the Negro race has advanced in culture, education and economics the problem of making a living has increased in proportion. Competition has become more keen and more has been expected of the Negroes in adjusting themselves to industrial life. More and more as the days come and go it is revealed to us as a race group that the burden of making places for the Negro youth to earn a living rests upon the shoulders of the present day Negro who claims that he is not inferior and that he has the ability to measure arms with the other groups of our commonwealth. The day of the individualist business programs is over and those who seek to promote such programs are doomed. The only way our race can now expect to succeed is through mass action in business, in politics, in industry and in any other function designed to promote our interest. The present day world war crisis points more vividly to the fact that the various social groups will be affected by the law of survival of the fittest more in the future than in the present.

It is up to the present day Negro who is carrying on the program of industry and business to do something about the employment of our boys and girls coming out of school. It is up to the masses of laboring classes to support Negro enterprises in order that Negro business and industry can build up an economy which will enable them to build a united front to safeguard our advancement and to create a market for the knowledge which our young people have to dispense.

The greatest handicap is not the lack of education and ignorance as some would think but it is social prejudice forced upon the Negro by the American white man because of his slavery heritage. We cannot afford to kid ourselves when we know that the door of opportunity is closed in the Negro's face because he is black and because he has not had an opportunity to build himself in our commonwealth where prejudice can be forced back because of certain pressure that the Negro is able to apply which will be a handicap to the American white man making money. The Jew is a minority group and is not loved any more by the American white man than the Negro but his economic status in the business and industrial world forces the American white man to recognize him and to put his prejudice in the background. When the American Negro is able to reach that point where he has economic independence which will come to him some day the American white man will recognize him and deal with him just as he does other Americans and put racial prejudice in the background.

As our boys and girls receive their diplomas this season let it be an inspiration to the mothers and fathers and the relatives to make a sacrifice in order that we might liberate ourselves from the status of dependent citizens to that of independent citizens in order that we can enjoy and participate in a full measure the rights of American citizens.

Educational Equality Necessary In Democracy

THERE have always been some splendid reasons why the federal government should assist the states in the matter of public education as is proposed by the Harrison-Thomas bill which provides for United States subsidies in the sphere of education.

Added to these are some very valid reasons suggested by Dr. Raeord Logan in a recent appeal before the Senate committee on education and labor. Dr. Logan, speaking for the Committee on the Participation of Negroes in the National Defense Program, pointed out that only through federal subsidization can equality of education for the Negro in the South be approximated.

Dr. Logan makes the further point that the inequality, which characterizes the entire program of education in the South, might prove to be extraordinarily expensive to a nation arming to defend itself and needing, for the varied purposes of defense, manpower well qualified and well trained to do the jobs required in an adequate national defense program.

It seems that both these points will hold water. The speaker carefully points out that national unity cannot be achieved so long as there exists a minority, representing one-tenth of the total population, which is depressed and dissatisfied because it has been denied the training which would make possible employment on jobs where the pay is adequate for the maintenance of a decent living standard.

While it is undemocratic, it is nevertheless an established fact that the South does not educate its sons and daughters of a darker hue on anything that approximates parity with the education of whites. There has been no conclusive evidence that the South proposes to make educational equality a fact short of judicial and legislative command.

For this reason, it is important that any federal assistance going to southern states be safeguarded and with sufficient Washington control to guarantee for the black citizen equality in the training which the government pays for.

With this money, Uncle Sam hopes to buy liberty in a world of oppression and tyranny. If he proposes to buy liberty for whites only, the effort is pre-doomed to failure. Only by purchasing democracy and freedom for ALL its loyal citizens, black and white, is there the remotest chance of eventual triumph.

Redmond Says Schools Need 'Streamlining'

Urges Colleges to Train Students for 'Civic Responsibility'

MAY 30 1941

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. —Sidney R. Redmond, St. Louis attorney and president of the National Bar Association, who addressed the Lincoln university educational conference here Saturday afternoon urged the Negro college to "streamline" its curriculum.

Speaking on "Training for Civic Responsibility," he offered four suggestions on the improvement of the college program:

1.—Emphasis on courses that are calculated to make better citizens. "The curricula should be streamlined," he said. "Emphasis must be placed on sociological studies. In Sumner high school, one of the two colored high schools in St. Louis, more students are studying Latin than there are white students studying it in the nine white high schools combined. This situation would be ludicrous if it were not so serious. Immediate action is necessary, though nothing is being done.

2.—Proper emphasis must be placed on civic work. He urged that the civic worker be glorified and suggested that a trophy be awarded annually to the student who takes an active part in the largest number of activities, who contributed most to the building of a fine morale among the student body, who took a personal interest in the appearance of the campus, who was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to persons in need.

3. — Have competent advisers. "The students like society," the attorney said, "demands that we be an example of the things we teach and special care should be used in selecting advisers."

4.—Start a course in Daily American Problems. "This course," the speaker said, "will teach the student his proper relationship to other persons. It will enable him to know people not just about them. Our schools are too abstract. They must be more realistic. ' 'Let this course be a study of life as it is.

1.—That which gives the citizen protection and opportunities.

2.—That which demands of the citizen the discharge of certain duties or responsibility. He compared the good citizen with the Good Samaritan, saying that the good citizen is the one who does his utmost to improve the condition of the less fortunate.

Schools have neglected this area, he said. "They have been more concerned with developing book worms than with preparing students to fit themselves into the life of the community."

R. C. Minor, professor of sociology, was chairman of the section on "Civil Responsibility." J. E. Miller, assistant professor of government, was discussion leader. Vera Carson sang a solo and the choral society opened the program.

At the close of this session, Dean Jason thanked those who participated on the program, acting on behalf of President Scruggs who left the city at noon Saturday to fill a speaking engagement in Tougaloo, Miss.

TUSKEGEE PERSONNEL DIRECTOR AND SPECIALIST IN CONSUMER EDUCATION SPEAK AT LINCOLN

MAY 30 1941

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. —An expert in occupational adjustment and a specialist in consumer education were the speakers in the "Economic Efficiency" area of the Lincoln university educational conference Saturday morning.

The speakers were J. J. Flood, personnel director at Tuskegee institute, Ala., and James E. Mendenhall, acting director of the Institute of Consumer Education at Stephens college, Columbia. Mo.

In his address on "The Negro and Occupational Adjustment," Mr. Flood posed the question, "Should Negro boys and girls be trained for jobs that are conceded to be open to them, or should they be encouraged to train for fields which are monopolized by whites exclusively?"

MAY 30 1941

Mr. Flood believes that today, should be trained now merely for more than ever before, Negroes the traditional jobs opened to Negroes but for jobs which in the light of their interest, aptitude and capacities. they will be likely to fill acceptably.

Selection of a Vocation

"In the selection of a vocation," Mr. Flood said, "the primary requirement is that one should know himself. He should know what his aptitudes, interests, abilities. resources and limitations are; and at the same time, he should know what the requirements are for success in a chosen vocation."

Following the selection of a vocation, comes preparation which is the second element of adjustment. "There can be no question that we are in agreement that the preparation of Negro students must be thorough."

Mr. Floods spoke enthusiastically of the value of a placement bureau as a part of a school's program. In mimeographed form, he presented the record of the Tuskegee placement bureau established in 1935. During the six years that the bureau has been in existence. it has placed 95 per cent of the Tuskegee graduates. Of the 195 graduates of 1940, 189 of them are employed. The record of other years:

1935: 98 graduates, 92 employed.

The Tuskegee placement bureau not only helps students to find employment but it has a "follow-up" program.

MAY 30 1941

"Most youth are not content to stand still," said Mr. Flood. "They wish to advance. both in responsibility and in earning power. All too few school systems have paid any attention to this aspect of the total problem of occupational adjustment. It is not enough to help a man find employment. We must give him every possible assistance in the matter of increasing his usefulness, and should often help him move on to other employment for which his experience and training have fitted him."

Speaking of the job-placement and job retaining part of the National Defense program. Mr. Flood pointed out that Negroes now have an opportunity to occupy jobs in the machine industry, in ship building and in the building trades, metal industries and other skilled jobs from which they have been barred in the past.

"Many of these jobs will continue long after the emergency defense period has passed," he said. "And whether or not these specific jobs continue, industrial employment in America for the next ten years will be shaped very largely by plans now being made by government and industry."

In the second lecture in the Economic Efficiency area, Mr. Mendenhall spoke on "Consumer Education: A National Need and Responsibility," pointing out the importance of training students to become good consumers as well as good producers—to know how to spend a dollar wisely as well as to know how to earn a dollar.

Mr. Mendenhall said that the consumer is likely to be "the forgotten man" in a national emergency. whether that emergency be a business depression or world war.

"Total defense," he pointed out, "means not only the building of a strong military force of trained men and modern materials but also the building of a civilian population which is healthy and physically fit."

He told of the functions of the Consumer Division of the Office of Price Administration directed by Miss Harriett Elliott. He warned consumers to guard against a deterioration of the quality of goods offered for sale and to be on the look-out for substitutions.

"Substitutions may be made to prevent price rises of goods at retail counters," he said, "but in every case of substitution, consumers should be informed regarding the exact nature of the substitution and the qualities of the materials substituted.

Lack of food for health

Mr. Mendenhall reminded his audience that Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administration, said recently that 45,000,000 men, women and children in the United States lack the foods essential to health.

Consumer education, he says, has four major obpecsv:iet T four major objectives:

1. To help the consumer become a better manager of his resources of money, good, time and energy so that he secures the maximum of satisfactions fro mthese resources.

2. To aid the consumer to become a wise buyer of goods and services so that he obtains the best possible values in making purchases in the market place.

3. To assist the consumer to become an informed consumer-citizen so that he gets the most utility from what he has.

4. To help the consumer to become an informed consumer-citizen so that he acts not only to improve his own economic status but also to benefit the welfare of consumers as a group.

Following his address, Mr. Mendenhall showed a motion picture, "Children Must Learn" based on an experiment in practical economics now bein gcarried on by the University of Kentucky through a grant-in-aid from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. The film graphically described the effects of a poor diet upon the health and lives of Kentucky mountain families and forecast steps to be taken to improve the situation.

Booker T. McGraw Lincoln U. professor of economics, was chairman of the Economic Efficiency section. G. R. Cotton, director of the department of mechanics arts, led the discussion following Mr. Flood's address.

M. B. Oldham, instructor in economics led the discussion of Mr. Mendenhall's address. A piano solo by Melvin Stephenson and a solo by Robert Watson, both students, were given.

EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE HELD AT LINCOLN U.; DR. GALLAGHER, J. J. FLOOD, MENDENHALL SPEAK

Two-Day Meeting Is Part of Seventy-fifth Anniversary Celebration of Missouri School; Evaluate College Program

MAY 30 1941

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. —An educational conference to evaluate the effectiveness of the Negro college in preparing students for good citizenship was held at Lincoln university Friday and Saturday, May 23 and 24, as a part of thes tate school's seventy-fifth anniversary celebration which began last fall.

Five speakers, two of them brought to the Missouri campus from as far away as Alabama, each took a different approach to the general theme, 'The Negro College in a Changing Social Order."

The conference in reality was an inventory of the Negro college program to determine wherein it is failing or succeeding in training students to be useful. happy, intelligent citizens in the communties in which they will live after college.

The speakers whose addresses provoked lively discussion from the floor were Edwin F. Peters, director of guidance and personnel of the William Woods college, Fulton, Mo.; Buell C. Galagher, president of Taladega college, Taladega, Ala.; J. J. Flood, personnel director at Tuskegee institute; James E. Mendenhall, acting director of the Institute of Consumers Education at Stephens college, Columbia, Mo., and Sidney R. Redmond, attorney of St. Louis and president of the National Bar Association.

Each speaker approached the general subject from a particular angle or "area." Four general sessions were held, two on Friday and two on Saturday with a different Lincoln university profesoor serving as chairman and as discussion leader at each session.

The Friday afternoon session was devoted to the area of Self-Realidation with Mr. Peters as the speaker; Friday night to "Human Relationships" area with President Gallagher delivering the address; the Saturday morning session was occupied with a discussion of "Economic Efficiency" with Mr. Flood and Mr. Mendenhall as the speakers. The Saturday afternoon session devoted to "Civic Responsibility," found Mr. Redmond as the speaker.

Mr. Peters. speaking on "The Educator's Responsibility to the Student," said that the paramount question before the educators who are concerned with the discovery and development of youth's potentialities is: "How can we set up a comprehensive guidance program for our educational system which will develop each individual adequately?"

Mr. Peters said that a well-planned guidance program should have a three-fold purpose:

1. To assist each student in collecting all the pertinent facts about himself.

2. To help each student see the social, recreational and vocational opportunities in life that are open to him if he meets certain requirments and standards.

3. To provide an opportunity for every student to compare his capacities with the demands for a happy and successful realization of his choice.

Mr. Peters pointed out that if education is a preparation for adulthood, there must be different types of education since there are different types of students and different types of adult needs.

"There can be no standard curriculum if individualization is to be achieved," he said. "What would happen if the physicians prescribed the same drug regardless of the ailment? In education, such treatment has been traditional and for the most part has been accepted."

The speaker decried the practice of "solving" the guidance problem by referring students who do poor work in academic subjects to the vocational school. "Many educators imagine," he said, "that having separated the academic from the non-academic student, the guidance problem is solved. But in the real sense, guidance is concerned with both groups of students, since both groups desire and must secure training for adult work."

The William Wood professor stated that guidance has been largely limited to hasty interviews based on too few facts, to trips to industrial plants, to a few tests, to a little vocational information and to a small amount of classroom work.

"Guidance is also ignored by the teachers in our schools because of the pressure of other duties. Mass education always leads to a disreguard of the individual student. Little time is available under our present educational system for a great amount of attention to be given to the individual. Frequently we find teachers who are subject-matter experts and not experts in the creation of a desire to learn.

"One of the chief reasons for the retardation of guidance is the persistence of the idea that all students need and must take the same curriculum.

This eagerness to compel all pupils to learn the same thing in the same way and at the same rate has caused us to be a generation of passive "crammers" rather than creating a generation of active participants in the learning process.

Mr. Peters said that every college teacher should be concerned with the question, "How can my course provide for my students those educational experiences which will contribute to the development of a wholesome well-integrated personality. He urged college faculty members to take an active part in determining the causes of maladjustments among first-year college students and to make a scientific effort to correct them.

Mr. Peters' address was preceded by an address of welcome by Dr. Sherman D. Scruggs, president of Lincoln university. Harold F. Lee, professor of education at Lincoln U., was chairman of the Self-Realization section Friday afternoon. Sidney J. Reedy, professor of education, was the discussion leader.

President Gallagher of Talladega, speaking Friday night in the "Human Relationships" area on the subject, "Training Negro Youth in Social Relationships" urged the college to become not a 'reproduction of the world as it is, but a forecasting of the world as we would have it be."

The Talladega president compared the dilemma of American democracy with the educational dilemma, devoting most of his address to a discussion of American democracy in the light of the present world crisis.

"The character of American society," he said, "is most clearly revealed in the light of the present world crisis. As a hurricane reveals the strengths and weaknesses of some great building, so the world crisis reveals the strength and weaknesses of American democracy."

Democracy, he pointed out, cannot be built by undemocratic means, nor can educational ends be achieved except through the use of educational processes appropriate to the ends in view.

"If there is no place for dictatorship in the American nation, there is no place for dictators in the American colleges. If we wish to produce college graduates who can live successfully in the teeth of our undemocratic national life, we can do it only in a college which cultivates in its students the habits and attitudes od democraic living."

Democracy, said Dr. Gallagher, is not static, but must be created anew every generation and every decade and that this recreation is possible only when a people are relatively successful in the struggle against decline and decay within the nation and when they are not "uduly inhibited by disruptive anti-democratic forces from without."

In order for the democratic precess to function, he said, "it must function democratically — both within the nation and in its international dealings. The use of non-democratic processes either at home or in the world scene defeats the democratic process itself by producing other than deomcratic results.

Dr. Gallagher disagreed with the old adage that "We can't eat our cake and have it too." He said that "Democracy's cake must be eaten if we are to have it at all. We are in a dilemma because we want to have democracy's cake without eating it, while at the same time we are unsure that we shall be permitted to eat it unless we promise to quit making it.

"Should we, then, abandon it for the hardtack of totalitarianism with which to choke the opposition? And if we do, how will we relish the unleavened diet ourselves?

"If some one of my listeners rises up at this point and demands to know by what right I am suggesting that present economic, political and racial patterns in America follow democratic ideals, I concede the point at once. I am not arguing that we have democracy now—we only think we have. We lost it long ago, or possibly never had it.

Speaking of certain aspects of the general dilemma of American democracy, Dr. Gallagher said that no where is the cry to defend democracy stronger than in the Southern states and no where within our borders is there less effort to put democracy into action.

"The best defense of democracy," Dr. Gallagher said, "both in default at home and defeat abroad, lies in pushing ahead vigorously for a resolution of the basic contradiction within American democracy itself."

"Deomcracy must move forward," he added, "under the impetus of a dynamic fraternalism, to resolve the longstanding contradiction of liberty and equality in a higher synthesis of fraternal patterns. If it dies not, it faces probable decline in a decadent caste and class structure already well-established.

"Both at home and abroad, we must practice the thing we want to perfect. In our treatments with other nations, we cannot rely on coercion through force, even though there are risks involved in not doing so. In our treatment of our own peoples, we must likewise abandon the undemocratic practices now used for racial, religious and economic oppressed or disadvantaged groups.

"Among other things we must abandon our iniquitious racial caste system. An all-out ethical democracy is its own defense, and its only defense.

"Our educational job," Dr. Gallagher said, "is to bring students, teachers, administrators, trustees, legislators and donors alike to face frankly the crisis within our nation and on our campuses; to bring them to meet this crisis squarely and without flinching, and to conquer it on the campus in the hope of being thereby aided in conquering it in the nation."

He feels the task of the Negro college is the same as that of any other college in training the student for life in a changing society.

"We in the Negro colleges have to do practically everything that is prescribed by the situation for other colleges. We have to do that for the simple reason that we expect our graduates to take their places in life in precisely the same manner and precisely the same sort of positions that others take.

He recognized the fact, however that the Negro college must do a great deal in addition. "We have to direct our educaitonal efforts so as to correct the ravages of an iniquitous racial caste system, and so as to enable the Negro college graduate to confront that caste system without being defeated in body or in soul."

Early in his talk, Mr. Gallagher pointed out that my "social relationships" he did not refer to "Emily Post." "The kind of social relationships we are here discussing are those which have to do with the whole of life, and 'sassiety' is only one small part—the least important part—of the total picture."

Walter R. Talbot, dean of men at Lincoln U., was chairman of the Human Relationship area. Mrs. Ina A. Bolton, dean of women, was the discussion leader. Lillian Johnson, student, played a piano solo. Betty Wilson sang a solo.

A reception for persons attending the conference was held in Schweich hall following the Friday night meeting which had the largest audience during the conference.

TENN. PLACES RACE EDUCATION ON PAR

MAY 24 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 22—Outlining of a program of university education for Negroes equivalent to educational facilities offered at the University of Tennessee, by a special committee to be headed by Commissioner of Education B. O. Duggan, has been authorized by the Tennessee State Board of Education. In view of the fact that Negroes are barred from enrolling at the State University, the legislature during its recent session made provision for the program the outlining of which has been ordered.

According to Commissioner Duggan, the special committee which will include members of the university faculty as well as members of the State Board of Education, the curriculum at the State Agricultural and Training School for Negroes, located here, will be reorganized to make it comparable to that of the university, so that training will be provided that will meet the university's post graduate work requirements.

Recommendations will also be made, he said, of a program for training students in law, engineering and dentistry. An appropriation to finance the educational program has already been made by the Tennessee legislature.

State Approves School Budgets

Negro Education Group Given Full Authority by Board

The state board of education yesterday approved budgets presented by the heads of the state teacher training colleges and granted full authority to a committee appointed by Education Commissioner B. O. Duggan to work out plans for providing educational opportunities for Negroes equivalent to those offered at the University of Tennessee.

Duggan's committee will collaborate with another headed by Dr. James B. Hoskins, president of the university, in arranging reorganization of the agricultural and industrial college for Negroes at Nashville so as to offer the necessary courses for Negro students.

AUGUST MEETING

Recommendations will be presented to the state board at its August meeting, Duggan said.

Members of Duggan's committee are Dr. Doak S. Campbell, dean of the graduate school of Peabody College, Nashville; Dr. C. Y. Clark, Mt. Pleasant physician, and E. B. Maupin of Shelbyville, member of the state board.

Dean Fred C. Smith heads the university committee, composed of the deans of the various schools.

TO ARRANGE TRAINING

It is planned also, Duggan said, to arrange pre-professional training for Negroes in dentistry, law and engineering.

The state schools for which budget reports were approved are A. & I., teachers colleges at Memphis, Johnson City and Murfreesboro, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute at Cookeville, Austin Peay Normal at Clarksville and the Alvin C. York Institute at Jamestown.

Says 'Bottleneck' Of Negro Education In Primary School

Institute to Give Special Course For Teachers

The "bottleneck" in Negro education today is in the primary grades, William M. Cooper, director of the division of summer and extension study at Hampton institute, said yesterday in announcing Hampton's plans for special primary teachers' courses on the graduate level to be offered in the Hampton institute summer school beginning June 16.

Cooper said that state school officials throughout the South declare that the "bottleneck" in Negro education is to be found in the primary grades where over 50 per cent of all the Negro children are enrolled. Even in Virginia, which is one of the most progressive of the southern states, 72,319 out of 150,993 Negro pupils enrolled in 1938-39, or approximately 48 per cent, were enrolled in the first three grades. The primary classrooms are generally overcrowded, and the primary teachers in many instances are grossly overloaded, Cooper said. In addition, many school systems have placed the teachers with the least preparation in the primary grades on the assumption that primary children do not need as well-prepared teachers as children in the upper grades, he added. The result is that at the end of the third grade, many children become discouraged and drop out of school to become charges upon the community either as delinquents, criminals, or paupers, it was stated. Superintendents, principals and supervisors realize this condition and make unusual efforts to rectify it, but to no avail, since their time is increasingly consumed in administrative matters forced upon them by the rapidly changing school and community conditions, according to the institute.

To open the "bottleneck" and to enable pupils to make normal progress, several of the southern states are planning to employ in each county or city several master primary teachers who will take the lead in the improvement of instruction, sufficient to assure normal progress of the pupils. A letter from one of the state supervisors of Negro education expresses the general feeling of the entire group:

"I quite agree with you that the 'bottleneck' in Negro education—and in white education as well—is in the primary grades. All along, we have been taking 'from the top'—beginning with the university and working down to the elementary school, and I am convinced that it is high time for us to reverse the process and begin by laying the foundation well before undertaking to erect the superstructure.

"It is gratifying to note that Hampton is thinking about such an enterprise and I shall be glad to aid in any way I can to advance the movement in the field of Negro education."

In planning to prepare teachers for this important phase of Negro education, conferences have been held with state and national leaders of primary and Negro education in order that the offerings to these teachers may avoid the idealistic, impractical approach, and be grounded in the actual conditions existing in the Negro schools today. The latest teaching procedures, materials, and plans for organization will be focused on this problam under the expert guidance of Eva C. Mitchell, Mrs. Emma Lewis Bright, Mrs. Helen Wilson, Dr. Viktor Lowenfeld, and others. In addition to lectures and laboratory work, special observation classes will be conducted in which primary teachers will observe daily, and after which they will hold conferences. State supervisors of Negro education from each state are sending in recommendations of teachers, who should attend. The enrollment will be limited the first summer, and although no fellowships are available, the cost for the work has been held low, so that many may attend. From inquiries and responses already received, it appears that the quota for this special course will be filled ahead of time.

Negroes Lose Plea to Alter Zone Ruling

Council Committee Rejects Petition

Following vigorous protest from the Crippled Children's Hospital and other property owners affected, the Council Committee on Ordinances last night declined to approve the rezoning of the east side of Brook Road, between Howard Road and Sherwood Avenue, for residential purposes. This area at present is classified as a business district.

The change to a residential area was sought by Negro property owners. W. A. Jordan, Negro, 2602 Brook Road, declared that several members of his race who had acquired property on the east side of that thoroughfare, were seeking to live in decent homes. Nearly all of the Negro residential areas, he said, had been zoned for business and there are few sections in Richmond legalized exclusively for Negro residences.

Leigh R. Page, president of the Children's Hospital which is situated at the northwest corner of Brook Road and Sherwood Avenue; President W. C. Carpenter of Common Council, and Councilman John Hirschberg urged the committee to let the present law setting apart the eastern side of Brook Road for business remain, and the committee approved unanimously.

Other Changes Approved

Without discussion, the committee approved a petition of the Richmond Housing Authority to rezone property on Chamberlayne Parkway and other streets where a Negro slum-clearance project is to be built for residential purposes.

The committee also approved the following petitions for rezoning:

Changing the classification of the northwest corner of Cary Street, between Mulberry Street and an alley east of the Boulevard from residential to business section; changing the southeast corner of Smith and Leigh from residence to business; changing the north side of Q Street, between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth Street to business district; changing 1429 Parkwood Avenue from residence to business district.

The committee sent to Council for adoption Alderman R. Westwood Winfree's ordinance to make it unlawful for property owners to allow stagnant water to collect on their premises.

Gas Cut Approved

On recommendation of J. R. A. Hobson Jr., it approved an amendment to the City Code to lower the rate charged for gas where two or more appliances are used.

The committee likewise approved an amendment to the building code to permit the use of tents for religious meetings.

Alderman Jack L. Epps' proposed ordinance to tighten up the regulations governing the distribution of handbills was referred to Safety Director Herbert and Public Works Director Bowers for their recommendations.

Alderman Winfree and Councilman James S. Terry Jr. were appointed a subcommittee to study a plan under which scholarships would be provided city employees who complete in-service courses of study relating to municipal government.

SOUTH'S PROBLEM IN EDUCATION

The recent decision handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court requiring equal apportionment of education funds for whites and Negroes, confronts the South with a most difficult problem.

The average intelligent Southerner admits the right of the Negro to equal educational opportunities in our American democracy. Yet although Negro illiteracy has declined from a high of 97 per cent in 1890 to 16.3 per cent in 1930, it is obvious that even with the sharp gains that have been made in the field of Negro education, equal opportunity is lacking.

Most Negro schools have shorter school terms, are overcrowded and understaffed, and lack adequate equipment. The most conspicuous deficiency is in the secondary schools and in institutions of higher learning which provide professional and technical training. The Supreme Court decision calls for the erection of such schools for the Negro where state-endowed and maintained schools bar him.

To comply with the decision immediately would be disastrous to the South's educational system. There are not adequate funds available, and there is little prospect of such funds unless the federal government is willing to assist. Introduction immediately of an equal apportionment system for whites and Negroes can not but lower existing standards.

It is to be hoped that some method can be worked out whereby the educational standard for the Negro can be lifted without endangering the existing structure. There must be sympathy and understanding by white and Negro leaders alike when it comes to fulfilling the law as it has been interpreted by the nation's highest tribunal.—Anniston Times.

In Alabama History

BY W. J. BOLES

Reform, in Pickens County, 30 miles west of Tuscaloosa on the Montgomery-Columbus branch of the Gulf, Mobile & Ohio Railroad, and 220 miles north of Mobile at the northern terminus of the Alabama, Tennessee & Northern Railroad, is a prosperous little town in a fine agricultural section. It was chartered in the Spring of 1898, when it could count about 500 inhabitants. From then on the town has had a slow but steady growth with a farm trade extending several miles in every direction. Population in 1940, when the federal decennial census was taken, was slightly less than 1,000.

Blacksmith shops, cotton gins, small woodworking establishments and general merchandising are the main enterprises of the town.

Good educational facilities for the boys and girls are provided in elementary and high schools for white children and adequate schools for Negro boys and girls.

Reform has a large park, unusually large and well equipped for a town of not more than 1,000 population, and it is well patronized in the season for outdoor sports and exercises.

A modern water system supplies the people with an abundance of pure water for domestic use and an adequate supply for all other needs of the community. Electricity also is available for residential and business purposes at rates that compare favorably with other towns of similar size.

THE NEGRO AND EDUCATION

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The opinions expressed in this article are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the opinion of this newspaper.)

By WARREN MAER, JR.

Today Negroes in the North have the same educational opportunities as any other minority group. In the South this is not wholly the case; for, in some sections, segregation and discrimination do not allow for equal educational opportunities. Even so, it is an established fact that these opportunities are far better today than they were seventy-five or more years ago.

In that period prior to the Civil War there were comparatively few Negroes north of the Mason-Dixon line to take advantage of those limited advantages to be found. The Negroes of the South were, of course, slaves whose only education was that which the masters gave their house-slaves. Those in the fields received nothing in the way of education.

One of the best examples of the educated Negro in the 1865 period was Frederick Douglass, lawyer, who became famous for his debates with Abraham Lincoln.

Born in slavery, George Washington Carver was carried off with his mother by a band of raiders in the last year of the Civil War. His early education was obtained from a spelling book until he became ten years of age. He then attended a rural school. For nine years he was a domestic servant, saving his earnings and educating himself at the same time. Following this period he entered high school and, upon finishing, went to Iowa State College where he received his Bachelor's and his Master's degrees.

Today Carver is one of the world's foremost scientists and he has been honored by every country in the world for his remarkable work. But Carver prefers to spend his time in the laboratory and in the class room rather than in commercializing on his ability.

Then there was the renowned Booker T. Washington who revolutionized education the country over. It was his theory that the hand should be trained as well as the mind. He believed wholeheartedly that formal vocational training should be offered the youth, not only of the colored race but of every race.

With this idea in mind he set about to build a school founded on these principles. In 1881 he started what is now probably the best known of Negro schools—Tuskegee Institute. The school had its beginning in two old delapidated buildings with 31 pupils. Yet by 1928 it had grown to such a point that it was teaching 1700 students; had 120 buildings and occupied 2,500 acres. The school buildings were at that time evaluated at $2,200,000. There was also an endowment fund of $5,000,000.

Today the Negro has some 50 or more recognized universities and colleges scattered from coast to coast and from border to border. Of these Tuskegee Institute, Hampton Institute, Howard, Wilberforce and Fisk universities are about the best known Today a large number of these institutions are recognized as Class "A" schools. On their faculties are numerous men with Bachelor, Master, and even Doctorate degrees.

Many of the schools for Negroes are supported and maintained by the state, many by various denominations, and some by private philanthropists.

It has been an arduous task. But today Negroes have all the advantages before them—either white schools or colored schools. As a result, illiteracy among Negroes has been on a rapid decline.

One of the most famed of contemporary educators is Mary McLeod Bethune. In 1904 she started her little plant in a rented cottage on a cash capital of $1.50. Her first enrollment was of only five pupils. In 1923 her school merged with the Cookman Institute. Now the school has 14 buildings appraised at some $500,000.

Up from the cotton fields Mrs. Bethune has come to formal recognition as one of the 50 most distinguished women in America. In 1935 she received the Spingarn medal.

Again there is Mrs. Maudelle Brown Bousfield. She received her early education in the schools of St. Louis. Her college work was done at the University of Illinois. Following this she taught for 8 years during which time she traveled widely the world over. In March of 1926 she became the first colored dean in the Chicago school system. And in January of 1928 she was appointed principal of one of the Chicago high schools, to be the first Negro to hold such a position in that city.

There are many, many more persons both dead and living who have contributed significantly to the education of the Negro. Time and space, however, do not permit calling them all by name.

But this formal education has not been all that has been necessary. Since emancipation the Negro has had to educate himself in matters pertaining to the relationship of one man to another, of one race to another. This is no doubt the most difficult phase of education he has had to go through. Still, in 1941, the process is not completed.

During slavery the Negro learned wrongly to regard the varied hues of the skin among his people as indicative of their station. The fairer the complexion, the better the person. That was his attitude. Yet some of our finest have been extremely dark. Good examples of these persons are our contemporaries, whom we have mentioned before, George Washington Carver and Mary McLeod Bethune. There still is a tendency among Negroes—and too much of such a tendency—to regard color.

Far worse is the fact that the Negro was taught to respect the white man's superiority. That was mal-instruction. That he has had to unlearn. There is still today a group of people of the white race who feel it their obligation to retain that psuedo-superiority. Recently a governor of one of our states made the statement that "This is a white man's country and the Negro should feel lucky that he is allowed to live here". But, fortunately, as a whole we Negroes have been educated to the point that we know we have far more than earned our citizenship in this nation.

But, as we have aforesaid, the process is still not complete. We must still learn to respect ourselves, our brothers both white and black. We must continue to educate ourselves with the wisdom that has been accumulated through the ages for our benefit. And, having gotten this education, we must add to it and see to it that our children get it.

Seventy-five years ago emancipation found us lacking every thing except a simple, but devout, religion. Today we still retain our love of God, but we have since learned not to prepare to die but to prepare to live.

Surprising

THE DEFINITE SWING toward the Booker Washington idea of training, especially for members of the minority racial group, has been so much in evidence in recent years it is extremely surprising that a prominent educator holding a chair on Howard University's faculty should appear on the rostrum recently to encourage a discarding of the work with hands plan of education.

Even so avowed an opponent to the Booker Washington plan as Dr. W. E. B. DuBois recently visited the noted institution established by the great educator, and his address to the student body there clearly indicated his change of attitude as concerns placing higher education above that of industrial training.

The doctrine dished out by the Howard professor in his address before a California audience is not only designed to greatly impede the Negro racial group's progress in turmoilous times like the world is now experiencing, but his attitude proves extremely surprising when it is generally conceded by leaders throughout the world, that much too long the stress has been put on higher literary training and too little emphasis on training in the industrial arts.

A glance at recent surveys proves convincing that members of the white race by the thousands are establishing their homes in rural communities where food stuffs for the family table may be grown. Education boards are investing large amounts of money in machinery and instruction in trades, that their white youths may have a thorough knowledge of those trades that will enable them to take their places in the world's activities.

On the other hand the Negro's trend is toward the city. Antiquated, large, tax-ladened houses, abandoned by white families for less expensive rural homes, are being taken over by Negro families, whose status is extremely low due to their inability to gain employment, and this failure to secure employment is due on a large measure to their lack of knowledge in trades requiring skill.

For any thoughtful leader to discourage Negro acquisition of a thorough knowledge of each and every kind of trade, when and wherever possible, will heap such irreparable injury on the race as a whole and impede the progress of the group in excess of that which is already providing thoroughly alarming.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Athens College, a white institution at Athens, Ga., has just completed a year's operation of a hosiery mill which afforded jobs to 150 needy students who could not otherwise complete their education.

Under its plan, high school graduates receive work scholarships which net $1,700 each in four years, enough to provide all needs except clothes and books. Students work on four-hour shifts and are paid a minimum of 40 cents an hour, and they average higher grades than non-working students.

At a time when most privately supported Negro colleges are finding increasing difficulty in functioning because of scarcity of donors, and when Negro students are increasingly dropping out of college because of lack of funds, why cannot they adopt the Athens College plan?

Negroes wear hosiery, too, and there might well be a ready sale for stockings, socks and anklets with the trade mark of well-known Negro colleges.

Negroes also wear underwear, shoes, hats, dresses, suits and other articles of clothing which might well be manufactured on some of our campuses, thus netting needed revenue for both schools and scholars.

It is frequently said that Negroes imitate white folks. Here is a chance to prove whether the charge is false or true.

Dorothy Thompson Says:

Rural Schools Make Good Men

APR 10 1941

BARNARD, Vt.—If sugaring off were done by European peasants, Americans would have been trekking across the ocean to participate in a quaint and fascinating custom. But overnight from New York there is a landscape and a climate that, in these early days in April, beats and European winter resort with which I am familiar. And now is maple-sugar time.

Outside my north window in the sitting room, the thermometer records a temperature of 40 degrees. At noon it must have been 50. The sky is brilliantly blue, and little rills of water dance along the sides of the roads; the slopes of the hills are brown, where the snow has melted away, but on the level places it is still two feet deep, and where paths have been cut through it, they lie between snow walls shoulder high.

The shadows of the bare trees are blue and purple and even rose, depending on the light; the spruces on the mountains are black against the azure. There is the indescribable fresh smell of melting winter; and it seeps through briefly opened doors into a house that in its 100 years of life has never been heated by anything but wood, and so inside as well as outside retains the odors of the forest. Contrary to all ideas of human progress, it must be recorded that it is a cosy house, utterly comfortable, though that comfort requires that, morning noon and night, chunks of spruce and maple be hurled into the hot-air furnace and logs of birch and apple on the open fires.

But the spring sun, made more brilliant by the snow, streaming in through the east, south and west windows as it makes its sedate rounds, is a heating plant in itself.

I wanted to take my son, for his spring holidays, to Washington and Williamsburg, but he said No, he wanted to go home. Home for him is the white house in Vermont, and the farm, the dogs, the cows, the chickens, the ridiculous ducks, the cupboards of old toys in the big, rag-carpeted room. Home is no apartment in New York, and no place in any city. His trousers are tucked into mail-order-house boots, his sweater is very spotty, and he is perfectly happy.

The farmer's wife cooks for us—a fricassee of home-grown chicken, some of her own canned green beans, pickled beets and apple pie. There are barrels full of apples in the cellar, still sound and sappy in April—northern spies, that spurt juice.

The sugar house is small and red, with a lean-to in which wood is stored for the brick kiln that runs right through the center of the house. Steam is coming out through the little open cupola in the middle of the roof, so we know the syrup is boiling.

Outside the chestnut horse is stamping in the snow, and steaming from his exertions. The little red sugar house stands in the middle of a grove of trees with trunks like cathedral column—immense maples, many of them 100 years old. Buckets with litle peaked hoods over them are shiny against the gray trunks. My child scoops out a cupful of the flat, sweetish sap. "Not running good today," says the neighboring farmer, who is "helping out." "A good freezing night and a hot day is what makes it run. Too much wind, and the trunks still too deep in snow."

Still, they have collected a tankful. The tank is of zinc and is mounted on a cart on sleigh-runners. It is covered, except for a perforated bucket in the center, into which the sap buckets are poured. Then it is drawn to the house; a runway of boards has been constructed, leading to an aperture in the wall just above the brick kiln, and the sap is siphoned from the tank into a pipe that empties it into the boiler. The boiler is made of zinc and fits the top of the long brick kiln that is fed with logs through an iron door in one end. The boiler is a huge pan of zinc, divided into compartments. The fresh sap boils along a lengthwise channel, siphons at a certain temperature into a cross-wise one, then, at another temperature into still another, then into another. A thermometer in the last one records when it is finished. Then it is siphoned off into a "drum" through a thick strainer. My son draws a cupful of the boiling syrup and stirs it into thickness over the snow outside, lapping it up neat.

It will fetch 10 cents a pound—about $1.10 a gallon from the co-operative. They will sell it to manufacturers, who will mix it with corn syrup—commercial maple syrup is seldom "pure." Nov it is the color of pale tea. Once, boiled down into sugar it was the only sweetening stuff farmers hereabouts ever had, and the sugar roughly ground is still the best thing on cereal and the best thing imaginable to bake apples with.

So we will eat the syrup tonight on waffles for supper, and my son will ask, "Why don't we stay here all year round? I could go to the village school." A slight mist of tears crosses his eyes, thinking of such a beautiful possibility. It's a one-room school, but I'm not sure he isn't right.

Good men have come out of those schools—and are still coming. The farmer who rides us down the hill on the sleigh-cart has a wonderful face. He looks like the pictures of Dante.

"Going to melt tomorrow," he says, blinking toward Mount Ascutney through the afternoon sun. "Sap will begin to run better. Going to be a good sugar year."

ATLANTA, Ga.—(ANP). — The white people of the South apparently are divided half and half on the question of providing equal public school advantages for Negro children, according to a statement by R. B. Eleazer, educational director of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. The statement is based on a poll recently taken by the Institute of Public Opinion for the National Education Association.

In this poll 45 per cent of adult Southern whites interviewed on the subject favored equal advantages for Negro children, 46 per cent were opposed, and nine percent expressed no opinion. 78 per cent of Southern Negroes interviewed expressed themselves as favorable, 11 per cent were opposed, and 11 per cent declined to express an opinion.

In the North the favorable vote was much higher, running to 86 per cent of the whites interviewed and 96 per cent of the Negroes. The average for the country as a whole was 78 per cent in favor of equal advantages, 16 per cent opposed, and six per cent undecided.

These results, the statement says, "are believed to be much more favorable to the Negro child than would have been the case of 10 years ago and may be taken as an indication of a favorable trend of opinion on this subject. Meantime in most of the Southern states Negro school facilities have been steadily improving though it general the scales are still weighed heavily against the Negro child."

DUBOIS SPEAKS IN FORUM MEET SUNDAY NIGHT

Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, foremost Negro educator and author, will make two public appearances in Chicago and vicinity under the auspices of the Chicago City-Wide Forum on Sunday and Monday evenings.

The Atlanta university professor will discuss "The present war and the darker races" at Lincoln Centre, 700 Oakwood boulevard Sunday at 7:30 p. m.

In this address Dr. DuBois is expected to predict the important role to be played by the Negro race and other darker races in the present international conflict. He will no doubt concern himself with the developments in Ethiopia and predict how the theatre of war will be influenced by the turn of events in that country.

Dr. DuBois' lecture will be the first time that he has spoken to a Chicago audience on the international conflict since the fall of France.

On Monday evening Evanston's distinguished citizens, the members of the faculty and students of Northwestern university will hear the scholarly lecturer and editor of "Phylon" discusss "The economic plight of the American Negro." This lecture is sponsored in connection with the Department of Sociology. William C. Pyant of Evanston, who is vice president of the City-Wide forum, is in charge of the arrangements at the school.

In the meeting of the governing committee of the Forum on Tuesday the group plans to sponsor a luncheon for Dr. DuBois during his two-day stay in the city. Miss Besshunter Robinson, chairman of the entertainment committee, is in charge of the luncheon.

Dr. DuBois was born in Great Barrington, Mass., 73 years ago. He received his B. A. degree at Fisk university in 1888, and the same degree at Harvard university two years later and a year later he received his Master's from Harvard. He also received his Doctor of Philosophy degrees from the same institution in 1895 after which he studied at the university of Berlin.

He is the founder of the Pan-African congress and for more than a decade the editor of the Crisis.

Educators Study Virginia Program Of Instruction

Colleg and Organization Heads Presen ; Regional Conference Set

RICHMOND Va. — Statewide leaders in the field of educatio gathered in Richmond Wednesday for a discussion of the proposed Virginia Program for Improving Instruction. The meeting was called by the State Board of Education to present the program and to outline details for carrying it out. The educators met in the auditorium of the Southern Aid Building at the request of A. G. Richardson, assistant supervisor of Negro Education in the State of Virginia.

Also present at the meeting were leaders of statewide organizations of laymen. Schools and organizations represented included Virginia Union University, Virginia State College, Hampton Institute, St. Paul Normal and Industrial Institute, the Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, the Baptist General Association of Virginia, the Virginia Trade Association, the Women's Missionary and Educational Association of Virginia, the Virginia Trade Association, the Women's Missionary and Educational Association of Virginia, the Negro Organization Society and the Interracial Commission.

The proposed plan of study was presented by George J. Oliver, director of instruction for the State, and Dr. Fred T. Alexander, supervisor of Negro education.

The fundamental idea, it was pointed out, is to organize in local communities all groups of laymen parents, teachers, or combinations of both, to study the education program in the state.

CONFERENCE SET

The dates for two regional conferences for Negro study groups, both lay and professional, were set. The first regional meeting will be held Saturday, January 18, at the Carver High School at Salem; and the second on Tuesday, January 28, at Virginia State College.

The desired outcome of the study program, Mr. Alexander pointed out, is to get all agencies and all educational resources in a cooperative relationship to study this problem.

Colleges in the state were especially urged to participate in the program to share in the common problem of facing educational needs in Virginia.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Emphasis during the meeting was placed on vocational training. One of the hoped-for results of the Virginia Program of Study is the building up of a recognition of the need for and getting public support and financial support for adequate vocational training.

Among those attending the meeting last week were, Dr. John Gandy, president of Virginia State College; Dr. William John Clark, president, and Dr. W. J. Barco, vice president of Virginia Union University; Dr. Alvin Russell, president of St. Paul N. and I. School Dr. William Cooper and Dean R O'Hara Lanier of Hampton Institute; Curtis A. Crocker, field worker, Negro Organization Society; Dr. W. L. Ransome, General Baptist Association of Virginia; Mrs. W. T. Johnson, Women's Missionary and Educational Association of Virginia; the Rev. C. E. Queen, Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance; W. R. Reynolds, Interracial Commission; Welton H. Henderson, administrative assistant NYA, State of Virginia; Mrs. Mary Binga, Federation of Colored Women's Clubs; B. T. Bradshaw, Virginia Trade Association; Dr. J. M. Ellison and Dean Florence, Virginia Union University, and others.

ATLANTA TEACHERS HEAR MISS LANE

By S. GRACE BRADLEY

Nearly 400 teachers heard an unusually interesting address concerning the American Federation of Teachers by Miss Layle Lane, one of its vice presidents of New York City Saturday afternoon at the Butler St. Y. M. C. A.

The meeting, presided over by Principal C. L. Harper, president of the Gate City Teachers association, was full of vital information concerning organization, equalization of teachers salaries and the marriage problem.

Introduced by Dr. Ira De Reid, Miss Lane was referred to as one of the most outstanding women of the race, who had worked assiduously for several years in various unions for the betterment of conditions thoughout the United States.

In her address concerning organization, Miss Lane pointed out many advantages of becoming affiliated with the Federation. Among those Miss Lane spoke of were: (1) additional strength along the lines of equalization of educational opportunities for teachers and student; (2) Affiliation with the central trades union, so as to accomplish what is desired for the labor group; (2) Possibility of changing the concept of vocational education, especially as it concerns the economic angle, and (4) The matter of developing the vocational status of the schools all over the country, studying the equipment or the needs in order to adequately meet the needs of various groups.

"Labor", stated Miss Lane "must be given recognition." In reviewing conditions throughout the country, Miss Lane pointed out instances where the unemployed had been returned to jobs as a result of the educational standards, which have been set by the organization.

Closing her address with a quotation of Booker T. Washington, Miss Lane urged the large and appreciative audience to likewise learn to glorify and dignify labor.

The main business consisted of two reports, which were made by Miss Cora Finley, principal of Yonge Street school, who with Professor Harper and J. W. Smith, have worked for many months obtaining information concerning the equalization of salaries of Negro teachers. From reports, which were made, it was revealed that because of the action which was taken by the Supreme Court, the matter would receive attention.

Officials of the Board of Education expressed keenest interest in the matter and upon the action taken by the teachers much good will ensue, thereby reducing the many deplorable conditions in both the city and county.

Concerning marriage, it was definitely pointed out that there is no law prohibiting teachers from getting married. It noted, however, that teachers desiring to get married, will officially get permission to retain their positions and should a teacher be recommended to continue her service, the marriage will not automatically dismiss her as heretofore.

AMERICANS POLLED ON EDUCATION

Frank L. Grove, secretary of the Alabama Education Association, says the American public approves equal per pupil expenditures for the education of negro and white school children. Grove was discussing the December issue of the Education Bulletin, published by the association, which summarizes results of a recent Gallup poll on public education.

"The Bulletin shows," said Grove, "that 78 out of 100 Americans favor equal expenditures and only 16 per cent are opposed to such equality."

Strange as it seems, according to the Bulletin, only 46 per cent of adult Southern whites are opposed to equality of per pupil educational expenditures for white and colored children, while 45 per cent of Southern whites favor such equality. A majority of 56 per cent of all Southern people approves quality of educational expenditures for the races.

The Bulletin shows that 73 per cent of the public approve the modern emphasis on education while only 23 per cent feel that education today is being given too much importance. In addition to approving the modern stress on education, 83 per cent of the people think that schools have improved and that children are today getting a better school training than their parents received before them.

"It is significant," Grove said, "in view of the domestic and world situation that a majority of 73 per cent of all Americans approves freedom in discussion of controversial issues by young people, and 68 per cent approve freedom of discussion for teachers." However, 26 per cent of the people feel that teachers are unfair in their discussion of disputed questions and present only one side of the case.

According to the Gallup survey, almost one person in five feels that too little is being spent on education while 47 per cent feel that the amount spent is about right.

Moreover, 50 per cent of the public feel that certain states are unable to finance adequate schools and more than one person in four would pay higher Federal taxes to aid such states. A majority of 72 per cent of the public approves government aid to help educate the children of poor parents and 58 per cent would be willing to pay higher taxes to give this aid.

As to the worth of high school training ,the Gallup findings show that a majority of 54 per cent of the public feels that many of the pupils now in high schools should quit and go to work; that they would be better off at work than in school. Eighty-two per cent of the people feel that the government ought to provide a part-time work and training program for youth.

Hampton Biologist Tells About Mosquito Customs

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. —Fellow scientists to whom the children of mother Nature such as flies, bugs and mosquitoes are profound subjects and adventure, pricked up their ears and gave unstinted applause last Saturday to an illustrated discourse on customs of mosquitoes by Dr. Kenneth B Crooks, professor of biology at Hampton Institute, Va.

Appearing before the Entomological Society of America with other scientists who told of new discoveries in their respective fields, Dr. Crooks made pertinent observations gleaned from a series of experiments on chemical forces and factors that serve to attract mosquitoes whether they like it or not.

He pointed out that though many other dangerous insects such as peach moth, Japanese beetle, and many kinds of locusts can be controlled by traps using chemical baits or lights of special colors, mosquitoes refuse to be attracted to light or bait in sufficient number for traps to be used successfully as controls.

MAR 2 - 1941

Influx Of Population With Defense Program Creates New Demand

BY BEN GRANT

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An office of education study has produced findings that $39,816,241 was needed in 11 Southern states to bring the school systems into line with the population influx caused by the defense program.

The agency was said to be ready to recommend to Congress that part of this amount be borne by the federal government and the rest made available to the states and municipalities in the form of loans.

The burden of school systems has been one of the most frequent complaints against the defense program. Army training, one of the principal causes of the school difficulties, is centered in the South.

These amounts were included in the education office's estimates on the school needs:

Alabama, $1,044,760; Arkansas, $151,754; Georgia, $2,590,380; Louisiana, $51,260; Mississippi, $1,131,510; North Carolina, $295,000; Texas, $8,188,128; Virgiania, $4,705,316; South Carolina, $5,873,950; Tennessee, $4,205,687; Florida, $11,578,496.

Legislation is pending to authorize an appropriation of $150,000,000 for school aid to the states.

Under the program prepared by the office of education, which presumably will be submitted to Congress soon, estimates were based on school sites, new buildings, additions to existing buildings, equipment, alterations, operation and maintenance, transportation, and salaries of teachers.

The office of education reported an imperative need in many localities to accommodate the children of defense personnel, both military and industrial.

It was reported prepared to recommend that school work proceed along with housing developments.

It was pointed out by officials that the defense program came about so swiftly that municipalities were unprepared to cope with the school problems. It was said that many of the affected communities could not this year or next meet the increased demand without federal help.

The office of education was reported ready to tell Congress that the federal government, as the responsible authority for the sudden transfer of children into defense areas, should bear at least a part of the cost.

The study began last October when the Senate called upon the secretaries of war and navy to report on the adequacy of school facilities at or near the defense housing developments being undertaken by the government.

MAR 2 - 1941

In recent weeks, dozens of delegations have been in the capital appealing for federal help in the school program. Some have contended the problem was most acute in the Southern states.

Nine Point Prospectus Drawn Up

Submitted For Consideration By Governor Neely

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—A nine point program for the improvement of educational facilities for Negroes in West Virginia has been mapped out and is being promoted by the eight members of the West Virginia National Democratic Committee.

The nine points, outlined by a delegation from the committee to Governor Neely in a recent conference, are as follows:

High school training for Negro students in counties without high schools, which, according to the committee, number twenty.

Vocational high schools at West Virginia State College and Bluefield State Teachers College, with a $150,000 expansion program for each.

Reclaiming and training Negro youth with a vocational school at Lakin for boys and in Huntington for girls.

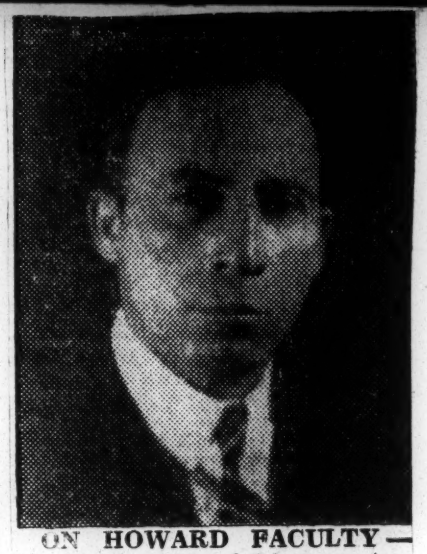
MAR 1 1941

Protection of minority group rights by legislation, including Negro membership on labor relations board, civil service commission, miners certification board, and board of parole and probation.

Removal of beer parlors and other nuisances in the immediate vicinity of schools and churches

Governor Neely promised immediate consideration of the proposals offered by this first Negro delegation to call since his inauguration last month.

The commitee included the following: D. W. Ambrose, Huntington; C. W. Dickerson and I. M Carper, both of Charleston; the Rev. L. T. Thornhill, Beckley E. L. James, and Theester Coleman, both of Institute; I. J. K Wells, Beckley; and Harold Lewis, of Buckhannon.



ON HOWARD FACULTY—Dr. William Lloyd Imes, pastor, of the St. James Presbyterian Church, New York City, has joined the faculty of the school of religion of Howard University for the second semester of the present school year as a special lecturer in practical theology.

Dr. Imes will continue his regular duties at St. James Church in New York City, traveling weekly from New York to Washington to meet his classes.

He is a graduate of Fisk University, Union Theological Seminary of New York City, and Columbia University. Lincoln University has conferred upon him the degree of doctor of divinity.

WELL-KNOWN EDUCATORS DISCUSS PHASES OF VITAL PART OF SCHOOL PROGRAM

FEB 21 1941

COLUMBIA, Mo.—The vocational guidance conference held at Douglass high school on Saturday, February 15, featured speakers on that subject from all over the state. Laurence P. Wilson, principal of Douglass high school, presided.

The program included: welcome by Dr. W. E. Rosenstangel, superintendent of Columbia schools; greetings from the Missouri State Association of Negro Teachers, by Miss Emily J. Russell, president of the association.

Mrs. Mildred W. Boone of the Douglass high school faculty discussed "Personal Inventory and Individual Records."

"Enumeration and Explanation of the Guidance Services of the State Department and Future Trends of This Area," was the subject of the talk by Dr. Frederick K. Seamster, director of vocational guidance of the state department of educaion.

Miss Carolyn E. Brydie, counsellor at Lincoln high school in Kansas City ,spoke on "The Counselling Phase of Vocational Guidance." Questions and discussion followed.

"The Placement Phase of Guidance," was the topic of Earl D. Thomas, principal of R. T. Coles Vocational school in Kansas City. Dr. Fred B. Dixon, principal of Hickman high school, Columbia, discussed "Occupational Information." Alvin C. Boyd of the Douglass faculty talked on "How Douglass High School Is Carrying Out Its Guidance Program."

Speaking at the luncheon in the school cafeteria, Dr. Sherman D. Scruggs, president of Lincoln university, had as his topic, "The Follow-up Phase of Guidance."

Miss Emily J. Russell emphasized her and the association's approval of such conferences. She spoke extensively upon the importance of a vocational guidance and training program in the development of individuals to their greatest capacities.

Mrs. Boone of Douglass high school, stated that vocational guidance has been carried on for a number of years in Douglass school through the home rooms. She began by outlining briefly the initial step in the setting up of the present vocational guidance program of the school. She then stated that the program used was one that would assist the school in helping the students discover and capitalize his individual differences. In speaking of the records of the students she stated, "It is best that records be kept in th eschol so that they may be accessible to teachers, counselors and principals when necessary."

In these personal records are included the following:

Pupils Must Study

Family and cultural background, physical and medical history, marks in school subjects, mental test scores, interests, special talents, etc.

Dr. Seamster stated that we must learn the individuality of each person. We must study the pupils we teach. If there were no guidance program we would need the information to help in the development of individual personality and ability.

In the relatively short time the Negro has been free he has made tremendous progress, but in accord with the philosophy advanced by Booker T. Washington, "If we are to succeed, we must begin where we are and take advantage of the position in which we find ourselves."

Miss Brydie said that the failing child challenges every counselor because it is thils type of child who is often sinned against by being branded as no good and who envolves the school's mortality roll by dropping out because of discouragement.

"The youth of our group face such serious financial handicaps that many of them fear to set definite goals that must be reached through further education. Encouragement must be given for a more hopeful view of the future."

Mr. Thomas of R. T. Coles defined placement as meaning the finding of employment for the worker. The limitations of the discussion were (a) Pupils or students in the public school, (b) Not necessarily limited to the placement of Negroes. He talked briefly of employment as reported in a "Digest from the American Youth Commission Report." He grouped the issues of Placement into three divisions: (1) Training of the individual to be placed; (2) A knowledge of the historical ,economic, and social factors involved in the situation; (3) Knowledge of the personal factors involved.

In his discussion of the Negro he presented four problems:

(1) Training;
(2) Inclusion of all labor movements;
(3) Study the variables in the opportunity for placement due to the customs of the "locale";
(4) Build up morale.

(1) Study the individual on the job.
(2) Give advice and recommendation to employe and employer.
(3) Inform the trained center of: a.—The needed revisions of procedure and b. The success of employes.

Dr. Dixon suggested the following to see that students get vocational information: Lock courses, library earmarked and vocational information, occupational file, individual counseling, (Also to men in the community) Occupational conference.

The Guidance program at Douglass high school is organized in the following manner: The Principal, Mr. Wilson, has the responsibility and supervision of all guidance activities. He is the chairman of the guidance advisory committee. The advisory committee members may be ex-officio members of all committees. The purpose of the guidance advisory committee is to plan guidance activities and cooperate with subject teachers and home room sponsors in carrying out the guidance program.

There are five faculty committees: Individual inventory, counseling, occupational informtion, placement and follow-up.

Dr. Scruggs, in discussing the Follow-Up Phase of Guidance, stated that we must give stimulation and direction to the young worker on the job and help him to avoid unfortunate failure in his work.

"Men do not usually fail because they do not know—but most often it is because they do not what they know at the right time in the right place in the right way. It is true that the placement of a young worker is an important part of the effective guidance program, out this does not give every assurance that the school has done all to aid the student to avoid failure in his work or maladjustment in his employment situations after he is out of school.

Dr. Scruggs said that there are many, many factors in employment which keep the worker from succeeding after he is sucecssfully placed on a job:

1. Lack of knowledge or the possession of sufficient skill for the job. The school cannot always simulate the employment situation in ...s courses.
2. Not on the job he was trained for. Less than 50% are.
3. Personality of the employers. Harshness, brusqueness, attention seeking, requirements not easy to meet eaction of other employes.
5. Individuality of uniqueness of the employment service.
6. Staet of mind of the worker after he gets on the job.
   a. Self-satisfaction.
   b. Discouragement — insecurity — feelings that he canont please his employer.
   c. Wanting to advance too rapidly.
   d. Consciousness of racial inequality.

Herman C. Avery, student, Clinton; Joseph A. Bailey, teacher, St. Joseph; Florence A. Baker, teacher. Kansas City; Wilbert Berry, teacher, Columbia; Mildred W. Boone, librarian, Columbia; Alvin C. RADIO SERIES TO DEPICT NEGRO CONTRIBUTIONS TO AMERICAN LIFE

MAR 1 4 1941

Federal Security Agency, U. S. Office of Education, Makes Announcement

Washington, D. C.—(Special)—A series of educational radio program planned by the U S. Office of Education and financed by a Rosenwald Foundation will dramatize Negro contributions to American life. MAR 1 4 1941

The programs, to be broadcast nationally, will portray the role Negroes have played in American education, art, science, industry, and other fields of endeavor, U S. Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker reported today.

The radio series is being prepared under the general direction of Ambrose Caliver, U. S. Office of Educational Specialist in the Education of Negroes and William D. Boutwell, Chief, Division of Radio Publications, and Exhibits.

Plans for the project call for transcriptions of the programs, for use in schools, colleges and by local radio stations. The transcriptions, and radio scripts revised as lesson units and study guides, are expected to be used by both white and Negro schools in courses or units of instruction about Negroes in the United S... MAR 1 4 1941

Commissioner Studebaker said today that this is a most important undertaking of the U. S. Office of Education in behalf of all Negroes who have had a part in the development of our national culture. "We shall do our utmost to report accurate and full information about the constructive activities and accomplishments of Negroes in this radio series," said the Commissioner. "Much of this information is not available in textbooks and in general reading matter, yet it is the type of information that could help to improve race relations and aid in solving many problems of majority and minority groups."

The U. S. Office of Education will have the assistance of a technical advisory committee in developing the series of radio programs, and is seeking advice and suggestions from Negroes throughout the United States to be considered in making further plans.

To be included in the series will be the Negro's participation in: Music, literature, art, religion, exploration, invention, scientific research, agriculture, industry, labor, education, civil and military service, theatrical and sports activities.

Change of Teachers

One of the great problems with which industry must constantly contend is the labor turnover. Good business men seek to avoid heavy turnover among their employes because efficiency is naturally reduced when new men must constantly be trained for their duties. Alabama's unemployment laws are specially designed to discourage labor turnover by reducing the social securities assessments upon industries in proportion to labor changes.

It seems that even such institutions as the public schools likewise have a turnover problem of considerable proportions. A bulletin just issued by the Alabama education association gives the results of a special study made of the subject, the figures being for the school year of 1937-1938. Out of 12,835 white teachers whose cases were studied, 12.9 per cent changed positions during the year. Explaining what this means the bulletin says:

"Change in position in this bulletin means the loss from any cause whatsoever of a teacher from a county or city school system and the replacement of that teacher with another teacher who was not regularly employed in that school system during the previous year. Turnover may be used interchangeably with change in position.

"It should be kept in mind that changes within the city or county school system do not constitute change of position. A teacher who was brought into the system to fill a newly created position would not be included in change of position. A teacher who left the school system and whose position was not filled would not be included. Change in position relates only to those teachers who were replaced with other teachers."

"The county school systems have a significantly higher rate of turnover than do the city school systems. That is true for both white and negro systems.

"The highest rate of turnover is to be found among the county white high-school teachers, while the lowest rate of turnover is among the city white principals. High-school teachers in general, both white and negro, have a higher rate of turnover than that of elementary teachers or of principals.

"No significant difference in turnover exists between the counties selecting the superintendents by popular election and those selecting this official by appointment by the Board of Education. Counties which have switched from one method of selecting the superintendent to another have a considerably higher rate of turnover than do the counties which have held consistently to either the elective or the appointive method.

"Counties choosing the superintendent by the appointive method had a lower rate of turnover than did those counties which choose the superintendent by popular vote.

"The larger school systems, both county and city, have a lower rate of turnover than the smaller."

A later bulletin is to attempt an explanation of the heavy turnover which ranges all the way up to 57.1 per cent for county elementary teachers, and it will be interesting and informative to learn the causes given for the ousting of so many older teachers and employment of so many new ones. Alabama teachers ought not to have to emulate that famous Irish railroad engineer named Finnigan, who wired his boss when he had a derailment: "Off again; on again; gone again; Finnegan."

Institute Of Drama For Negro Group Planned

A four weeks drama institute for negroes will be conducted at the Phyllis Wheatley branch of the Y. W. C. A. on Tuesday and Thursday nights at 7:30 o'clock by Jack Stuart Knapp, of New York city, community drama worker for the National Recreation association.

The course is open to all interested negro adults. Instruction in all phases of play production will be given. The classes are designed primarily for teachers and club leaders.

A similar course for white persons is being given at 7:30 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights at the recreational drama center in the Langren hotel roof garden.

MAR 1 1941

CHICAGO — (ANP) — Dr. Horace Mann Bond, prominent young educator, president of Fort Valley State college of Fort Valley, Ga., and alumnus of the University of Chicago where he also won his doctorate in the field of education, was the speaker in Rockefeller chapel last Sunday. Addressing the regular Sunday morning congregation on what has become known as Race Relations Sunday, Dr. Bond followed such notables as Dr. R. R. Moton and Dr. W. E. Du Bois, each of whom had occupied the pulpit on a similar occasion.

Tracing the meaning of race relations to those who comprised his audience and whom he said might wonder what race relations had to do with the problems which faced them; problems of food, clothing and comfort; national and international complications, economic, social and spiritual, Dr. Bond gave a picture of what race relations meant to the Negro. MAR 1 1941

"We see ourselves as we are mirrored in the minds of those about us," he said, "the majority portrait of us becomes, insensibly, yet overwhelmingly, a portrait to be accepted, either in the margin or the full focus of consciousness. If we are universally esteemed lazy, contemptible, trifling, we will laugh shamefacedly, perhaps at our valuation; but the valuation sticks. If we be denominated, treacherous, lascivious, thievish, lying, comical, the immense pressure of the majority will inbed these concepts of our personality ineradicably into our inner self. The majority has powerful weapons for enforcing public attention to, and compliance with, stereotypes; it has a public press; it has editorials, news photographs, comic cartoons; it has a radio, highly commercialized where sterotypes racial and otherwise, have market value.

"We see ourselves diseased, yet lacking hospitalization; poor but barred from employment; illy housed, yet banned from residential districts; ignorant, yet deprived of education. We see vice rampant in our communities, tolerated, and frequently encouraged, by the majority. We rub shoulders daily with human disorganization in all its most terrifying forms; homicide, illegitimacy, desertion, casual family relations, abyssmal poverty that paralyzes and destroys.

"We see our children corrupted, with bad manners, bad morals, and a stultifying environment filled in with urban or rural slums, grossly inadequate schools, and the most vulgar and debasing commercializations of a disorganized body politic life that makes adolescents of infants and adults of adolescents."

But, said Dr. Bond, despite that portrait of reality, despite the mockery and hollowness with which the majority surrounds us, "In those same human beings there is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. MAR 1 1941

"We of the Negro minority see high human virtue in ourselves. We see among us those who live as Micah said God required men to live; we see those who do justly, those who love mercy, those who walk humbly with God. Not in high places, not in historical figuers, not in a selected few; but in these same swarming masses from which arises both great evil and great good, we find the source of a lasting assurance. In a community where our ordinary human personality might seem to be totally denied, we see a man or a woman who for 50, for 60, for 70 years has walked justly in the sight of God; and whose daily walk commands respect for the most calloused violators of human dignity. We see among our poor and who of us is not poor? - a love of mercy that shares the last crumb, the last ragged garment, the last poor and crowded shelter, with a fellow unfortunate and with a grace and humility unknown to a more polished charity. "Yes; we of the minority can find and have found, a secure anchor for our faith. We know that such men (noble whites whose lives he praised) have lived in the world and in this hemisphere, this United States of America. Our faith may be in God, but it is also in man; man, the proud of heart; man the liar, man the murderer, man the wicked schemer, man the mischievous ill-door, man the trouble maker.

St. Louis, Mo.
Workers Correspondence Dept.:

Rural teachers of the Middle West have a great opportunity for teaching real democracy. Our state courses of study make very excellent suggestions in helping us teach dignity of labor and toleration for foreign and Negro peoples. Units with such suggstive titles as America in Shirt Sleeves, America's Adopted Citizen, and America of Plantation Days are to be worked out. Last spring we chose the last named and decided to enter it as our exhibit at the county seat on Rural School Day.

My chief aim was to break down any prejudice that may exist against the Negro. Lesser aims were to show the real contributions of the Negro race and to show that it is not "an inferior race" but, like any other, has its inferior and superior individuals. We wrote various institutions including Tuskegee, Howard, Lincoln and Fisk Universities, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Commission on Interracial Cooperation, organ of Missouri State Teachers Association, and received much valuable free material. Before we were half through collecting our information, we saw that the title was inadequate.

IN APPRECIATION

"Through a study of literature, art, and music featuring the Negro and a study of his own creative output, we shall have an appreciative understanding of his race," read the course of study. According to our information the Negro has a "creative output" in many things, so we decided to rename our unit, "The Negro," then we could make it much broader. Our study quickly leads into the fields of science, history, medicine, agriculture, invention and education.

Following a general survey of the collected material each grade decided what particular phases of the work they should do. Older pupils chose one or more topics such as "The Negro in Science and Agriculture," "The Negro in History," "The Negro in Missouri," and one group made a collection of poetry by Negro authors.

Booklets on more than a dozen subjects were made including pictures and write-ups of all the distinguished Negro people we could find out about. Part of our enthusiasm was due to the new material we had and the difference in this and other units. Much of the printed material was read at home.

SOME HIDDEN HISTORY

The booklets made brought out much that was new to the teacher as well as to the pupils. For instance, I learned that the pilot of Columbus' successful ship, the Nina, was Alonzo Pietro, a Negro; the doctor first to perform a successful operation on the human heart was Daniel H. Williams, a Negro; J. E. Matzeliger, a Negro, was the inventor of the device for sewing soles on shoes; Alexander Dumas and Alexander Pushkin, world famous writers were Negroes; and standing among the world's greatest today are: Geo. W. Carver, Marian Anderson, Paul Robeson, Roland Hayes, Elijah McCoy, Jesse Owens, Joe Louis and many others. A long list of historical heroes was made, all Negroes. We learned that Paul Lawrence Dunbar was not only the great poet and that Booker T. Washington was not the only great educator among the Negro people.

We also learned that the average Negro child in the South today must do with only one fifteenth of the education the average white child gets. This led to a rather one-sided discussion in the Eighth grade English class on the question: "Should Negro children have as good a chance for education and jobs as white children?"

It is needless to go further into detail for anyone can see the tremendous possibilities, all of which could not be developed in the time we had.

One child remarked that it is just as big a job to review the contributions of the Negro race as any other for there are so many: The best of our work was exhibited and other teachers asked for sources of material, addresses, etc., because this unit was away from the ordinary. The parents also liked it. The favorite poem of the upper grade children was "The Negro Soldier," written by Langston Hughes, famous contemporary Negro poet born at Joplin, Missouri.

This poem was displayed just beside Lincoln's picture. We were pleased with our work in that we had accomplished the desired ends and had interested others.

Negro Education

To the Editor of THE BANNER:

I understand that the State Legislature is considering a movement to give colored people the benefit of the same class of higher education that is given to white people. I think it is a very commendable idea.

Some of the agitators not in the Legislature wish to see a suit brought to compel the University of Tennessee to accept Negro students, and the suggestion has been made, in lieu of this, that $500,000 be appropriated to establish a university for colored people which, of course, would bring on further appropriations.

There are not a great number of colored young people who would be eligible to such training in the State of Tennessee and I doubt whether the number would justify the investment that would be required to establish such an institution, but I am sure that those who are eligible should be given an opportunity for such state education.

It seems to me that they would be better educated at less expense to the State, if an arrangement could be made to pay the tuition of those who cannot pay their own, at Fisk University. It is already established, has a wonderful staff and is known all over the world. Increasing its use by the State's cooperation looks to me like it would be a good idea.

Landscape Architecture Offers Opportunity For Negro Youths; Shortage Of Trained Men His Services In Demand

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — The diminishing tendency of Negro youth who want "white collar" jobs to study medicine, law or theology has been given another jolt by the successful career of Charles Edgar Dickinson, landscape architect, who was recently added to the faculty of Lincoln University.

Mr. Dickinson is one of the three or four college-trained Negro landscape architects in the country, and because of the rarity of qualified men in his field, his services are much in demand. Not long ago he refused an offer to work for the federal government. For a while the job remained unfilled because of the lack of qualified applicants.

When the landscape architect decided to enter his field, he was discouraged by friends and by his teachers at Ohio State University, who did not see how a Negro landscape architect could be successful. Despite this discouragement he graduated, and was the only member of his class who had a job waiting for him when he received his diploma in 1930. He went to work at Tuskegee.

Mr. Dickinson later taught at Palmer Memorial Institute and South Carolina State College. He has also engaged in private practice with his father who owns and operates Dickinson Brothers' Landscape Service. The father is now Ohio State Labor Relations Supervisor affiliated with the Works Progress Administration.

There are opportunities for Negro youth in the field of landscape architecture, according to Mr. Dickinson, because there is a shortage of business places which do landscape architectural service. Too, high schools and colleges are becoming more aware of the value of teaching Landscape Architecture, and jobs for teachers of this subject are opening.

Mr. Dickinson says that Landscape Architecture is a very interesting field because it presupposes the knowledge of a variety of subjects. A successful landscape architect must know much about art, engineering, architecture, horticulture, and botany. The field is "both an art and a science," he said, because "each landscape project brings something new—a problem which must be solved scientifically and made artistic."

An amateur artist, Mr. Dickinson has had several water color drawings on exhibit at Columbus, Ohio, where he was born and reared.

Industrial Trends Of Education

FEB 7 1941

EDUCATION CAN BE defined as the imparting of knowledge to the extent of perfecting the vital human forces of intelligence, culture, and directing these forces into their proper channels, wherein the most good will be utilized. Education can be placed under two distinct heads—the vital and moral aspects. However, since the two forces are so closely connected, and yet one cannot entirely assume the other's classification, there is a growing and increasing conflict between them; nevertheless each has its specific application, and connot be overlooked.

The last few years have seen a growing tendency on the field of education, which led to the industrial side. This has become predominantly prominent, because of a national, and international depression. This great catastrophe left graye imprints upon our nation's economic life. It has been a great aid to many persons in more than one way. This is especially so, in regard to our people—the Negro race.

For a long time it was the intention of our higher educational institutions to remove the industrial side of learning from their curriculums. Their aims were to instill within their students a yearning for the classic art of knowledge. This prepared those men and women who left their institutions for a world which did not exist for Negroes. A world which called not for WHITE COLLAR instructors in the classics, but for men and women who could illustrate with words, and produce with their hands . . . Thus the Negro was weakened from an applicable standpoint to meet the needs of his surroundings; and rather than submit to a position degrading to his educational standard, he was forced to migrate to regions where he might hope to find a place to use his acquired knowledge. This has caused many bad and unfounded ill impressions of our Southland. Those persons who had not prepared to meet the needs of the day, had a grudge against the South, and those persons who knew nothing of the South, would lend ear to their tale of Southern terror and this kind of propaganda traveled far and wide over sections above the MASON and DIXON LINE.

There has been since the depression a decided change . . . In our institutions of learning, the industrial element has come to the front; every phase of "working with the hands" is being adhered to from the beginning up through college. This is one of the greatest "boons" ever to come to the Negro race. This training is preparing him to meet the challenge of this ever changing world.

Instead of trying to increase the number of persons on the "classic art" rolls, the force of learning is lightning, and dignifying the art of "doing" by DOING. President Patterson of Tuskegee said recently in a major address that "Our masses must be re-educated along the industrial lines" and by this statement, he proves that he is a worthy person to carry on the work of his illustrious predecessor, and Father of Industrial Learning—Booker T. Washington. This industrial trend is greatly helping our race, and as years come and go, will find our people constantly improving thei bodies, and minds by doing, instead of dreaming.

Panel Discussions At Negro Center

The first in a series of panel discussions in connection with the current session of the adult education center for negroes was held last night at Sterling high school.

Approximately 40 negroes of Greenville participated in the discussion, the subject of which was "The Place of the Negro in National Defense."

The subject of the discussion next Wednesday night will be "Occupational Stability and Social Legislation." The leader will be Preston E. Stewart, vocational supervisor of Sterling high school.

GRADUATES TO SALES SCHOOL GET DIPLOMAS

Certificates will be awarded the latter part of this week to about 75 persons who satisfactorily passed the two weeks' course of the school of retailing sponsored here by the Chamber of Commerce.

The school is conducted by the state department of education. M. C. Smith, one of the state's foremost salesmen, was instructor.

Three classes were held daily. In the morning, classes were held in several of the local stores. In the early afternoon a class was held at the high school, and at 5:40 p. m., a third class was held at the Home Furniture Co. Mr. Smith illustrated his lectures and lessons with talking motion pictures.

Thursday afternoon a party commemorating the second anniversary of the sales school was held in the Home Furniture company building. Refreshments were served to the large crowd present. Speakers included Dr. W. C. Whitesides and V. Q. Hambright, president of the Chamber of Commerce, William S. Moore, chairman of the merchants committee of the Two C's and Mrs. Clara E. Bookout, secretary.

About 25 persons attended a sales session for colored persons at the city hall Friday afternoon. Mr. Smith's subject was "Personality Development." He advised the colored persons that Yorkville was the first town in South Carolina which had requested a class for the colored race.

The three classes of the school had a total enrollment of about 150 persons, including sales clerks, students, NYA youths and interested persons.

The school was said to have been "a great success" by both the merchants and the Chamber of Commerce. The school was held here for the first time last year.

"Forget Booker T. Washington Philosophy," Says Harris!

Negro Needs Skilled Workers!

Jefferson City, Missouri — After painting a very dismal picture of employment and economic conditions among American Negroes, Dr. Abram Harris stated, in the third 75th Anniversary lecture at Lincoln University of Missouri last night, that the sooner we forget the 19th century Booker T. Washington philosophy of "working with hands," the better able we will be to develop the necessary program and facilities for equipping Negro youth for some of the skilled jobs in present-day industry. Dr. Harris, professor of economics at Howard University, addressed an overflow audience of students, faculty and townspeople on "The College and Negro Labor Problems."

Claiming that the chief responsibility for training Negro skilled workers falls upon the technical and industrial schools, Dr. Harris charged the Negro industrial schools, with one or two exceptions, with being unprepared to provide m n technological training. "Much of the current talk concerning the Negro's lack of industrial education has as its frame of reference the old Hampton-Tuskegee program of vocational education. That program was in no way designed to meet modern requirements. It sought to meet the needs of the passing era of handicraft industry in which the skilled craftsman worked with relatively simple tools. But what modern technology with its minute division of labor demands is skill in the manipulation of complex tools and machinery and a knowledge of industrial processes."

The Negro skilled worker has all but disappeared, he declared, because of his failure to keep abreast of the changing requirements for employment in modern industry ocassioned by technological development.

Negro domestic and personal service workers are in dire need of training, stated the Howard educator. "In this field the changes in the standards of proficiency and the Negro's lack of training to meet them are partly responsible, first, for his displacement in hotels and wealthy households, and, secondly, for the virtual confinement of the Negro female domestic to "day's work"! He urged intensive training in housthold management, child care, economic and nutritive value of foods, buying and selection of foods, and, emphatically, personal hygiene and personal appearance. He chided home economists for neglecting this type of training in the face of a declining demand for teachers of home economics.

ATLANTA, Ga.—At an executive meeting of representatives of five cooperating professional groups held at Atlanta university Saturday afternoon, President H. Councill Trenholm of Alabama State Teachers college was named as the executive officer for a two-year project set up to stimulate the improvement of the program of Negro colleges through their wider utilization of current approaches in the areas of collegiate education and teacher education, for which a subsidy of $22,120 has been made available by The General Education Board.

A series of conferences during the past six months has resulted in the associated effort of The Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for Negroes, The Association of Negro Land Grant College Presidents, The American Teachers Association, The Association of Colegiate Deans and Registrars in Negro Schools and The State Agents for Negro Schools, to provide a follow-up program which will include faculty-study conferences at participating Negro colleges, summer workshop participation at Northwestern university and at the University of Chicago, a Negro College Workshop at Atlanta university October 20-November 15 and a series of national. regional and state conferences to study the report and the implication of the current survey on Higher Education Among Negroes just being completed under the direction of The United States Office of Education.

Both The Commission on Teacher Education of The American Council on Education and The United States Office of Education are contributing services and suggestions to this two-year project. One-Day all-faculty exploratory conferences are being held during this Spring, through the consultative assistance of the American Council's Commission on Teacher Education at State Teachers college and A and M institute in Alabama, at Fort Valley State College in Georgia, at State A and M in Florida, at Southern university in Louisiana, at the State Training school at Jackson, Mississippi, at Knoxville college and A and I State college in Tennessee, at the Virginia State college and at Hampton institute in Virginia, at Bluefield State Teachers college in West Virginia, at the Elizabeth City State Teachers college in North Carolina and at Kentucky State college in Kentucky.

In attendance at the conference at Atlanta university today were four of the five members of the Executive Control Committee: Dr. R. B. Atwood and Dean T. E. McKinney, president and chairman of the Commission on Higher Education respectively of The Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for Negroes; E. G. McGehee of The Alabama State Department of Education as the representative of the State Agents of Negro Schools and H. Councill Trenholm as the executive secretary of The American Teachers Association. As representatives of the larger Advisory-Control Committee were President R. E. Clement and Registrar John Whittaker of Atlanta university, Dr. J. F. Drake of the Alabama A and M institute, President Horace Mann Bond of Fort Valley State Teachers college and Director W. A. Robinson of the Association's Secondary School Study.

MAY 9 - 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP).—Before the house sub-committee on appropriation for labor and education in the FSA, the AKA Non-Partisan lobby presented a brief asking that some clause be inserted in the current resolution under consideration, guaranteeing non-discrimination against Negroes in the distribution of funds for vocational education of defense workers.

In making her plea, Miss Jeannetta Welch said in part:

"Under the original act approximately $60,000,000 was appropriated to be used for defense training. The essential purpose of this act was to make available to industries engaged in national defense an immediate supply of workers whose skills had been refreshed, and a labor reservoir of persons in skilled occupations incident to these industries.

MAY 9 - 1941

"Because of the national emergency, and a need for utilizing all available workers, Congress very wisely set up certain safeguards to assure full participation of all citizens as set forth in the regulations, governing the education and training of defense workers, as follows: 'Prohibition of discrimination. No trainee under plans approved under the act shall be discriminated against because of sex, race, or color; and where separate schools are required by law for separate population groups, to the extent needed for trainees of each such group, equitable provision shall be made for facilities and training of like quality.'

MAY 9 - 1941

"In appearing here, it is our purpose to indicate that contrary to the safeguards set up by congress to assure such full participation, thousands of protests have been filed with the organization I represent, indicating that one section of the population of this country is restricted in its effort to contribute to the national defense."

MAY 9 - 1941

Miss Welch pointed out the limitations on complete participation in training programs for funds were appropriated lack of placement of the and asked the committee t[illegible] ue a declaration of policy to be set forth in the legislation under consideration by the committee.

Present at the hearing were Reps. Tarver of Georgia, chairman; Hare, Thomas, Harrington Engle and Keefe. Several questions were asked Miss Welch relative to the authenticity of her statements and whether she had definite proof of what she was saying or was it hearsay. When she offered to present the definite proof, she was told not to bother.

NEGRO EDUCATION PLAN CONSIDERED BY BOARD

MAY 10 1941

Committee Is Authorized To Study University Program

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, May 9.—The State Board of Education in session here Friday authorized a committee headed by Education Commissioner B. O. Duggan to outline a program of university education for negroes, equivalent to the educational facilities offered at the University of Tennessee.

The recent session of the Legislature authorized the program inasmuch as negroes are barred from enrolment at the state university. The committee includes members of the University of Tennessee faculty as well as members of the board.

Commissioner Duggan said he committee would work on a reorganization of the curriculum at the State Agricultural and Training School for negroes here to make it comparable to that of the University of Tennessee to provide training to meet the university's requirements for postgraduate work.

He declared the committee also would prepare recommendations on a program of training for negroes in dentistry, law and engineering. The 1941 Legislature appropriated an unstipulated amount to finance the negro educational program.

SOUTH'S PROBLEM IN EDUCATION

The recent decision handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court requiring equal apportionment of education funds for whites and Negroes, confronts the South with a most difficult problem.

The average intelligent Southerner admits the right of the Negro to equal educational opportunities in our American democracy. Yet although Negro illiteracy has declined from a high of 97 per cent in 1890 to 16.3 per cent in 1930, it is obvious that even with the sharp gains that have been made in the field of Negro education, equal opportunity is lacking.

Most Negro schools have shorter school terms, are overcrowded and understaffed, and lack adequate equipment. The most conspicuous deficiency is in the secondary schools and in institutions of higher learning which provide professional and technical training. The Supreme Court decision calls for the erection of such schools for the Negro where state-endowed and maintained schools bar him.

To comply with the decision immediately would be disastrous to the South's educational system. There are not adequate funds available, and there is little prospect of such funds unless the federal government is willing to assist. Introduction immediately of an equal apportionment system for whites and Negroes can not but lower existing standards.

It is to be hoped that some method can be worked out whereby the educational standard for the Negro can be lifted without endangering the existing structure. There must be sympathy and understanding by white and Negro leaders alike when it comes to fulfilling the law as it has been interpreted by the nation's highest tribunal.—Anniston Times.

Southern Whites Equally Divided On Race Schools

The white people of the South apparently are divided half and half on the question of providing equal public school advantages for Negro children, according to a statement by R. B. Kleazer, educational director of the Commission of Interracial Cooperation. The statement is based on a poll recently taken by the Institute of Public Opinion for the National Education association.

In this poll 45 percent of adult Southern whites interviewed on the subject favored equal advantages for Negro chlidren, 46 per cent were opposed, and 9 per cent expressed no opinion. Seventy-eight per cent of Southern Negroes interviewed expressed themselves as favorable, 11 per cent were opposed, and 11 per cent declined to express an opinion.

In the North the favorable vote was much higher, running to 86 per cent of the whites interviewed and 96 per cent of the Negroes. Th average for the country as a whole was 78 per cent in favor of equal advantages, 16 percent opposed, and 6 per cent undecided.

These results, the statement says, "are believed to be much more favorable to the Negro child than would have been the case ten years ago, and may be taken as indication of a favorable trend of opinion on this subject. Meantime in most of the southern states Negro school facilities have been steadily improving though in general the scales are still weighted heavily against the Negro child."

Duty Calls

(An Editorial)

FROM OUR High Schools, Colleges and Universities are pouring forth great numbers of young Negro men and women equipped with diplomas and degrees ready to enter upon the duties for which they have prepared themselves. They enter into a world filled with misunderstanding, suffering, misery, war, labor upheavals and every other kind of disorganization known to man. They come not afraid but with a firm determination to do their parts in righting the devastating wrong which has come upon an unsuspecting world.

These young men and women of the Negro race do not come with minds filled with propaganda, un-American doctrine and destructive ideas, but with minds alert to the emergency which exists in our nation. In our institutions of the Southland (as was stated in a previous article) our boys and girls have been trained along the lines of PROGRESSIVENESS and RESOURCEFULNESS. and in no instance has there been any attempt on the part of our leaders to put into the curricula anything of a subversive nature. Special emphasis has been placed upon environmental aspect of life throughout our educational structure. This is something deserving special commendation.

Again we have stated that the South was the very arsenal of Negro-genuine Negro culture of the nation. We again make that assertion. The Southern Negro has given and is still giving unstintedly of his resources, energy, and materials in order to assure the prospect of genuine Negro educational program in the Southland.

The present need of a program for the directing of Negro activities along the defense line is felt all over our section and a medium of expression where there is a general coordination of the ideas is likewise greatly felt. The value of such a medium is unmeasurable and the good derived from such cannot be reasonably estimated. It is a pleasure and privilege to state that our publication has received endorsement from all over the State as well as the Tri-State area for embracing and carrying on such work for the benefit of our masses.

For a long time only mild consideration was given to these un-American activities since it was felt by those in the government that matters would adjust themselves. This has been the reverse of what was hoped. Instead of adjustment there is a general nation-wide movement on the part of the "Would-Be Destroyers" to disrupt the entire national defense effort. So great is the "upheaval" that the President has been forced to declare a national emergency in order that he might be empowerd to deal with these destroyers through the application of such measures which were to take effect in case of a national emergency. It is hoped that a "knockout" blow be given "those who would destroy."

In the Southland, like vultures, the band of "organizers" has come to the cotton, corn, and other farms. They are bent on stopping the wheels of agriculture, but the word has been passed on to our farmers to beware! "Beware of any who offer 'get rich' schemes" by joining some communistic organization. Beware! The Government of the United States needs the service of her people as never before. DO YOUR PART! THIS IS NO TIME TO DELAY! With each delay—the chances of general, democratic victory are lessened—every American, colored or otherwise, should do his part.

It is hoped that the young men and women of the Negro race who are entering upon the threshold of life, will do all in their power to help direct the energy and talent of the colored masses along the line of cooperation and RESOURCEFULNESS. It will be a credit to our Southern Negro institutions and to the race as a whole.

A TEACHER'S LAMENT

Strangely enough this writer is not steeped in the vocational tradition although he would be peculiarly advantaged if he were. There is nothing that I regret more than spending thousands on an education that leaves me able to do nothing for a living except talk. I can see what a great mistake was made and because I am distressed at seeing this mistake perpetuated I write in this "gloom vein." The Negro ought to be told now and told emphatically that he cannot hope to "work" his way into jobs in the higher brackets as fast as his need for jobs will arise. The white man has seen the fallacy in the situation and Negro leadership seems determined to ignore the fact until it is too late.

It is already very late! If the privileged Negro would take his head out of the trough long enough, he might see how to avoid great tribulation for his people, providing he has courage to tell the ugly things that he sees. "I don't want my son or daughter to come along as I did," is an expression whose underlying philosophy is false. This is the reason why Negro children go to school to get away from working with their hands; why our leaders are afraid to buck popular sentiment against vocational education. We want some sponsors for a "Work-With-The-Hands" week!

Declaring that the Chicago Defender's scholarship campaign is an excellent idea which aids the participating colleges, students and the publication, Presidents M. W. Dogan of Wiley college, Marshall Texas and J. B. Watson of Arkansas State college, Pine Bluff, Ark. praised the plan this week in letters written to the contest editor.

Dr. Dogan signed a contract several weeks ago which makes it possible for the Defender to offer an all expenses-paid scholarship to Wiley and this week Dr. Watson signed a contract for $300 which covers all expenses for a student for one year at Arkansas State.

Already the Defender has contracts covering 20 scholarships and by the time the contest opens in June it is expected that it will be able to offer a year's schooling free to at least 50 ambitious students. The contest will be open to all high school graduates and college students.

Dr. Watson, in praising the Defender's scholarship plans, says, "It is a very worthwhile effort on the part of the Chicago Defender and as president of Arkansas State college, I am glad to cooperate with the plan."

Dr. Dogan Speaks

Dr. Dogan said, "However good a thing may be, unless people know about it, it is of little or no value; and publicity whether by printed or oral word is essential in these critical times when there are so many things to attract and distract people's attention and interest. It is a worthwhile venture and should work a three-way benefit: the students, the participating colleges and the paper."

H. J. Mason, director of publicity at Wiley says that the people of Texas feel that the scholarship plan will not only serve to arouse wider interest on the part of the people in keeping abreast of important news events, but will also act as a medium through which helpful contacts may be made between the educational institutions and a number of prospective students.

12 Colleges Cooperate

To date the following colleges are cooperating with the Defender in sponsoring the scholarship campaign: Alcorn, Bishop, Arkansas State, Wiley, Jarvis, Southern, Bennett, Alabama A. and M., Philander Smith, Hampton, Shaw and Talladega.

The scholarship plan helps young men and women go to college. Ambitious students earn expenses for a year at school during the summer; they also earn extra money with which they can buy clothes and other things needed. The contest will begin in June and continue through August 20 at which time the scholarships will be awarded. Last year the Defender awarded 22 scholarships, this year it plans awarding 50. High school graduates and college students interested in entering the scholarship campaign are urged to write the scholarship contest editor, P. O. Box 5528, the Chicago Defender, Chicago, Ill.

Radio Series to Be Used in Schools

WASHINGTON

Transcriptions of a series of radio programs, planned by the U.S. Office of Education and financed by a Rosenwald Foundation grant to dramatize our contributions to American life, will be released for use in schools, colleges and local radio stations.

The programs, to be broadcast naturally, will portray the role we have played in American education, art, science, industry, and other fields of endeavor, U.S. Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker reported.

Dr. Caliver in Charge

The radio series is being prepared under the general direction of Ambrose Caliver, U.S. Office of Education Specialist in the Education of Negroes and William D. Boutwell, chief, Division of Radio, Publications and Exhibits.

The transcriptions to be used in the schools and colleges will be revised as lesson units and study guides and will be used by both colored and white in courses or units of instruction about colored people in the United States.

Commissioner Studebaker said today that this is a most important undertaking of the U.S. Office of Education in behalf of all, who have had a part in the development of our national culture.

Accurate and Full

"We shall do our utmost to report accurate and full information about constructive activities and accomplishments of colored citizens in this radio series," said the commissioner.

"Much of this information is not available in textbooks and in general reading matter, yet it is the type of information that could help to improve race relations and aid in solving many problems of majority and minority groups."

The U.S. Office of Education will have the assistance of a technical advisory committee in developing the series of radio programs, and is seeking advice and suggestions from persons throughout the United States to be considered in making further plans.

To be included in the series will be our participation in music, literature, art, religion, exploration, invention, scientific research, agriculture, industry, labor, education, civil and military service, and theatrical and sports activities.

Library Needs

Mr. Studebaker also announced the appointment of an advisory committee to the U.S. Office of Education on Public Library Service.

Members of the committee will serve as counselors to the Library Service Division, U.S. Office of Education, in an intensive study now being made of public library resources and needs in defense areas.

The national leaders in the library field also will interpret findings of the study and will offer recommendations.

WPA LUNCH IN SCHOOL PROVES STUDENT AID

MAR 29 1941

Thousands Show Benefit As Undernourishment Hits Sharp Decline

WASHINGTON. — Many thousands of Negro school children, particularly in the Deep South, are showing gradual recovery from the effects of life-long undernourishment, as a result of the daily feeding of well-balanced meals on the WPA school lunch program, Alfred Edgar Smith, adviser on race relations for the Work Projects Administration, said this week.

The program operates in every state in the Union save one and an average of 1,500,000 needy school children receive free lunches daily. City as well as rural schools participate, and in some localities it has been shown that the WPA lunch is the only properly balanced meal many of the children receive throughout the day. Approximately 45,000 dietitians, cooks, kitchen helpers and other workers from WPA rolls prepare and serve the meals.

Last year, food valued at $7,000,000 was furnished by the Surplus Marketing Administration to carry on the health building school lunch program. This food came from the stock bought by the Surplus Marketing Administration to sustain falling pices when markets were glutted wih surplus produce.

Five million pounds of citrus fruit and juice, 31,000,000 pounds of apples and 6,000,000 pounds of peaches are among the commodities reported as being used in the operation of the program over a 12-month period.

The school lunch program operates without racial discrimination, Smith said. In North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas particularly, he said, needy Negro youths of school age are benefiting from the project operating in rural and urban centers where there are large concentrations of racial populations.

Citing the benefits as reported from Virginia, Smith said:

"When the survey of the participation of Negroes in this WPA program in Virginia was made, statistics revealed that 186 Negro WPA workers were engaged in preparing and serving hot lunches to Negro children in the public schools of the state. When the report was made the projects were not running at full capacity because schools had just opened for the fall term.

"Reports on service to Negro children show that from October 1 to December 1 of last year there had been served approximately 253,923 lunches. On January 22 this year, there were 96 Negro school lunch units operating in six cities and 41 counties, and a total of 213 Negro women and seven men were employed throughout the state."

In spite of the effectiveness of the school lunch program to date, Smith continued, it is estimated there are five children who need health-building food to every one of the 1,500,000 reported as receiving the benefits of the school lunch project. On the other hand it is stated that surplus foods are available to give a well-balanced meal each day to $5,000,000 children coming from America's neediest families.

'GRADE SCHOOL IS BOTTLENECK IN EDUCATION'

MAR 29 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—The "bottleneck" in Negro education today is in the primary grades, William M. Cooper, director of the division of summer and extension study at Hampton institute, said this week, in announcing Hampton's plans for special primary teachers' courses on the graduate level to be offered in the Hampton Institute Summer school, beginning June 16.

Cooper says that state school officials throughout the South declare that the "bottleneck" in Negro education is to be found in the primary grades where over 50 percent of all the Negro children are enrolled. Even in Virginia, which is one of the most progressive of the Southern states, 72,319 out of 150,993 Negro pupils enrolled in 1938-39, or approximately 48 percent, were enrolled in the first three grades. The primary classrooms are generally evercrowded, and the primary teachers in many instances are grossly overloaded. In addition, many school systems have placed the teachers with the least preparation in the primary grades on the assumption that primary children do not need as well-prepared teachers as children in the upper grades. The result is that at the end of the third grade, many children become discouraged and drop out of school to become charges upon the community as delinquents, criminals or paupers.

Music Teachers To Hold Annual Convention Here

A convention musicale at the Montgomery City Auditorium on Friday night, April 4th, the annual statewide songfest on Saturday, April 5 and the lecture of Dr. Glen Hayden, of the University of North Carolina on Saturday evening, April 5, will be features of the fifth annual convention of the Association of Music Teachers in Negro Schools which will be held at the Alabama State Teachers College, April 4-6 under the direction of President Frederick D. Hall, director of music at Dillard University.

The convention at 1 on Friday afternoon, April 4, will feature a student musical program and will continue that afternoon with presentations by Harold Schmidt, of Fisk University, and Tourgee DeBose, of Talladega College. Speakers at the sessions on Saturday will include Miss Portia Thomas, of Talladega College; J. Harold Brown, of Southern University; Dr. Alton O'Steen, of the Alabama State Department of Education; Orrin Southern, II, of Florida A. and M. College, and Mrs. Portia Trenholm and John Duncan, of the State Teachers College. Dr. Glen Hayden, president of the National Music Teachers Association will make the climaxing address at the Saturday evening session preliminary to the closing business session on Sunday morning, April 5.

The conventiton musicale on Friday night, April 5, at the city auditorium, will open with a group of numbers by Carol Bryce, contralto, and Sylvia Olden, pianist. The climaxing presentation will be "The Death of Minnehaha" from Coleridge Taylor's "Hiawatha," that will be rendered by a joint choir of 165 voices drawn from Dillard University, Miles Memorial College, Alabama A. and M. College, and the Alabama State Teachers College, under the baton of Frederick D. Hall. The soloists will be Carol Brice, Catherine Van Buren, of the Fisk faculty, and Newell Fitzpatricy of the Knoxville faculty. The accompanyists will be Sylvia Olden, Robert Hemingway of the Fisk faculty, and Orrin Suthern, II, of Florida A. and M.

The annual statewide songfest will bring to the city sixteen prize-winning choirs selected through district eliminations.

Sensible Educational Trends

MAR 22 1941

Nothing has more clearly exposed the current weakness of the Negro's educational patterns in the United States than the defense program of the government. Here we have the federal structure calling for young men to be integrated into the nation's industrial stratum, but Negro schools, offering ineffective, worthless, liberal arts courses have no trained youths to supply.

Today, in the defense program, the government wants young men skilled in metal moulding, carpentry, masonry and allied crafts. Only a few old Negroes, almost over the hill, and with one foot in the grave, can offer themselves for labor in a field where from ten to sixteen dollars per day is offered.

The fundamental economies of any racial group relate to food, clothing and shelter. No effective existence can be maintained until the body of a race has been skilled and trained in the industries relating to food, clothing and shelter. The art and science of every-day living must be the property of the masses.

Measured by the yardstick we are talking about, the most ignorant man in the community may be able to read Latin and manicure his finger nails, while he rents his house and buys his groceries from an individual hardly able to write his own name.

For the past ten years we have been giving special attention to this subject, and as we travel over the nation we have found only three high schools definitely trending in the direction we have in mind.

Just at this moment we are thinking of Phyllis Wheatley high school, San Antonio, Texas; Atkins high school, Winston-Salem, N. C., and Manual Training high school, Muskogee.

A Negro boy who finishes Phyllis Wheatley high school, San Antonio, is a qualified carpenter, who can enter into competition with builders anywhere. On the walls of the trades building at Phyllis Wheatley can be seen the pictures of two-story structures completed annually by each graduating class. In the auto mechanics division we observed a palace trailer, almost completed, with built-in cabinets, electrically lighted and piped for gas. There is no question as to the training and technical skill of the boys who constructed that palace auto trailer. Furthermore, in the trades and mechanical shops of Phyllis Wheatley this writer saw more instructional equipment than we have ever seen before in any Negro high school or college.

Down at Winston-Salem, the principal of Atkins high school took the writer into one section of the building where we were first shocked and then surprised. Down in the basement we heard such a din and roar we decided something had slipped a cog. We were positive something was wrong. As we walked through the door ahead, Negro youths were dashing about with wheelbarrows of sand and brick. In that room Negro youth were being taught brick masonry. I saw some of the most perfect "corners" that masons can lay. Every once in a while, when Negroes get a large brick-laying job in Oklahoma they send to North Carolina for laborers. Why should Negroes spend their days preparing to teach school, for salaries ranging from $50 to $100, when bricklayers command from ten to twelve dollars per day. Allied crafts, in the field of plumbing, electricity and painting, command similar wage scales.

The poultry project at Manual Training high school, Muskogee, caught our eye two years ago. The teacher down Muskogee way is not indulging in any theoretical stuff. The boys on that poultry project see the chicken drift from the egg through the incubator, brooder and on to the market. The instructor at Muskogee is sending Negro boys out into life skilled in a useful occupation from the ground up to the top.

This week, down here at Idabel, where this is written, we have observed a Negro dentist, Dr. H. W. Williamston, patiently attempting to teach mechanical dentistry to a pair of very fie youths. One of them is a graduate of Langston university.

When these boys complete their apprenticeship, they will be able to command salaries from $25 to $40 per week. Before placing these boys in his establishment, Dr. Williamston every month paid hundreds of dollars to dental laboratories, and with the change it is very expensive to convert his ocices into a kindergarten for Negro youth.

The question is: Why does not Langston university offer courses in mechanical dentistry? Why does not Langston offer courses in photography, laundering, dyeing and cleaning? Every few weeks Negro boys pass through Oklahoma City from reformatories and prisons in Kansas and other states, where they have learned these trades and crafts. Why should Negro business men have to look to prisons, among the ranks of reformed criminals, for employees? Why can we not get such laborers from our high schools and colleges?

Several months ago a Negro school teacher suggested to this writer that it would be practically useless for youths of his race to develop in metallurgy. "What would they do with such training after the government concludes its defense program?" he asked with stern conviction resounding in his voice.

It is almost criminal to find such shallow, undisguised ignorance in the school room. In Oklahoma City today a Negro, whose educational opportunities were extremely limited, is making money hand over fist by reason of knowledge acquired in a junk yard regarding metals. The knowledge this man has acquired in this field has converted him from a poor man into one of the wealthiest Negroes in the capital city of Oklahoma. There is not a town of 5,000 inhabitants where a profitable living could not be made by an energetic black man trained to properly evaluate metals.

Sometime ago we took a young lady, a graduate of Howard university, out to see the various activities operated by this man who has been schooled in the science of metals. This young lady, the wife of one of the most brilliant Negroes in America, said following study and examination of what this man is doing: "I wish Howard university offered a course in 'junking' and I wish my husband had taken it."

THE STATE SCHOOL PROBLEM

The periodical debates between Gov. Dixon and Dr. A. H. Collins, superintendent of the State Department of Education, over school finances may not have broken the deadlock between the two officials, but they at least have given the public an informative picture of the problem's divergent phases.

Appearance of the two men before the Alabama Education Association convention at Birmingham was a continuation of a debate begun shortly after Gov. Dixon took office in 1939, and represented a new chapter in the old, familiar struggle between the "haves" and the "have nots." In this instance Dr. Collins expresses the natural desire for more school funds and Gov. Dixon is tenaciously refusing to give up present or potential revenue that might be used to benefit the state as a whole. Dr. Collins, as head of a single department, sees only one tree, whereas the chief executive continues to view the entire forest.

This, in one sense, is as it should be. Dr. Collins was elected to improve the Alabama school system as much as possible, and the governor was elected to supervise every executive interest of the state. But the school superintendent, in our opinion, unjustifiably criticized the executive office when he declared that the governor's will has superseded that of the people and the Legislature as regards the state's educational problem.

New taxes are still the Legislature's responsibility, as is the initiative to lift constitutional restrictions on possible school funds, regardless of how much influence the governor might have with the assembly, and a chief executive cannot reasonably be expected to make an injurious diversion of funds from one department to another.

Gov. Dixon, however, has been friendly, without being politically obsequious, to the Alabama school system. If his estimates are to be believed, schools will have received approximately $15,000,000 more from his administration than from any other regime in the state's history.

Benefits from the extra amount already received by schools may have been so spaced as not to be fully felt, but nevertheless schools have benefited under the present administration. And with Dr. Collins continually pressing for additional funds and the governor continually presenting his attitude toward the issue, a more enlightened public is certain to develop and result in an even more intelligent and productive consideration of the problem.—Mobile Register.

NEW YORK, Mar. 27—(ANP)—The Negro people are both actors and the subject of "One Tenth of a Nation", an authentic documentary film on Negro education in the United States which has just been released in New York and which will soon be seen in motion picture theaters throughout the country. It had its world premiere at the American Negro Exposition in Chicago last summer.

Considered one of the outstanding documentary films made during the past year, this 26 minute movie is considered a true and eloquent story of the Negro in the South, with emphasis placed upon their need for greater educational advantages and wider opportunities to contribute their talents to our economic life.

Of One Tenth of a Nation, Dr. Charles S. Johnson of Fisk university, says: "The story is factually sound. The narrative is excellent and the music is by one of the most competent composers in the field, Roy Harris. The film as a whole accomplishes its purpose of being a social study artistically told."

It was produced by means of a grant from the General Education board of the Rockefeller foundation in connection with the American Negro Exposition's celebration of 75 years of achievement of the Negro race.

A committee, including Dr. Channing Tobias of the Y. M. C. A.; Dr. Rufus Clement of Atlanta university; Claude A. Barnett of the American Negro Exposition; Dr. F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee and Dr. Arthur Wright of the Southern Education foundation played an active part in the preliminary work on the picture.

The early scenes of the picture show the South as it exists today. The voice of Maurice Ellis tells with simple, intelligent lines the history of the race starting with the first settlers who came to the South over 300 years ago, and how their contribution to its creation made it a land of plenty.

The scene shifts to the rural districts and the picture shows the run down, over-crowded school rooms where the majority of the Negro children receive their only education; their meagre life at home is depicted in honest detail.

There is shown the other side, too—institutions of higher learning, vocational and service training schools, colleges and universities such as Tuskegee and Atlanta and graduate schools such as Meharry Medical college where future "men in white" are seen in the operating room.

The picture ends with the young farmer behind a pair of mules saying "We in this country watch the bitterness and strife abroad, and we know that differences of opinion of race and color never will be solved by using bombs and high explosive shells."

Alabama's Educational Aims

The teachers of Alabama, as a matter of course, know more about our schools and their needs than any other group in the state. These teachers, individually and collectively, do a great deal of studying and thinking about our schools, and they have, quite naturally, rather definite aims and ambitions concerning education in Alabama. Their enthusiastic interest in the advancement of education arises both out of their professional pride and their good citizenship.

Next week the school teachers of the state will meet in Birmingham for the annual convention of the Alabama Education Association. The A. E. A. convention is always a time for the consideration of school problems from the public's point of view as well as from the professional or inside standpoint. It is always a time for the discussion of the aims and ambitions that the educators of Alabama have for our schools.

In advance of the A. E. A. convention, The Alabama School Journal, official organ of the association, publishes a list of the legislative goals of the organization. This list of proposals, we may be sure, represents the best thought of Alabama's educators on a subject which is of concern to every Alabamian.

The Alabama Education Association, says The Journal, is asking the citizens of the state "to endorse and vigorously promote" the legislative program which it outlines. "The association believes," it continues, "that the degree of success possible in the attainment of the proposed social and educational goals is largely dependent upon the enactment into law of certain needed measures such as those relating to the adequate financial support for a longer school term; more adequate instructional and maintenance facilities; better salaries for teachers, thereby insuring a better type of teacher personnel; better trained teachers and administrators; a better method of selecting school administrators; equalization of education opportunities; needed amendments to the present tenure and retirement laws for teachers; and the elimination of certain economic factors which tend to keep children out of school or to retard their progress in school."

These proposals, which deserve the attention of every citizen of Alabama because of the importance of both the subject and the source from which these recommendations come, are as follows:

1. The protection of educational appropriations against discriminatory prorations.
2. The appointment of the state superintendent of education by the State Board of Education, this board to be composed of one member from each congressional district, such members to be elected by popular vote for terms to be determined on a staggered basis.
3. The appointment of the county superintendent of education by the County Board of Education for a four-year term.
4. Minimum standards for city and county superintendents of education of one year of graduate training in educational administration and of five years of successful teaching, school administration, or supervisory experience, provided that such improved standards shall not operate to disqualify present incumbents.
5. The removal of constitutional school tax limitations upon local administrative school units in order that citizens of such units may levy upon themselves the taxes they desire to pay in order to enjoy educational opportunities in excess of whatever minimum school program the state may provide.
6. The exemption of school boards from the payment of state and local taxes levied on gasoline and lubricants to be used in the transportation of school children.
7. The retention of the principles of equalization as embodied in the present minimum school program act, together with increased financial support needed to provide as the next step a minimum school term of eight months and an ultimate goal of a term of nine months for EVERY child in Alabama, and to provide satisfactory instructional services and supplies, library facilities, adequate school buildings and equipment, satisfactory maintenance and operation of school plants, including janitorial services, and safe and sufficient school transportation.
8. The elimination of matriculation fees in the high school to the end that the public school of Alabama may be FREE to EVERY child.

9. Adequate financial support for public institutions of higher education in keeping with financial support available for public elementary and secondary schools and in keeping with the needs for better trained workers and leaders in the industrial, agricultural, professional, home and civic life of the state.
10. Amendment of the teacher retirement act so as to (1) eliminate the restriction under which the contributions of a teacher who withdraws from the system are not refunded unless and until such teacher has been a member of the system for at least three years; and (2) to restore the provisions of the retirement plan for teachers to approximate the original proposal — specifically to include all prior service and disability benefits and to finance the plan with appropriations that are direct and not conditional.
11. Modification and revision of the present tenure law as may seem necessary in the light of experience arising from its administration.
12. Free textbooks for the first six grades to be selected on the basis of multiple adoptions.

There will be less questioning of the wisdom of any of these proposals than there will be of the expediency of some of them at the present time. Informed opinion, we believe, will generally endorse the aims; the principal question is simply one of how rapidly we can achieve them, in view of the financial problem involved in some of these planks.

Some persons, to be sure, will question some of these proposals on other grounds than financial expediency. For example, there remains a considerable public opinion in favor of electing state and county superintendents of education; but gradually the number of persons having that view is diminishing, and more and more the practical wisdom of appointing superintendents of education is being realized.

At any rate, these are the aims of Alabama's teachers, and the general public ought to give them close study and careful consideration.

NEGRO CHILDREN SEEK TOP JOBS, SPEAKERS SAY

Psychologist Speaks at Science Meeting

LAKELAND, Nov. 20.—(Associated Press)—A report that Negro children, as a group, aimed at higher occupational levels than a similar group of white children was given to the Florida Academy of Sciences convention here today by Dr. Susan Gray, Florida State College for Women psychologist.

She said that from a survey of 800 Negro children in the first six grades of schools in Nashville and Franklin, Tenn., and at Burlington, N. C., she found most Negro boys wanted to be doctors and most girls preferred teaching.

She suggested that evidence that the Negro children aimed higher than the white children might reflect a greater striving for security and prestige among the Negroes.

Urges Guidance

Pointing out that every sixth Negro boy aimed to be a doctor while only six out of 10,000 gainfully employed Negroes are found in the medical profession, Dr. Gray recommended guidance by teachers to acquaint the children with other vocations in order to prevent disappointment in later life.

Dr. Dorothy Disher, also of the FSCW psychology department, reporting on a survey of religious interest among 1500 students from the seventh grade through college, said boys' religious interest fell off mostly between the seventh and eighth and the ninth and tenth grades and that more girls began to lose interest between the ninth and tenth and eleventh and twelfth grades.

She said that at no time did the students she studied exhibit less than average interest in religion.

Criticizes Public Reaction

Criticizing public reaction to surveys which show a decrease in church attendance by college students, Dr. Disher said no true picture of the situation could be obtained until similar studies have been made of religious interest among young people who do not attend college.

Two University of Florida nutritionists and a federal government chemist reported at the academy's opening session that young chickens had lived and gained weight on a diet of tung-oil meal, by-product of a nut that has long been considered poisonous.

They said the meal did not increase the weight as much as standard chicken feeds, and that it was not recommended for immediate use by poultry raisers.

Tampans who will appear on tomorrow's program and their subjects will be A. L. P. Johnson, professor of political science, University of Tampa, "Return of Transylvania to Rumania;" Robert G. Campbell, "Geology and War," and Ellis Freeman, assistant professor of psychology, University of Tampa, "Relational Emergents."

PUBLICITY MEN WILL MEET AT VIRGINIA STATE

College Groups To Attend Conference Of Public Relations Dec. 13

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Publicity directors from many of America's leading Negro institutions of higher learning will attend the first conference of the Public Relations Association for Negro Colleges, on Saturday, Dec. 13 and Sunday, Dec. 14, at Virginia State college, in Petersburg, Va., according to an announcement this week by David Apter, director of public relations at Hampton Institute and president of the association.

William R. Simms, publicity director at Virginia State, conference chairman, also announces that many prominent Negro and white newspaper men will speak at the meeting.

Opening the session Saturday morning will be President Malcolm S MacLean of Hampton institute, who will talk on "The College President's Conception of Public Relations." Following Dr. MacLean will be an address by R. F. Nelson, public relations director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce and at present administrator of Virginia's Defense Savings program. Other speakers will include representatives from leading Negro weeklies, the Associated Press, and other agencies.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted to panel discussions on public relations, photography, publications, sports publicity, and news releases.

Howard Prof. To Make Study Of Explosives

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dr. R. Percy Barnes, professor of chemistry at Howard University, has been selected by the Committee on Engineering Defense Training, of the U. S. Office of Education, as one of 16 instructors in chemistry representing engineering schools, to study under Dr. Fred Olsen, expert in the field of explosives.

The class began at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., on March 3, and will last three weeks. This special course in powder and explosives is being taken by Dr. Barnes in preparation for a course in "The Chemistry of Powder and Explosives" to be offered soon at Howard University as part of the National Defense Program sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education.

Dr. Barnes is a graduate of Amherst College, and earned his Ph.D. degree at Harvard University. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa Honorary Society.

Fourteen scientific papers written by Dr. Barnes have been published in the Journal of the American Chemical Society. He has served on the Howard University faculty during the past nineteen years and holds the U. S. Civil Service rating as inspector of powder and explosives.

Says Higher Education Must Be Redesigned To Meet Needs Of Youth In Changing World

Higher education is still in the "Topsy" stage, with 650 colleges and universities forcing 1,200,000 students "through a hopper which has just grown, and which needs to be redesigned to fit the actual needs of youth in a complex, changing world," it was said Friday, February 28, at the Down Town Association by Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, new president of Hampton Institute, and former head of the General College at the University of Minnesota.

Speaking at a meeting of the Hampton Association of New York, under the auspices of John W. Hanes, Newbold Morris and Dr. William J. Schieffelin, Dr. MacLean said the American college has gone through three phases of development, and now faces a fourth.

After the period of establishment, and the period of raising standards of teaching and study, he said the post-war development of higher education has been "the period of the Big Splurge", with much excellent work, but with most of the emphasis on expansion of plants and enrollment.

"In face of the facts about unemployment, the Topsy-like growth of the past two decades leaves another development which is now necessitated by the national welfare, and may be forced by lower budgets; namely, another pioneering move in the direction of more careful selection and guidance of students, more efficient planning of courses of study, and more effective use of teaching staffs and plants."

Hampton Institute, he said, is now working out such a development, and is also demonstrating in its Trade School that America's 13,000,000 Negroes constitute virtually untapped human resources for man power and skilled workers for national defense.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 6—Miss Anne M. Cooke, a leading figure in college dramatics in the Southeast, is visiting Kent college, Ohio, and Olivet college, Michigan, as a lecturer on the Faculty-artist staff of the Association of American Colleges. This is her third season with the association.

Since her graduation from Oberlin college, Miss Cooke has directed dramatics at Spelman college in Atlanta, Ga., and in addition has taught courses in English and in drama. She organized the Atlanta University Summer Theatre in 1934 and every summer since that time has directed its plays, producing five plays in six weeks each summer.

Miss Cooke made the first experiment of the Association of American Colleges in the field of drama and interracial exchange. Her purpose in visiting colleges is not only to give a demonstration of modern dramatic techniques, but also to become actively identified with the life of the college campus visited.

Schools In The South

(This is the third in a series on education in the south, prepared in collaboration with one of the most distinguished living educators, a native of the south, educated in this section. The fourth of the series will appear next Sunday.)

Previously in these columns we have cited the differences in educational opportunities in the south as compared with the rest of the nation as a reason for federal aid to education in these states. If the states acting individually could solve the problem, a demand for federal assistance might be unjustifiable.

The unfavorable status of public schools in the south as compared to the rest of the nation is not due to lack of effort or willingness on the part of the southern states to support schools. It is due to two factors: comparatively heavy educational burdens and low economic ability to raise public revenues.

Ten of the fourteen southern states rank higher in effort to support schools than they rank in ability to support schools. In general the southern states exert more than twice as great effort as would be expected from their ability, using the average ability and effort of the nation as a whole as the criteria. For example Mississippi has only one-third as much tax-paying ability per pupil as the United States average, but exerts one and a third times as much effort to support schools as is exerted in the nation as a whole. Mississippi ranks 48th among the states in ability to support schools, but sixth in effort to do so.

The southern states have many more children in proportion to adult population than the states of other regions. Taking the southern states as a group, they have 603 persons 5 to 17 years old for each 1,000 adults 20 to 64 years old. In other regions the ratios are: northeast 420; middle states 423; northwest 496; far west 337. The adults of the south have 80 per cent more children to rear and educate in proportion to their own numbers than do the adults of the far west, and 43 per cent more than the adults of the northeast.

It is sometimes mistakenly assumed that the large number of children in proportion to adults in the south is due to the Negro population. In Arkansas, Alabama, Florida, Kentucky and Tennessee the ratio of children to adults is larger for the whites than for the Negroes. Only in South Carolina is the ratio materially higher for the Negroes.

The southern states have relatively low ability to raise revenue to support schools and other public services. Taking the southern states as a group they have ten per cent of the total taxpaying ability of the nation and 25 per cent of the children 5 to 17 years old. On the other hand the northeastern states have approximately 40 per cent of the nation's taxpaying ability and only 30 per cent of the nation's children of school age.

Not only is the ability of the south to support schools markedly less than the ability of other regions and states, but there are appalling differences within these states in the ability of farm and non-farm communities to support schools. In the south as a whole the average income per child in non-farm areas is $1,186 as compared to only $474 per child in farm areas. That is, each non-farm child on the average has $4.33 in income from which to pay his schooling for each $1.00 for the average farm child. In no other region of the nation except the middle states are such wide differences found. Since for the most part the Negroes live in the farm areas, it can easily be seen that these great differences in income per non-farm child and per farm child account in large measure for the poor financial support accorded to Negro schools.

Without doubt federal aid for education to the states of the south is an economic and social necessity.

England United By Nazi Bombing, Lecturer Asserts

An England subject at any time to Nazi air raids is less changed physically by bombs than the country is spiritually by the tragic experience, according to Donald Grant, who is lecturing at Spelman College this week under auspices of the Institute of International Education.

"Tension and danger have united the country under a government as strong as Hitler's, but with powers freely given," he said Friday.

A few days before he left England, Mr. Grant's house in London was struck by a bomb. "Funny thing," he said, "the blast didn't break the windows. The bomb struck a garden wall and cracked the walls of the house, which remained standing."

Hitler will try to knock out England in the next six months, he believes, and when that attempt fails—as Mr. Grant is confident it will fail—the Nazis' greatest power will have been exhausted. England continues to grow stronger, and will fight with increasing force, he said.

A conference for the coordination of the rural phase of observation and practice in rural schools was held Friday afternoon, January 31, at 4:30 at Morris Brown College. Prayer was offered by President W. A. Fountain, Jr., after which Mrs. Helen A. Whiting, instructor of Elementary Education and Supervisor of Practice in Elementary Schools, State Supervisor of Colored Elementary Schools and chairman of the meeting directed attention to the description of the plan for the experimental venture at Morris Brown College in elementary teacher education.

Mrs. Whiting stated that "The Morris Brown plan is a step toward producing more able undergraduate students through integration of the resources of the college, the college faculty, the rural cooperating centers, the state supervisors, county supervisors, and teachers of these centers, county agents where available, and other county and state agencies."

The meeting was particularly important and interesting and all present seemed to be enthusiastic over the cooperative plans for prospective demonstration and practice center teachers and supervisors.

Continuing, Mrs. Whiting said, "Last year it was possible to integrate the subject matter of two courses, rural sociology and economics, rural school materials and methods of instruction. This year it is hoped that further integration through cooperation from faculty members, can be effected without disrupting the organization and administration of this institution."

At present, there are twelve students enrolled for elementary education and there are nine enrollees in Observation and Practice in city and rural elementary schools. The schedule for observation and practice in city and rural schools has been approved by Dean Mitchell of Morris Brown College."

Forms to be used by students and teachers for observation and practice were reviewed by the chairman.. Some of the topics discussed were (1) Important Considerations to be Remembered by the Student Teacher; (2) Observation Participation, Group and Room Teaching Schedule; (3) Suggestions to Teachers and Student-Teacher of Cooperating Schools with Morris Brown College; (4) Community Study by Rural Teachers; (5) The Teacher and Teaching Technique; (6) Student Accomplishment Sheet from Teacher to Teacher; (7) Students' Report of Work Accomplished with Pupils; (8) Practice Teacher's Rating Scale; (9) Summary Sheet.

Concluding, Mrs. Whiting stated that it was gratifying to know of the fine way in which the Morris Brown students addressed themselves to their work last year. Questions were solicited by the chairman and a discussion period followed.

Those attending were: President W. A. Fountain, Jr., Dean Mitchell, Mrs. Cochran, Dr. Monroe, Prof. Slade, Mrs. V. J. Hill, Prof. Black, Miss M. E. Davis and Mrs. Graves, all of Morris Brown College. Others present were: Mrs. E. S. Davis, Broughton County; Mrs. C. Keith, Douglasville County; Mrs. Carrie W. Moore, Jeanes Teacher, Morgan County; Miss R. Bentley, Morgan County; Miss Mamie Bailey, Morgan County; Mr. Thomas Avery, Morgan County; Mrs. G. E. Atkins, Henry County, Supervisor; Miss Maggie Perry, Supervisor, Fulton County; Miss Frankie N. Golden, Supervisor, Dekalb County; Mrs. Rosetta Smith, Henry County; Miss Rosa Pearson, Henry County; Mr. and Mrs. H. N. McLilly, Henry County; Mrs. Callie Mae Montgomery, Dekalb County; Miss Valera Godfrey, Fulton County; Mr. P. Irving Green, Carroll County; Miss Annie L. Pierce, Fulton County; Mrs. Agnes Smith Clark, Carroll County; Mrs. Mozella D. Lee, Carroll County and Mrs. Minnie F. Lee, Carroll County.

Negro Education Gains Favor

The 75th anniversary of Lincoln university, Missouri's college for the higher education of Negroes, celebrated last Sunday, brings up thoughts of the tremendous change in public opinion since the day long ago when Negro soldiers, fresh from the fighting that sealed their freedom from slavery, threw dollars on a drum head to be used for the founding of that school. The Call Necessarily in a day of utter illiteracy schools for Negroes had no resemblance to the picture our Lincoln, or for that matter any Negro school anywhere, presents now. But even more changed than the schools themselves is the attitude of the dominant majority. Opposition to Negro education used to be the rule. In the early days our enemies felt free to whet their cussedness on the Negro school. K. C., Mo.

But where Negro education once was opposed generally, there is today everywhere, even in the meanest districts of the South, unmistakeable evidence that it is accepted. Mississippi's improving its Negro schools now that its highways are traveled by many visitors from other sections, is not all shame. Some part of it is realization that community well-being depends upon bringing everybody up to standard. We dare hope that some of it is pride! The Call

Talladega Head Denounces Caste System in America

JAN 31 1941

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—The January issue of "Social Action," monthly magazine published by the Council for Social Action of the Congregational Christian churches, is devoted to an article by Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of Talladega college.

Entitled, "The American Caste System," Dr. Gallagher's article traces the growth of the pattern of racial attitudes existing in America today giving special emphasis to the position of the Negro in the American pattern.

Believing that prejudice against the American Negro is an acquired cultural pattern rather than an inherent attitude, the author sets out to list a procedure which might effect a change in the "immoral caste system."

Dr. Gallagher has been president of Talladega since 1933, and, as Edwin R. Embree states in his foreword, "is devoting his life to trying to bring real independence to Negroes, and to creating an atmosphere where there will be fair opportunities for all the diverse peoples who make up our nation."

He concludes: "We must know the various possibilities of racial realignment and make an ethical choice between these alternatives. We must discover significant points at which to begin to work in effecting a change. The Christian must address himself to this task as a Christian, not as a member of a given racial group or as a resident of a certain section of a nation for it is clear that the lines of separation are not geographical or racial; they are human.

"The caste system will be broken only if we break it. We have a Christian obligation to release our minds, our energies, our time and our money for this cause In a warfare of this sort, there can be no neutral ground. He that is not for us is against us-"

Oklahoman Offers Figures Which Prove Sharp Difference In Body of White and Black Life

Lauds Initiative of 18th Century Negro

DALLAS, Tex. Jan. 27, 1941—An unprecedented audience crowded the New Hope Baptist church Sunday afternoon, during the program rendered by the Central Forum, and at which time Editor Roscoe Dunjee, Oklahoma City, delivered an address. The program started promptly at 3:45.

A thirty-minute music period launched the Forum program, with music furnished by the Ambassadors A Capella choir of Booker T. Washington High School, which was followed by invocation by Rev. B. F. White, pastor of the Peoples Congregational church. There was an organ offertory by Homer Hamilton.

Mr. Floyd F. Wilkerson, director of the Forum presented Editor L. I. Brockenbury of the Dallas Express, who in turn introduced Editor Dunjee, who took for his subject "Changing the Negro's Educational Patterns".

"George Washington Carver says it is "Understanding Relations," said Editor Dunjee.

Another writer has said it is "the drawing out of the best within an individual."

Plato said "Good education is that which gives to the body and the soul all of the perfection of which they are capable."

In other words Plato considered that education filled a three-fold purpose in the development of the head, the heart and the hands, said the speaker.

One characteristic of Hebrew education was its industrial system. Thus Jesus Christ was a carpenter, Paul a tent-maker and etc. One great Jewish Rabbi has expressed himself regarding education in this wise:

> "He who teaches not his son a trade does as if he taught him to be a thief."

"The great battle for years between Booker T. Washington and DuBois regarding the type of education Negroes in the United States should secure proves conclusively that the intelligentsia of our race have never been sure as to the type and character of educational pattern which should be followed, said the Oklahoma Editor.

"My thought is that neither of these extreme positions taken by Washington and DuBois offer the ad makers, photographers proof readers circulation builders typists, feature writers and what not.

We need plumbers, electricians, cabinet makers, contracters, builders tradesmen and individuals who can fit into every crevice of our every day economy.

Blythely we skip along in total disregard to preparing ourselves for every day life situations. In our schools we give the young men a foolish liberal arts course, which does nothing more than teach others to teach others to teach. No one is ever the finished product, prepared to go out alone and attack life's task and problems," said Dunjee.

The speaker said be believed Negro colleges should develop into laboratories and experiment stations where the intelligensia would find solutions for some of our pressing needs. He said that one of the pressing problems which should be included in such a research institute is the organization of the spending power and the capital gains of the race.

truest concept of education, for after all if we are to find perfection for the body and the soul it must come through fusion and ferment of all of life's related values.

"I would divide a man's education into two parts. First he must be taught how to effect his basic life economy. That is to say all of us must first learn how to feed, clothe and shelter ourselves, and then following this education should trend toward the fine art of living.

"It seems to me that DuBois had hold of the top of what I am talking about and that Booker T. Washington had hold of the bottom. Now one has to have a top and bottom, in fact one must have the perfect whole. I am reminded though, right at this point of a remark sometime ago of C. C. Spaulding, who said,

"The only thing one can successfully start from the top is a ditch and a grave."

Negroes too often like to say that they have reached the same point in development here in America as white people, but only a curisory survey of black and white life refused any such nation," declared Dunjee.

FEB 8 - 1941

A study of the occupational trends in black and white life show that 64.7 per cent of all Negroes are engaged in agriculture and domestic service, while 67.7 of the white population find gainful employment in five radically different fields.

Here is a break down on the two:

NEGRO
Agriculture	36.1%
Domestic Service	28.6%

WHITE
Manufacturing and Mechanical Industries	27.5%
Trade	13.7%
Clerical	10.4%
Transportation and Communication	8.2%
Professional Service	7.9%
Total	67.7%

A reversal of the above breakdown shows:

NEGRO
Manufacturing	18.6%
Transportation and Communication	7.2%
Trade	3.3%
Professional Service	2.5%
Clerical	.7%
Total	32.1%

WHITE
Agriculture	21.4%
Total	28.00%

Every one of the five fields in which you find 67.7% of white people gainfully employed are protected fields. Labor unions, price fixing agencies, tariffs and even government subsidies offer protection to 67% of the white workers.

In the two fields where 64.7% of the Negroes are gainfully employed, neither agricultural laborers or domestic service is protected by the wage and hour laws, or any other public or private agency.

It is easy to see that unless the black man wishes to retain an abnormal, unprotected, uncertain existence here in the United States he must radically revamp his every day approach to living.

Declaring that the present day Negro was dominated by a job complex, and did not measure up to the standards set by the 18th century black man, when he first came to these shores, Editor Dunjee told his audience of Negroes who during the period of slavery who developed their economy in a far more substantial manner than today.

"One has only to go back to the time when the black man first landed on these shores fresh from a life of effective existence," said the speaker, "and before the white man had adopted definite techniques and methods for handling Negroes, to discover that the 18th century black man far more fully integrated himself into the ways of practical living than present day Negroes, who claim to have made so much progress.

During the period of the Revolution Negroes were ship builders, ship owners, manufacturers and inventors, jewellers, and in every way showed a character of independence not extant now.

Take Paul Cuffe, sailor, who owned many vessels that sailed between this country and Africa. He alone planned a colonization society.

FEB 8 - 1941

Joseph P. Cassidy, another Negro at the time the Constitution was being written, was a great lumber merchant in New York.

We all remember that Benjamin Bannaker, the great inventor, made the first clock in America, and produced an almanac.

In 1859 Henry Boyd started manufacturing spring beds in Cincinnati and became one of the most wealthy men of that early day community.

Negroes throughout the colonies not only purchased their freedom but were in addition able to purchase white slaves who sweat and toiled for them.

The Oklahoman said that education today, because it did not fit into the need was developing a deafest psychology among young Negroes.

"Up in Oklahoma we have our section lines, Indian trails, streets and alleys filled with Negro boys and girls who come from teacher's colleges, but none of them are the finished product. They have been trained only to teach others to make. In the meantime in my own business, I need, compositors, linotype operators, stereotypers, engravers.

African Woman Speaks To Memphis Citizens

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —Special— Mrs. Nkombi Tantsi, wife of a chief of the Zulu tribe of Truli, South Africa, spent four days in Memphis recently, December 23-27, during which time she lectured at St. Andrews AME. church and was presented to many religious and civic leaders of Memphis.

Mrs. Tantsi came to this countrybest-known religious leaders, and last May to attend the national con- takes an active part in civic affairs ference of the African Methodist Episcopal church held in Detroit. She was three days late in reaching the conference, however. And for this reason the Young People's organization of the denomination decided to have her remain here for a while, travelling over the country, and giving the various church groups an opportunity to hear something of her work in the African conference of the church. She is the president of the most outstanding foreign conference of the AME denomination.

While here on tour war conditions in Africa made it unsafe for Mrs Tantsi to return to her native land. As a result she was offered a scholarship to Morris Brown College, in Atlanta, Georgia. She accepted, and will be in attendance at the college till next summer. She uses her spare time from her studies travelling under the auspices of the young people's groups of her church.

During her Memphis lecture, she told her audience of the appreciation which the members of her race in Truli and adjacent districts feel for the work of the various Christian missionaries who have been sent to them. She voiced her belief that the African convert to Christianity is more consecrated than the native American because of the African's complete conviction about the Christian ideal once he has been converted She expressed pleasure with American life, and revaled that she is now studying beauty culture in a schiol in Atlanta with the intention of returning to her African home and introducing the American hair styles to African girls and women.

While in Memphis she was the house guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Davis of 613 East Georgia street. Reverend Davis is one of the city

Teachers Lead in D. C.'s Colored Professionals

JAN 4 1941

Washington—school teachers, numbering 1,303, took front rank in the District's total of 2,436 colored persons in seven professional groups, according to a breakdown of occupations engaged in by Negroes here made prior to the 1940 census.

The latest census is expected to show an appreciable advance in wage and the number of skilled workers.

Clergymen came second in the professional classification with 273 listed; music teachers and musicians were third with 231. Other professionals were numbered as follows in their proper order; physicians and surgeons, 191; trained nurses, 173; lawyers, 98; college presidents and professors, 95, and dentists, 75.

Porters Skilled?

Among skilled workers in the less crowded of thirty-four classifications were: steam road brakesmen, 5; locomotive firemen, 10; blacksmiths, 25; bakers, 97; plumbers, gas and steam fitters, 100, and engineers 128.

Chauffeurs, truck and tractor drivers led the skilled classification group with a total of 3,957, while building construction laborers and helpers came second with 3,760, all male in each group. In third place were 2, 62 males classified as in public service.

The manufacturing trade came fourth with 1,709 males; in fifth place were 1,596 males classified as laborers, porters, and helpers in stores.

Laundry operators were No. 1 among the occupations claiming both sexes, with 1,592 female and 317 male; clerks tagged along in second place with 1,149 male and 650 females. Barbers, hairdressers, and manicurists totaled 621 male and 489 female.

Other Classifications

Others classified as skilled workers without regard to the number engaged in each follow:

Carpenters, 315; cleaning, dyeing, and pressing workers, 161; dealers, 591 male, 52 female; deliverymen, bakeries and stores, 652; draymen, teamsters, carriage drivers, 237; firemen, 359; guards, watchmen, doorkeepers, 229; insurance agents, managers and office, 82; coal and lumber, 382; domestic and personal service, 265; garage, 267; road and street, 915; steam railroads, 636; mail carriers 214; masons, brick, stone and tile layers, 243; painters, glaziers and varnishers, 276; plasterers and cement finishers, 409.

Majority In Nation Favors Equal School Expenditures For All

Secretary Frank L. Grove, of the Alabama Education Association, declared Saturday that the American public approves equal per pupil expenditures for the education of Negro and white school children.

Grove was discussing the December issue of the Education Bulletin, published by the association, which summarizes results of a recent Gallup poll on public education. "The Bulletin shows," said Grove, "that 78 out of 100 Americans favor equal expenditures for the education of each white and Negro child. Only 16 per cent are opposed to such equality."

Strange as it seems, according to the bulletin, only 46 per cent of adult Southern whites are opposed to equality of per pupil educational expenditures for white and colored children, while 45 per cent of Southern whites favor such equality. A majority of 56 per cent of all Southern people approves equality of educational expenditures for the races.

The bulletin shows that 73 per cent of the public approve the modern emphasis on education while only 23 per cent feel that education today is being given too much importance. In addition to approving the modern stress on education, 83 per cent of the people think that schools have improved and that children are today getting a better school training than their parents received before them.

"It is significant," Grove said, "in view of the domestic and world situation that a majority of 73 per cent of all Americans approve freedom in discussion of controversial issues by young people, and 68 per cent approve freedom of discussion for teachers." However, 26 per cent of the people feel that teachers are unfair in their discussion of disputed questions and present only one side of the case.

According to the Gallup survey, almost one person in five feels that too little is being spent on education, while 47 per cent feel that the amount spent is about right.

Superintendent Talk Of Negro Problem

By DEWARD BRITTAIN

An open forum on the negro teacher problem led by J. H. Hope, state superintendent of education, commanded the spotlight of the county superintendents meeting Thursday afternoon.

The group registered no definite stand on pending question to put Negroes on the same salary scale as white teachers, but Mr. Hope, who is a member of a special committee to study the problem, solicited the aid of every school authority in coping with "this vital situation."

J. H. Felder

Lieut. G. E. Hurteau of the state highway patrol proposed to the superintendents a series of state-wide institutes in the interest of safety. These teacher conferences would concern themselves with the safe transportation of children to and from school, Hurteau said.

The group accepted an invitation from Winthrop college to hold its summer convention in Rock Hill. No specific time was set for the meeting.

Presiding at yesterday's meeting was J. H. Felder, of Kingstree, president of the body. Approximately 25 members attended the gathering.

JAN 18 1941

Social Work Expert Flays America For Excluding Race From "Cultural Stream" In Annual Urban League Dinner Speech—"Not a Single Negro On Policy-Making Bodies," Says Atlanta Univ. Director.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16—(By John H. Thompson for ANP)—"All America from the top down is guilty of excluding the American Negro from the main stream of culture," Forrester B. Washington, director of the Atlanta School of Social Work, told an audience of 215 persons at the 21st annual dinner meeting of the New York Urban League in the Royal Palm Room of Child Restaurant Wednesday evening.

"In all of Washington in the New Deal setup, to my knowledge, there is not a single Negro on any of the policy-making bodies," he further astounded his audience by saying. "Show me a Negro who is on the inside and I will say the Negro is in the main stream of culture." (Mr. Washington was employed by the New Deal as a specialist and adviser on Negro affairs under Harry L. Hopkins, and should know of what he speaks. He claimed in an interview following the meeting that all Negroes employed in the New Deal were mere "figureheads" and "rubber stamps".)

Judge Myles Paige, chairman of the meeting, told members that the Urban League is busily engaged in breaking down precedents in New York, and they had done so when they held this meeting in Child's Restaurant, who have been notorious for their many refusals to serve Negroes in their dining rooms.

Describing the Negro as the "Little Man Who Wasn't There," Mr. Washington emphasized that the method which majority groups use to keep minority groups down is by excluding them from the cultural streams. "The action of the government in excluding the Negro from full participation in our defense programs has weakened the Negro," he continued. But he assured his audience that the Negro himself had something to do with his exclusion for some "1200 Jews in Atlanta raised more than $1,200,000 within a year to fight anti-Semitism—but more than 12,000,000 Negroes in the country could not raise this sum to aid the N.A.A.C.P. The Chinese of Atlanta, a very small group, raised $150 per month in an effort to aid their country. This was more than 100,000 Negroes in Atlanta raised to aid themselves."

Jarring New Yorkers from their smug attitude in assuming it was only in the South that the Negro was backward in getting in the stream of culture, Mr. Washington told them that New York was not immune "for business is one of the main streams of culture—and where is business in New York? On Wall street, Broadway, and there are no Negroes there . . . The Urban League should strive to get non-racial jobs in the downtown area. It should be ready to meet new challenges."

Condemning the selection of Bill Robinson as "Mayor of Harlem," he told his audience that they should "pick out the richest Negro in the community—not rich in worldly goods but rich in thought, achievements, ability to help his people, and elect this sort of man as 'mayor,' not the best tap dancer in the world."

DEFENSE NO BOON FOR RURAL SOUTH

JAN 22 1941

(The Associated Press)

Washington, Jan. 21.—The work projects administration said today that the national defense program probably would not improve the economic condition of the rural South.

Corrington Gill, assistant WPA commissioner, said this conclusion resulted from a WPA study, "The Plantation South, 1934-37," just made public.

Recent increases in the size of Southern plantations, a shift to wage labor at the expense of tenants, and farm mechanization, have resulted, Gill said, in widespread unemployment and underemployment. The cotton and tobacco planters do not expect this situation to be offset by the national defense program, it was added.

"The problems of rural living in the South," Gill added, "all reflect the economic situation and emphasize the need for broad programs of economic and social reconstruction. Increasing attention to these problems and substantial agreement as to things which need to be done make it safe to predict that over a period of time major achievements will result."

The study showed that in the 1934-37 period plantations increased in size by 6 per cent to an average of 1014 acres, and that the average cultivated area per plantation increased 14 per cent to 477 acres. The number of resident worker families (tenants) per 1000 crop-acres decreased from 37 to 34. or 8 per cent.

NEGRO COLLEGE GRADUATES

Dear Editor: My attention has been called to a number of uncomplimentary quips emanating from Race citizens of Indianapolis where Grant W. Hawkins and, I think, two other Negro college graduates were recently certified to the police force of that city after passing the Civil Service examination by extraordinary marks. Such quips are groundless and brainless.

This writer is very well acquainted with Grant W. Hawkins, one of the gentlemen mentioned by the quips. Hawkins is one of the highest class young men in the Negro race, and ranks equal in class with any other young man in America regardless of race! He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Indiana at Bloomington and many are they who would be glad to have earned the marks he made at that most excellent university. He is personally known well liked, yea, a personal friend to the foremost leaders of the state of Indiana and none of this puffs up his head!

Unfortunately I do not know the other young men quipped about, but if they are of the Hawkins calibre they, too, are making that very necessary sacrifice to place Negro civil service men—especially peace officers—in the highest possible bracket. The time is fast approaching—it is just around the corner—when there will be laws, rules and regulations requiring all peace officers to have a college degree or its equivalent. The day of flat-footed, ignorant, criminal dodging, graft hunting policemen is far spent and the heavy hammer of doom is already hanging low above their brainless heads! Men already under civil service, and whose behavior is passable, should and will, of course, not be disturbed in any of our American cities, but future additions should be men of the highest possible calibre.

It is a blot on the Negro race in any city for the authorities to put dumb, ignorant, graft hunting Negroes on the police force. I often tell how I left a street car in Chicago one night and was instantly covered by a gang of pickpockets who soon found that I was the wrong "customer" and passed on to other passengers. There was sitting at the front of the car an over-sized, flat footed white policeman who suddenly played asleep when he saw what was going on. This was on a State street car going north. When the car reached Thirty-sixth street the culprit who attempted to pick my pocket got off. When the car reached Thirty-fifth street I saw a certain Negro policeman whom I well know. Prior to his elevation to the force he had been a precinct captain in the precinct where my business was located. I knew him well. After alighting at Thirty-fifth street and noticing the approach of the very man who had attempted to pick my pocket, I hurried to this Negro policeman and told him what had happened, pointing out to him the man who was fastly approaching, not having yet recognized me. The policeman commenced to fidget, hum and haw, and ask such foolish questions as "Are you sure this is the man?" "Could you positively identify him as the exact man?" And to say "You know what might happen if you cause the arrest of an innocent man." By this time the culprit looked up and on recognizing me broke and ran down the street and into the alley.

After telling this story over and over again, I began to hear things, and the things I heard are the things that have convinced me that Negro policemen should be men of character and intelligence who are satisfied to live within the bounds of the salary paid by the municipality employing them or to hand in their resignations.

The story just told is by no means typical of all Negro policemen of Chicago or any other city for that matter. It is one of those isolated cases; nevertheless, there are too many to be found in such isolated cases. Far too many.

Chicago has had, to my knowledge, one Negro bachelor of arts on its police force—John Wade was a graduate from Morehouse college of Atlanta, Ga. No amount of money could tempt him. His salary was sufficient for his wants and needs. His appearance and demeanor was so lofty that no one thought of attempting to approach him with anything shady. He was a soft spoken and polished man of a few words, but those few words pierced deeper than would have the bullets in his regulation revolver. He did not have to shoot, he needed only to speak.

There is in Chicago today a Negro police lieutenant who, although he may have no formal college degree, is, nevertheless, a man of education and refinement. William Middleton can speak the language of any educated man in America. He can hold a conversation on any subject from social art to science, and whoever is fortunate enough to converse with him leaves with an earful of surprises and with far more knowledge than he had before.

I conclude by saying the Race throughout America should thank God for Grant W. Hawkins and his college bred associates who have been thoughtful enough to read the handwriting on the wall and who had sense enough to heed what they read. Instead of ridiculing them our clubs, societies, Sunday schools, churches, day schools, lodges and what-nots should take up collections of pennies, nickels and dimes to buy and present them with diamond studded tars in token of our appreciation for the great sacrifice they are making to render the race at large the one service we are so sorely in need of in times like these.—William H. Huff.

First Audio-Visual Institute In Virginia Comes To Close At Virginia State College

PETERSBURG, Va.—The two-day state-wide Institute on Audio-visual Aids to Instruction which was held at Virginia State College Friday and Saturday, closed its final session with an evaluation of the discussions attended by some 400 persons who registered. It represented the first institute of its kind held in the State of Virginia, either white or Negro.

The Institute opened on Friday morning in Virginia Hall auditorium when President Gandy extended a welcome message to the group. He also presided over the morning meeting, the general theme of which was "The Importance of Audio-visual Aids to Instruction." Speakers were Mr. A. G. Richardson, assistant superintendent of Negro Schools in Virginia State Board of Education, A. G. Macklin, Virginia Curriculum counsellor for Negro High schools; W. N. Ridley, head of the Education Extension Department, Virginia State College and in charge of arrangements for the Institute.

"This institute," said Mr. Richardson, "has the endorsement and full support of the State Department of Education in the promotion of this important program."

Said Mr. Ridley in explanation for the reason for holding the institute, "....This is a phase of instruction which is the subject of a new emphasis on the part of the entire educational system of the State."

"From this institute individuals should learn about some of the materials and equipment which can be utilized in audio-visual instruction. They should get definite ideas as to the methods of utilizing these materials and equipment. In addition to this, techniques for evaluation should be developed. Ideas as to source of materials and equipment should be definite in the minds of those who attend."

The afternoon sessions were devoted to displays of materials and equipment in action. On display were motion picture machines, radios, voice recording machines and projectors of various types. Dallas A. Martin, only Negro representative for the Radio Corporation of America, was present during the two-day institute to demonstrate and exhibit RCA audio-visual equipment.

Opening the Saturday morning session, James W. Brown, acting superintendent of audio-visual education in the State, reviewed the background and development of this particular field of education in the State of Virginia. In expounding the policy of the State Department of Education in regard the expanding and direction of growth that audio-visual education should take in the school system. Mr. Brown said that the State had no intentions of dictating a strict policy or control but that the teacher would be left completely free to arrange and plan a program that would be best suited to the individual needs of the school.

Other speakers who appeared on the Saturday program were Mrs. W. A. Sykes. Jeannes supervisor, Halifax County; T. C. Erwin, principal, Dunbar Elementary School, Newport News; C. M. Colson, principal, D. Webster Davis Laboratory High School, Virginia State College; and Dr. John M. Hunter, director of the Graduate Division at the College.

In the evaluation of the institute which came at the closing session, those attending expressed a desire to continue the institute as an annual event. and to set up in addition to his annual meeing sections on audio-visual education in the various district teachers' meeting throughout the State.

Another proposal which gained great support among those attending was a suggestion for setting up a short course at the college for the training of boys and girls from the various schools throughout the State who would operate the equipment upon returning to their respective schools. Such a course should not be longer than a week it was pointed out.

It was further suggested that the annual state-wide meeting be held during the regular session of the school year.

WALTER CHIVERS SAYS:

Life-Related Teaching

By WALTER R. CHIVERS

I HAVE VISITED the Fort Valley State Teachers College twice in recent weeks. The atmosphere of the place is surcharged with the personality of a man whom I honored—the late Henry A. Hunt. He was a simple man, wise, determined and honest. I took advantage of every opportunity to spend a while listening to him talk. He was worth listening to for he had a philosophy of life and education of Negro youth. I should say Negro people, which were one and the same.

Often Mr. Hunt told me that his only interest in education was to develop a Community school which would successfully relate teaching to the everyday living of the ten thousands of Negroes dwelling in the Black Belt counties contiguous to Peach County. This was his fetish and in it dwelt his spirit. An illustration of what I am saying is the story of the useful buildings on the campus. These buildings were designed by Henry Hunt, College president. He supervised their construction. They were built by students of the institution. On this campus there stands material symbols of life-related teaching. The builders of these buildings are more useful citizens and feel that they are necessary citizens because they have constructed something concrete.

SKILLFULLY GUIDED

Inside of these buildings Negro youth were taught how to live in an environment that offers little stimulant and much to discourage them. They were skillfully guided by a teacher who knew well the disadvantages of being a Negro and whose creative brain worked increasingly at finding ways in which these disadvantages might be overcome.

When Mr. Hunt's work was brought to its end, I was much concerned about his successor. There is a whole flock of preachers of the gospel of life-related teaching for Negro youth but to find one to whom his preachings are more than an eloquent delivery of smoothly interwoven metaphors, hyperboles and similes is a gigantic task.

It is the exceptional educator who has a philosophy of life and education that are such a part of him until his life cannot unfold normally unless his educational ideas become living units. So I was well pleased when I knew that Dr. Horace Mann Bond would be Henry Hunt's successor—my friend and counsellor's place had been wisely filled.

CAREER OF INTEREST

Dr. Bond's career has interested me for a number of years. I have watched him grow steadily into one of America's foremost educational philosophers. To know him is to believe that he pursued the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in education in order to get the mental discipline necessary for a realistic approach to the problems of Negro education-especially that of underprivileged rural Negroes.

When I first met Dr. Bond he was dean of Dillard University in New Orleans. Two things about him impressed me at that moment. First he related with enthusiasm the recent experiences he had had working in the fields of Southern Lotuisiana side by side with "peasant" Negro farmers in order to really understand their problems. A college dean with a Ph. D. who could work in overalls gained by lasting admiration.

Then I was fascinated at the unusual display of self-discipline Dr. Bond displayed by doing successfully three things at one time. For instance he conferred with students, conversed with me and used each lapse in this activity to continue typing what I believe was the History of Negro Education in Alabama.

HAS PROVEN RIGHT

President Bond has proven then his right to succeed the late Henry Hunt. He has not only continued the experiment in life-related teaching but has used his scientific training to refine the work which he inherited and to graft on to the base those improvements which his serious and extended field studies of rural education among Negroes have proven wise and useful.

Today Fort Valley Teachers College stands as a model of practical, sane and useful training for rural teachers. Its popularity abroad pointment as advisor on life-related teaching of Negroes given to President Bond. Convincing evidence of what Fort Valley Teachers College means to the Negro youth of Georgia is the recent record enrollment of nearly one thousand students in the first session of the 1941 summer school.

President Bond was not on the campus during a recent visit. However, one would never even suspect his absence because of the enthusiasm, sincerity, hustle and gracious hospitality of his dynamic, well trained faculty. The fine sense of scholarship fully seasoned with practical life-values possessed by President Bond has penetrated the innermost fibres of his faculty.

Here is life-related teaching in action. It is a most inspiring sight. It is led by an administrator and teacher who has a big mind, big heart, a sense of humor, a merged philosophy of education and life and an unusual capacity, for working at practical things, which is infectious. Everybody at this college works with an enthusiasm that is refreshing.

Going To College?

In hundreds of Alabama homes the question is now being asked whether the son or daughter shall go to college, and if so, where. The question has many ramifications. Shall a public school be chosen, or one supported privately? Shall it be co-educational? Shall it be a church-connected school?

Alabama parents and students cannot answer that question best without considering what the state itself offers. There are 27 institutions in Alabama which offer education on the college level. Most of them give degrees. Nineteen of these institutions are for white students, eight for Negroes.

Among these 27 institutions, a wide variety of courses can be obtained. The professions, the arts, the sciences, belles lettres, trades—all are represented. Except for graduate work and highly specialized courses, there is not much need for a student to go outside of Alabama to get what he wants. And there are many advantages in a student's being more apt to be closely linked to the life he close home, in an environment not too unfa- has known and in most cases may be familiar, and in pursuing studies that are pected to know when college days are over.

The American people cannot appreciably advance their cultural gains until they have secured for all their groups an equal opportunity for learning, Dr. James S. Tippett, well-known educator of Chapel Hill, N. C., said this morning, in an address opening the second day of the annual Curriculum Conference at Peabody College.

"Our underprivileged groups, whether racial or regional, must share in our educational programs," Dr. Tippett declared. He spoke on the general theme, "Advancing America's Cultural Gains," to about 500 students, educators and visitors gathered on the lawn of Peabody College.

Dr. H. C. Nixon of the Institute of Research and Training in the Social Sciences, Vanderbilt University, was the other featured speaker at this morning's general meeting.

"In our defense program we are becoming culture conscious. We did not do this in the last war. We can not beat Hitler with ignorance," he warned, "as the Germans are fighting with a highly educated army."

Defense calls for a large number of men skilled in various forms of labor, he said. In order to meet this need we will have an opportunity to remedy the defect in educational facilities for skilled laborers, he predicted.

"We are learning national teamwork, and I call this a cultural gain," Dr. Nixon declared.

"The Nazis have a vision and a version of tomorrow, have we?" he asked. "We must be for something if we are going to fight against something."

Dr. Nixon said, "We can not meet our problems by cultural and intellectual appeasement." He added. "Our dynamic defense program must include dynamic thinking as well as dynamic military action."

Dr. C. C. Sherrod, president of Eastern State Teachers College, Johnson City, Tenn., presided over the morning meeting.

The afternoon meeting of the conference was scheduled to be divided into five discussion groups. Each group has a chairman and a discussion leader. These groups and leaders were announced as follows:

"The Contribution of the Arts to National Solidarity," chairman, J. J. Ray, associate professor of art education and psychology, Peabody College, and discussion leader, John R. Ludington, associate professor of industrial arts education, North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering.

"Library Services in a Critical Period," chairman, A. F. Kuhlman, professor of library science, Peabody, and leader, Mary U. Rothrock, supervisor of library and visual education service, TVA.

"Occupational Training for Industrial Needs," chairman, H. C. Brearley, professor of educational sociology, Peabody, and leader, G. E. Freeman, director of vocational education, Tennessee Department of Education; "Mass Communication in a Time of Crisis: Press, Radio and Motion Picture," chairman, Paul L. Boynton, professor of psychology, Peabody, and leader, I. Keith Tyler, director, evaluation of broadcasting, Ohio State University.

The final discussion group was announced as "Community Coordination for Advancing America's Gains." Chairman, J. E. Brewton, associate director, Division of Surveys and Field Studies, Peabody, and leader, Nicholas Mitchell, Furman University.

A dinner meeting is scheduled for 6:30 o'clock tonight in the Social-Religious Building. Andrew D. Holt, executive secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee Education Association, will serve as toastmaster, and Will R. Manier, Jr., Nashville attorney, will be the principal speaker. Choral music will be presented by a group under the direction of Irving Wolfe, professor of music at Peabody.

Speakers for tomorrow morning's session, the last of the conference, will include, Frederick H. Blair, executive secretary of the Education committee, Council on National Defense, New York City; William H. Kilpatrick, Teachers College, Columbia University, and J. R. Whitaker, professor of Geography, Peabody College. Frazer Banks, assistant superintendent of schools, Birmingham, Ala., will serve as chairman of this final session.

WINGS OVER JORDAN

Education Seen As Solvent To Race's Problems Of Life

By I. A. DERBIGNY

Mr. Settle and friends of the radio audience: I address you today on the subject "Education and the Problems of Life."

There was once a time when one of the great tasks before the Negro people was to prove that they could be educated, that they could master the difficult learnings set forth in the schools, colleges and universities of the day.

I am thankful to Almighty God that today this emphasis is no longer urgent. The Negro has demonstrated his capability for achieving distinction in the most difficult intellectual, technical and cultural fields. I have merely to mention the contributions of such Negro scholars as W. E. B. Dubois and James Weldon Johnson in literature, of Monroe Work and Charles S. Johnson in the social studies; of E. E. Just and Percy Julian in scientific fields; of Marian Anderson and Roland Hayes in music to bring to your minds scores of others equally worthy and illustrious and too numerous to mention.

This demonstration of capability is still going on at a rapid rate and younger and newer scholars of promise are arising. While this is as it should be, the real question today, however, is not "Can the Negro be educated, but what contributions will the educated Negro make toward the solution of his own problems?"

MAKING FINE BEGINNING

I quite realize that scholarship like the quality of mercy, is not strained, yet the records of history show that no race or people have advanced far without addressing themselves consumately and with all of their intelligence and skill to the solution of their own problems. I am happy to say that the Negro race is making a fine beginning in this.

The immortal Booker T. Washington, perhaps as no other man, realized this when he saw the Negro race as a great human resource capable of dignified labor and useful citizenship. "We shall prosper in proportion as we learn to dignify and glorify labor and put brains and skill into the common occupations of life."

The Negro race today is confronted with many problems worthy of all of its scholarly endeavor, technical skill, social engineering and common semi-skilled, and even unskilled areas. And I venture to say that this opportunity will not come in the full until organized labor is led by our own efforts to recognize the Negro as the true worker that he is and to share the work privilege with him accordingly.

Dr. Derbigny, who has held the position as dean of Tuskegee Institute for five years, received his A. B. degree, summa cum laude, from Talladega College, A. M. from Cornell University and Ph. D., from Columbia University. More recently he has received the M. A. degree in Higher Education from the University of Minnesota.

While at Columbia he was elected to Sigma Xi and Lambda Upsilon honorary research societies, and is a member of the American Association of School Administrators and N. E. A. He has also contributed widely to scientific and educational journals.

"Wings Over Jordan" is a feature of CBS, heard every Sunday at 10.30 a. m., EDT, and at 5.45 p. m., EDT, on weekdays. The speaker for Sunday, August 10, is Clarence W. Griggs, executive secretary of the George W. Carver Welfare League, Schectady, N. Y.

LARGER CITIZENSHIP

3. The problem of citizenship—Though some progress in this respect has been made, the Negro as a whole along with many persons of the white race is still disfranchised and to a large degree unable to make his contribution as a citizen to the greatest of all democracies. As long as this is allowed to go on, just so long will American democracy be strangled as the great civilizing force it is really destined to become.

These are real problems and although their solution is only in part in the hands of the Negro, the true worth of the education which Negroes are receiving increasingly today will be estimated by the efforts which they will make to solve these and other problems and to keep the faith with those hallowed ones who laid the foundation for this effort in those days when the way was dark.

NEGRO EDUCATION AND WHITE ADMINISTRATION

In recent years there has been a growing sentiment against white men as heads of Negro institutions. In the days immediately following the abolition of slavery there were white men in America who were truly imbued with the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to the cause of Negro education. They had a vision of the future. They felt that mere emancipation from the shackles of physical bondage was not enough. They, therefore, consecrated themselves to the difficult task of bearing the light of learning to a people whom slavery had kept in ignorance and darkness.

Thus men like Gen. Howard, Gen. Armstrong and Gen. Fisk worked indefatigably and without hope of material reward for the enlightenment of the Negro people. Those men and a few others of the same stamp died long ago. The zeal, the earnestness which fired their souls has never been caught by the succeeding generations of white folk. With rare exceptions most white men who preside over Negro schools lack three essential qualities for the position they now hold. These qualities are: academic competence, intellectual honesty, and moral courage.

It is an incontrovertible fact that white men of unquestioned ability are not attracted to Negro schools. This is understandable. They play for higher stakes. It is crystal clear that the Negro schools whose trustee boards still cling to the post-Civil-War administrative pattern get a very mediocre caliber of white men at the helm. This of course is anachronism. When you consider that for every white president of a Negro college or university there are ten Negroes superior in intellect and training—hence better qualified for the job, you wonder why so incongruous a situation is allowed to remain uncorrected.

The old bugaboo that only white men can get big money for the higher education of Negroes has been destroyed. Under Negro administration, Howard, Atlanta, Dillard and Morgan are receiving today substantially more money than they had ever hoped to receive under previous white administration. As a matter of fact the poorest Negro colleges and universities are those administered by white men whose obvious lack of sympathy renders ineffective their appeal to philanthropists and big foundations for financial support.

A point that must not be overlooked is that the employment of competent Negroes in responsible administrative positions provides an invaluable source of inspiration to the young men of the race whose opportunities at best are limited by race prejudice and discrimination.

If Negro education is to fulfill its mission, it must be intrusted to the hands of qualified black men who are interested in the promotion of the economic, social and intellectual emancipation of their people.

COLLEGES CAN SUPPLY SKILLED LABOR

C. C. Spaulding Expresses His Belief in Idea

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., (ANP)—"I am a firm believer in the teachings of Booker T. Washington. Fifty years ago, Dr. Washington visualized conditions that are very definitely facing the Negro today. To my way of thinking, the soundness of his doctrine is more apparent today than it was 50 years ago," declared C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company and president-emeritus of the National Negro Business League, last Tuesday night as main speaker in the current lecture series celebrating the 75th anniversary of Lincoln University.

In this way did the well known business leader disagree on the same platform and before a similar audience with statements made a few weeks ago in this lecture series by Dr. Abram Harris, noted economist of Howard University. At that time Dr. Harris called Washington's theory of industrial education "outmoded" and "not suited to racial needs," at the same time outlining a different system of industrial education for use in Negro schools.

Calls No Names

Without mentioning the economist by name Mr. Spaulding said, "I frankly admit that I probably am at variance with some of our present day schools of thought that advocate scrapping the socalled 19th century theory of Booker T. Washington. "Throughout the country there are many Negroes—successful Negroes— who were schooled in institutions founded upon these ideas and who have developed into successful, independent, influential citizens in their respective communities.

"It is possibly true that the facilities of many of our technical schools do not measure up in every respect to modern requirements. Let us bear in mind, however, that this condition is not necessary an indictment against the schools themselves, but rather the result of a baised conception of relative standards as they affect various racial groups.

Skilled Labor Needed

"I am still old fashioned enough to believe in the dignity and glorification of labor—in clean hearts and soiled hands. In the matter of education, it is my firm belief that unusual emphasis should be placed on the training of youth to compete in the new order of affairs as they affect the nation. We are passing through a period when skilled labor is at a premium—a time when our technical schools and land grant colleges are in position to render their greatest service.

"The day is at hand when our youth should be taught the vital necessity of knowing how to do something with their hands. During these times when preparedness is the dominant idea in national thinking, skilled labor, regardless of racial identity will find its place."

Mr. Spaulding said he considered it "unfortunate" that in the past "well-meaning individuals devoted their efforts to the cultural development of the Negro at the expense of a more practical type of training" and said he believed today's youth were changing this idea.

Reviews Race's Status

Speaking of the problems confronting Negro businesses, he said they have been laboring under the handicaps of proper appreciation on the part of the public and the public's failure to lend consistent support. This he blamed on the Negro's peculiar status under the American system along with the kind of teaching he has received.

"Inefficiency, irregularities and lack of confidence have long exacted their toll from Negro business in general, yet our businesses have lived and will continue to advance." Mr. Spaulding asserted. "In past years strenuous efforts were made by those interested in the Negro's development to improve many phases of Negro life, but little encouragement was given him along the lines of developing and organizing business enterprises, or the cultivation of commercial talents that would enable him to learn a livelihood in these fields.

"Today we have a different situation in that many of our schools and colleges have established commercial departments property equipped for the development and training of individuals in this field.

U. S. SCHOOL AID IS TERMED NEED

Southern States Below National Average Group Concludes

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 17—(AP)—Federal aid is "an inevitable necessity" in providing "adequate" school programs in Southern and border states, in the view of educational leaders attending a recent conference on state and local financing at Daytona Beach, Fla., Dr. R. L. Johns, of the Alabama Department of Education, said Tuesday.

Dr. Johns, who served as chairman of the conference during its two-week deliberations, made public a statement prepared by the group which he said "made an exhaustive analysis of the inequalities in educational opportunities in these states and of the nature of the causes contributing to these inequalities."

"In general," the educators from 12 Southern and border states concluded, "it was found that these states ranked well below the national averages and the financial effort expended under the prevailing plans used in these states. The inequalities are further accentuated when the whole problem of Negro education is considered.

"The lack of taxpaying ability is the chief handicap that Southern states face in providing school facilities. Even though some Southern states have modernized their tax structures and adopted the best techniques for apportioning state funds to local units, many of the inequalities still exist because their limited economic ability prohibits an adequate financial program. The only remedy to this situation is the provision of additional funds by the federal government."

On the committee with Dr. Johns were George Hulme, DeKalb County, Alabama, superintendent of education; Crawford Greene, of the Arkansas State Department; T. N. Morgan, of the Florida Department; J. S. Rickards, secretary of the Florida Education Association; P. S. Shaw, St. Cloud, Fla.; G. L. Evans, of the Kentucky Department of Public Instruction; John M. Foote, of the Louisiana Department; J. E. Pitcher, Hindon, La.; A. A. Roebuck, Brandon, Miss.; Elmer Petree, Pawhuskee, Okla.; Roy Garrett, South Carolina Department; J. E. Whatley, Greenville, S. C.; A. D. Holt, Nashville, Tenn.; Guy C. West, Austin, Tex.; Paul Knox, North Augusta, S. C.

Consultants were Dr. Howard A. Dawson, director of rural school service of the National Education Association, and Timon Covert, specialist in school finance, U. S. Office of Education.

BILL BEFORE CONGRESS WOULD HELP SCHOOLS

$300,000,000 Asked in Measure Proposed By Senators Harrison and Thomas

UNIVERSITY—Dr. H. C. Pannell, newly-elected president of the Alabama Education Association, urged the people of Alabama to give their "wholehearted" support to the $300,000,000 General Education bill now before congress in a statement at the University of Alabama.

The bill, known as Senate Bill 1313, introduced last month by Senators Harrison of Mississippi and Thomas of Utah, would provide an annual appropriation of $300,000,000 to be used for the betterment of educational facilities in needy states.

In pointing out some of the ways Alabama would be benefited, Dr. Pannell said the bill would "provide school facilities for children recently removed to areas of defense activities, aiding towns like Childersburg, Talladega, Sylacauga, Muscle Shoals, Montgomery, Mobile, Anniston and Gadsden."

Aid for Negro Schools

The bill would also provide financial support of schools for Negroes in states which maintain separate schools for them, Dr. Pannell continued. This includes Alabama and 16 other states. Separate schools for Negroes were made legally imperative by recent federal court decisions interpreting the fourteenth amendment of the U. S. constitution, as affecting equal rights to educational opportunities.

The annual appropriation of $300,000,000, it is maintained, would do a great deal toward equalizing elementary and secondary school opportunities among and within states, raising Alabama's standards.

Other sections of the bill provide for the education of children of migratory workers and children of federal employees residing on federal reservations and properties.

Control in State's Hands

According to this bill, the control of education will be left in the hands of the state and not the federal government, Dr. Pannell explained.

"The A.E.A. is taking steps to call this bill to the attention of our public as a means of informing the people of their educational needs and also to urge their support by resolution and in other ways," Dr. Pannell said.

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

THE END OF AN ERA

THIRTY-FIVE YAARS AGO when great fortunes were being made through the development of the natural resources and transportation systems of this country, Negro educational institutions were almost entirely dependent upon the good will of the very wealthy for money to be used in the expansion of their work. The late Dr. Booker T. Washington first sold the idea of philanthropic contributions to this work to men like Andrew Carnegie and Julius Rosenwald. Through contributions from rich individuals and educational foundations established by such men as John D. Rockefeller—Fisk, Hampton and Tuskegee were able to expand their work. The denominational schools and educational boards of these denominations also received large contributions from these philanthropists.

But this type of support has been fast drying up the past decade and came to an end recently with the death of Arthur Curtis James, railroad industrialist, by whose will filed in New York last week many educational and charitable organizations benefitted. Though he inherited great wealth, the late society to spend this wealth wisely and for society to send this wealth wisely and for the benefit of the masses.

In the past few years, the wealthy have been thinking so much of the taxes they have to pay that they feel that in paying these taxes they have discharged their obligation to society. Mr. James' death marks the end of the era of philanthropy in education and because of this changed attitude on the part of the rich, it is all the more necessary that the Negro be given a fairer share of tax monies used to support both public schools and institutions of higher learning.

Survey Shows Drop In School Enrollment

Aaron Brown's Study Discloses Rural Problem

(By Associated Negro Press)

A recent survey into grade mortality in Negro schools by Aaron Brown, member of the department of rural education of Fort Valley State college, reveals that the decrease in enrollment and attendance of Negroes in schools has increased over a period of two years. The foremost problem of Negro education on the elementary school level in Georgia is that of attendance and enrollment.

Upon examining the 1938 biennial report of the state department of education, it showed that out of a possible 293,743 Negro boys and girls, only 261,211 were enrolled in schools, leaving 32,532 children of school age outside of elementary institutions of learning. The 1940 report, which listed 262,094 children enrolled, revealed a decrease of some 9,000 children over the two year period.

Interesting is the fact that although population figures indicate more males than females, there are more girls in Negro elementary schools than boys. In 1938 the number of boys totaled 125,849 while the figure for the girls was set at 135,362. In 1940, there were 122,922 boys to the 129,102 girls. This shows a difference in the two years of over 10,000 for 1938 and over 7,000 for 1940.

Further study of the 1938 and 1940 reports reveal that while 95,081 Negro boys and girls of 34 percent of the total school population were enrolled in the first grade only 13,647 or 4 percent were enrolled in the 7th grade, in 1938, while 1940 saw 85,000 of 252,094 children or 34 percent in the first grade and noted that although the same proporations exist between grades, there is a slight total decrease in grade mortality.

Mr. Brown made the conculsion that this decrease in school enrollment and attendance was caused by the removal of children from school to do agricultural labor in fields, or to jobs as messenger boys or oddjobbers around stores, theatres, offices, and other places; in private homes as maids and domestic workers, nurses and laundresses. Some of them can be found at home caring for younger children of their families.

Examination of curves of attendances reveal that most absences occur in January, December and April, the causes after investigation proving to be in their order of frequency, illness, work and weather.

WALTER CHIVERS SAYS:

College-Student Teacher Relations

OCT 12 1941

I LIKE to nold "bull sessions" with my co-worker and former student Professor Frank Forbes. It is not the easiest thing to get him to talk at length. For this reason he is tagged with the nickname of "Tombstone". Because, I do find serious conversations with him on his favorite topic "boys to be fertile".

I have developed techniques of provoking him into unfolding his philosophy on student-teacher relationships. This man's steady growth and maturity in his chosen fields of physical education and "friend of youth" have been most gratifying for a former teacher to watch.

SHOULD BE CAREFUL

The kernel of Professor Forbe's philosophy of student-teacher relationships is that a teacher should be exceedingly careful lest his final judgments of students personalities and capacities are based on too inadequate knowledge of personal and environmental histories and, therefore, superficial. Every teacher when wondering about a student's problems should ask himself, "Why did this particular person act in this particular manner?"

This is a fundamental question and no college teacher can be of the best service to students, who it is his duty to advise, unless he attempts to answer this question in reference to each one of his charges. The college teaching profession will be almost completely revolutionized once teachesrs comprehend and act upon this philosophy.

Need I repeat that my specific interest is in Negro Youth? In common with the vast majority of students now in college they were born into a world of chaos. They have grown up in an era of chaos. They know nothing of the traditional normal times that the generation born before World War 1 or for that matter the abnormal prosperity immediately after the War, which the older generation talks about so romantically and sentimentally. The relative values of the Old Republican Party and the Democratic Party of Civil War background are only legends to them. They were born and live in a world of political confusion and instability.

A BROKEN MORALE

These youth are the children of parents suffering from the disorganizing influences of a depression which has taken its vengance out on them. Unemployment, underemployment, overworked mothers have contributed to a broken morale which is characteristic of Negro families today.

These Negro Youth are children of a money economy in an era when it is increasingly difficult for them or their parents to get money. They not only need money but more money than the majority of their parents ever hoped to have over an extended period. Negro youth under this situation must, if they are to prepare themselves for a place in the world, have increasing sums of money at their disposal for the cost of education is ever going up. They even have to buy most of their recreation.

The impact of these social forces is particularly severe and damaging when it strikes Negro college, professional or technical students or those with the sort of ambitions these schools would satisfy. Being young and immatured these forces are bound to produce personality problems in them. Consequently they need intelligent, sympathetic assistance from matured, emotionally-balanced teachers with rich experiences.

FULL-TIME OCCUPATION

College teaching, in any instance, is a full time occupation in any institution. But in Negro colleges it demands all of himself that a teacher can give because of the great size of the task and the lack of resources with which to work. There can be no time for unrelated avocations.

I have endeavored to give a brief outline of the complexity of the lives of each of these youth. It is easy to realize then that they need individual treatment by persons whose lives are devoted to training youth and whose fitness is demonstrated by the confidence they inspire in youth.

I started out discussing Professor Forbes' philosophy of teacher-student relations. This is his philosophy with elaborations by me. He acts upon his philosophy and consequently is a most valuable teacher and friend of youth. His boys believe in him and he is devoted to their cause.

I realize more and more what the late President John Hope meant when he insisted that he was interested in a small college and teachers whose great love was teaching youth.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Too Few Support Our Schools

The personal satisfaction which many felt when a school, a public property, was used to shelter the persons made homeless by the recent tornado was without foundation in most cases. The truth is that few Kansas Citians support the schools.

The tax set up for Missouri schools divides their income between real and personal property. Owners of real property, homes, farms and the like, pay taxes which the schools share. But the vast majority of citizens do not own real property. Therefore, unless they are assessed for personal property, they pay nothing toward the schools. All their satisfaction over the use for humanitarian purposes of a building which is in part theirs is pure self-praise.

Education is like food, a necessity worth all it costs. A few months ago when the responsibility for defense training was assigned to the school system by the federal government, we Negroes demanded that we be admitted to the training classes. We based our demand upon the fact that schools were the public's of which we are a part. Right in theory, but not nearly so tenable in fact.

Education plays too large a part in making a living for its cost to be avoided by anybody. The schools belong to us only if we contribute to their support. Maybe the citizen is so self-sufficient that he does not care whether there are police or not, or lights or sewers, and feels no need to pay taxes to pay for those public services. But he cannot educate himself. The schooling he wants and must get—if he measures up—he should pay for and pay willingly.

Instead of the many having ground for satisfaction that a school building sheltered the homeless, they should have felt shame that so great a service was without any help from them. They had no part in it wherever they paid no tax. A year or so ago the reliefers startled this nation with their declaration that they were entitled to a living, whether they earned it or not. Scorn for that hoboism can be passed on. Non-supporters of schools follow a course equally indefensible.

Education Body Gives $15,000 For Study

Fifteen thousand dollars has been voted to the South Carolina education department by the General Education board, headquarters in New York, for a study of education, according to a telegram received yesterday by Dr. James H. Hope, state superintendent education, from the secretary of the general education board.

The money is to be used in carrying on the study of certification of teachers, a matter that has been much before the education department and the state legislature for the past several months.

For that study, the legislature appropriated $1,000; the state education association, $2,000; the Palmetto (Negro) Teachers association, $500. To these contributions there will now be added the $15,000 from the general board. The additional contribution will be sufficient to complete the study.

AFRO-AMERICAN

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Dedication of a $50,000 chapel and little theatre, an $8,500 organ, presentation of a new hymn composed by Nathaniel Dett for the occasion and the awarding of an honorary degree to Mrs. Henry Pfeiffer featured a three-day week-end celebration at Bennett College for Women here.

Donor of five of its major buildings, costing more than $700,000, New York's Mrs. Pfeiffer was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, at the annual Founders' Day exercises on Friday. Dr. David D. Jones has been president of the college for 16 years.

Dr. Herbert J. Burgstahler, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, delivered the Founders Day address. Some 250 distinguished women and visiting educators were present.

Dedication Service

Dr. William H. Powers, dean of Syracuse University, delivered the sermon for the dedicatory service, which was conducted by Dr. E. C. Jackson, president of the Bennett College board of trustees. Dr. Matthew W. Dogan, head of Wiley College, read the call of worship and Dr. Willis J. King, president of Gammon Theological Seminary and Dr. Lafayette M. Harris, head of Philander Smith College, gave the scripture readings.

Greetings to Bennett College were brought during the course of the service by Mrs. F. C. Reynolds, white, of Baltimore, Md., representing the Woman's Division of Christian Service and by Dr. M. S. Davage of Nashville, Tenn., who spoke on behalf of sister schools and colleges.

Dr. Thomas F. Holgate of Evanston, Ill., dean emeritus of Northwestern University and treasurer of the Bennett board of trustees, also expressed greetings from the Board of Education of the Methodist Church.

Bishops Attend

Earlier in the day, Bishop Robert E. Jones of Columbus, Ohio, preached the sermon at the morning service in the chapel. Speakers at the religious observance were Bishop Alexander P. Shaw of Baltimore, Md., and Bishop Lorenzo H. King of Atlanta.

Chicago Scene Of Meeting Of College Heads

Congressman Mitchell Among List of Speakers

NOV 1 5 1941

CHICAGO, Ill.—The presidents of Negro land-grant colleges will convene in Chicago for their nineteenth annual meeting on November 11, 12, and 13 at the Wabash Avenue YMCA. Sessions will be open to the public.

These 23 institutions of higher learning are called "land-grant" colleges because they are supported in part from grants of land given to the several states by Act of the U. S. Congress in 1862. They emphasize instruction in agriculture, mechanic arts, and home economics.

Seventeen land-grant colleges for Negroes exist in 17 different states; the other six member institutions being colleges which are not land-grant in the legal sense, but whose programs of study are land-grant in nature.

The president of the Association, Dr. F. G. Clark of Southern Unversity, has announced a program for the meeting which includes contributions from National leaders, educational and otherwise.

Included in the program will be a report of recent studies on federal aid for cooperative agricultural extension work by Professor Doxey Wilkerson of Howard University who is also author of a staff study on Negro education for President Roosevelt's advisory committee on education. The elimination of any existing unfair distribution of federal funds in this area has long been a project on which the Association has worked and this contribution is designed to further progress along this line.

TO HEAR FEPC MEMBER

Alderman Earl Dickerson of Chicago, who is now a member of President Roosevelt's Committee on Fair Employment Practices, is expected to speak to the Association on this work and what these colleges may do in a helpful way.

Dr. W. E. DuBois, outstanding scholar and professor of Sociology at Atlanta University, will put before the conference certain needs for a well planned and organized cooperative effort in lifting the economic level of Negro people generally.

A banquet session is scheduled for Wednesday evening, November 12, at which time Congressman Arthur Mitchell will address the group and many other distinguished Chicagoans are expected to be present.

OFFICERS OF ASSOCIATION

NOV 1 5 1941

Other colleges and their presidents who are expected to be present are: President J. F. Drake, Alabama A. and M. College; President J. B. Watson, Arkansas State College; President R. S. Grossley, Delaware State College; President J. R. E. Lee, Florida A. and M. College; President B. F. Hubert, Georgia State College; President R. S. Grigsby, Princess Anne College; President William H. Bell, Alcorn A. and M. College; President F. D. Bluford, A. and T. College; President G. L. Harrison. Langston University; President M. F. Whittaker, S. C. State College; President W. R. Banks, Prairie View State College; President John W. Davis, West Virginia State College; associate members: President F. D. Patterson Tuskegee Institute; President Mordecai Johnson, Howard University; President H. M. Bond Fort Valley School; President R. R. Wright, Jr., Wilberforce University and President Malcolm W. MacLean of Hampton Institute.

Negro Meet Under Way

Librarians Gather At J. C. Smith

Bringing together some of the South's leading library authorities, the Eighth Annual meeting of the North Carolina Negro Library Conference got underway at noon today as over 100 members, delegates and officials registered in the Carnegie Library at Johnson C. Smith University.

Mrs. Mollie H. Lee, head of the Richard B. Harrison Public Library staff at Raleigh, is the organizer and founder of the association. J E. Bowen Jr., Educational Advisor of the CCC at Mt. Gilead, N. C., is president.

After a brief business session at 3 P. M., the conference will begin formally at 5 P. M. with exercises in the auditorium of Biddle Memorial Hall. The program for the afternoon follows: Invocation by Henry M. L. James, librarian at the State Teachers' College, Fayetteville; welcome address, Dr. H. L. McCrorey, president of Johnson C. Smith University; response, J E. Brown Jr.; greetings on behalf of the South Carolina Negro Library Association, Mrs. Charliese P. Sheffield of State A. & M. College Library, Orangeburg, S. C.; a selection by the Verse Speaking Choir; introduction of the speaker, Mrs. Mollie H. Lee, Raleigh; address: "Negro America Faces the Future," Dr. Ira De A. Reid, professor of sociology at Atlanta University.

Dr. Eliza Atkins Gleason, director of the School of Library Science of Atlanta University, who is recognized as one of America's leading library scientists, will be the principal speaker at a conference dinner which will be held tonight at 8:30 P. M. in the University's refectory. Dr. Gleason's subject will be: "Negro Librarians Face the Future." Greetings will be extended by Dr. M. J. McCrorey, Counselor of Women at the University.

The conference will adjourn at 11 P. M. for a theater party at the Grand Theater. Hosts for the affair are the librarians of Second Ward High School, West Charlotte High School, and the Brevard Street branch of the Charlotte Public Library. Sessions will continue tomorrow morning.

Broadcast To End Education Week

American Education Week observance will close in Montgomery with a radio program scheduled for 11:30 a.m. today to be broadcast over the combined facilities of both the local radio stations.

The program will be of "unusual interest," it is stated by Dr. Clarence M. Dannelly, superintendent of the Montgomery Public Schools, who himself appears as the speaker, because of the negro spirituals which will be sung by the 250 negro teachers of the system. Dr. Dannelly said the excellence of this singing was unsurpassed by any professional group he had been privileged to hear and urged the public to enjoy the program. His address is to be on "The Teacher in Relation to Democracy."

The week has been full of programs within the schools, before civic clubs, and daily radio broadcasts. On Friday three civic clubs had demonstrations of classroom work by pupils.

The Civitan Club was visited by a sixth grade group from Highland Avenue School, who presented a feature of their current class work under the title of "American Defense." Mrs. Virginia Parrish Kelly, teacher, appeared with the class and Dr. Dannelly spoke briefly on the modern program of the schools.

Mrs. Anna Rutland, teacher, and a group of her fifth grade pupils from the Decatur Street School appeared before the Lions Club, with Mrs. Norma Smith Bristow, supervisor of elementary schools, explaining the procedures employed.

A second grade group from the Highland Avenue School, Mrs. Elizabeth McFaden, teacher, visited the Optimist Club, in an answer to the question "Can You Read?" Derwood L. Taylor, principal of the Cloverdale School, was the guest speaker on modern school work.

Friday was generally observed as Visiting Day in the negro schools of the system, according to plans worked out by the negro principals under the chairmanship of Ruth Vines, principal of the Carver School.

An Urgent Need

NEWS REPORTS TELL OF plans for conducting a class in sociology dealing with family life at the University of Tennessee. These classes to be held on Tuesday evening of each week will be designed to solve marriage problems, family reorganization and other equally important phases of family life.

The one regrettable phase of the situation as thoughtful readers note this progressive movement in behalf of our white citizens is that a similar class under equally as capable a leader as Dr. W. E. Cole, who will head the UT class, could be conducted for members of the Negro racial group.

If anything there is that's needed more than any other one thing, especially as concerns the Negro racial group, it is downright study of those problems as they effect the family life, with a view of correcting the altogether alarming conditions that serve to impede the race's progress.

The need of a seasoned, earnest, non-superficial sociologist to teach a class of Negro family group members, instead of some egotistic upstart, is very much in evidence. When such a teacher is available, there will certainly be an attendance, and conditions will improve.

REDISTRICT BILL PASSED IN HOUSE

3 Proposed Amendments Are Rejected—Committees to Steer Legislation

NASHVILLE, Feb. 10 (AP).—The administration's bill to redistrict the state for a tenth congressman was passed 75 to 20 by the house of representatives today without alteration after three proposed amendments were rejected.

The lower chamber also approved, 66 to 8, a bill to authorize a $1,000,000 state bond issue for Gov. Cooper to acquire lands to be leased to the government for national defense purposes. Opponents of the bill argued it gave "blanket" powers to the governor.

Both measures were shoved through in a Monday afternoon meeting, the first of the Seventy-second assembly, after administration forces in both houses had passed over weak opposition resolutions to place all bills in the hands of steering committees to smooth the path to sine die adjournment next Saturday.

The proposed changes in the redistricting bill, tabled one by one on motions of Floor Leader J. B. Ragon, Jr., would have retained Scott and Morgan counties in the Second district, rather than move them to the Fourth; placed Giles (now in the Sixth) in the Seventh rather than the Fifth, and attached McMinn and Monroe (now in the Second) to the Third district.

Ragon Supports Measure

Ragon, in arguing against the amendments, said the districts as suggested by the governor were "fair and equitable," and were worked out on the basis of population and "convenience" to the congressmen.

In providing for the steering committees, which will arrange the legislative calendars for the remaining days of the session, the administration beat down in the house a motion by Representative James Cummings, of Cannon county permitting any bill in the hands of the steering committee to be called up by a majority vote.

Later, the house defeated an attempt by Cummings to force out of the finance, ways and means committee a bill proposing salary increases for supreme court, appeal court and trial court judges.

Floor Leader Ragon moved to table Cummings' motion seeking to pry the bill out of committee, and the tabling motion prevailed.

Cummings, pointing out that the bill passed the senate by a vote of 28 to 5, charged the house had come to the point "where it slaps to the table everything except what the gentleman from Hamilton (Ragon) wants." Pleading with the house to bring the bill to a vote, he said, "Let's face the matter as independent legislators."

Lone Voice in Senate

Slight opposition to the steering committee plan came in the senate, where Senator John Holladay, of Cookeville, declared there was "no necessity" for such a committee, but his motion to reconsider died for lack of a second.

The steering committees appointed by the speakers of both houses carried the names of legislators who consistently have supported the administration in the present session.

The house committee is headed by Floor Leader Ragon, of Chattanooga, and includes Representatives G. H. Nevils, Charles Crump, Lester Doak, Mark Walker, Robert Bilbrey and Louis Allen.

The senate rules committee was made the steering committee in that body, and includes Chairman R. G. Kinkle, of Shelby county, Senators William A. Buckles, Paul Hatfield, Floor Leader J. Roy Hickerson, James J. Rroome, Frazier Riggins, Charles E Gardner and Damon Headden.

After assuring speedy handling of remaining bills, the assembly passed several local bills and general measures including minor administration bills.

Bills regulating hunting and fishing in Tennessee, including Reelfoot lake, were offered in both houses, as were bills providing for, with assistance from the state, uniform accounting system for county governments.

The house completed final action on a bill providing Negroes with educational facilities equivalent to that offered at the University of Tennessee, while the senate passed houe-approved bills enshrining he home of John Sevier in Knox county and the schoolhouse in Blount county in which Sam Houston once taught.

The house also approved bills:

To abolish the Twenty-fifth Floterial district, composed of Lake, Obion and Dyer counties, and provide for a direct representative from Lake;

To authorize county courts to exempt blind persons permanently from the payment of the poll tax:

To enable the state department of education to accept federal funds for the teaching of courses in national defense;

To transfer $10,000 now in a special paroled prisoners' fund to the state's general fund

Social Science Class Started At McDowell

JAN 23 1941

School For Negroes Under Direction Of John A. Oebbecke

The Philadelphia School of Social Science for Negroes held its first classes on last Monday evening in the McDowell Memorial Church, 21st street and Columbia avenue, under the instruction of Dr. John A. Oebbecke.

The primary principle of social justice was discussed by Dr. Oebbecke for one-half hour. This discussion was then followed by a question period of 15 minutes during which time students asked any questions perplexing to them.

The purpose of the class is to take current events that concern the Negro and discuss them and to attempt to aid the Negro to advance to his rightful place in world affairs.

Classes will be conducted each Monday evening in the auditorium of the McDowell Church, beginning at 8.30 o'clock.

EDUCATOR FORECASTS WE'LL HAVE FEWER LEADERS, STRONGER MASSES

Veteran Teacher Sees Poorer Teaching By Negroes Unless Square Deal In Pay Is Provided In South

MAR 2 1 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 20—(By Samuel A. Boyea for ANP)—If a prophecy comes through, the American Negro group will produce fewer outstanding leaders, but a stronger mass group. And Miss Mary Francis Terrell, educator and church worker should know. For nearly 50 years she has been aiding in the formulation of ideas that the southern Negro youth in this section has been contributing to his nation's welfare.

For 50 years next Fall, Miss Terrell has been a member of the faculty of State Teachers college, beginning her long career under the presidency of the founder, William Burns Patterson. In this capacity she has seen the Negro youth start his early training for life, become a matured individual and eventually take his place in society.

How does she compare the past curriculum with the present? She considers the present curriculum very interesting and expects it to prove of great benefit to the present generation Negro. She deplores its apparent lack of discipline, but is enamoured of its plan to educate the child in keeping with the needs of his community and better still, his nation. She believes that this will help to solve many citizenship difficulties of the Negro. In the past, she argued, Negroes were taught to despise citizenship, but it would be foolhardy to educate any group for citizenship and then after they have completed formal training to take that away from them.

"The Negro teacher suffering from the pangs of underpay is hardly likely to educate the Negro child along the lines of the new curriculum with any conviction. The Negro teacher has done his part to build this superstructure of 20th century democracy. He has never to my knowledge contribute anything subversive to the curriculum. Even in the past when he barely existed he has sung the praises of America and told his class that all—white and black—were entitled to the pursuit of happiness.

Miss Terrell becomes overjoyed whenever she speaks of her long association with State Teachers college.

"I love children—all children, but I am even happier to associate with the children of my race. I cannot do much, but I am glad of this opportunity to help them over their problems to bridle their animal passions and to re-direct their undesirable habits towards things which would be of lasting benefit to the community in general."

Like most of the educators who have served under him, Miss Terrell made eulogistic references to President H. Councill Trenholm and his work as an educator.

"I knew his mother and father before he was born and he lives up to their high expectations of him. He is one of the greatest men I know and most congenial and considerate to work with. I believe that with President Trenholm in the vanguard of Negro education, our group will contribute great and stalwart citizens to the American nation."

A. G. Macklin to Address Community Tea Sponsored by School Faculty

A. G. Macklin, high school curriculum counselor for the state of Virginia, will be the principal speaker at a community tea sponsored by the Douglass school faculty in the school auditorium Tuesday, March 18, at 8:15 p. m.

The choirs of the local churches will furnish music for the program. This will be Macklin's third visit to Bristol since his recent appointment as a member of the state department of education. He was formerly principal of Addison high school of Roanoke, and is one of three negro members of the Virginia department of education.

Macklin will conduct a discussion that will be of special interest to the leaders of groups who are studying some pertinent problems in order that this community may make constructive contributions to Virginia's long term program of education for national security.

The leaders and problems selected are: the Rev. Henry Clay, "Using and Developing the Resources of the Community"; Mrs. Okie Pelham, "Studying Children"; Mrs. Nannie Loller, "Solving Community Problems Cooperatively"; H. G. Wilson, "Developing Home and School Interrelationships."

William M. Cooper, president of the Virginia state association, recently stated "of all the minority groups in America, the negro should be most concerned and interested in a program of education which has for its main purpose helping all people to live the good life in a democracy and to so develop themselves physically, economically, mentally, and vocationally that democracy in America will be made secure for all American citizens."

Local delegates attending the second regional meeting which will be held at Carver high school, Salem, Saturday, March 22, will be: Mrs. Pearl Roberts, Rev. J. A. Martin, Rev. J. R. Washington, H. G. Wilson and W. Wallace Hayes, chairman of the study program for the colored people of Bristol.

COLORED FOLK HOLD FORUM

Virginia's long term program of education for national security was discussed before approximately 75 lay and 15 professional colored people at a "community tea," sponsored by the Douglass high school faculty, in the school auditorium last night.

A. G. Macklin, curriculum counselor for the state of Virginia, delivered an address on Virginia's 3-point program. He conducted an open forum after his address. Some pertinent questions were discussed by Superintendent B. D. French and others.

Leaders of the group studying the following problems reported their findings: "Studying Children," Mrs. Okie Pelham; "Solving Community Problems Cooperatively," Mrs. Nannie Lollen; "Using and Developing Community Resources," Rev. Henry Clay; "Developing School and Community Relationships," H. W. Wilson. Rev. Clay acted as chairman.

Delegates who will attend the regional conference at Canover high school, Salem, Va., on Saturday of this week will be Rev. J. R. Washington, Rev. J. A. Martin, Mrs. Pearl Roberts, H. G Wilson, and W. Wallace Hayes the latter the chairman of the study program for Bristol, Va.

COLORED EDUCATOR TO SPEAK TONIGHT

Prof Forrester B. Washington, founder and president of the Atlanta School of Social Work, will be the guest speaker at a banquet and round table discussion tonight at Wiley Memorial Methodist church, the Rev. DeWitt S. Dykes, pastor, announced last night.

Prof. Washington, one of the pioneers in organizing the National Urban League on Conditions Among Negroes, is one of the outstanding educators and social workers of the colored group in the country. He served as adviser to President Roosevelt on social conditions and problems among Negroes during the president's first administration.

Prof. Washington will use as his theme "Community Social Life," and will give a close-up observation of the integration of Negroes in the national defense program, and ways and means of "dove-tailing the race's community life into it."

The Rev. Maurice Kirby, pastor of Mt. Paran Baptist church, chairman of the Negro division of the Tennessee Conference of Social Work, will serve as master of ceremonies, and the speaker will be introduced by Booker T. Scruggs, manager of the College Hills courts, low-cost housing project for Negroes on Grove street.

Other numbers on the program include solos by V. L. Maston and Frankie Morgan. Reservations for more than seventy have been made for the occasion, according to the Rev. Kirby.

DEMANDSEQUALITY FOR ALL COLORED MEDICS, STUDENTS

JAN 18 1941

The Association of Medical Students, a progressive national organization, resolved to fight for equal opportunities for Negro medical students and physicians, at its annual convention held at Hotel Somerset in Boston, it was announced this week.

The resolution was the result of a pannel discussion conducted by medical students from Howard University on "The National Health Situation and the Negro."

It was the first time in the history of the organization that an official delegation represented a Negro college.

In the election of national officers, two Negroes were elected to positions. Casco Allston, of Howard University, was re-elected national recording secretary, and Frank Johnson, also of Howard, was named regional director of the AMS Journal.

The Association of Medical Students further resolved:

1. That the AMS strongly urge that all medical schools admit Negro students on the same basis as all other medical students.

2. That all general scholarships established be open to all students regardless of race, creed, or color.

3. That at least one annual full tuition scholarship be established specifically for Negro students at every medical school.

4. That the AMS recommend the consideration of legislation to appropriate substantial sums to aid financially the medical education of Negro students.

5. That the AMS strongly urge to approved hospitals for internship training and that they be afforded equal opportunities with other internes during the course of such training.

6. That Negro medical students who serve clinical clerkships in hospitals be afforded equal opportunities for clinical training as all other medical students.

7. That an annual tuition scholarship be established for Negro medical students by the AMS, such scholarship to be provided for contributions of local chapters of the AMS.

NEGRO IN U.S. HISTORY HOLDS MEET SPOTLIGHT

JAN 18 1941

Two H. U. Professors Read Papers at 55th AHS Convention

For the first time in the history of the American Historical Association, a national organization of scholars, an entire session was devoted to the Negro in the history of the United States at its fifty-fifth annual meeting held in New York City at Hotel Pennsylvania, it was announced this week.

Two Howard University professors, Drs. Charles H. Wesley and Rayford W. Logan, read papers at the convention. Dr. Wesley presented his paper on "The Negro in the Organization of Abolition 1831-1837."

Prof. Alex M. Arnett, of the University of North Carolina, upon making complimentary remarks on Dr. Wesley's paper, suggested that it be published and the study be carried beyond 1837.

JAN 18 1941

Prof. A. R. Newsome, of the University of North Carolina, in making a comment on Dr. Logan's paper, suggested that he continue to present new views on colonization in order to develop a more thorough understanding of that era in American history.

"The abolition movement was an organized activity in which representatives of both races participated, Negroes were allied with anti-slavery organizations as delegates and members, and by themselves initiated independent activities for the freedom of the slave population.

"The opinion which has prevailed that Negroes were not aggressive in the struggle for their own freedom is not corroborated by the facts and their logical interpretation. There were Negroes who organized societies for abolition purposes and joined with the group efforts for freedom in their local communities. Others manifested active interest in abolition in its national phase and shared in the rise of its epoch of immediatism.

"Representative Negroes were active both on the local and national scenes where anti-slavery organizations was being undertaken. They were organizers, supporters and participants in the abolition movement."

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Twelve million dollars sounds like a trifle in these days when our government is peeling off billions of borrowed money, but, when you stop to think about it, 12 million dollars is a lot of money, at that.

And the figure takes on new meaning when you hear a man say that approximately that amount of money has been given by the general education board of New York to the institutions of higher learning for Negroes in Atlanta in the last 40 years.

Dr. Trevor Arnett, past president of the general education board, told a small group at a luncheon in Atlanta last Friday that, of the 271 million dollars which the board has given to colleges and universities since 1902, 98 millions came to the south, and of this amount 39 millions went to Negro institutions, and 12 millions of ~~that~~ amount to the five Negro colleges in Atlanta.

It was a revealing statement, indicating the liberal attitude of the board toward the south, and particularly the liberal attitude toward Atlanta as a center for Negro education. Dr. Arnett called attention to the significance of the institutions in Atlanta, now grouped about Atlanta University — the fine co-operation of the several institutions, the southwide reach of their co-ordinated service, and the blessing which this investment offers for the long tomorrow.

Dr. Jackson Davis, associate director of the general education board, was the other honor guest at the luncheon, and he further emphasized the significance of Atlanta's having been selected as the center for Negro education in the south, and the promise which he sees in the present fine relationship of the races.

Atlanta has given something like $65,000 to these institutions. Their combined budgets of operation annually amount to approximately $800,000. And so, looked at from a mere matter of dollars, these institutions have been of tremendous advantage to Atlanta. There are more than 2,000 students in these institutions, and they, of course, spend quite a sizeable sum of money in Atlanta.

I believe that Atlanta will claim the privilege of increasing her contribution to these institutions, thus joining hands with the general education board, and with other friends who have shown such great faith in the south in making possible these institutions of learning for our neighbor race.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Adult educators from many educational walks of life-mission school community workers, WPA adult educationists, Y. M. C. A. workers, Negro college extension workers, and those who work in the interest of share croppers — converge on Washington on January 30-31 and February 1, 1941 to attend the third annual conference on Adult Education and the Negro, William M. Cooper, director of the Hampton Institute Summer School and Extension Department, and secretary of the conference, announced this week.

This three-day study and confab on adult education, the Negro, and national defense, which will be held at Howard University, is one of Negro education's major conferences. It is sponsored by the American Association for Adult Education, the Associates in Negro Folk Education, and the Extension Department of Hampton Institute.

Official representatives from more than 20 states having programs in adult education for and among Negroes, as well as educational leaders from college, white and Negro alike throughout America, will report, discuss and listen to authorities and specialists in their attempt to formulate objectives and give direction to programs in adult education for Negroes and their contribution to America's mobilization for defense. The meeting is open to all persons interested in adult education.

The first major discussion of the conference related to defense will be launched by Dean R. O'Hara Lanier of Hampton Institute, who will give a resume of the conference held at that institution in the fall of 1940. Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, of the administrative personnel, National Youth Administration, will preside in this session on Thursday and present Judge William H. Hastie, civilian assistant to the Secretary of War, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, administrative assistant, National Defense Advisory Commission, and T. Arnold Hill, division of Negro affairs, National Youth Administration. Adult education in the national emergency will be discussed by Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University; Dr. Morse A. Cartwright, president of the American Association for Adult Education; Dr. Rayford Logan, professor of history, Howard University; and Dr. Lyman Bryson, adult educationist, Teachers College, Columbia University.

A feature of the program of Friday, the 31st, related to the cultural development in adult deucation will be a visit by the conference to the Library of Congress to view the most comprehensive collection of Negro paintings, drawings, and prints ever assembled as "illustrative of the contribution of the American Negro to American culture."

The conference maintains a clearing house for information relative to adult education for and among Negroes and has prepared and circulated more than 50,000 pieces of literature relative to adult education. Dr. Ambrose Caliver, senior specialist in the Education of Negroes, United States Office of Education, cites the adult education conference as being one of the significant Negro education movement in America.

Needs of Minority Group Outlined at H. U. Conference

Emphasis on vocational training and industrial education, and participation in labor movements and organizations, were seen by the Third Annual Conference on Adult Education and the Negro, held here at Howard University from January 30 to Feburary 1, as being two outstanding factors necessary to integrate the Negro more fully into American life.

This three-day confab, one of Negro education's most important conferences was sponsored by the American Association for Adult Education, the Associates in Negro Folk Education, and the Extension Department at Hampton Institute.

Economically Illiterate

Fndings and reports of the conference indicate that the masses of Negroes in the United States are unaware of their difficult plight in America. The group leaders agreed that the masses are socially and economically illiterate, apathetic and indifferent to their needs, and that for the Negro to rise, the Negro masses must rise likewise.

Needs for better housing, health, and education that will reach the common "man in the street" or on the farm, were seen as necessary.

Negro leadership was assailed for a misdirection of educational emphasis and their failure to insist upon educational opportunities for the millions of illiterate Negroes, persons suffering from poor health, lack of information regarding labor and economic possibilities and opportunities for vocational education.

Adult Education in Current Crisis

Adult education in America in the current crisis was seen necessary to help the Negro masses to maintain morale and understand the workings of a democracy. Adult education will also play an important role in assisting the Negro in discriminating between propaganda, truth and subversive information and influences.

A program of information for the average Negro and arranged to meet and serve his wants, was seen as a major need in the current crisis. Community organization to provide informational services to Negro groups was encouraged.

Role in Defense Studied

The first major discussion of the conference related to the Negro and National Defense, was launched by Dean R. O'Hara Lanier, of Hampton Institute, who gave a resume of the conference held at that institution in the fall.

William M. Cooper, director of the extension department, Hampton Institute, presided at the session, and presented Dr. William H. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, and T. Arnold Hill, division of Negro affairs, National Youth Administration, as leaders in a panel discussion.

Dr. Mordecai Wyatt Johnson, president of Howard Uniersity, in opening the session on "Adult Education in the National Emergency," placed emphasis on the assertion that "nothing is more important in our national life at the present time than adult education."

Dr. Morse A. Cartwright, president of the American Association for Adult Education, in a speech before the conference, urged a more widespread discussion of democracy and the American interpretation of freedom.

Other speakers on the program were: Dr. Rayford Logan, professor of history, Howard Uniersity, and Dr. Lyman Bryson, adult eduactionalist, Teachers College, Columbia University.

A feature of the program, related to the cultural development in adult education, was a visit by the conference to the Library of Congress to view a collection of Negro paintings, drawings, and prints as "illustrative of the contribution of the American Negro to American culture."

The exhibit was assembled by Dr. Alain Locke, professor of philosophy at Howard University; Archibald McLeish, of the Library of Congress; Mrs. Mildred Holzhauer, director of WPA Art Program, exhibit section; and Holger Cahill, National Director, WPA Art Program.

Conference Speakers

Among the other persons who participated in the three-day conference as speakers and discussion leaders, were:

Dr. Harold Spivacke, Division of Music, Library of Congress; Dr. Irvin S. Lorge, Institute of Educational Research, Columbia University; Dr. Ralph Bunche, Professor of Political Science, Howard University; James A. Atkins, Miss Pauline Redmond, Franklin Thorne, W. R. Chivers, George C. Stoney, Ewart Guinier, J. H. Davies, Miss Bessie Walton, Miss Fannie O. Nickole, Mrs. Mabel J. Robinson and Mrs. Thelma Livingstone.

Locke Re-elected President

Dr. Alain Locke, professor of philosophy at Howard University, and internationally-known art and music critic, was re-elected president of the conference, and William M. Cooper, director of extension work at Hampton Institute was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

The executive committee is composed of Benjamin F. Selden, WPA, Newark, N. J.; Walter R. Chivers, Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga.; Walter R. Ridley, Virginia State College, Petersburg, Va.; J. H. Daves, TVA, Knoxville, Tenn., and James A. Atkins, WPA, Washington, D. C.

The conference on Adult Education and the Negro is an annual affair. The first conference was held at Hampton Institute, Virginia, in October, 1938, and the second was held at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, in January, 1940.

NASHVILLE. — (ANP) — Miss Hilda A. Davis, dean of women at Talladega college, was unanimously reelected to head the National Association of College Women when they met in 18th annual session at Fisk university.

One of the principal speakers appearing at the conference was Miss Pauline Redmond, assistant information specialist, of the NYA, who advised the group that the college woman must defend her role of leadership, declaring, however, that self aggrandizement on the part of the college woman has made her less acceptable as a leader. Miss Davis, speaking at the president's council luncheon, asserted that the college woman should seek to defend, our right to struggle as a free people, our right to act voluntarily, and our right to make a mistake.

Other officers and committee chairman elected were: Miss Pansy Borders, Newark, N. J., vice president; Miss Alice Taylor, Baltimore, recording secretary; Mrs. Esther P. Shaw, Washington, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jimmie Middleton, Raleigh, N. Personnel Men At Morehouse

After a spirited opening session Thursday afternoon, the scene of the seventh annual session of the National Association of Personnel Deans and Advisers of Men this morning moves to Sale Hall, Morehouse College, where officials of the association will be in charge of the regular chapel services.

The principal address this morning is to be delivered by Dean William B. West, who for eighteen years has served as adviser to the men students of Howard University, Washington, D. C.

The session got underway shortly after two o'clock Thursday when the delegates were welcomed to the city by President B. E. Mays of Morehouse College which is serving as host to the visiting personnel men. Dean B. R. Brazeal of Morehouse is in charge of the local committee.

The response to President Mays address was delivered by Dean J. W. Drew of Virginia Union University.

The opening paper on "Selection and Orientation of College Freshmen," was read by Dean G. W. Reeves of Prairie View State College, Texas. It was following this paper that a lengthy discussion was held, hinging on the various methods used by the delegates in their respective schools to deal with this problem.

Prof. D. K. Cherry of Knoxville College, Knoxville, Tenn., served as discussion leader.

Lieutenant Lawrence Oxley of the Federal Security Administration is to be the speaker at the session in the exhibition room of the Atlanta University library which is to follow the chapel services.

He is to discuss "Labor Registration and Placement of Negroes with Reference to Defense Industries." Dean West of Howard will preside.

At the three o'clock session today, W. Y. Bell, Jr., of the Atlanta Urban League will speak on "What the National Urban League has done in the field of opportunities and openings for the Negro in the skilled and semi-skilled vocations." His address is to be followed by Dr. Walter Talbot, dean of Lincoln University, Missouri, on "Negro Youth."

PLAN MEETING OF EDUCATORS

The seventh annual conference of the National Association of Personnel Deans and Advisers of Men in Negro Educational institution will be held April 24-26 at Morehouse college, Atlanta, according to Walter R. Brown, dean of men at Hampton institute, secretary of the association.

College presidents, principals, teachers, counselors, and other educational, civic, and religious leaders from 40 member institutions are expected to send representatives to the conference, which will have as its theme, "The Preparation of College Youth for National Defense." It is also expected, stated the Hampton institute dean of men, that others than the 40 member institutions will send representatives this year, and educational advisers from Negro CCC camps have also been invited.

Among the outstanding Negro personalities who will speak at the three-day conference are R. O'Hara Lanier, dean of instruction at Hampton institute; Lieut. Lawrence A. Oxley of the social security board; Dr. Walter Talbot, dean of men at Lincoln university; Dean G. W. Reeves of Prairie View State college; J. C. Evans, director of industries at West Virginia State college; Dr. Ira DeA. Reid of Atlanta university, and Chauncey I. Cooper, acting dean of men at Howard university.

Deans, Advisers and College Women Will Meet at Fisk U.

APR 11 1941

NASHVILLE. — (ANP) — The twelfth conference of the National Association of Deans and Advisers to Girls in Negro Schools, April 10-11, and the annual convention of the National Association of College Women, April 11-13, are both being held this year at Fisk university.

The conference theme of the program of the deans and advisers is "The Future of Personnel Work in Negro Colleges" and the opening meeting at 10:30 on Thursday morning will be addressed by Mrs. Ina A. Bolton, president, and dean of women at Lincoln university.

The two organizations will meet in joint session on Friday, April 11. The association of college women has chosen as the theme of the convention this year the question, "What Shall the College Woman Seek to Defend?" Mrs. Mayme U. Foster, president of the Nashville branch, and dean of women, Fisk, will preside at the joint meeting on Friday. The meeting will be addressed by Miss Sarah G. Blanding and Miss Pauline Redmond, assistant information specialist, NYA, Washington.

The college women's group was founded in 1924 with national headquarters in Washington, "to study conditions affecting the education of colored people, to seek to raise educational standards in the universities, and to stimulate intellectual attainment." Its first work was a survey of existing conditions in Negro colleges.

The study revealed the serious need of adding trained deans of women to the administrative staff in nearly all the Negro colleges and in 1928 a conference of deans and advisers to women was called at Howard. Since their founding the two organizations have approached a wide range of problems connected with racial and educational trends throughout the nation.

Tells Deans To Change Curricula

Curricula in most Negro trade and vocational schools need to be changed to meet the increasing need of men trained in those skills needed in defense industries, Lieut. L. A. Oxley of the Federal Security Administration told delegates attending the seventh annual session of the National Association of Personnel Deans and Advisers of Men meeting in the Atlanta University Library with Morehouse College as host.

The deans opened the second day of their conference at nine o'clock Friday morning when officials took over the regular chapel services of Morehouse in Sale Hall. Dean William B. West of Howard University was the principal speaker.

Mr. Oxley's address followed an hour later when the deans resumed their session in the exhibition room of the library.

"While it is generally accepted that both state and federal funds for education are intended to include all elements of our population, experience teaches that differentials, and even exclusionary practices have been set up without legal sanction, on the basis of geographic location or local community custom. As a result of this practice, Mr. Oxley declared, "we find that the potential Negro trainee has suffered in comparison to those opportunities offered to other students. This condition has been limited not only to inequitable distribution of funds and equipment, but also is reflected in the character and scope of the courses offered."

"As illustrative, the curricula in the majority of large vocational schools or white youth include instruction in carpentry, metal trades, electricity, gas and electric welding, drafting, metal trades, auto mechanics, radio operation, machinist trades, pattern making, plumbing and foundry work.

"In a few instances these schools also offer courses in air conditioning, toll making, gas and Diesel engines, refrigeration, power machine sewing, aviation mechanics, garment manufacture, steam boilers, engines and boat building.

"In contrast to this situation, the Negro vocational and trade schools offer instruction in auto mechanics, carpentry, brick masonry, sewing, shoe repair, beauty culture, painting and servant training."

Mr. Oxley told the deans that it was part of their job to see that this great disparity in training opportunities between white and Negro youths is eliminated, in view of the fact that Congress has specifically stated there was to be no racial discrimination.

"The absolute duty of local boards of education," he asserted," is to supply the training necessary to develop the skills in Negro youth—as well as other youth—that is fundamental. When this shall have been accomplished, the Negro will possess the equipment needed to dissipate in a large measure those prejudices which now preclude his employment as a skilled worker.

"As new occupational fields in defense industries are opened to the qualified Negro," the speaker concluded, "as vocational guidance for the Negro improves, as employment security personnel acquire increased experience in handling the placement of the Negro, as responsible industrialists, labor leaders and others, become aware of the problem, and as the Negro strives to improve his status as a skilled worker—then, and only then, will equitable opportunities for employment be realized by the Negro worker."

W. Y. Bell, Jr., secretary of the Atlanta Urban League was the speaker during the afternoon session when he discussed "What the National Urban League has done in the field of opportunities and openings for the Negro in the skilled and semi-skilled vocations."

Dr. J. Max Bond, director of education, Tuskegee Institute was the principal speaker at the Friday night session during which he outlined the "Future Education of the Negro College student in a Democracy." He was introduced by President B. E. Mays of Morehouse College. The invocation was offered by Dr. A. W. Loos of the Spelman college department of philosophy, while the Morehouse glee club supplied music.

The conference holds its final session today at nine o'clock with Dean Chauncey I. Cooper of Howard University and Dr. William J. Nicholson of Talladega College as the principal speakers. Dean Melvin Watson of Dillard University, New Orleans, will preside.

School Survey Will Be Made

Secondary School Body To Visit In City

A committee appointed by the Southern Association of Negro Secondary Schools and Colleges will be here Monday through Wednesday of next week to evaluate Dudley high school, applying the criteria that were worked out by seven regional accredited agencies of the United States after study of several hundred high schools over a period of a few years.

Members of the committee will include Dr. N. C. Newbold, supervisor of negro education in the state; Dr. J. Henry Highsmith, Marion Justice, H. G. Ferguson, Miss Katherine Dennis, Mrs. Lucy James, all of the state department of education; Dr. A. Elder, of North Carolina college, Durham; J. B. McRae, State Teachers' college, Fayetteville; Dr. Nelson Harris, Shaw university, Raleigh; Dr. C. A. Cooper and Miss Alma Morrow, A. and T. college; S. E. Burford, principal of the negro high school, High Point.

Group Meets Monday.

The group will hold its first meeting Monday night and will spend three days inspecting the school, which they judge from the following 13 points: Administration, philosophy, community, staff, curricula, pupil activities, library, guidance, classroom instruction, outcomes and plant. A total of 1,400 questions are asked in evaluating the school and its work.

Under supervision of Ben L. Smith, superintendent of city schools, and J. A. Tarpley, principal of Dudley high, the faculty of that school has been engaged for several weeks in making an evaluation of their own. Their results will be studied by the visiting committee, which will then make its own observations and revise the local study in keeping with their findings.

Quaker Lady's Money Helps Teach Negroes

Distinctive Educational Service Provided by Million-Dollar Trust.

By The Associated Press.

She was Miss Anna Jeanes, who founded a home in her city for elderly indigent women and lived there with them in Spartan severity despite her wealth.

So frail that a pillow was placed under her elbow to steady her hand when she signed the million-dollar trust shortly before her death in 1907, Miss Jeanes declared the purpose of her gift was "the furthering and fostering of rudimentary education" among southern Negroes.

400 Now Employed.

In the slightly more than three decades since the fund was established, hundreds of "Jeanes teachers," as they are called, have been assigned posts among rural Negroes in the southern states. Currently about 400 are employed in Virginia, Maryland, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas.

Miss Jeanes' first gift to southern Negro education was made several years before she created the million-dollar trust fund.

The late Dr. Hollis B. Frissell, principal of Hampton Institute in Virginia, called on Miss Jeanes seeking a contribution to that school.

Wanted to Hear.

Dr. Frissell reported she told him she would give him nothing, but "I want to hear about the poor little Negro cabin one-teacher rural schools. Can thee tell me about these schools?"

Dr. Frissell replied he surely could, and he did.

After he finished, she went to her checkbook and Dr. Frissell said he expected about $100, or maybe $150.

Instead he got $10,000.

Booker T. Washington, acting on Dr. Frissell's suggestion, also called upon Miss Jeanes, and he, too, received $10,000.

Then George Foster Peabody, a native of Columbus, who was then treasurer of the general education board, visited her and in April, 1905, was given $200,000 for use in Negro education.

Her million-dollar trust followed two years later.

Duties Diversified.

The duties of Jeanes teachers embrace such diversified activities as school classroom work, stimulating school attendance in communities where it is low, health, and the manual arts. They work both with children and their parents. A large percentage of the teachers are Negro women.

Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon, of the University System of Georgia, says "the Jeanes supervisor is one of those rare individuals in American educational organization who has not been standardized as to type, professional activities, or duties."

Jeanes teachers now are paid from funds of the Southern Education Foundation of which the Jeanes fund is a part and by public money in the various states.

EXTENDED PROGRAM FOR NEGROES PLANNED

TUSKEGEE, Ala., April 2. (AP)—Trustees of the Anna T. Jeanes Fund for Education of Southern Rural Negroes appointed a committee to plan an extended program during a meeting here yesterday.

The $1,000,000 fund was established through a bequest by Anna T. Jeanes of Philadelphia. Grants from the fund are used to supplement salaries paid by state appropriations to teachers engaged in work among rural negroes in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and other southern states.

Among those attending the meeting were Dr. Ambrose Caliver, of the office of education at Washington; Julian Harris, editor of the Chattanooga Times; Dr. D. C. Caldwell, retired field agent for the fund, J. S. Lambert of the Alabama department of education, and others.

Completes 27 Years As Jeanes Teacher

By Samuel A. Boyea

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—"... And that the income from this money should be used to encourage moral influence and social refinement which shall promote peace in the land and goodwill among men."

And thus one of yesteryear's "beautiful people" gave birth to a fund which was solely intended for "that great class of Negroes to whom the smaller rural or community schools are alone available" in the southern United States community. The donor was Anne T. Jeanes, of Philadelphia; the gift $1,000,000; the time April 22, 1907.

Since that day Negroes have been prominent in the activity of the Jeanes Foundation. Most outstanding contributor of the race to the spirit of the Foundation is reserved, highly esteemed Mrs. Mary Foster McDavid. Now the State Jeanes Teacher and supervisor of the 41 county Jeanes teachers in Alabama, Mrs. David has completed 27 years service with the foundation. She was born in Union, S. C., and moved at an early age with her parents to Spartanburg, where she attended the public rural schools of Spartanburg county. After completing her elementary courses, she entered school at Tuskegee institute and completed her normal and industrial courses during Booker T. Washington's administration. Since completing her normal courses, she has attended school at Kansas State college, State College of South Carolina, attended one term at Hampton institute on a fellowship granted by the General Education board and one term at Tuskegee on a scholarship granted by the Southern Education foundation. There she earned her bachelor's degree under Dr. Patterson's administration.

She has spent the most active years of her life as a Jeanes teacher, but has also found time to fulfill the office of president of the National Congress of Colored Parents and Teachers.

After a few minutes' talk with Mrs. McDavid one realizes how deep is her interest in her life work. She is very grateful for the opportunity that the donor has given to "the [illegible] Negroes—the men and women of my race."

Recalling the work with which she has been associated, Mrs. McDavid said:

"Through the years, Jeanes teachers of Alabama have been untiring in their efforts to encourage local committees and county school authorities to provide better school houses for rural Negro children—first, through the aid of Julius Rosenwald fund, and in recent years, through the aid of PWA, WPA and NYA building programs. They have assisted teachers in the solution of their classroom problems by school visitation and by individual, group and county-wide conferences. They have helped in problems of school attendance, general school improvement, school ground improvement and beautification, health and other matters tending to general community betterment."

"They have improved the teaching service by encouraging classroom teachers to increase their efficiency. They have brought about a better home-school, parent-teacher relationship through parent-teacher organizations, parent-study groups, and parent-teacher leadership short courses in higher institutions of learning. Moreover, it may be truthfully said, that Jeanes teachers in America and Alabama have been influential factors in the extension of elementary school terms for Negro children from four and one half to seven months.

The greatest that could be said for the Jeanes teachers of Alabama is that they have inspired boys and girls in the most remote rural districts to remain in school and complete their elementary courses; they have been instrumental in providing junior and senior high school privileges through consolidation of schools and transportation of pupils; and they have attempted to show the general public the fine points in the Negro boy and girl through country-wide play days; county district and state songfests; state oratorical contests, state academic meets—through these media, the people of Alabama have been brought to appreciate such traits as scholarship, musical ability, manual skills, sportsmanship, social graces, and pleasing personality, as found in the Negro youth of Alabama.

"Perhaps in the wave of the future," confessed Mrs. McDavid, "there will be no place for philanthropy. This much can be said, judging from the work of the Jeanes' foundation, that a little thing like a beautiful sentiment can lead to great practical achievement if the spirit of that sentiment is honored and respected.

Mrs. McDavid is now writing the first draft of her autobiography, entitled, "We, the Jeanes Teachers."

ANNUAL JEANES MEETING HELD AT TUSKEGEE

The annual conference of the Jeanes teachers working in the state of Alabama was held at Tuskegee Institute, November 10 through the 11. Forty-four of the forty-six Jeanes working in forty five counties in the state, were present. Mrs. Mary Foster McDavid, the state president, presided at the sessions. Dr. Arthur D. Wright, President of the Southern Education and Miss Shellie T. Northcutt, special Jeanes teacher, represented the Washington office. It will be remembered that a few years ago the Jeanes and Slator Funds became the Southern Education Foundation.

Mr. J. S. Lambert, State director of Education for Negroes, represented the State Department of Education. Superintendent T. W. Spence and Supervisor L. A. Jones, represented Macon County.

The folowing figures supplied by Mrs. McDavid show the strides made in the educational preparation of the Jeanes teachers during the past twenty odd years. Of the forty-six Jeanes teachers working in Alabama, forty-two have academic degrees, one of these has a Masters degree; four have less than one years work between them and a degree; thirteen of the workers have done graduate work.

State May Lose $300,000 Gift Money in Year

By LUKE GREENE.

As foundations and other outside agencies making contributions to the University System of Georgia yesterday considered the withdrawal of their annual grants after the General Education Board set a precedent by cutting off $25,000 to the University of Georgia for the 1941-42 fiscal year, regents officials estimated that if all their donations were stopped the University System would lose approximately $300,000 a year.

At Athens Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the university, said he had received the following notice from the board:

"Events have occurred which in our judgment make it impossible for the General Education Board to continue its relations with the University of Georgia."

Officials of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, another major contributor, would not say what attitude it will take as a result of the ousting of Dr. Walter D. Cocking, former education dean at the University of Georgia, and Dr. Marvin Pittman, former president of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro.

However, Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund, who was contacted by telephone in Chicago, said his organization probably would have a statement next week.

"We haven't any plans right now," Dr. Embree said. "We just aren't saying anything. The thing to do is to let the wind blow and see how things are going. I don't want to become involved in any controversy right now."

Asked what was the usual policy of the fund regarding such situations, Dr. Embree said:

Dr. Caldwell said the General Education Board gave no further explanation as to why its funds were being withdrawn from the University of Georgia.

He pointed out that the university had applied for a grant of $74,000 to cover the next three years. Heretofore, he said, grants had been made to the university averaging around $25,000 a year. The board is connected with the Rockefeller Foundation.

12 Face Dismissal.

Dr. Caldwell said the board was engaged in recataloguing all books in the university library and replacing missing volumes. He added it would be necessary to release immediately 12 members of the library staff engaged in this work.

The General Education Board also was carrying on a project in connection with eradication of plant diseases and agricultural development at the State College of Agriculture.

Although the board makes other contributions to the University System, no announcement was forthcoming as to whether these funds would be stopped or suspended.

Under way now is a survey of higher education in the system for which the board contributed $22,000. This survey is less than half complete, it was pointed out.

Governor Talmadge was out of the city but Carlton Mobley, assistant attorney general attached to the Governor's office, called on State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. for a breakdown of General Education and Rosenwald money coming to the university. Mobley would give no reasons for making this request.

Another development in the regents' controversy was a letter to Governor Talmadge from the Atlanta Board of Education informing him that the Atlanta system does not participate in any Rosenwald funds or fellowships and that no member of the staff has received or shared in such funds.

After Dr. Willis A. Sutton, city superintendent, defended Dr. Pittman in the trial Monday, the Governor directed a letter to the board asking for specific information.

Pointing out Dr. Sutton was away from the city much of the time on lecture tours, the chief executive asked about the Rosenwald funds and whether Dr. Sutton believed Negro and white teachers should receive the same salaries.

Records in the Board of Regents showed that during the past five years the University System had received $167,000 from the General Education Board. This money was distributed as follows:

University of Georgia, $76,800; Georgia Tech, $25,500; Georgia State College for Women, $990; University of Georgia Medical school, $10.000; Regents' office, $22,000; University General Extension, $5,500; Georgia State College, $1,669; and Fort Valley State College, a Negro institution, $24,249.

During the past year $43,353 of these funds went to the University of Georgia, $10,000 to the medical college and $22,000 for the survey.

In addition, the board provides $11,400 for the State Department of Education for three men to supervise Negro education.

Rosenwald contributions for the past five years totaled $325,000. Of this amount $138,500 went to the Fort Valley State College; $86,000 to West Georgia College at Carrollton; $72,500 to the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, and $28,000 to the University of Georgia.

Grants from the Rosenwald fund during the past year were $102,500, Regent officials said.

Numerous other foundations make smaller contributions to the University System, but the exact figures on these were not available for the past year.

Regents by Governor Talmadge so he could oust two men from the University System was described here today as "a serious blow to democratic institutions."

The University Club of Augusta adopted resolutions condemning "the mixture of politics in educational matters, and the recent forced retirement of several members of the Board of Regents."

"We especially regret the reorganization of the Board of Regents made for the evident purpose of reversing the action of the board as constituted up to a few weeks ago and thereby reaching a predetermined result," the resolutions declared.

Expressing confidence in Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, and Chancellor Sanford, the resolutions said, "We hope they will remain in their present positions."

The resolutions were presented by James M. Hull Jr., past president of the University of Georgia Alumni Association, and Lansing B. Lee, attorney, at a special meeting of the club called by Henry Heffernan, president, and E. A. Scott, secretary.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal

Character and Credit

THE GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD was established and endowed by John D. Rockefeller in 1902. It has disbursed, roughly, $250,000,000, for purposes of American education through 1940. Of this great sum a total of $85,602,337 was paid to Southern education. Fifty-four millions went to the educational facilities of whites; thirty-one millions to facilities for Negroes.

No charge has ever been made from a responsible or credible source that in its appropriations or expenditures the General Education Board has ever sought to indoctrinate any institution to which it gave financial aid, or proselyte any institution or administration or student thereof to any political, economic or social theory.

On the contrary, the very uses to which the financial aid was dedicated by specific contract have been largely the sciences pure and applied, in which there is and can be no propaganda. There is no argument, no difference of human opinion in matters of arithmetic and calculus, the laws of dynamics, the reaction in a test tube, the blood count of a sick man. Fact is fact, truth is truth in science, and no packed jury can alter either. For the development of the medical sciences in the universities and colleges of the South for white students, the General Education Board has given $41,000,000. Of the $31,000,000 given for educational purposes for the colored in the South, $18,000,000 went for general endowment, buildings and facilities; $4,500,000 for the medical sciences, $2,000,000 for libraries, $1,000,000 for the natural sciences.

Until the University System of Georgia was reorganized in 1931, the member schools and colleges had received no appropriation or aid from the General Education Fund. The nonpolitical administration inaugurated by the Board of Regents inspired confidence among the trustees of the Fund and between January 1, 1932, and June 30 of this year, white units have received appropriations of $180,000 and units for the colored have received $96,500.

All this money has been disbursed by the local administrations of the local units, under the general observation and guardianship of the Board of Regents.

The Board of Regents during those eight and one-half years, commanded and received the respect and the trust of the General Education Board.

The fact that the General Education Board is now withdrawing from financial relations means that it has lost confidence in the Board of Regents as now constituted and as now functioning.

The effort doubtless will be made to interpret the withdrawal as an attempt to swing a financial club over the State of Georgia.

That, however, is not the truth. The truth is, neither the General Education Board nor any other philanthropic person or foundation will extend financial support to institutions run by the whims of one individual. The directors would be recreant to their trust if they did so.

In short, the University System of Georgia has lost its credit because its character now is suspect.

Education Board Notes Improvement Of Southern Schools

NEW YORK, June 29.—(A.P.)—The general education board, noting continued improvement in southern education, reported today its 1940 appropriations totaled $6,529,816.

A breakdown of the appropriations by board president Raymond B. Fosdick showed $848,810 went for education of southern whites, $4,650,500 for southern Negroes, $647,500 for general education, $118,385 for child growth and development and $279,850 for administrative costs.

The report recalled the board's decision last year to close its programs in general education and child growth and developments and added that the remainder of its "fast-vanishing funds would be spent on what has been perhaps its central interest"—education in the southern states.

Rockefeller Board Halts State Funds

Move Believed Result of Gov. Talmadge's Acts

18i(3)

Repercussions to the Talmadge-dominated Board of Regents' action in ousting two prominent educators from the Georgia University system on alleged "race equality" attitude charges came heavy Friday.

The General Education Board, which handles the Rockefeller gift of millions for education, withdrew all its financial relations with the University of Georgia system as the result of Governor Talmadge's taking over control of the university and its branches.

Withdrawals of support from the Rosenwald Fund, which came in for severe lashing by Talmadge and his Regents, and other foundations which have spent large sums in Georgia are predicted.

REVEALS LETTER

President Harmon W. Caldwell said he received a letter from the headquarters of the General Education Board Thursday night stating that "Events have occurred which in our judgment make it impossible for the General Education Board to continue relations with the University of Georgia. We do not have to explain the grounds for this action."

The Georgia University system has been averaging about $25,000 a year in grants from the General Education Fund. Last year Georgia received some $42,550 for the university system and $11,400 to the operation of the common schools. This latter amount was spent for supervision of Negro schools.

From 1908 until 1936, when the new school law was passed the Rosenwald Fund and the General Education Board paid 85 per cent of the administrative costs of Negro schools in Georgia. These funds supported several divisions of the State Department of Education for many years, until they had proved their usefulness and the state took over the cost of their operations. The funds also conducted surveys to ascertain the needs of both whites and Negro schools.

The Rosenwald Fund has given many thousands of dollars to the State School Department in the form of library books. For many years the fund provided library books at cost for white schools, both elementary and white schools and has paid one-third of the cost of libraries for Negro schools. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent for the construction of schoolhouses for Negroes in Georgia alone.

At one time the Rosenwald Fund devoted all of its aid to Negro schools, but in recent years has added the development of rural schools for whites as well as for Negroes. In fact, for the last two years expenditures on white schools of the state have exceeded the expenditures on Negro schools.

In the last five years, the General Education Board has donated $227,000 and the Rosenwald Fund $325,000 to the University System in the state.

Governor Talmadge purged the University System of five members charging that they participated in the Rosenwald Fund, which he said, advocated racial equality.

GEB Refuses $25,000 Fund For University

ATLANTA, [AP]—Asserting relations with the University of Georgia could not be continued due to "events" which have occurred, the General Education Board Friday declined that institution's application for grants aggregating $25,000 for the 1941-42 fiscal year.

University President Harmon Caldwell announced receipt of the notice at Athens and said the reference to "events" was the only explanation in the letter. Political observers believed the reference included the ousting of Dean Walter D. Cocking from the university by a board of regents shuffled by Governo Talmadge for that objective.

The state university had asked for $74,000 covering the next three years, Dr. Caldwell said. The board, connected with the Rockefeller Foundation, had been granting about $25,000 ye previously. No similar action has been taken by other contributing funds, the president added.

The chief executive's reorganization of the regents board was described as a "serious" blow to democratic institutions by the University club of Augusta Friday. By resolution, the club condemned "the mixture of politics in educational matters, and the recent retirement of several members of the board of regents."

EDUCATION BOARD GIVES $3,500,000 TO MEHARRY FUND

NEW YORK, July 17—(ANP)—Appropriations totaling $4,650,500 were voted for Negro work last year by the General Education board in connection with its program of Southern education. A $3,500,000 contribution to the endowment fund of Meharry Medical college and another of $2,000,000 to that of Bennett college were the major items in this huge sum. The year's total appropriations by the Board amounted to $6,529,816. Toward this sum the board authorized White institutions sharing in the Southern education program received $848,810.

These figures were made public in the annual report of the board president, Dr. Raymond B. Fosdick, the 39th such report since the founding of the organization by the late John D. Rockefeller.

Among the more important beneficiaries of last year's activities were the following:

A. U. GETS $50,000

Meharry Medical college, Nashville; The report cited the tremendous growth of this institution in its 64 years of existence during which period 4,420 professionally trained physicians, dentists, pharmacists and nurses have been graduated. The $3,500,000 voted by the board is part of a $5,000,000 endowment fund now being raised for the maintenance of the institution. Another $200,000 was approved for this same purpose to be used to match dollar for dollar that amount above the $5,000,000 that is donated by other sources. Meanwhile, $160,000 was appropriated to meet the current maintenance expense.

Atlanta university: During the year the remaining parcel of land needed to round out the new Atlanta university development was purchased with an appropriation of $50,000 from the board. The first of the group of buildings for Clark college on the site adjacent to Atlanta university is now under construction and will be ready for occupancy this fall.

A final appropriation of $25,000 was voted to the Atlanta School of Social Work toward current expenses pending the successful outcome of the $500,000 endowment campaign initiated by university authorities. The school will receive this appropriation on a four-year descending scale.

$60,000 TO TUSKEGEE

Bennett college, Greensboro, N. C.: To give greater stability to the educational program, trustees of Bennett engaged in an effort to raise $500,000 for an endowment. Toward this sum the board authorized the appropriation of $200,000. Bennett operates under the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is one of two four-year liberal arts colleges in the United States exclusively for Negro women.

Tuskegee institute: During the year the board voted $60,000, of which $25,000 is for constructing and equipping a building to house the state's administrative staff in vocational agriculture, and $35,000 for equipment of the school of agriculture. These two buildings will bring together the agriculture activities related to the public schools and Negro farmers of the state, and provide adequate space and equipment for satisfactory service. The additional equipment will enable Tuskegee to strengthen its advanced work in agriculture and vocational education to meet the increasing demand from Negro students.

In the field of public education $135,000 were made available for the support of state agents and assistant agents for Negro rural schools. This represents a slight reduction from former annual appropriations. A $1,500 sum made possible a conference of state agents to formulate plans for national defense programs in Negro high and county training schools.

FELLOWSHIPS TOTAL $70,000

In addition to all this, goodly sums were authorized to meet the current maintenance expenses of several other colleges, to produce films on Negro life, and to support summer work shops, seminars and conferences for Negro teachers. Also 15 grants in aid were made varying in amounts from $300 to $7,500 and totaling $31,096.

Thirty-five fellowships, including six renewals, were awarded, and amendments to others were made calling for $68,213. For the year 1941 the board voted $70,000 for fellowships.

In his comments, Dr. Fosdick reports:

"Last year it was reported that the General Education board would shortly bring to a close its work in the field of general education. The year 1940 marks the end of this program, although a few further appropriations may be made in order to meet past obligations. "The closing of the programs in general education and child growth and development leaves intact the existing work of the board in education in Southern states. It was seem probable that its fast-vanishing funds would be spent on what has been perhaps its central interest."

GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD

THERE has just been issued what may properly be termed the "Farewell status" of the General Education Board which was founded in 1902 at the instance of the Rockefeller family. The board in charge announced last year that it would shortly bring its matters to a close as far as new appropriations were concerned, while grants in some instances will not be completed until 1944.

While money was not necessarily the only criterion in connection with the board, it is interesting to note that the General Education Board from 1902 to December 1940 appropriated a total of $271,307,835. It is worth noting that it has ordinarily helped only those who were willing to help themselves. For obvious reasons a considerable part of its funds and interest has been expended in the South.

In the farewell report, Dr. Albert R. Mann, Director for Southern Education, notes a steady improvement during the nearly four decades the board has been in operation. He, however, calls attention to the existence and persistence of shortages and inadequacies in the matter of deficits in the facilities and the teaching personnel for Negro elementary schools. The board has done much of its work well. It has been of substantial service in highlighting educational needs and inspiring other agencies to undertake similar enterprises.

$85,602,337.37 To Colored Schools

The General Education Board of New York, which announced withdrawal of financial assistance for Georgia schools because Governor Talmadge's attitude, has given given $140,068,447.26 for advancement of education in the South according to the board's 1940 annual report. Founded in 1902 by the late John D. Rockefeller for the purpose of promoting the cause of education in the country, additional unpaid grants to southern educational institutions total $15,767,317,07.

Negro schools have received $85,602,337.37 of the total grants.

Atlanta University, $6,000 for library books; 10,000 for current expenses; $4,328.15 for endowment, building and equipment; $2,050 for undergraduate work at Morehouse college; $50,000 for purchase of land.

Atlanta University School of Social Work, $25,000 for current expenses.

Association of Colleges and Secondary schools for Negro Education, Atlanta, $40,000 for secondary school study.

Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for Negroes, $6,666.66 for secondary school study.

5 Million Dollars Given To Negro Education By Rockefeller Interests

NEW YORK (ANP)—Appropriations totaling $4,650,500 were voted for Negro work last year by the General Education board in connection with its program of southern education.

A $3,500,000 contribution to the endowment fund of Meharry Medical College and another of $200,000 to that of Bennett College were the major items in this huge sum.

The year's total appropriations by the Board amounted to $6,529,816. White institutions sharing in the southern educational program received $8[illegible].

These figures were made public in the annual report of the board announced last week by its president, Dr. Raymond B. Fosdick, the thirty-ninth such report since the founding of the organization by the late John D. Rockefeller.

Among beneficiaries of last year's activities were:

Program Ending

"The closing of the programs in general education and child growth and development leaves intact the existing work of the board in education in southern states. It was around this area of interest that the board was organized in 1902, and a consistent program in the development of education in both white and colored institutions has been followed for nearly 40 years.

TALMADGE PURGE ENDS GEORGIA U. EDUCATION FUND

All Assistance Cut Off by Foundation.

Atlanta, Ga., July 19 [Special].—The General Education board has withdrawn all its financial assistance from the University of Georgia as a result of the action of Gov. Eugene Talmadge in seizing personal control of the university and its branches, it became known today. It was predicted withdrawal of support by the Rosenwald fund and by other national foundations for aid to education would follow.

The General Education board was founded in 1902 by the late John D. Rockefeller and has spent more than 262 million dollars on education. Of this total, $140,068,448 has been devoted to education in the South.

Only last year the board granted 2½ million dollars toward development of the Southeastern university center here on condition that a 5 million dollar matching fund be provided. The 5 millions is reported to be virtually on hand. Coöperating in the university center program will be Emory university, Agnes Scott college, Columbia Theological seminary, Georgia Tech, the University of Georgia, and the Atlanta Art association.

Funds Still Forthcoming.

No part of the 2½ million dollar grant has been received, but a spokesman at the education board's New York headquarters said commitments will be honored as long as conditions under which they were made are fulfilled.

Notified of the board's action in withdrawing funds from the University of Georgia, Dr. James R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott college and a trustee of the board, said: "This is not the action of the trustees, but rather of the officers of the general education board. I am positive that none of the 2½ million to Emory and Agnes Scott—or smaller amounts granted jointly to other institutions with the University of Georgia—will be affected."

Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory, also expressed confidence the action would not affect plans for the university center.

President Tells of Letter.

President Harmon Caldwell of the University of Georgia said he received [illegible] a letter from the headquarters of the general education board saying that "events have occurred which in our judgment make it impossible for the general education board to continue relations with the University of Georgia. We do not have to explain the grounds for this action."

Dr. Caldwell said the university had applied for a grant [illegible] education board of education and others by a board of regents which Gov. Talmadge revamped for that purpose.

In his purge of five members of the university system faculty, Gov. Talmadge said three of them participated in the Rosenwald fund. His spokesmen at the ouster of the educators sought to prove that the fund advocates racial equality.

"Rosenwald Fund" Comes To McDuffie

(From The McDuffie Progress)

The "Rosenwald Fund" has come to McDuffie County. It came as a "thief in the night," and was busily engaged in spreading its repulsive doctrine of RACIAL EQUALITY before its presence was discovered!

Before the end of the school term for the Spring of 1941 it had succeeded in its stealthy fashion in placing its books on RACIAL EQUALITY in every one of the twenty-six Negro schools in McDuffie County. The average citizen will be amazed at this statement, but it is true. Ask the members of your county school board of your county school superintendent. And you will be astounded at the audacity and bold effrontery of the style in which one of the books, "WE SING AMERICA," is written.

"GOING TO SCHOOL"

"Edna and Cynthia ran from the schoolhouse steps to their favorite place under the oak tree to eat their lunch. There was a streak of BROWN legs and a streak of WHITE legs. The little brown child and the little white child fell panting on the grass.

"Do you know," said Cynthia, "My Aunt Cynthia, the one I'm named for, came up to visit us from Mississippi the other day . . . She asked mother what did she mean by sending me to a school where there were Negroes."

"But I don't understand why your Aunt Cynthia thinks we shouldn't go to the same school," said Edna.

"Well, I don't either . . . but Aunt Cynthia says that pretty soon I'll begin to think you're as good as I am.

"But I am," cried Edna, "and better than you in arithmetic and spelling."

"Yes," continued Cynthia, "and we both got voted to be in the play."

"We like everybody in our class and everybody likes us," said Edna.

"So already we are as good as each other," said Cynthia.

* * *

The author intends to make the Negro children of McDuffie County think they should be attending the SAME SCHOOL WITH THE WHITE CHILDREN. The Negro children are satisfied now, but his aim is to excite them and make them become dissatisfied. And it is easy to preach a false doctrine into a young child's mind. SHAME ON THE VERY THOUGHT!

But on pages 76, 77 and 78 of the book the Negro children are instructed that they should ride with the Whites in the same coaches, ride in the front of the street-cars and buses with the White people; go to the same hotels; eat at the same places; attend the same theatres and not be forced to sit in the gallery, and finally, THAT THE RACES OUGHT TO MIX!

"A citizen should be able to use all those things that are for the good of the general public, THE NEGRO IS A CITIZEN, YET:

1. On railroads in some states he is forced to ride in the usually dirty, small and poorly lighted Jim Crow cars instead of IN THE REGULAR COACHES.

2. In some sections he is made to ride in THE BACK OF BUSES AND STREET CARS.

3. There are almost no hotels where a Negro can stay.

4. There are sections of the country where he cannot get a meal in a public place, and even where he is treated best there is often trouble about this.

6. At public lectures, concerts, and other kinds of public entertainment Negroes are often not admitted. In some places where they are admitted, THEY ARE COOPED TO THEMSELVES.

Often it is said that the Negro should be given things to himself so that the BLACK AND WHITE WILL NOT HAVE TO MIX. (IF NEGROES WERE ACTUALLY GIVEN THE SAME GOOD THINGS AS WHITE PEOPLE, THE SITUATION WOULD STILL NOT BE RIGHT, FOR WE LIVE IN A COUNTRY THAT SHOULD NOT STAND FOR SHUTTING OFF ONE SET OF PEOPLE FROM ANOTHER.")

So you see what the "Rosenwald Fund" wants to do. It does not merely want the Negroes to have GOOD schools, GOOD train, bus and street car accommodations, GOOD hotels, and GOOD theatres. The "Rosenwald Fund" wants the Negroes to attend the SAME SCHOOLS WITH THE WHITE PEOPLE, ride in the White coaches, sit in the front of the buses and street cars with the White people, go to the same hotels and restaurants, lectures and concerts, and sit down-stairs among the White people. It is all summed up in the last statement above.

"IF NEGROES WERE ACTUALLY GIVEN THE SAME THINGS AS WHITE PEOPLE, THE SITUATION STILL WOULD NOT BE RIGHT, FOR WE LIVE IN A COUNTRY THAT SHOULD NOT STAND FOR SHUTTING OFF ONE SET OF PEOPLE FROM ANOTHER."

In other words, Rosenwald Fund says there should be no separation of the races in McDuffie County or elsewhere.

This is a damnable doctrine that heats the blood of Southern men and women! There will be no mixture of the races in Georgia, the Rosenwald Fund to the contrary notwithstanding!

We know that our Negroes are not preaching this doctrine. They are satisfied. They have always recognized, except in rare case, that the Southern White people are their friends and protectors. But there is a movement by outside agitators to make them become dissatisfied. There is an effort being made to teach the young Negro children, who will be the adult Negroes of tomorrow, that they should mix with the Whites in order to be fairly treated. AND THAT WILL NEVER COME TO PASS IN GEORGIA!

We are glad to say that the school authorities of McDuffie County have taken these books from our Negro schools, and that Governor Talmadge has appointed a committee from the State Board of Education to purge them from every library supported by tax money in the State of Georgia.

But this is enough to let you know that there is a racial question in the schools of Georgia, and we must be constantly on the alert to keep it [illegible]ining a foothold. And the next time some pacifist says that the racial question should not be mentioned because it fans the fires of prejudice, you may know that he does not share the sentiments held by our true Southern men and women, or that he is not aware of the dangers that lie ahead!

"ROSENWALD FUND" COMES TO McDUFFIE

The "Rosenwald Fund" has come to McDuffie County. It came as a "thief in the night," and was busily engaged in spreading its repulsive doctrine of RACIAL EQUALITY before its presence was discovered!

Before the end of the school term for the Spring of 1941 it had succeeded in its stealthy fashion in placing its books on RACIAL EQUALITY in every one of the twenty-six Negro schools in McDuffie County. The average citizen will be amazed at this statement, but it is true. Ask the members of your county school board or your county school superintendent. And you will be astounded at the audacity and bold effrontery of the style in which -one of the books, "WE SING AMERICA," is written.

"GOING TO SCHOOL"

"Edna and Cynthia ran from the schoolhouse steps to their favorite place under the oak tree to eat their lunch. There was a streak of BROWN legs and a streak of WHITE legs. The little brown child and the little white child fell panting on the grass.

"Do you know," said Cynthia, "My Aunt Cynthia, the one I'm named for, came up to visit us from Mississippi the other day . . . She asked mother what did she mean by sending me to a school where there were Negroes."

"But I don't understand why your Aunt Cynthia thinks we shouldn't go to the same school," said Edna.

"Well, I don't either . . . but Aunt Cynthia says that pretty soon I'll begin to think you're as good as I am.

"But I am," cried Edna," "and better than you in arithmetic and spelling."

"Yes," continued Cynthia, "and we both got voted to be in the play."

"We like everybody in our class and everybody likes us," said Edna.

"So already we are as good as each other," said Cynthia.

The author intends to make the Negro children of McDuffie County think they should be attending the SAME SCHOOL WITH THE WHITE CHILDREN. The Negro children are satisfied now, but his aim is to excite them and make them become dissatisfied. And it is easy to preach a false doctrine into a young child's mind. SHAME ON THE VERY THOUGHT!

But on pages 76, 77 and 78 of the book the Negro children are instructed that they should ride with the Whites in the same coaches, ride in the front of the street-cars and buses with the White people; go to the same hotels; eat at the same places; attend the same theatres and not be forced to sit in the gallery, and finally, THAT THE RACES OUGHT TO MIX!

"A citizen should be able to use all those things that are for the good of the general public, THE NEGRO IS A CITIZEN, YET:

1. On railroads in some states he is forced to ride in the usually dirty, small and poorly lighted Jim Crow cars instead of IN THE REGULAR COACHES.

2. In some sections he is made to ride in THE BACK OF BUSES AND STREET CARS.

3. There are almost no hotels where a Negro can stay.

4. There are sections of the country where he cannot get a meal in a public place, and even where he is treated best there is often trouble about this.

6. At public lectures, concerts, and other kinds of public entertainment Negroes are often not admitted. In some places where they are admitted, THEY ARE COOPED TO THEMSELVES.

Often is is said that the Negro should be given things to himself so that the BLACK AND WHITE WILL NOT HAVE TO MIX. (IF NEGROES WERE ACTUALLY GIVEN THE SAME GOOD THINGS AS WHITE PEOPLE, THE SITUATION WOULD STILL NOT BE RIGHT. FOR WE LIVE IN A COUNTRY THAT SHOULD NOT STAND FOR SHUTTING OFF ONE SET OF PEOPLE FROM ANOTHER.")

So you see what the "Rosenwald Fund" wants to do. It does not merely want the Negroes to have GOOD schools, GOOD train, bus and street-car accomodations, GOOD hotels, and GOOD theatres. The "Rosenwald Fund" wants the Negroes to attend the SAME SCHOOLS WITH THE WHITE PEOPLE, ride in the White coaches, sit in the front of the buses and street cars with the White people, go to the same hotels and restaurants, lectures and concerts, and sit down-stairs among the White people. It is all summed up in the last statement above.

"IF NEGROES WERE ACTUALLY GIVEN THE SAME THINGS AS WHITE PEOPLE, THE SITUATION STILL WOULD NOT BE RIGHT. FOR WE LIVE IN A COUNTRY THAT SHOULD NOT STAND FOR SHUTTING OFF ONE SET OF PEOPLE FROM ANOTHER."

In other words ,Rosenwald Fund says there should be no separation of the races in McDuffie County or elsewhere.

This is a damnable doctrine that heats the blood of Southern men and women! There will be no mixture of the races in Georgia, the Rosenwald Fund to the contrary notwithstanding!

We know that our Negroes are not preaching this doctrine. They are satisfied. They have always recognized, except in rare case, that the Southern White people are their friends and protectors .But there is a movement by outside agitators to make them become dissatisfied. There is an effort being made to teach the young Negro children, who will be the adult Negroes of tomorrow, that they should mix with the Whites in order to be fairly treated. AND THAT WILL NEVER COME TO PASS IN GEORGIA!

We are glad to say that the school authorities of McDuffie County have taken these books from our Negro schools, and that Governor Talmadge has appointed a committee from the State Board of Education to purge them from every library supported by tax money in the State of Georgia.

But this is enough to let you know that there is a racial question in the schools of Georgia, and we must be constantly on the alert to keep it from gaining a foothold. And the next time some pacifist says that the racial question should not be mentioned because it fans the fires of prejudice, you may know that he does not share the sentiments held by our true Southern men and women, or that h is not aware of the dangers that lie ahead!

Mistreatment Of Negro Threat To Democracy. Embree Declares

President Edwin R. Embree, of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, asserted in Chicago Wednesday that the fund has as its sole objective expenditures to benefit mankind.

Embree declined to discuss the charge by Governor Talmadge that the Rosenwald Fund advocates the teaching of white and colored children in the same schools. Such an issue figured in the recent ousting of Drs. Walter D. Cocking and Marvin S. Pittman from University of Georgia System posts.

He did assert that the Fund "did not necessarily" advocate the coeducation of whites and Negroes, but worked with conditions as found and that in the South there were laws providing for the segregation of whites and Negroes in the school system. Said he:

"The life of the Fund has covered two distinct periods of approximately a decade each. During the first period, the Fund was devoted to a program of helping build schoolhouses for Negroes in the South.

"During the second period, the Fund was enlarged into a general foundation under the control of an active and responsible board of trustees and under the direction of a group of officers who gave their full time to the work.

"In this period, the activities were expanded to include various aspects of Negro education and welfare and also programs in medical economics, library service general education, social studies, race relations, and more recently, a special effort in rural education."

Dr. Embree said the Julius Rosenwald Fudn was incorporated under the laws of Illinois and was authorized to receive and disburse funds for philanthropic causes, the purpose as stated in the charter being "for the well-being of making. The Fund received gifts from other sources, such as the Carnegie Cooperation, Embree said.

In a report of the Fund in 1940, Dr. Embee wrote:

"Among the weaknesses of our democracy is our treatment of Negroes. Our attitude toward this race is a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy.

"So long as we degrade one segment of the people we set a pattern of caste and discrimination that may easily be transferred to other groups. It is a question not only of the rights of the Negroes themselves; it is a question of the total health and strength of the nation.

"We cannot have an enlightened democracy with one great group living in ignorance. We cannot have a healthy nation with one-tenth of the people ill-nourished, sick, harboring germs of disease which recognize no color line, obey no Jim Crow laws."

ROSENWALD FUND CUT TO 4 MILLION; $16,620,000 SPENT

(The Associated Press)

Chicago, July 19. — The Julius Rosenwald Fund reported today it had spent $16,620,000 since it was established "for the well-being of mankind" in 1917.

Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund, said its programs in education and Negro welfare required $769,061 for the year ended June 30. Of this amount, $300,000 was spent for rural education among both Negroes and white people in the South.

There now remains a balance of approximately $4,000,000, which Rosenwald, a Chicago merchant and philanthropist, provided must be expended within 25 years after his death, or by 1957.

Embree stated that the policy of the fund was to continue to make expenditures as opportunities offered, and that the fund would probably complete its work in another five to seven years.

"The major work of the fund," he said, "is in improving education and health and in making possible the better functioning of our democratic ways of life.

"To this end a chief interest of the fund has been in increasing the opportunities of Negroes, who make up one-tenth of the total population of the nation, one-fourth of the population of the historic region of the South.

"Negroes are below the rest of the population in opportunities and are therefore still not making their full contribution to American culture and prosperity."

In addition to its rural education program last year, the fund spent $170,000 in its Negro university centers, particularly in Washington, D. C., Atlanta and Nashville; $110,000 for fellowships for Negroes and white Southerners; the same amount for general medical services and other activities; and $80,000 for Negro health, concerning itself for the most part with the problems of syphilis, maternal and infant welfare, and tuberculosis.

Embree said that of the fund's total payments for philanthropic purposes during the last 24 years, about $11,000,000 was spent in the South, chiefly for Negro schools and for rural education of both Negroes and whites.

He listed the chief expenditures during this period as: Negro school buildings, $5,250,000; rural education, $1,250,000; fellowships, $1,000,000; Negro universities and colleges, $3,000,000; Negro health, $1,500,000; general medical services, $1,333,000; general education and social studies, $1,750,000; and library services, $750,000.

Benefits To Mankind Are Sole Objectives Of Rosenwald Fund

Head Of Philanthropic Foundation Declines To Discuss Gov. Talmadge

CHICAGO—(AP)—Benefits to mankind are the sole objective of expenditures by the Julius Rosenwald Fund, which has spent $16,620,000 since its establishment in 1917, President Edwin R. Embree asserted.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, has assailed the Rosenwald Fund as advocating the teaching of white and Negro children in the same schools, and announced his intention to sever all connections between Georgia schools and the fund.

Embree declined to discuss the Talmadge controversy. Emphatic in his assertion that he would not discuss that issue, Embree gave this account of the activities of the philanthropy:

"The life of the fund has covered two distinct periods of approximately a decade each. During the first period, from its creation in 1917 through 1927, the fund was devoted to a special program of helping to build schoolhouses for Negroes in the Southern states and was administered directly by its founder, Julius Rosenwald.

"During the second period, the fund was enlarged into a general foundation under the control of an active and responsible board of trustees and under direction of a group of officers who gave their full time to the work.

"In this period the activities of the fund were expanded to include various aspects of Negro education and welfare and also programs in medical economics, library service, general education, social studies, race relations and, more recently, a special effort in rural education.

"While Mr. Rosenwald was the founder and chief patron, gifts have from time to time been received from other donors, for example, from the estate of Theodore Max Troy, of Jacksonville, Fla., $20,195; from the Rosenwald Family Association, $69,119, and from the Carnegie Corporation for the support of the program of library extension, $200,000.

"The gifts from Mr. Rosenwald were chiefly in the form of shares of capital stock of Sears, Roebuck & Co. These gifts of stock, together with stock dividends upon them, reached a total of 227,874 shares, which at one time in the Autumn of 1928 had a market value of slightly more than $40,000,000.

Embree said the fund did not necessarily advocate the co-education of Negroes and whites. He said the fund worked in conditions as found, and that in the South, there were laws providing in many states for the segregation of whites and Negroes in the school system.

Demagogic Blundering

One basic trouble with the situation in Georgia, where Gov. Talmadge has succeeded in getting five of the state's leading educators fired, is an inability to discuss calmly and sanely questions of interracial relations.

Talmadge seems to have set out to get the jobs of all persons connected with the state educational system who have had anything to do with the Rosenwald Fund. The ax has fallen on some persons whose only crime seems to be that the jobs to which they were appointed involved certain dealings with the fund. They could not escape those dealings and do the job to which they were assigned.

Another root mistake Talmadge and his crowd are making is superficial reading and judgment. Because a book has passages in it which, taken by themselves, seem objectionable or unwise, the whole book is condemned. If that is the standard by which books are to be judged, there is hardly an important book in the world, not even the Bible, that can stand scrutiny.

One of the very first principles of fairness and justice demands that things be considered as a whole, and that the whole should not be judged by a part. A book cannot fairly be judged by one passage, any more than a life can be judged by one act. And considerations of race relations should not be reduced to the low level of condemnation reached in Georgia.

The Rosenwald Fund, around which revolve most of Talmadge's attacks, has been operating in the South since 1917. It has spent more than $50,000,000, chiefly but not exclusively for the cause of Negro education in the South. The fund was dedicated to "the well-being of mankind," and it is significant of the spirit of Julius Rosenwald that his chief benefactions after the Rosenwald Fund were to Y. M. C. A. work, although he was a Jew.

Until the witch-hunting, demagogic Talmadge saw fit to make an issue of the Rosenwald Fund, there has been almost no official criticism of anything it has done. For by far the most part, agents of the fund have worked in the utmost harmony with educational officials of Southern states.

That harmony has resulted because of the wise policy of the Rosenwald Fund in working through Southerners. Here in Alabama for nearly a quarter of a century the operations of the fund have been coordinated with the work of the State Department of Education through a native of Alabama, member of a family long resident in the South, a white man who has the interests of all the people of the state much at heart.

The white people of the South have benefited immeasurably from the work of the Rosenwald Fund. Through the erection of buildings, through the employment of supervisors and of special teachers, the Negro has been enabled to get a better and sounder education than the limited resources of the South alone would have made possible.

When the Rosenwald Fund is used up, as it will be in 1957 due to a provision in Mr. Rosenwald's will which requires the closing out of all his benefactions 25 years after his death, the people of the South, white and Negro, will be the loser. Regardless of what Talmadge may say, the fund has been a beneficial influence in the South, to both races, and to their relations. The action of Talmadge in denouncing a few statements in a book written by Dr. Embree, president of the Rosenwald Fund, taken out of their context, will not destroy the fine work of the fund as a whole.

By refusing to see the matter in its entirety, and by spurning calm and sane discussions of race relations, Talmadge has done grave injury to a cause that has ben making fine progress in recent years, that of adjusting in peace, among themselves, the problems arising from two races living together.

And as The Montgomery Advertiser reminds us, there will be monuments to Rosenwald in Georgia long after the name of Talmadge is forgotten.

THE COST OF PREJUDICE

The General Education Board, which has spent since its founding in 1902 a total of $140,068,448 for education in the south, has this week withdrawn all its financial assistance from the University of Georgia and its branches.

This blow will no doubt cripple the activities of Georgia's institutions for higher learning. In view of the indefensible and reprehensible action of Gov. Eugene Talmadge in the recent dismissal of two of the most prominent scholars of the state's university system, the General Education Board was left with no other alternative.

To continue financial support under the ugly circumstances would be equivalent to giving tacit if not open approval to a vicious policy that transcends academic freedom, decency and dignity. The Board cannot afford the luxury of promoting a corrupt political system that flourishes in the name of higher learning. To do so would be defeating the very purpose for which the foundation was established. It is our understanding that it was created for the purpose of facilitating intellectual or scientific orientation in the eternal quest for truth and its promotion.

Since Gov. Talmadge insists on imposing his own concept of the function of higher education on the State of Georgia, let him provide the means with which to carry out his reactionary ideas.

It is too bad that Georgia where illiteracy is yet very high should be pushed back further into the mud of ignorance and bigotry. But he who pays the piper calls the tune.

We Here Suggest A Rosenwald Dinner

Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the College of Education at the State University at Athens until Governor Talmadge decided he wanted the institution to have a new dean, was distasteful to the Governor because he was identified in some way with the Julius Rosenwald Fund, "probably its financial agent."

In fact, the Rosenwald Fund has been on trial in Georgia since the inquisition in educational circles began, as much as Drs. Cocking and Pittman. So much so that it becomes advisable to take a look at what that Fund is doing, to ascertain in what actions it should be indicated and be regarded as a defendant at the bar.

Writing editorially, the Savannah Morning News has presented the following on the subject:

"The Julius Rosenwald Fund reports that it has spent $16,620,000 since it was established 'for the well being of mankind' in 1917. Edwin R. If it is wrong to spend money upon Negro education, then certainly the citizens of Columbus, who have provided one of the best Negro high schools in the entire country, stand to be indicted. Spencer High school is a notably fine institution, and it has tremendously benefitted Columbus in providing not only an improved brand of leadership among colored people of our community, but better-trained cooks, nurses, porters and other employes.

Georgia is greatly indebted to the Rosenwald Fund, and we would like to see some token of appreciation arranged. For instance, a "Georgia Appreciation Dinner for the Rosenwald Fund" might be held in Atlanta, attended by prominent state leaders, with President Embree invited to be the main speaker.

America Has Been Needlessly Slow in Including Negro in Democracy, Says Edwin Embree

WASHINGTON. — (ANP). — Last Friday evening, addressing several hundred persons attending the Southern Education Foundation dinner here, Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund and widely-known author of "Brown America," talked with frankness and candor on "The Negro and Democracy." He said in part:

"I want to discuss the Negro and race relations in their bearing on the present struggle for democracy . . . I know that the human progress in any sphere is necessarily slow, that traditions and social customs change gradually, that usually more progress is made by steady advance than by any abrupt overthrow of long-established practice . . . But in the matter of Negro rights and race relations I believe we have been needlessly and inexcusably slow.

"In arts, as all America recognizes, the Negro has made unique contributions. He has furnished America's distinctive folk-music and art: the spirituals, jazz and swing, the dance, and the folklore.

"This creativeness, swelling up in an ebullient race, is now finding increasing expression in the more sophisticated forms of the fine arts. literature, drama, musical composition, painting and sculpture. Both in the art of infusing the humblest living with zest and rhythm and in all forms of folk and fine arts, this race is a lively leaven in American life.

"Negroes are no longer simply a people of the rural South. They have spread throughout the nation until more than one-fifth of the total number are in the North and more than one quarter are in cities and towns both North and South. New York City alone has more Negroes than the whole southern state of Kentucky or West Virginia. Though urban life swiftly checks the Negro birth rate, the new distribution is in general good for all concerned. It removes the acute pressure in the South and makes the Negro a constituent part of the general American people.

"Slowly Negroes have been given more freedom and wider opportunity. They have made the most of the new openings and built a life fuller and happier for themselves and richer and stronger for the nation. The masses are still far below the average American standard in almost every phase.

"They are, therefore, still far from making their full contribution to American culture and prosperity. We must go much further in equalizing opportunities before Democracy can be anything but a high-sounding term to Negroes or have any real meaning as a way of life in America!"

Rosenwald Fund Trustees Meet At Tuskegee

SAVANNAH JOURNAL
SAVANNAH GA

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)--Trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, often a benefactor of Tuskegee Institute, opened a two-day meeting here Friday.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was among board members here for the meeting.

The trustees planned an inspection of Tuskegee's rural education projects and the "buck theater," where farmer adults will present a play.

The theater took its name from Booker T. Washington's famous admonition to the race, "Let down your buckets where you are."

APR 12 1941

TUSKEGEE INST., Ala. — The Board of Trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund closed its annual two-day session here Saturday. Edwin R. Embree, president, stated that the Board voted to continue cooperation with four Southern colleges in the deelopment of Elementary Education programs for Negro and white rural communities. The cooperating colleges are Tuskegee Institute, Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Georgia; Jackson State College, Jackson, Miss., and West Georgia College for whites at Carrolton, Georgia.

APR 12 1941

Mr. Embree said the Board would continue cooperation with Flint Goodrich Hospital, New Orleans; Provident Hospital, Chicago, and the John A. Andrew Memorial Hospital, Tuskegee Institute for the improvement of Negro Health; especial attention being given to training nurse-midwives. The rural elementary school projects at Tuskegee Institute are under the supervision of Dr. J. Max Bond, Director of the School of Education. Mr. Embree stated that fellowships were not discussed. They will be taken up in April at a meeting of the fellowship committee which will be held in Washington.

Members of the Rosenwald family at Tuskegee during the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Lessing Rosenwald, their children, Robert and Joan, Mrs. Snellenburg, Mr. Snellenburg and Edgar Stern, a son-in-law.

After the Saturday business session the Rosenwald party visited the new Tuskegee Infantile Paralysis Hospital and the Tuskegee Airport. At the Airport Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, and a member of the Rosenwald Board, addressed the Tuskegee staff and student flyers. Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by G. L. Washintong, coordinator of Tuskegee Aviation program, and Dr. F. D. Patterson, president, Tuskegee Institute, shook hands with each member of the staff. The First Lady, after watching acrobatics, went aloft in a Piper trainer with Chief Pliot Alfred Anderson at the control. Mrs. Roosevelt had special congratulations for the Tuskegee young women who had recently received their Private Pilots license.

More than 300 people including 150 Junior Red Cross delegates from Florida, Virginia, Georgia Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama Indiana, Oklahoma, Tennessee, N Carolina and Texas were at the Airport to see the air show arranged for the Rosenwald party

Rosenwald Fund 'Out,' Says Gene

ATLANTA, [AP] — Plans to sever any connections that might exist between the Rosenwald fund and Georgia's elementary schools were announced Thursday by Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

The chief executive has accused the fund, a philanthropic organization, of advocating co-schools for whites and Negroes.

JUL 18 1941

State School Supt. M. D. Collins said the education department had not received any money in recent years from the fund.

DEDICATED BY FDR

The last school the fund built, he added, was the Eleanor Roosevelt school at Warm Springs, named for the President's wife and dedicated by the President in March, 1937

Talmadge said he was sure the Rosenwald fund did not pay any common school officials' salary directly, as he had looked into that.

Spokesmen for Talmadge attempted to link Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia with the Rosenwald fund at a hearing Monday which resulted in the state regent board voting 10 to 5 against renewing Cocking's contract for another year.

PITTMAN PRAISED

The Monday session also resulted in dropping Dr. Marvin Pittman as president of the Georgia Teachers' College for another year. He was not charged with connection with the fund.

Thursday, 570 summer session students at Georgia Teachers' College, in Statesboro, adopted a resolution "apologizing" to Dr. Pittman for "maltreatment at the hands of the state and the board of regents."

JUL 18 1941

The students restored their faith in the ousted official both "as a gentleman and an educator" and termed charges on which he was removed "malicious, unjust, unfair and without foundation."

The president was tendered a set of silver candlesticks by the students.

By Cliff Mackay

In Defense Of Rosenwald

FAIR-MINDED AMERICANS, reading newspaper accounts of the farcial hearing conducted last week at Georgia's State Capitol, which ended in the ousting of four of the state's educators, no doubt were sickened with despair over the depths to which men can stoop to gain a pseudo political foothold.

MACKAY

As disgraceful as was the hearing and the perversion of evidence presented by Talmadge-appointed regents, no single occurrence so disheartened those of the South genuinely interested in seeing their section take its rightful place alongside the rest of the nation, than the mean and wholly uncalled-for attack on the Rosenwald Fund.

WHAT IS THE OBJECTION?

Just what has this great foundation, started in 1913 by Julius Rosenwald, done to engender this bitter hatred of those small elements, who are so intent on "keeping the Negro down," that they would willingly agree to sacrifice benefits to themselves, if they believed in taking these benefits the black brother would in any way be given a "break"?

That the Rosenwald Fund, not Messrs. Cocking and Pittman, was the real defendant in the hearing last Monday, is the logical conclusion one would draw after a careful perusal of the evidence. Dr. Cocking was kicked out, not on anything he had written, but after the written statements of Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Rosenwald Fund, contained in his book, "Brown America", had been read into the record. Then efforts were made to make it appear that Dr. Cocking believed in that doctrine.

Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon of the Georgia University System was given his "walking papers" because it was discovered that he had once served on the Rosenwald Fund's Council on Rural Education. Efforts were even made to link up Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, who was ousted as president of the Georgia Teachers' College, with the Rosenwald Fund.

PUZZLING OPPOSITION

Checking back through numerous reports and releases coming from the Rosenwald Fund, the writer is puzzled over just what all the sudden opposition to this great philanthropic organization springs from.

The early history of Julius Rosenwald, during an era when racial relations were supposedly not developed on the high plane that they are today, there was no organized effort to halt the good work that was being done.

From 1913 until 1932, when the fund entered a different phase of philanthropy, Mr. Rosenwald erected 5,357 Negro school buildings in 893 counties of fifteen states. Not a single voice was raised against construction of these buildings, because taxpayers of these counties realized that this was relieving them of a responsibility that in most cases was either forgotten or artfully dodged.

261 BUILT IN GEORGIA

A total of 261 of these school buildings housing 37,305 pupils were erected in Georgia, some of them in counties, where before there were no school facilities for Negro children. In other words, Mr. Rosenwald stepped in and with private funds did the job which was rightfully the state's, but which the state had so long neglected to do.

Though it is best known for its erection of schools, the Rosenwald Fund by no means confined its activities to this field alone. Race relations, Negro welfare, library extension, and the all important social problem of health, also came in for attention.

"Our current effort has no special racial coloring," Mr. Embree states in a recent report on the fund's activities. "The present activity concerns rural schools in general, regardless of race." It is an attempt to find ways to improve rural education generally and thereby enrich rural life."

HAVE PREACHED TOLERANCE

Surely there is nothing here that would create any objections by our well-known guardians of Southern proprieties, unless it might be the fact that contrary to Southern custom, Negroes share equally with white in the benefits from the fund.

Or perhaps, this belated attack comes simply because the Rosenwald missionaries wherever they have gone have continued to preach the same tenets of tolerance, fellowship and the brotherhood of man that are taught by the Christian religion.

"There is an extra expense in having to maintain two school systems, dual libraries, separate parks; in building two sets of waiting rooms and maintaining separate passenger cars even on little frequented routes; in supporting white and colored public nurses and welfare agents." This was interpreted as meaning that Dr. Cocking who did not write the book, favored elimination of segregation

From the same book, but not read, was this paragraph which so accurately describes the present situation stirred up by Governor Talmadge:

"Animosity to the Negro has built up provincialism and bred intolerance to all other peoples. Spiritual and intellectual energy is dissipated upon race hates and diverted from constructive causes. Outrageous and pitiful as the condition of the victims of discrimination is, the effect of lynching and prejudice is even more deadening to the South as a whole than it is to the Negro. All this the South is more and more coming to realize."

WORTHY OF APPROVAL

Thinking Georgians will give this their full approval, despite witch-hunting efforts to swing the pendulum of race relations backward. These Georgians, white and colored, too, ardently hope that this attack upon an organization which has done so much to improve Georgia, will not result in the cutting or withdrawal of this aid.

Such a move would be a calamity to Georgia. Such a move would not hurt Governor Talmadge or the band of small men, who do his bidding. The harm would accrue to the thousands of boys and girls in Georgia, both black and white, who through the Rosenwald Fund are being given a chance to make themselves useful citizens.

Embree Reveals Huge Sum Spent On Race

The Rosenwald Fund, accused of sponsoring racial equality in the South, has spent $16,620,000 for improvement of educational opportunities, mostly in the South, it was announced Sunday by Edwin R. Embree, its president. The Fund was established in 1917.

For the year ended June 30, the fund's program in education and Negro welfare required $769,061, Embree said. Of this amount, $300,000 was spent for rural education among both Negroes and white people in the south.

There remains a balance of approximately $4,000,000, which Julius Rosenwald, Chicago merchant, provided must be expended within 25 years after his death, or by 1957.

The fund will probably complete its work in another five to seven years, Embree stated.

"The major work of the fund is in improving education and health and in making possible the better functioning of our democratic ways of life.

"To this end a chief interest of the fund has been in increasing the opportunities of Negroes, who make up one-tenth of the total population of the nation, one-fourth of the population of the historic region of the south.

"Negroes are below the rest of the population in opportunities and therefore still not making their full contribution to American culture and prosperity," Embree stated.

The fund last year, in addition to its rural education program, spent $170,000 in its Negro University centers, particularly in Washington, D. C., Atlanta and Nashville; $110,000 for fellowships for Negroes and white southerners; the same amount for general medical services and other activities, and $80,000 for Negro health, concerning itself with the most part with the problems of syphilis, maternal and infant welfare and tuberculosis.

During the last 24 years, of the fund's total payments for philanthropic purposes, about $11,000,000 was spent in the south, chiefly for Negro schools and for rural education of both Negroes and whites.

Spent in this period for Negro school buildings was $5250,000; rural education, $1,250,000; fellowships, $1,000,000; Negro universities and colleges, $3,000,000; Negro health, $1,500,000; general medical services, $1,333,000; general education and social studies, $1,750,000 and library services, $750,000.

ROSENWALD FUND WILL BE USED UP IN NEXT 7 YEARS

Julius Rosenwald instructed that the fund he left for the "well being of mankind" be spent within 25 years after his death, or by 1957. But the remaining $4,000,000 is expected to be used up by 1948, Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund said yesterday.

"Since 1917 the fund has expended $16,620,000, he explained. "The policy of the fund is to continue to make expenditures as opportunities are offered. The fund will probably complete its work in another five to seven years."

In the year ended June 30 the fund programs in education and Negro welfare required $769,061. Of this amount $300,000 was spent for rural education among both Negroes and whites in the south. In addition, $170,000 was spent in Negro university centers, including Washington, D. ROSENWALD FUND HEAD ADDRESSES SWANK YALE CLUB

Says America's Attitude and Treatment of Negro Citizens "Is Threat to Whole Theory and Practice of Democracy"—Places Responsibility.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan 16—The most striking flaw in American democracy is its treatment of Negroes, Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund of Chicago, declared here last Friday night in an address to the Yale Graduate Sociology club. "Our attitude toward this race," he said, is a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy.

"So long as we degrade one segment of the people, we set a pattern of caste and discrimination that may easily be transferred to other groups. No race or class can be firmly assured of fair play so long as we continue to treat any group unfairly.

"Consideration for the Negro rests not merely on the grounds of humanity and charity. It rests on the solid base of enlightened selfishness. It is a question not only of the rights of the Negroes themselves. It is a question of the total health and strength of the nation."

SAYS AMERICA HAS NEVER REALIZED IDEAL

Embree, who is well known as a sociologist and writer on the subject of race relations, said the most important aspect of the Negro in America is the problem he presents to democracy. He charged that though America is committed to the ideal that all groups have the right to their own lives and that diversity adds to the richness and strength of society, we have never fully realized that ideal.

"We cannot have an enlightened democracy with one great group living in ignorance," he said. "We cannot have a healthy nation with one-tenth of the people ill-nourished, sick, harboring germs of disease which recognize no color line, obey no jim crow laws. We cannot have a nation orderly and sound with one group so ground down and thwarted that it is almost forced into unsocial attitudes and crime.

"We cannot come to our full vigor in the arts unless we give scope to the talents of that race which has proved itself most creative in all forms of art and expression. We cannot come to full prosperity with one great group so ill-trained that it cannot work skillfully, so poor that it cannot buy goods.

PROCLAMATION GAVE FREEDOM OF PERSON ONLY

"The Emancipation Proclamation seventy-five years ago struck the shackles from the Negro slaves. But that edict gave freedom of person only. All the essential marks of free men have had to be won by hard and painful struggle: education, health, self-reliance, economic prosperity. While much is still to be won, progress has been substantial."

Embree cited the Negro literacy rate, which has risen from 5 per cent to 85 per cent since emancipation and the death rate, which has fallen from 32 per thousand in 1890 to 15 per thousand today, as evidence of the advances the race has made. Its economic status is also improving, he said, pointing out that 700,000 Negroes today own their own homes, and 150,000 their own farms.

"The Negro has made unique contributions to the arts. He has furnished America's distinctive folk music and folk art: the spirituals, jazz and swing, the dance, and the folklore. This creativeness, swelling up in an ebullient race, is now finding increasing expression in the more sophisticated forms of the fine arts: literature, drama, musical composition, painting and sculpture. Both in the art of infusing the humblest living with zest and rhythm and in all forms of folk and fine arts, this race is a lively leaven in American life," Embree declared.

"Slowly Negroes have been given more freedom and wider opportunity. They have made the most of the new openings and built a life fuller and happier for themselves and richer and stronger for the nation. The masses are still far below the average American standard in almost every phase. They are therefore still far from making their full contribution to American culture and prosperity. We must go much further in equalizing opportunities before democracy can be anything but a high-sounding term to Negroes or have any real meaning as a way of life in America."

Embree Protests Racial 'Unfairness'

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund of Chicago, said tonight the American attitude toward the Negro was "a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy."

"So long as we degrade one segment of the people," Embree said in an address to the Yale Graduate Sociology Club, "we set a pattern of caste and discrimination that may easily be transferred to other groups. No race or class can be firmly assured of fair play so long as we continue to treat any group unfairly."

"We cannot have an enlightened democracy with one great group living in ignorance," he asserted. "We cannot have a healthy nation with one-tenth of the people ill-nourished, sick, harboring germs of disease which recognize no color line, obey no Jim Crow laws."

When Infantile Paralysis Strikes

This child, strapped on a Bradford frame with legs and arms in splints and braces, may walk and play again, because of proper care in fighting the crippling disease of infantile paralysis. Muscles of those stricken by the disease must be kept "in neutral," sometimes as long as a year and a half. In this way, however, much of the crippling after-effects of the disease can be prevented. This picture was taken at the Crippled Children's Clinic in Birmingham, Alabama. Funds raised in the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" Campaigns are distributed by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to aid those who are stricken, to fight epidemics and to try and find a way to stamp out this terrible disease.

Says Attitude Of Nation Toward Negro Is Threat To Democracy

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(S N S)—Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund and widely known author of Brown America, told the Yale Graduate Sociology Club Friday night that "the American attitude to the Negro constitutes a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy."

"We cannot have an enlightened democracy with one great group living in ignorance. We cannot have a healthy nation with one-tenth of the people ill-nourished sick harboring germs of disease which recognize no color line, obey no jim crow laws."

Continuing, Mr. Embree said:

"I want to discuss the Negro and race relations in their bearing on the present struggle for democracy. I know that the human progress in any sphere is necessarily slow, that traditions and social customs change gradually, that usually more progress is made by steady advance than by any abrupt overthrow of long-established practices ....But in the matter of Negro rights and race relations I believe we have been needlessly and inexcusably slow.

"In arts, as all America recognizes the Negro has made unique contributions. He has furnished America's distinctive folk music and folk art: the spirituals, jazz and swing, the dance, and the folklore. This creativeness, swelling up in an ebullient race, is now finding increasing expression in the more sophisticated forms of the fine arts: literature, drama musical composition, painting, sculpture. Both in the art of refusing the humblest living with zest and rhythm and in all forms of folk and fine arts, this race is a lively leaven in American life.

"Negroes are no longer simply a people off the rural South. They have spread throughout the nation until more than one-fifth of the total number are in the North and more than one quarter are in cities and towns both North and South. New York alone has more Negroes than the whole southern state of Kentucky or West Virginia. Though urban life swiftly checks the Negro birth rate, the new distribution is in general good for all concerned. It removes the acute pressure in the South and makes the Negro a constituent part of the general American people.

"Slowly Negroes have been given more freedom and wider opportunity. They have made the most of the new openings and built a life fuller and happier for themselves and richer and stronger for the nation. The masses are still far below the average American standard in almost every phase. They are therefore still far from making their full contribution to American culture and prosperity. We must go much further in equalizing opporunities before Democracy can be anything but a high-sounding term to Negroes or have any real meaning as a way of life in America."

NEGROES HERE SPONSOR JULIUS ROSENWALD DAY

The Phillis Wheatley branch, Y. W. C. A., and the James A. Henry branch, Y. M. C. A., will jointly sponsor observance of Julius Rosenwald day Sunday at Leonard Street Presbyterian church at 5 p.m.

The service is being held as a part of a national observance on the part of Negro Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s, as a tribute to the man who, "Y" leaders say, "contributed thousands of his dollars and much of his influence toward the establishment of institutions among Negroes."

The Rosenwald Memorial committee of Chicago, and the Colored Work departments of the national association have outlined the national observance program.

Music will be furnished by the Booker T. Washington County High school chorus, and addresses will be made by the Revs. E. L. Hickman, pastor, Warren Chapel African Methodist Episcopal church; C. J. Stanley, pastor, First Congregational; Dorwatha Watkins Jackson, Howard High school instructor, and Prof. T. D. Upshaw, Jr., Washington High principal, who will introduce R. E. Clay, Bristol. The latter is connected with the state department for rural schools, with headquarters at Tennessee State A. and I. school, Nashville.

Helping The Negro

Orlando, Editor Tribune: There has come to my attention an excerpt from an address recently delivered at Yale University by Dr. Edwin R. Embree, President of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, which, in my judgment, is so sound and timely as to warrant the hope that in your columns it may have a wide reading.

Dr. Embree, speaking of the American attitude toward the negro race, said:

"We cannot have an enlightened democracy with one great group living in ignorance. We cannot have a healthy nation with one-tenth of the people ill-nourished, sick, harboring germs of disease which recognize no color line, obey no Jim Crow laws. We cannot have a nation orderly and sound with one group so ground down and thwarted that it is almost forced into unsocial attitudes and crime. We cannot come to our full vigor in the arts unless we give scope to the talents of that race which has proved itself most creative in all forms of art and expression. We cannot come to full prosperity with one great group so ill-trained that it cannot work skillfully, so poor that it cannot buy goods."

Thus, in graphic style, the speaker demonstrates that self-interest, if no higher motive, should cause white people to strive for the betterment of the negro's social and economic status. Naturally, the humanitarian and Christian is moved to action along this line by worthier considerations—justice, decency, fairness, and a recognition of the obligations involved in belief in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man: to others, even enlightened selfishness should prove sufficient.

Caliver Prepares Program Script

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—A series of educational radio programs planned by the U. S. Office of Education and financed by a Rosenwald Foundation grant will dramatize Negro contributions to American life.

The programs, to be broadcast nationally, will portray the role Negroes have played in American education, art, science, industry and other fields of endeavor. U. S. Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker reported.

TO BE TRANSCRIBED

Plans for the project call for transcriptions of the programs for use in schools, colleges and by local radio stations. The transcriptions, and radio scripts revised as lesson units and study guides, are expected to be used by both white and Negro schools in courses or units of instruction about Negroes in the United States.

Commissioner Studebaker said that this is a most important undertaking of the U. S. Office of Education in behalf of all Negroes who have had a part in the development of our national culture.

"We shall do our utmost to report accurate and full information about constructive activities and accomplishments of Negroes in this radio series," said the Commissioner. "Much of this information is not available in textbooks and in general reading matter, yet it is the type of information that could help to improve race relations and aid in solving many problems of majority and minority groups."

SEEK ASSISTANCE

The U. S. Office of Education will have the assistance of a technical advisory committee in developing the series of radio programs, and is seeking advice and suggestions from Negroes throughout the United States to be considered in making further plans.

To be included in the series will be the Negro's participation in: music literature, art, religion, exploration, invention, scientific research, agriculture, industry, labor, education, civil and military service, theatrical and sports activities.

Mrs. Roosevelt Makes Speech At Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, ALA., March 28.—In a stirring address in the Institute chapel here tonight Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, said "While national defense is important, which means the building up of our material force, we must also build a world where other things will hold sway in future so that when peace comes what we have done at home may count in the decisions of other nations. This nation is the outstanding exponent of democracy, and while democracy is not perfect, good will, justice and kindness will aid in bringing about the end we seek."

Mrs. Roosevelt was presented by Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald fund, who referred to the first lady as a leader who is interested in humanity and in righteousness and justice.

Here to attend a meeting of the Rosenwald fund Mrs. Roosevelt was given opportunity after the morning session to visit several rural communities and to inspect various rural projects, witnessing a play presented by adults in the Bucket Theater, a renovated store. Name of the theater comes from Booker T. Washington's admonition to his people, "cast down your bucket where you are."

Also seated on the rostrum was Lessing Rosenwald, son of the distinguished philanthropist, who served for many years as a Tuskegee trustee. The board will conclude its two-day session Saturday. Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of the Institute, presided at the meeting tonight.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Trustees Meet At Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE, ALA., March 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, headed a group of distinguished members arriving today for Friday and Saturday meetings of trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, often a benefactor of nationally-known Tuskegee Institute.

Mrs. Roosevelt came here from Albany, Ga., where she addressed a civic club earlier in the day.

The trustees, following a business session, will visit two rural projects conducted under the Institute's school of education, New Rising Star and Harris Barrett Schools. Later they will go to "The Bucket" Theater on the Russell plantation, where farmer adults will present a play.

The Tuskegee Institute weaving school, opened March 5, and rural health projects, especially those for training of midwives, shop workmen, aviators, and public health workers also will be visited.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Visit State

First Lady to Attend Tuskegee Meetings

TUSKEGEE, March 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the president, is expected here late today or tomorrow to attend meetings of the trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Roosevelt, a trustee, will join other members in "a first hand glimpse" of the rural education program for negroes being carried out by Tuskegee Institute.

The First Lady will come here from Valdosta, Ga., where she participated in the dedication of a library, and Albany, Ga., where she spoke to a civic club.

Rosenwald Gift To Local Schools 'Without Strings,' Arnold Tells Lions Club

Board President Says He Stands For "Social Justice" For the Negro

Speaking about the need of increasing public school facilities in Columbus, Robert M. Arnold, president of the city board of trustees took occasion, in an address to the Lions club last night, to say that the Rosenwald Foundation had made a contribution to the system, asserting that "no strings" were attached to it.

In speaking of the Rosenwald Foundation, Mr. Arnold was referring to an attack made upon the foundation by Governor Eugene Talmadge, who some time ago accused someone connected with the organization of writing a book on "social equality" among white people and negroes.

Mr. Arnold said that the fact that someone connected with the Foundation wrote such a book would not mean that the Foundation itself favored such ideas.

Explaining that the Rosenwald Foundation contributed $22,500 some years ago toward the construction of the Spencer High school for negroes, Mr. Arnold said "there were no strings attached to the gift and there was no word about social equality."

"I do not favor social equality," said Mr. Arnold, "but I do favor social justice for the negro. I assure you that as long as I am connected with the schools of Columbus, the board will not violate the traditional idea of the South."

In connection with the work of the negro schools of Columbus, Mr. Arnold asserted that not a single graduate of Spencer High school had ever been convicted of a crime.

Pointing to the fact that the total enrollment of 13,598 in the schools in 1941 represented an increase of 2,106 over 1939. Mr. Arnold said a still further increase of 2,000 is expected during the coming school year. In emphasizing the fact that the school buildings of the system are overcrowded Mr. Arnold said that the average last year was 52 pupils per room. The point has been reached, he said, where the local system must refuse the admittance of Alabama students.

With reference to Fort Benning, he said the trustees agreed verbally, when the fort was established, to accept high school pupils from the reservation without the payment of a non-resident tuition fee.

"Our word is our bond," said Mr. Arnold, "and we are going to stick by the agreement."

Mr. Arnold took occasion to mention the close cooperation that exists between the city commissioners and the school board.

Mr. Arnold listed the needs of the public schools as follows: operating maintenance annually, $42,000; North Columbus grammar school, $81,818.84; addition to Wynnton grammar school, $60,594.01; Central Columbus elementary and junior high school, $182,992.98; addition to Pou street street school, $40,896.36; addition to Manly Taylor school, $51,664.32; Brooksville school, $36,079.20.

The president of the school board mentioned the application that has been made for federal funds and expressed the opinion that money would be provided.

"If the government does not provide the money," said Mr. Arnold, "somebody must do so or the public schools cannot be operated with any degree of efficiency."

Mr. Arnold was introduced to the Columbus Lions by City Commissioner Sterling Albrecht, who is a member of the club.

12 Fouling a Good Name in Georgia

Reprinted from the Montgomery Advertiser

THIS week in Georgia vicious and depraved men have been spitting upon the name of Rosenwald.

The late Julius Rosenwald knew that the income of the South was too low to enable it to support an adequate educational system. He saw, during his lifetime, that there was too little to provide adequately for teachers and school buildings for the white population; he saw, as every Southerner with eyes has seen, that there was even less available for Negro children.

There are few decent white people in the rural South today who have not been called upon at one time or another to help build a "Rosenwald school." The fund's school-building program was a private predecessor of the WPA under which gifts were matched by contributions from counties, from whites, from Negroes.

Fifteen or 20 years ago the spirit to build a Rosenwald Fund school would hit a section and develop boundless enthusiasm and pride. Because the need was greater for Negro facilities, a larger portion of Rosenwald Fund moneys have gone for that purpose. But hundreds of white schools and colleges have been beneficiaries, too.

Julius Rosenwald also believed that the finer tradition of the South, among both whites and Negroes, called for tolerance and understanding. Some of his legacy has been devoted to agencies and institutions which have as their purpose the fostering of Christian understanding between the South's racial groups. Rosenwald believed that if decent white people and decent Negroes talked over their common problems and common objectives, good would result.

For the most part the original endowment of $30,000,000 left by Rosenwald has been expended for education and health work in the South.

Since 1935, $325,000 has been distributed to Georgia colleges by the Rosenwald Fund. Of this amount $138,000 was given to the Fort Valley State College for Negroes, the remaining $187,000 was distributed to three white State institutions.

Because he formerly was director of the Rosenwald Fund's rural education program, J. Curtis Dixon, vice-chancellor of the University of Georgia System, has been fired. To Eugene Talmadge, Dixon's former association with this devilish enterprise constituted evidence per se that Dixon favored "racial equality."

In his pogrom Talmadge has had the support of only a few yes-men who hope to profit from the orgy of ignorance now under way. A heartening example of how some Georgians are reacting is the offer of jobs in the educational system of Brooks County, Georgia, to two of the men who have been fired.

There will be monuments to Julius Rosenwald in Georgia long after the name of Talmadge has been forgotten.

THE ROSENWALD FUND.

A checkup reveals that more than three fourths of the $20,000,000 left by the late JULIUS ROSENWALD for the educational benefit of the Negroes of the South has been expended.

North Carolina and Mecklenburg county have shared in the awards of this foundation and much has been achieved here in behalf of Negro education that would have been undone except for this philanthropy.

The foundation has brought about other advantages for the Negro population aside from that in the educational field. It has meant much to them from the standpoint of medical care and social uplift as well.

The South generally has shared bountifully from the thoughtful legacy of this Fund.

Report Of Rosenwald Fund

The fund of more than $20,000,000 established in 1917 by the late Julius Rosenwald, Chicago merchant and philanthropist, is more than three-fourths expended, says the report just issued. There are figures on the various categories, but statistics alone cannot begin to tell of the good that this benevolence has accomplished. For Negroes in many sections of the South it has meant education and medical care not obtainable in any other way. It has meant college fellowships for Negroes and whites, surveys of and improvements in rural schools for both races, valuable studies of educational and social problems.

The fund in a few years will be exhausted, for Mr. Rosenwald, understanding how long-term bequests may outlive their usefulness, provided for its expenditure within 25 years after his death. The fund has fulfilled with dictinction its charter's statement of purpose: "To

Receipt of applications for 1942 Julius Rosenwald fund fellowships began last week, according to William C. Haygood, director for fellowships.

The fund offers fellowships under two categories: to Negroes, and to white southerners who wish to work on some problem distinctive to the South and who expect to make their careers in the South. Applications will be received until January 5, 1942.

Both types of fellowships are intended to provide opportunities for special experience or advance study to individuals who have already given evidence or exceptional ability and who wish to prepare themselves further.

The fellowships are not restricted to any special subject or activity, being open to scholars, scientists, and persons now engaged in or who plan to go into the fine arts, creative writing or journalism, education, agriculture, business or public service.

The requirements for receiving a fellowship are that applicants be between the ages of 22 and 35, although the committee will consider very exceptional cases on their merits; that completion of general college course or general professional course is made before filing application, or evidence is given of maturity and preparation which may be regarded as the equivalent of a general education of at least collegiate standard.

Students of law, medicine, or the ministry can be considered only for advanced work beyond the initial professional degree. The fellowships are open to men and women.

The terms of the fellowships will normally be one year, with renewals being considered only in exceptional cases. The award in each case will be determined on the basis of expected expenses involved and of all other factors which enter into the given application, including the length of time proposed.

Unless candidates show an exceptional record of accomp[illegible] ments and have definite plans for further preparation for distinctive service, they need not apply for the application.

The committee on fellowships requires full information about the personal history of the applicants, their education, and experience, and definite statement of the proposed study or investigation, all of which must be submitted upon a prescribed form furnished by the fellowship committee.

THIS MORNING

John Temple Graves, II

"Yet I doubt not through the ages
One increasing purpose runs
And the thoughts of men are widened
With the process of the suns...."

At the annual meeting of the Southern University conference in Birmingham this week it was good to be impressed once more with what education still may do for the Southern states if its integrities are preserved and its loyalties to light over heat are stoutly held. Poverty, ill-health, racial and religious antagonisms, labor quarrels, fascism, communism, demagogy, regional discriminations, sentimentality, and all else that holds us from the golden round can be made to wither before the light these educators hold. Given the ever more excellent human beings which education proposes and we can solve all our problems, realize our promises. And never was the need greater for such human beings in the South. When this war is won right the South is going to be not only the mecca of a nation's economic attention but the heart of a new Pan-American economy.

Because of these things two ancient crimes against the South are compounded now in their felony. One is the crime of laying hands on the educational process. The other is the crime of agitating from either direction the most difficult race problem with which any people anywhere ever had to deal. These are the crimes of Eugene Talmadge.

Walter White of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who has made his proper protests against discrimination in defense jobs an occasion for improper agitation of his race at a time of national crisis, may have overlooked something. The announcement of Julius Rosenwald Fund Fellowships for this year is just out and it is in Jim Crow form. There is one leaflet announcing "Awards to White Southerners" and another one absolutely segregated announcing "Awards to Negroes." And this from an organization which is supposed to be such a friend to the Negro that Mr. Talmadge thinks its associates ought to be discharged from Southern states as foreigners. You had better look into this, Secretary White, especially now that you have used up all the other home discriminations you can find and have begun picking on Winston Churchill and the Royal Air Force!

The Rosenwald Fund offers fellowships each year, averaging about $1,500 in amount, in two categories. One is for Negroes, the other for white Southerners "who wish to work on some problem distinctive to the South and who expect to make their careers in the South." This year's announcement points out that "both types of fellowships are intended to provide opportunities for special experience or advanced study to individuals who have already given evidence of exceptional ability and who wish to prepare themselves further.... The fellowships are not restricted to any special study or activity...."

In other words, the ideal behind the Rosenwald Foundation is light and more light. It seeks more excellent human being and the widened thoughts of men. Some of the men associated with the Foundation are Southerners and understand the Southern point of view about the two races here. Some are not from the South and have racial ideas differing from the ones held here. But there is no crusading, for this is not a crusading organization. It is an organization devoted rather to the individual human improvements and advances in human knowledge which are more important than all the crusades, and which no civilized man can ever oppose.

MRS. ROOSEVELT NEW MEMBER OF SOUTHERN EDUCATION FOUNDATION

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Southern Education Foundation, administering the George Peabody, the John F. Slater, the Anna T. Jeanes, and the Virginia Randolph Funds, amounting to approximately $3,000,000 and composed of Northern and Southern white men and outstanding colored men, held its annual meeting here January 9, at the Brookings institution.

After morning and afternoon sessions, followed by a meeting of the board of directors, the Foundation concluded its sessions with a dinner meeting at the Willard hotel with 64 persons present.

Addresses were made at the dinner meeting by Arthur D. Wright, president of the Foundation, and Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund. High ranking government officials, editors, educators, and philanthropists interested in advancing the cause of education were guests of honor, coming from as far away as New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Michigan, Louisiana and Texas; the District of Columbia was also well represented and representatives were present from a majority of the Southern states.

The following were elected as new members of the Foundation and sat in at the sessions: Dr. George E. Gardner, psychiatrist, Judge Baker Gudance Center, Boston; President Sidney C. Garrison, George Peabody college for Teachers, Nashville; President Benjamin C. Mays, Morehouse college, Atlanta; President Frederick D. Patterson, Tuskegee institute; and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Washington. Also elected a member of the Foundation, but unable to be present at this meeting because of illness, was Julian L. Harris, editor of the Times, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dr. Emmett J. Scott was re-elected a member of the board of directors for a five-year term, and the following new members of the board of directors were elected: John E. Bryan, Dr. John M. Ellison, R. Ogden Purves, and Dr. Homer P. Rainey.

In addition to the above, the following carried over as members of the board of directors: C. Everett Bacon, Dr. Ambrose Caliver, Warren Kearny, Arthur W. Page, Dr. Albert Shaw, Leslie W. Snow and Arthur D. Wright.

The finance committee reported the capital assets of the Foundation as amounting to $2,996,242. The present annual budget provides for expenditures for Jeanes Teachers' salaries, meetings and scholarships; administration and general educational service; retirement allowances; county training school buildings; and miscellaneous items.

Foundation Membership

Professor John M. Ellison, Virginia Union university, Richmond, Va.; John Temple Graves II, columnist, The Age-Herald, Birmingham; the Rev. James E. Gregg, rector of First Congregational church, Waterbury, Conn.; President David D. Jones, Bennett college, Grensboro, N. C.; Warren Kearney, president of J. Watts Kearny and Sons, New Orleans; Charles H. Mahoney, president, Great Lakes Mutual Life Insurance Mitchell, University of Richmond, company, Detroit; Professor S. C. Richmond, Va.; Professor Josiah Morse, University of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.; Henry C. Patterson, lawyer, Philadelphia; R. Ogden Purdves, treasurer of Hampton institute;

President Homer P. Rainey, University of Texas, Austin, Texas; Dr. Emmett J. Scott, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Albert Shaw, former editor, Review of Reviews, Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y.; R. L. Smith, president, Farmers' Improvement Agricultural school, Wolfe City, Texas; Leslie W. Snow, vice-president, Chase National Bank, New York city; C. C. Spaulding, president, North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance company, Durham, N. C.; R. C. Stovall, president, Columbus and Greenville Railway, Columbus, Miss.; Arthur D. Wright, president of the Foundation, Washington; and P B. Young, editor of the Journal and Guide, Norfolk, Va.

The following officers were elected for the year 1941: Arthur D. Wright, president; chairman of the board of directors, R. Ogden Purves; secretary, Dr. Emmett J. Scott; and treasurer, the Manufacturers Trust company of New York city.

In Washington last week for the fourth annual meeting of the board of the Southern Education Foundation, we joined in welcome to a new member who glided in at 11 o'clock in the morning, all grace, sympathy and undivided interest. She was Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Somehow we thought of her as just up; and after she had stayed at the meeting an hour and a half, there in the handsome Brookings Institute, we thought of her as having given the good part of her day to our deliberations. But back to the hotel late that evening we read the papers and learned how small a part of Eleanor Roosevelt's day had really been given to the Southern Education Foundation. She had made two speeches to two different groups before coming to us; after leaving us she had attended a Girl Scout picnic, given a luncheon to the ladies of the Supreme Court, taken part in a dedication, attended three meetings, on this, that and the other, gone to a dinner and an evening musicale.

* * *

Someday somebody is going to write a book about what American history would have been or have failed to be without the inexhaustible, unceasing, nothing-withholding energy of the Roosevelts—Theodore, Franklin and Eleanor.

* * *

But Mrs. Roosevelt could profitably have spent her whole day with the Southern Education Foundation. According to its very diplomatic, able and devoted president, Arthur D. Wright, it is basically the oldest philanthropic organization in the United States operating other than locally—and the only one devoted exclusively to better rural education facilities for Negroes in the South.

Although the Foundation itself was not organized until 1937, the funds it administers date as far back as 1867. That was the year in which one of them, the Peabody Fund was created by George Peabody. The Peabody Fund made its last great gift to philanthropy when it created the George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville in 1918 and then voted to turn over the remainder of its funds to the John F. Slater Fund which had been created in 1882 to improve the condition of Negroes in the South by assisting in the training of teachers from their own ranks. Treasurer of the combined Peabody and Slater Funds when they were joined was the late J. P. Morgan. In 1907 there was created the Jeanes Fund, gift of a little Quaker lady, Anna T. Jeanes, who had never been in the South but who became interested after listening to representatives of Tuskeegee and Hampton Institutes. From this fund the monies were obtained which have financed the system of Jeanes Teachers in so many Southern counties and the untold advances in Negro character, culture, good will and good relationship for which these teachers have been responsible. Today there are nearly 500 of them.

When the three funds were joined in 1937, and the Virginia Randolph Fund of $25,000 added, to form the Southern Education Foundation, the total amounted to something like $3,000,000, representing an annual income of around $120,000.

* * *

That is a very small sum of money for the task at hand, but by using it to get at the very heart of the task and to encourage others in the same task, its administrators have been able to accomplish much. At the board meeting last week there were Northerners and Southerners, white men and Negroes, men of finance and men of education, rich men and poor men. That was as it should be. All the groups whom these differing men represented have a direct interest now in better and better education for the Negroes of the rural South. More and more, all of us are coming to see that in this day of a mass producing that calls for mass consuming our American economic system is crippled in part so long as any large proportion of the American population is sub-standard in its living and consuming

* * *

And more and more of us in the South are coming to see that in this day when, whether we like it or not, the Negro is getting more and more rights and privileges as a result of the competition of the two political parties for his vote, the white South has every reason to want the Southern Negro made as fine a human being and citizen as education can make him.

Spinster's Millions Brings Educational Services To Negroes

She was Miss Anna Jeanes, who founded a home in her city for elderly indigent women, and lived there with them in spartan severity despite her wealth.

So frail that a pillow was placed under her elbow to steady her hand when she signed the million-dollar trust shortly before her death in 1907, Miss Jeanes declared the purpose of her gift was "the furthering and fostering of rudimentary education" among southern Negroes.

Southern Education Foundation Holds Conference In Washington

Has Nearly Three Millions In Assets—Administers George Peabody, Slater, Jeanes and Virginia Randolph Funds—Patterson, Mays, Mrs. Roosevelt Among New Members.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—The Southern Education Foundation, administering the George Peabody, the John F. Slater, the Anna T. Jeanes and the Virginia Randolph Funds, amounting to approximately $3,000,000, and composed of Northern and Southern white men and outstanding colored men, held its annual meeting here January 9 at the Brookings Institution.

After morning and afternoon sessions, followed by a meeting of the board of directors, the Foundation concluded its sessions with a dinner meeting at the Willard hotel with 64 persons present.

Addresses were made at the dinner meeting by Arthur D. Wright, president of the Foundation, and Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund. High ranking government officials, editors, educators and philanthropists interested in advancing the cause of education were guests of honor.

NEW FOUNDATION MEMBERS ELECTED

Dr. Emmett J. Scott was re-elected a member of the board of directors for a five-year term, and the following new members of the board of directors were elected: John E. Bryan, Dr. John M. Ellison, R. Ogden Purves and Dr. Homer P. Rainey. In addition to the above, the following carried over as members of the board of directors: Dr. Ambrose Caliver, Messrs. C. Everett Bacon, Warren Kearny, Arthur W. Page, Leslie W. Snow, Arthur D. Wright and Dr. Albert Shaw.

The finance committee reported the capital assets of the Foundation as amounting to $2,996,242. The present annual budget provides for expenditures for Jeanes Teachers' salaries, meetings and scholarships; administration and general educational service; retirement allowances; county training school buildings and miscellaneous items.

The following officers were elected for the year, 1941: Arthur D. Wright, president; R. O. Purves, chairman of the board of directors; Dr. Emmett J. Scott, secretary and treasurer, the Manufacturers Trust Company of New York City.

In Washington last week for the fourth annual meeting of the board of the Southern Education Foundation, we joined in welcome to a new member who glided in at 11 o'clock in the morning, all grace, sympathy and undivided interest. She was Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Somehow we thought of her as just up; and after she had stayed at the meeting an hour and a half, there in the handsome Brookings Institute, we thought of her as having given the good part of her day to our deliberations. But back to the hotel late that evening we read the papers and learned how small a part of Eleanor Roosevelt's day had really been given to the Southern Education Foundation. She had made two speeches to two different groups before coming to us; after leaving us she had attended a Girl Scout picnic, given a luncheon to the ladies of the Supreme Court, taken part in a dedication, attended three meetings, on this, that and the other, gone to a dinner and an evening musicale.

* * *

Someday somebody is going to write a book about what American history would have been or have failed to be without the inexhaustible, unceasing, nothing-withholding energy of the Roosevelts—Theodore, Franklin and Eleanor.

* * *

But Mrs. Roosevelt could profitably have spent her whole day with the Southern Education Foundation. According to its very diplomatic, able and devoted president, Arthur D. Wright, it is basically the oldest philanthropic organization in the United States operating other than locally—and the only one devoted exclusively to better rural education facilities for Negroes in the South.

Although the Foundation itself was not organized until 1937, the funds it administers date as far back as 1867. That was the year in which one of them, the Peabody Fund was created by George Peabody. The Peabody Fund made its last great gift to philanthropy when it created the George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville in 1918 and then voted to turn over the remainder of its funds to the John F. Slater Fund which had been created in 1882 to improve the condition of Negroes in the South by assisting in the training of teachers from their own ranks. Treasurer of the combined Peabody and Slater Funds when they were joined was the late J. P. Morgan. In 1907 there was created the Jeanes Fund, gift of a little Quaker lady, Anna T. Jeanes, who had never been in the South but who became interested after listening to representatives of Tuskeegee and Hampton Institutes. From this fund the monies were obtained which have financed the system of Jeanes Teachers in so many Southern counties and the untold advances in Negro character, culture, good will and good relationship for which these teachers have been responsible. Today there are nearly 500 of them.

When the three funds were joined in 1937, and the Virginia Randolph Fund of $25,000 added, to form the Southern Education Foundation, the total amounted to something like $3,000,000, representing an annual income of around $120,000.

* * *

That is a very small sum of money for the task at hand, but by using it to get at the very heart of the task and to encourage others in the same task, its administrators have been able to accomplish much. At the board meeting last week there were Northerners and Southerners, white men and Negroes, men of finance and men of education, rich men and poor men. That was as it should be. All the groups whom these differing men represented have a direct interest now in better and better education for the Negroes of the rural South. More and more, all of us are coming to see that in this day of a mass producing that calls for mass consuming our American economic system is crippled in part so long as any large proportion of the American population is sub-standard in its living and consuming

* * *

And more and more of us in the South are coming to see that in this day when, whether we like it or not, the Negro is getting more and more rights and privileges as a result of the competition of the two political parties for his vote, the white South has every reason to want the Southern Negro made as fine a human being and citizen as education can make him.

Distinctive Educational Service Provided by Million-Dollar Trust.

By The Associated Press.

She was Miss Anna Jeanes, who founded a home in her city for elderly indigent women and lived there with them in Spartan severity despite her wealth.

So frail that a pillow was placed under her elbow to steady her hand when she signed the million-dollar trust shortly before her death in 1907, Miss Jeanes declared the purpose of her gift was "the furthering and fostering of rudimentary education" among southern Negroes.

400 Now Employed.

In the slightly more than three decades since the fund was established, hundreds of "Jeanes teachers," as they are called, have been assigned posts among rural Negroes in the southern states. Currently about 400 are employed in Virginia, Maryland, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas.

Miss Jeanes' first gift to southern Negro education was made several years before she created the million-dollar trust fund.

The late Dr. Hollis B. Frissell, principal of Hampton Institute in Virginia, called on Miss Jeanes seeking a contribution to that school.

Wanted to Hear.

Dr. Frissell reported she told him she would give him nothing, but "I want to hear about the poor little Negro cabin one-teacher rural schools. Can thee tell me about these schools?"

Dr. Frissell replied he surely could, and he did.

After he finished, she went to her checkbook and Dr. Frissell said he expected about $100, or maybe $150.

Instead he got $10,000.

Booker T. Washington, acting on Dr. Frissell's suggestion, also called upon Miss Jeanes, and he, too, received $10,000.

Then George Foster Peabody, a native of Columbus, who was then treasurer of the general education board, visited her and in April, 1905, was given $200,000 for use in Negro education.

Her million-dollar trust followed two years later.

Duties Diversified.

The duties of Jeanes teachers embrace such diversified activities as school classroom work, stimulating school attendance in communities where it is low, health, and the manual arts. They work both with children and their parents. A large percentage of the teachers are Negro women.

Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon, of the University System of Georgia, says "the Jeanes supervisor is one of those rare individuals in American educational organization who has not been standardized as to type, professional activities, or duties."

Jeanes teachers now are paid from funds of the Southern Education Foundation of which the Jeanes fund is a part and by public money in the various states.

890 Seniors To Get Diplomas In Birmingham High Schools

Exercises In Several Communities Thursday Evening Will Mark End Of Students' Work

Birmingham's five high schools for white students will graduate 600 seniors in exercises at 8 p.m. Thursday. Parker High, the city's Negro high school, will hold graduation exercises for 290 seniors in the school auditorium at 7:45 p.m. Friday.

F. D. McArthur, vice president of the City Board of Education, will address the Parker High graduates, and Dr. C. B. Glenn, superintendent of Birmingham Public Schools, will present diplomas to 108 boys and 182 girls.

A commencement program, based on a democratic theme, "The American Way of Life," will be given by the students, and the a capella choir of Parker High School will sing. Robert J. Price, member of the graduating class, will be master of ceremonies.

Commencements at the other city high schools will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday. Dr. C. B. Glenn will speak and award the diplomas at Phillips High School, and a group of seniors will discuss "Youth's Part in Citizenship Today."

Ramsay High School will hold its exercises at Southside Baptist Church, with Dr. Fred R. Chenault and F. D. McArthur speaking and Principal T. C. Young presenting the diplomas.

Woodlawn High School graduates will receive their diplomas from Principal N. B. Hendrix. Richard Dill will preside over the special class program and Rev. D. I. Purser, Jr., will give the benediction.

West End High School's graduation will be held at the West End Baptist Church, with C. J. Going, assistant superintendent of schools, presenting the diplomas, and the Rev. Jack Meyer giving the benediction.

Ensley High School seniors will hear an address by the Rev. John C. Turner, rector of the Church of the Advent, and a talk by Commissioner Eugene Connor. Dr. L. Frazer Banks, assistant superintendent of schools, will present the diplomas, and Principal E. E. Sechriest will award the letters and monograms.

Birmingham-Southern and Howard College will hold no formal commencement exercises for the few students who will graduate at the end of the first semester. They will receive their diplomas in June.

Examinations begin at Birmingham-Southern on Thursday and last until Jan. 24. Registration begins Jan. 13 and continues for a week.

Negro School Placed Upon Accredited List

Cobb Avenue Negro High School has been placed on the state approved list which means that the facilities of the school, such as teaching staff, library equipment, science equipment, shop, etc., have been improved to meet standards set up by the state. The accreditment also means that students finishing the school may enter state colleges for Negroes without entrance examinations.

Principal C. M. Mitchell has stated that the school is trying to promote a program which will give the pupils access to a variety of experiences which may help them to better adjust themselves to the society of which they are a part and become better citizens.

GREENE COUNTY TRAINING SCHOOL ASKING FOR AID

Not since the year 1929 has a plea come from the County Training School for negroes located at Boligee for aid in a building campaign. In the year 1929 the citizens of Greene County qualified for a vocational building to teach pupils better methods of farming, and shop work in general.

With increased enrollment over a period of years and anticipated increases due to public transportation of negro children from the various sections of the county for the first time in Greene County it becomes necessary to have more room to meet this need.

Authorized by the county superintendent of education of Greene County, Mr. S. D. Bayer we launch a $7,000.00 building fund to be used for space at the County Training School. The county board has in the past helped those who help themselves and our faith in them on this occasion is as in years gone by. The board of education has kept a "watchful eye" on this the County Training School and are convinced the trend is in the right direction. The policy of the school is to train the hands along with the mind, and each pupil "Let his bucket down" where he is and become a real asset to himself and to the community. The record of the graduates plus others helped at the school prove that it does pay in rich dividends to train negroes. Not a single graduate has been arrested.

This school belongs to the county and the only school in the county where negroes can complete a senior high school course. Its not sectional, but countywide in its scope. Therefore, we are asking every civic minded individual, church, business enterprise, club and other organizations to answer this urgent call. Our goal is $3,000.00 of this amount stated above.

This campaign gets under way on September first and ends at Thanksgiving. Principal A. W. Young of the County Training School will call on the white people and Rev. S. M. Todd, moderator of the Colored Baptist Association of the county will be chairman of the Colored Division. We may not contact everyone who desires to help, but you may make check payable to the Greene County Training School Building Fund and mail same to Greene County Training School, Boligee, Alabama. Every name and amount will be published after the drive closes. We thank you.

The 1941-42 session of the Booker Washington High School began Monday morning with a very encouraging outlook for the year's work. Approximately 1,800 students enrolled during the first week. After the initial routine of organization, class work has moved along smoothly in all departments.

For the current school year the following teachers have been elected to serve as chairmen of the various groups: Primary department, Mrs. Ethel Broadnax; intermediate group, Miss Sadie C. Lee; junior high school, Miss Lela Jackson; senior high school, Prof. J. Z. Morris.

Principal C. T. Smiley is asking that parents secure textbooks for their children as soon as possible, so that they may have the necessary tolls for immediate classwork.

The first assembly program of the year was held on Tuesday morning in the school auditorium. The program featured an interesting and encouraging talk by Principal Smiley. He welcomed the old and new pupils to the school and urged each of them to make good use of the many opportunities that the school offers them. Prof. Morris presented members of the high school faculty to the student body. Vocal and instrumental music featured the exercises.

The annual institute of the Montgomery city and county school teachers is scheduled to be held Saturday morning in the Booker Washington High School auditorium. Dr. Charles M. Dannelly, superintendent of education will be in charge of the meeting. Several distinguished educators are to be heard on this program. Mrs. Lucile N. Beverly, reporter.

Ask Relief at Shaw

The Shaw Junior High School Parent - Teacher Association, through the Rev. A. F. Elmes, its president, sent a letter to the board this week, asking immediate relief for the over-crowded conditions at the Shaw Junior High School. This letter was referred to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, the superintendent, for consideration.

The Pleasant Plains Civic Association, through the chairman of the executive committee, A. S. Pinkett, called the attention of the board to the shortage of teachers, especially on primary and secondary levels, and urged that provisions be made to relieve this condition not only in the 1942 budget but that a deficiency apporpriation be requested.

This request and a similar request from the Bloomingdale Civic Association, through the chairman of the legislative committee, Guy Tinner, was referred to the committee on finance and to Superintendent Frank W. Ballou.

Oppose Liquor License

JAN 11 194

The board of education opposed the application of Max Bergan, 130 H Street, Southwest, for a retailer's liquor license, class "B".

The reasons for the opposition are: that this grocery store is located near the Randall Junior High School, which has approximately 1200 students enrolled; it is also in the vicinity of the Randall Recreation Center, which holds classes at the school each Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evening.

A great number of school children pass this store going to and from school and from a hundred to a hundred and fifty school children enter this store daily to make purchases.

JAN 11 194

The board approved the revised sketches for the proposed senior high school to be located at Twenty-fourth and Benning Road, Northeast.

Teacher Sues to Compel Appointment

JAN 12 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Claiming his name was skipped over by the board of education and school officials in appointing a teacher of general science and social studies in the junior high schools, Roscoe Melvin Jackson, 3256 Prospect avenue, northwest, filed suit in the District Court last week to compel his appointment as a probationary teacher.

Beginning in September, 1939, he states, the junior high school curriculum has not included history and geography as separate subjects, but these two courses were combined in a group called social studies, alternating nine weeks of geography and nine weeks of history.

In view of the fact that Mr. Jackson took the examination for appointment as teacher of general science and geography, Asst. Supt. Garnett C. Wilkinson states, he cannot be certified for appointment as teacher of general science and history. Such an appointment, he declares, would invade the rights of the No. 1, eligible on the list for general science and history.

The eligible lists in general science and geography and general science and history cannot be merged, he maintains, because they were establishd by two diffrent examinations.

WASHINGTON WILL HAVE RACE ENTRANTS IN ORATORICAL CONTEST

MAR 8 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C. (ANP)—For the first time, colored high school pupils of the District of Columbia will compete in the annual oratorical contest sponsored by the American Legion. Through the efforts of J. Franklin Wilson, local lawyer and former commander of the James E. Walker post, the racial barriers heretofore erected against Negroes were broken down and Divisions 10-11-12-13, which are the colored divisions of the school system here will compete in the contest.

Local winners will take part in the state contests, and several states comprising an area will then be included in an elimination contest.

Finals will be held in Indianapolis where the winners of the elimination contests will appear to orate for a prize valued at $4,000. Second prize is $1,000 and third prize $500, all in the form of scholarships.

FLORIDA PRINCIPAL CLAIMS SACRIFICE IS 'WORTH DOZEN JOBS'

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 6 — Vernon McDaniel, principal of Washington High School, Pensacola, has officially re-opened the teachers' fight of Florida for equalization of salary by filing petition with the superintendent and School Board of Escambia County for equal salary with that of the white principal of similar qualifications and performing similar functions.

McDaniel, 34-year-old graduate of Bishop College, Marshall, Texas, has spent 13 years in Escambia County both as teacher and principal. He has completed his graduate work for M.A. degree, and requires only the writing of his Thesis.

Before becoming principal of the school, McDaniel taught mathematics and coached the football team for six years. The last seven years has been spent as principal of the school.

In petitioning the Superintendent and Board of Escambia County for equal salary, McDaniel points out that white principals with similar qualifications and no experience at all were receivnig $200 as minimum salary, while he with maximum service gets only $165.

In this fight, it is supposed by many that McDaniel faces the same fate of losing his job as John E. Gilbert, who brought a mandamus suit against the School Board of Brevard County about two years ago. In response to such probability, McDaniel very courageously states: "The sacrifice is worth a dozen jobs."

The teachers of Escambia County and the teachers of the Florida State Teachers' Association are 100 per cent behind this effort to wipe out the salary differential.

In its regular session, the Florida State Teachers' Association unanimously went on record as assessing each member $2.50 to carry on the fight.

While McDaniel is still awaiting a reply on his petition, plans are on foot to file similar petitions in other counties if it becomes necessary to do so.

It must be remembered that John E. Gilbert, a former principal of Brevard County, brought a mandamus suit against the Superintendent and Board of Education of Brevard County for equal salary with white teachers after his petition was denied. The local courts however, as well as the Florida Supreme Court, ruled against him. Since that time, Melvin Alston and the teachers of Norfolk, Va., have won an injunction suit for the equalization salary.

The result or outcome of McDaniel's petition will have much to do with future steps in Folrida teachers' fight for equal pay.

New Negro School Project Approved

Final approval has been given to a WPA project to construct a new Negro high school at Chelsea and 24th Sts., to replace the Middleton High School, destroyed by fire last March.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved allocation of $62,486 in Federal funds, to be supplemented by district money. The new building, a modern one-story brick structure, is to be completed in time for the opening of the 1941 school terms, officials said.

After the high school burned, its 478 pupils were temporarily shifted to the Booker T. Washington School and the Macfarlane School in West Tampa, which formerly was used for white children.

WPA ALLOTS FUNDS TO BUILD SCHOOL IN FLORIDA CITY

TAMPA, Fla., May 22 — Advice has just been received from WPA State headquarters in Jacksonville that $62,486 has been allocated for construction of a high school building here, to replace the one destroyed by fire several months ago.

The sum allocated will be used to match a sponsor's contribution of $38,268. Total expenditure on erection and equipment of the school, which will provide employment for 128 men, all of whom are to be Negroes, it is understood, will therefore amount to $100,754.

Speaker Here Sees Brighter World Future

An international picture that glimmers with the promise of a better future despite the tragedies of today was painted for an audience at Spelman College yesterday afternoon by Pierre de Lanux, for 11 years director of the Paris office of the League of Nations.

"The present time is full of horrible deeds and things," M. de Lanux declared. "Yet I cannot hate the epoch I live in, because if the scandal is great, the promise is greater still. Men are awake at last. Their sin was to be inattentive. They resist and suffer, therefore they exist.

Millions Realize Now.

"There used to be a very small number of people who understood what it meant to be alive in this age. There are millions now.

"Nations disappear, forms of government become discredited, rulers rise and fall, the rich become poor and the poor do not become rich. So we no longer put our creed in slogans, our blind faith in human leaders, our confidence in luck or habit, nor our safety in numbers.

"We shall have to recognize that the stuff which men are made of, and the use they make of that stuff, is what matters—in the end."

One result of the present evil tide will be to sweep away the small distinctions between all men who possess a soul, be they Christian or free-thinker, mystic or philosopher.

Spells Revolutions.

"All these creatures possessed with personal souls can be reconciled with one another, but not with this present world," the speaker pointed out. "They could not if they tried.

"And that spells revolution." Speaking of the international responsibilities of man, the lecturer declared that the essentials of democracy lie in the "rights of man. That is, of all men."

"The rights of each man can serve as a basis for a democratic society only if the other men's rights are equally preserved; that is, if each man professes the same respect for other men's rights that he demands for his own. That defines the democratic duties of man.

"Democracy is the attempt to make, as completely as is humanly possible, man responsible for his own fate. All undemocratic regimes, whether it is one man dictatorship, group tyranny or mob rule, are characterized by the weakening or disappearance of that one essential: individual responsibility. And there are two ways of destroying a democracy, either to suppress the rights of man, as for example in Fascism, or to let him forget his duties, as in political demagogy of the type more familiar to us."

Richland Colored School Children Make Brooders

School boys of the Richland High & Industrial colored school who have poultry as one of their supervised practice projects, are being taught to make chicken brooders.

Each of the twenty-six boys enrolled in Agriculture are required to have a supervised project and eight of these twenty-six boys have poultry production as a project.

These boys through their project study found that it is more profitable for them to buy baby chicks and brood them at the proper time than it is to wait until the hens get ready to set before starting their flocks.

The brooders that the boys are making have a brooding compartment three by four feet and a sun porch thee by six feet.

It will brood one hundred chicks for two or three weeks after which time they should be placed in two brooders. The brooder is heated by a No. 2 lamp in order that it can be used on the farm.

In an attempt to make the brooders practical, the boys are using their waste materials in construction.

One of the brooders is on display at the school. S. M. Davis and Carnell Martin have supervised the construction of the brooders and these supervisors and their project boys will be glad for white people to visit their school and look over their work.

COCHRAN COLORED HIGH SCHOOL WINS TROPHY

Not content with all the trophies the white schools of Cochran have won this year, our colored school emerged from the Students' District Meeting in Dublin on March 14th with the beautiful silver cup, which is the first trophy this school has ever won. Contests included spelling, oration and track, and schools competing were Eastman, Dublin, Swainsboro, Wrightsville, Soperton, Adrain and Cochran.

Prof. Sessions is very proud of his school and is constantly striving to improve it.

It might be added here that every teacher in the Cochran colored school is a four-year college graduate with several years of experience in teaching.

COMMENCEMENT UNION POINT NEGRO SCHOOL

The primary and elementary grades presented their play, "Polly's Troubles," to a large audience on Monday night. The play was under the direction of H. W. Tapley and V. A. Brown.

"Here Comes Charley," the high school drama, will be presented on Friday night at 8:30, May 2nd. The school is expected to be packed for this performance. This play will be under the direction of E. M. Jackson. Outstanding characters of the play are: Janie Williams—Charlotte (called Charley,) Larry Elliott—Henry Horton; Mrs. Farnham—Leila Grant; Vivian Smith—Lucile Gresham; Uncle Alex—Hunter Williams.

Baccalaureate service will be held at Siloam Baptist church on Sunday, May 4th, at 3:30 p. m. Dr. Loyd Garland, pastor of the Union Point Baptist church (white), outstanding minister of the city, will deliver the sermon for this occasion.

Graduation exercises will be held in the colored Baptist church also. Dr. Arthur Raper, social science analyst of Greensboro, one of the foremost educators of the state and the South, will deliver the commencement address. Music will be furnished by the high school chorus.

The public is invited to attend these exercises. Special seats will be reserved for white friends of education.

Six seventh grade students will receive certificates. They are: Lillie Grant, Willie Gresham, Garland Hillman, Bennie Hillman, Emmet Stephens and James Shank. Henry Horton, Sarah Hillman, Janie Williams and Hunter Williams will receive junior high school certificates.

Colored School Seeks Home Ec Dept.

The Advertiser publishes below a letter in the form of an appeal written by the principal of the Peabody Colored school, which we believe deserves consideration and support.

It would seem very profitable to the housewives of Eastman if they could be assured that the domestic servant they hire would have the training that the proposed school would insure.

We submit the letter for your consideration:

'One of the greatest needs of Peabody High school is a well equipped home economics department. The reason for such a need is the fact that over 95 per cent of its students do domestic work before and after they finish school. With a good home ec department and an efficient teacher in that department these children could be trained to do this type of work thoroughly. Each child that finishes would be compelled to take a course in home making.

"For the past three years we have been working faithfully for such a department. At last it seems that with the aid of the NYA we will have a chance to accomplish our desire by raising a sum of money ourselves.

"We are out to raise at least $300.00 by the 4th of July The county has been divided into districts, and each district is alloted a definite sum of money.

"It is very important that we raise this money, because this is a special opportunity that has been offered to us by the NYA, and we do not want to miss it.

"'Among other plans to raise this money, one is to have solicitors make contact with various people in the community and ask them for money.

"It is hoped that you will cooperate with these men when they come to see you.

WALTER CHIVERS SAYS:

Time Is Right For Negro Inspector Of High Schools

THE STATE OF GEORGIA suffered locally and nationally for far too many years because of its inadequate, inefficient public school system and an excessively high rate of illiteracy. Sensational perverses, economics and political in character, can be traced more or less directly to this state of affairs.

CHIVERS

The resulting shock was virile enough to make the state leaders extend themselves to do something constructive about public education. The educational reforms got off to a slow start but the later availability of federal funds enabled the state to make unprecedented rapid strides in the development of its educational facilities and program.

EMPHASIS WEAK

It is general knowledge that the emphasis placed upon Negro education during this period was very weak—the tangible result is evidence of this. This was a regrettable fact. Viewed from the point of abtract justice it was inexcusable. However, if one views it from the standpoint of racial self-interest it can be considered as the "natural" thing to do.

This experience, however, has helped to magnify the poverty-available to approximately one-third of Georgia's citizens who happen to be Negroes. Their ignorance has been in no small degree responsible for the collapse of tobacco and cotton farming, particularly, the latter.

The failure to provide vocational training on a broad and varied scale is a large factor in placing such an abnormal number of Negroes on the relief roles and continuing them there. Even the disgracefully high homicide rate among Negroes has a relationship to the neglect of Negro public education both as to amount, quality and kind.

NEGROES FORGOTTEN

I believe that this neglect of Negroes in the rural districts in the South, is often due to the fact that Southern white political leaders are so deeply engrossed in trying to aid the thousands of dispossessed white people to measure up to the requirements for productive citizenship until Negroes fade from their vision.

The South has so thoroughly convinced itself that it is poverty-stricken until it has acquired a poverty-complex. This complex has made it stingy, sensitive and abnormally self-centered on the problems of white people. Many of its sins against Negroes, I believe, may be charged to this state of mind. However, Georgia in its effort to break away from this complex has set democratic ideals as its goal. This being true, Georgia must cease to mourn over its sins of ommission and commission and use its collective intelligence to developing a philosophy of education that will expand its efforts to include all citizens, regardless of race in an equal program of education.

WANT TO LIVE HERE

A study of Georgia Negro College graduates of 1937 which in conduct revealed that these Negro youths do not leave the state when they can. They go there. Even when the state denies them an opportunity they look for work in other parts of the South. They want to live in their home state because it is home and they have developed accommodations to it. Then, too, the Negro Colleges and high schools all tend to promote a type of missionary zeal in their students which makes the majority of them want to have a hand in "saving the race".

There is growing evidence that an increasing number of native white Georgians are convinced that the state cannot move farther ahead with one-third of its population lagging behind.

SUGGESTS NEGRO

Successful educational administration is an intimate personal social process. Such officials must be a part of the people whom they serve. That is why I am suggesting a Negro to fill the vacancy left by Mr. L. M. Laster in the Division of Negro Education. He might be called Inspector of Negro High Schools. The title is not nearly so important as the function. Such an appointment would be an inspiration to Negro youth to stay in school and strive.

The present department of Negro Education is in the capable hands of Mr. R. L. Cousins, who has shown peculiar capability for handling the political phase of Negro education. He is Georgia born and educated. There are native Negro Georgians with equal capacity for handling the intimate task of supervising Negro high schools.

I recommend this task to the Georgia Association of teachers in Colored Schools as a project with merit. Its success would do much to gain the interest of teachers who are [illegible] it because they feel it is important.

A petition signed by a large number of teachers might do the trick or possibly hundreds of letters sent to the Department of Education might be valuable. Whatever the means, the end is certainly worth the effort.

Retiring Negro Educator Glad Of Crime-Free Alumni Roster

CORDELE, [AP]—Back in 1902, two Negro educators, A. S. Clark and his wife—went riding through South Georgia in search of a community where they could be of service by establishing a school for Negroes. They decided that here in Cordele was their opportunity, and as a result Gillespie Institute was founded.

It began with a plant of two wooden buildings, a faculty of three and an enrolment of 28 boys and girls. One of the buildings was a church, the other the residence of the Clarks, one room of which was used as a classroom.

Today the enrolment is 408 and there are 18 on the faculty.

"The purpose of the school is to make better citizens, men and women, with worthwhile characters, who believe in the great principles of our nation and who honor God above all things else," said Dr. Clark.

"As far as I know personally, I do not recall that the name of any of the hundreds of boys and girls who have, after finishing our school, been placed on a sheriff's record or a police blotter."

Gillespie gives the regular grammar school work and a full, four-year high school course. It is accredited by the state of Georgia and the Southern Association of Accredited Schools.

The old buildings have been replaced, with a new brick structure including an auditorium of 600-seat capacity, nine class rooms and the administrative offices. There is a girls' dormitory and dining hall, a boys' dormitory and a home for the superintendent.

On Sept. 1, Dr. Clark will retire as active head of the school, citing a need to pass the heavy duties and responsibilities on to younger workers.

The A. S. Clarks

Nearly forty years ago, in 1902, two Negro educators, A. S. Clark and his wife, made an inspection tour of South Georgia with a view to selecting a community in which the founding and operation of a school for Negro youths would render the largest and most needed service. Due to the meager educational facilities provided for Negro children in Cordele at that time they decided that here was a field in which they could render to their race a large and much needed service as a life work. A. S. Clark is a native of North Carolina. His wife is a native of Alabama.

As a result of the decision of these two people Gillespie Institute was founded in Cordele nearly forty years ago. It began with a plant of two wooden buildings, a faculty of three and an enrollment of 28 boys and girls. One of the buildings was a church, the other the residence of the Clarks, one room of which was used as a class room.

Since its beginning the purpose of the school has been the education, uplift and betterment of the Negro people. Here is Dr. Clark's own answer as to what was the purpose and is still the purpose of the school: "The purpose of the school is to make better citizens, men and women, with worthwhile characters, who believe in the great principles of our nation, and who honor God above all things else." That has been and is now the steadfast purpose of the men and women who shape the work, study, religious and recreational programs of the school. Whether Dr. Clark and his wife, assisted by their faculty coworkers have succeeded so far in accomplishing this purpose let the record speak. During the intervening years between an enrollment of 28 at the start and a faculty of three to the present enrollment of 408 and a faculty of 18, several hundred graduates have gone out from the institution to make their way in the world. Whether they are succeeding as useful citizens may be gathered from this statement from Dr. Clark: "As far as I know personally, I do not recall that the name of any of the hundreds of boys and girls who have, after finishing our school, been placed on a sheriff's record or a police blotter." That is not a bad record. Many, he recalls are occupying responsible positions in life. "The school at all times has sought to exalt the dignity of labor," said Dr. Clark.

In addition to regular grammar school work Gillespie has a four year high school course. Manual training, agriculture, home economics and a course in music are among the subjects taught, and recently a move has been inaugurated looking toward training boys and girls for defense work. The school is accredited by the state of Georgia in group 1, and also is accredited by the Southern Association of Accredited Schools.

So far we have been talking about the founding, purpose, operation and accomplishments of the school. Now lets see about the growth of the physical properties of the plant.

As above stated, the school began in two wooden buildings and continued to operate in these buildings until 1904 when a frame administration building was constructed, which in turn, was replaced in 1937 with the present modernly equipped brick structure housing an auditorium with seating capacity of 600, administrative offices, and 9 class rooms. It was built and equipped at a cost of $70,000,

In 1929 a three-story brick girls dormitory was built and equipped at a cost of $85,000. It contains a modern dining hall and will accommodate 70 girls. At the same time and on an adjoining site a residence for the superintendent was erected at a cost of $7,000. In 1906 a boys dormitory was added to the plant. This building was repaired and remodeled into a modern brick veneer structure last year at the cost of $10,000.

For a number of years the second story of the first administration building was used as a hospital but as the years passed the need for a modern hospital increased to such an extent that a thirty bed hospital was included in the 1937 program of plant expansion. It was erected and equipped at a cost of $45,000.

"Sometime during the early years," said Dr. Clark, "a log cabin was built on the grounds with some of the logs being a gift by a friend of the school living at Oakfield, 18 miles away. This building housed the vocational work and still stands on the site."

The buildings enumerated above comprise the physical properties of the school and were built at a total cost of $217,000. Buildings and grounds cover a little more than an entire city block. It might be interesting to some prominent Georgians who are now seeking political fodder for a future campaign by an attempt to arouse racial hatred and prejudice in this state, to know that every cent of the $217,000 was "furrin" money not the first slick dime having been solicited from the people of Cordele and Crisp county. Neither was there the remotest hint from the donors to Dr. Clark that Negro youths were to be taught social equality. Rather he was encouraged in his purpose to teach them the dignity of labor and train them to be better citizens, men and women with worthwhile characters.

On September 1st, Dr. Clark will retire as active head of the school and hospital. He will continue to direct and supervise the work of the church and all other religious activities of the institution and to assist, whenever his services are needed, in the administration of the school as a whole. Due to increasing responsibilities and problems arising from the growth of the school Dr. Clark, in retiring, is passing the heavier duties and responsibilities to younger and more vigorous hands. He does this, whether he knows it or not, with a high sense of appreciation on the part of both the white people and Negroes of this community for the fine, faithful and lasting service he has rendered both races in shaping the lives, and very largely, and destinies of the hundreds of Negro boys and girls who have come under the influence of his life and teaching.

DU SABLE GRADS FIND JOBS AND FAME IN MUSIC

MAY 11 1941

School to Be Guest on W-G-N Tuesday.

BY PAUL HEALY.

The things that most distinguish Du Sable High school are a proficiency in music and a love of soldiering. The institution, which is a continuation of the old Wendell Phillips High school, has the largest Negro enrolment in the city.

Each year many of Du Sable's students point for musical vocations. They are spurred by graduates who have become successful as concert singers or as members of innumerable big time swing bands, such as the orchestras of Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway, and Earl Hines. Already 86 Du Sable graduates are professional singers or musicians and recently three of them—William Franklin, Maurice Cooper, and Miss Frankye Brown—sang the leads in the WPA "Swing Mikado." Franklin also was heard with the Chicago Opera company last fall.

A Du Sable Regiment.

As a whole, Du Sable students also are intensely interested in military training. So many Du Sable boys left for Camp Custer with the 184th field artillery, formerly the 8th regiment, National Guard, last year that it is called the Du Sable regiment. Three-fourths of the "noncoms," half of the privates, and 30 per cent of the regiment's officers received their primary training in the Du Sable ROTC unit.

Chauncey C. Willard, principal of Du Sable, will be guest speaker at the "Citizens of Tomorrow" radio program over W-G-N at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. The show will be a transcription of the program recorded in the afternoon and witnessed by 600 Du Sable students in the W-G-N audience studio. Featured on the program will be the school chorus, singing "Thanks Be to God" [Dickson], "Will You Remember?" [Romberg-Riegger], and "In Bright Mansion," a spiritual.

Also on the program will be the announcement of three more students whose names will be recorded on the program's "Honor Roll," by Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies; of THE TRIBUNE news quiz among selected members of the audience, and a comedy skit staged by Dorothy Gregory and Eddie Firestone, W-G-N players.

Recall Old Phillips.

Du Sable High school is a direct descendant of South Division High school, which was opened at 26th street and Wabash avenue in 1878. This was succeeded by Wendell Phillips High school, 239 East Pershing road, in 1904. In 1935 a larger building was constructed for the Phillips enrollment at 49th street and Wabash avenue. When the old Phillips building had to be reopened in 1936, owing to a population increase in the district, the new building was called Du Sable after Jean Baptiste Du Sable who was Chicago's first settler in 1779 on the site where Tribune Tower now stands.

Du Sable school, however, took over the teaching personnel and the traditions of the old Phillips school. Dr. Mildred Bryant-Jones, vocal instructor, and Capt. Walter H. Dyett, band instructor, enhanced their reputations in the new building.

The school's triumphs in fostering musical talent are attributed to the music courses offered. There is a course in theory, equivalent to junior college training, and an advanced course, which lasts two years and ends in a music diploma. The latter requires double period sessions five days a week. According to Mr. Willard, students are chosen for these courses by examinations. In the advanced course a student specializes in instrumental or vocal study.

Three Bands, Four Choruses.

"Ever since I became principal of Wendell Phillips in this district in 1925, I have been impressed by the popularity of music out here," says Mr. Willard. "These people seem to have more natural rhythm than other students and, too, they realize that music offers them one of the finest vocational fields. We started specializing in music because of a demand by the community 12 years ago."

Mr. Willard pointed out that a good percentage of students in the district are surprisingly ambitious. Out of the last two graduating classes, he said, more than 35 per cent went to college, which is above the average for city schools. Many make sacrifices to go into medicine, law, and social work, the principal has noticed. Others, with their families on relief, have gone thru college with NYA assistance or on scholarships.

Senior Class Decreases.

The June graduating class this year, he said, will be about 200 students less than a year ago because of the large number of boys who dropped out of school to go to Camp Custer and the sharp decrease lately in migrants from the southern states.

Du Sable always has been strongest in its music, biology, history, art and foreign language departments. Two hundred students in the history department comprise a forum which holds panel discussions biweekly.

Colleges Offer Scholarships to Future Citizens

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

Twenty-five colleges and universities in eight states have agreed to award scholarships totaling in value more than $18,000 to needy students on the Honor Roll of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's half hour radio program, "Citizens of Tomorrow." The program is heard each Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. on W-G-N. Individual scholarships will range in value from $100 to $600 annually. Most of them are renewable if the student maintains a high scholastic record.

Dr. T. N. Barrows.

A committee, appointed by THE TRIBUNE, will administer the grants. Dr. Thomas N. Barrows, president of Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis., will be chairman of this group which meets for the first time tomorrow at Tribune Tower. Other institutions and their representatives on the committee are Beloit, Gene Wolfe; Carleton, Dr. Benjamin W. VanRiper; University of Chicago, Dr. M. J. Freeman; DePauw, Dean G. Herbert Smith, and Stephens, J. Scott Hemry.

Colleges to Select Students.

The coöperating schools will select the students to receive the scholarships from a list nominated by this committee. Complete scholastic and activity records of eligible senior students have been obtained from their principals and each student who desires aid has stated his or her college preference.

The colleges and universities offering scholarships to students on the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll are:

Beloit [Wis.]	Lake Forest [Ill.]
Carleton [Minn.]	Lawrence [Wis.]
Carroll [Wis.]	Loras [Iowa]
Central YMCA [Chi.]	MacMurray [Ill.]
University of Chicago	Monmouth [Ill.]
Coe [Iowa]	North Central [Ill.]
Cornell [Iowa]	Northwestern [Ill.]
DePauw [Ind.]	Ripon [Wis.]
Earlham [Ind.]	Rosary [Ill.]
Grinnell [Iowa]	Stephens [Mo.]
Illinois college	Wabash [Ind.]
Kalamazoo [Mich.]	Col. of Wooster [O.]
Knox [Ill.]

MAY 11 1941

All of the senior students on the Honor Roll are in the upper 10 per cent of their classes. They are officers of their classes, presidents of student councils, orators, debaters, musicians, journalists, actors and athletes. Many of them have widowed mothers. Some have earned their way thru high school.

N. U. President Lauds Plan.

In commenting on the scholarship plan, Dr. Franklyn Bliss Snyder, president of Northwestern university, said: "This is educational work of which any institution of learning might be proud but which only a great newspaper such as THE TRIBUNE can really make effective. I only wish we could award a scholarship to each of the schools heard on 'Citizens of Tomorrow.'"

Thirty-four high schools of Chicago, Cook and Du Page counties and East Chicago, Ind., have been heard on this radio program which is dedicated to the youth of America. More than 20,000 boys and girls have attended the broadcasts in studio No. 1 of W-G-N. The program is recorded from 4:30 to 5 o'clock. Next Tuesday it will feature Du Sable High school of south side Chicago.

THE Evanston Interracial council is making a fight to place Negro teachers in the Foster school. The council, composed of leaders from both races, has done excellent work toward improving better racial relationship during its ten years of existence. It is reasonable to believe that the present fight will not be lost.

It is regrettable that there are no Negro teachers in Evanston. There is no reason, save prejudice, why colored teachers are not employed. In the Foster school only colored pupils attend. But only white teachers are employed there.

There are many capable colored teachers. The council knows it. The Evanston Board of Education knows it. The citizens of Evanston know it.

The colored people of the suburb should be happy to know that they have with them the aid, admiration, and active cooperation of influential people of the other race who are willing to go all the way to influence equality for all and to work toward the ideals of the brotherhood of all men.

PRINCESS ANNE ACADEMY HIT BY TRAGEDY

APR 5 - 1941

Blame Oil Stove For Accident In Town In Maryland

PRINCESS ANNE, Md. — Four persons were dead and 26 injured at midnight Monday following a disastrous fire at Princess Anne academy here Monday which demolished a building formerly used for industrial arts training.

Names of the injured persons confined at Peninsula General hospital at Salisbury, could not be learned. The sheriff's office at Princess Anne, gave the names of the dead as follows:

APR 5 - 1941

Mrs. Emma Wright, 58, Chance.
Mrs. Letitia McBride, 60, Chance.
Miss Edna Waters, 31, Upper Hill.
Six or eight-month-old daughter of Rev. Spence of Princess Anne.

The fire which followed the explosion of an oil stove on the campus of the school which is a branch of the University of Maryland, completely destroyed the building. Dr. R. A. Grigsby, president of the institution, estimated damage at $10,000.

None of the persons killed or injured were students of the institution, according to Dr. Grigsby. All he said were employed on an out-of-school NYA mattress project.

The flames which gutted the dry, frame building in short order, were fought by the fire company from Princess Anne and members of the school's student body, who did heroic work in rescuing many of the women and girls trapped in the tinder box building.

The older women on the project were instructing the NYA girls in the art of mattress making, a project not connected with but located in an abandoned building on the school campus.

Nearly 40 persons were believed to have been in the building at the time of the tragedy which is undoubtedly the worst ever experienced in this town.

Cause of the oil stove explosion which occurred between 11 a.m. and noon Monday had not been determined as late as midnight Monday, according to the Princess Anne sheriff.

Taylor's Remarkably Fine Colored School Is Story of Progress by Determination

Through Their Own Efforts and Help From White Friends The Community Has Builded Well, Has $5700 School Property Without Any State or Federal Aid.

From one of the state's poorest school buildings, almost unfit to house human beings, to three comfortable buildings and adequate equipment, altogether valued at $5700, is the accomplishment of the Taylor negro school patrons over the past five years. Unusual accomplishments which is a source of pride to the entire Lafayette county school system, Superintendent O. D. Smith pointed out recently.

History of the Taylor negro school dates back to sometime soon after the reconstruction era when the one teacher type was known as Taylor Chapel. Two other schools in the district, at Hopewell and Mt. Hope, and some of the pioneer teachers were Shep Boone, F. Nelson, Aerna Smith, A. D. Wiley, Nettie Wortham, Mary Toles, George Lockhart, Lillie Slate.

In the course of time, the three schools were consolidated at the present location, about one and one-half miles west of Taylor, and a two-room frame building was erected. During the 1936 school term the enrollment stood at 160 students with five teachers giving instruction in eight grades in a 4 month term.

In the 1935-36 term, Joe C. Brown came to the school as principal. For twenty years school patrons had put up with makeshift in the way of buildings always with the dream of establishing the first negro agricultural high school in Lafayette. Here was an ideal location for negroes owned around 8,000 acres of land in that immediate neighborhood. Upon taking over his new duties, Joe Brown saw the opportunities of the community and received the immediate interest of Mr. O. D. Smith, newly elected county superintendent. The interest of Mr. P. H. Eason, state agent for negro education, was captured.

Soon a community organization was formed, determined to "Let your buckets down where you are."

Building Program

A building program was launched. Members of the organization pledged to give $10,00 each. Dec. 16, 1936 Rev. J. E. Brown paid the first dollar of his pledge and the district was organized into beats and plans made to plant a "cotton project" as a school benefit in each section. By the following March $80.00 had been raised. Through the summer picnics were held, further donations rolled in and the building fund grew to $300. The money was carried to the bank and three patrons signed a note for further funds. They were Alex Martin, T. M. Martin and Logue Tyson. Mr. J. Q. Tatum loaned the money.

During the early fall, construction began. Those negros unable to give cash donated logs which were cut into 10,000 feet of framing materials. Patrons gave a day's or several day's work. The women prepared hot lunches. The building went on and across a period of 10 months a 5-room model school was erected, properly insured, to a value of $3,000.

During the term of 1937-38, the school's principal pointed out to Dr. S. O. Price, Taylor leader, the need for high school training for negroes. Dr. Price, Mr. H. H. White, Taylor white school superintendent, and Mr. Smith extended cooperation and a high school teacher was added to the faculty a 7-month term inaugaurated. Enrollment at this time was 250 students.

Vocational Agriculture

In the 1939-40 term, further impressed with the Taylor negroes efforts to better their community, the county school departmenter brought about the establishment of a vocational agriculture course at the school. Through the state vocational agriculture department, E. H. Wheatley, graduate of Alcorn A. M. with 3 years experience in Jones county, was brought to the Taylor school. He started in July 1939 and immediately made a survey of the community "on foot", contacting patrons and checking upon available materials for the erection of a vocational building. Again the patrons showed an exceptional spirit of cooperation and during that term, a $1,200 farm building with a class room and farm shop, for concrete floors. At present the farm shop is partly equipped with class room chairs, tables, filing cabinets, bulletin cases, blackboards. There are 30 boys enrolled in the course and the department is chartered member of the state and national farm organization, N. F. A. (New Farmers of America) and the boys have attended district and state meetings, basketball tournaments and have won 2nd place among 18 state chapters in the ritual contest. Each of the boys has carried projects of cotton, corn, potatoes and poultry in addition to home improvement projects. Biggest need of the department is for further shop tools.

An adult evening class has also organized, holds regular meetings for discussion of farm problems. The class has raised funds to purchase a Boston Farm Level to be used in running terrace lines and interested in improved farming practices is seen throughout the community.

Health Center

Taylor negroes immediately recognized the worth and opportunity of the Lafayette County Health Department and soon after its establishment two years ago decided to erect themselves a health center to save trips to Oxford. Through the interest of Miss Walker, former county health nurse, the community was aroused to the project and the buliding completed in the summer of 1940. Bill Toles, community negro carpenter, is given much credit for the building. Here the county health officer and the nurses hold regular clinics attended by hundreds of colored folk from all that part of the county.

Summary

Summary of the construction accomplishments over the past 5 years reveals the three buildings valued at $5,000; class room equipment at $350; Library, books, materials, etc. at $200; vocational department equipment at $150—to a total value of $5700.00. With $175 raised during this term through cotton projects and donations, there is only $325 outstanding indebebtness.

Present faculty of the school is composed of Joe C. Brown, principal; E. H. Wheatley, vocational agriculture; Della M. Reed, assistant principal; Malissie Foster, primary; Mary Toles, primary; Hattie Joy, 4th and 5th. Board of trustees responsible for the building program are: T. M. Martin, J. E. Brown, Eddie Egerson, Homer Smith and Dorsey Egerson (deceased.)

Further Progress

"Insofar as no tax funds are available for negro school building construction, the accomplishment of these Taylor patrons over the past five years have been remarkable,'" County Superintendent O. D. Smith said. "We have no doubt but that the school will continue to progress into a larger and more effective negro agricultural high school."

Public Invited To View Exhibits At Carver High

This week is National Negro History Week. The Junior and Senior High History and English Classes of Carver High School have compiled an interesting exhibit, touching on the development and achievement of the Negro in America. Special features of the exhibit will be the Kirksey collection of Hand drawings by Leroy Kirksey and the Burress collections of Clay Molds by William Burress, both students of the Tenth Grade.

Exhibits will be opened to the public Friday 1:00 p. m. to 7:00 p. m.; Saturday 2:00 p. m. to 4:00 p.m., and Sunday, 2:00 p. m. to 7:00 p. m. There will be no charges. The exhibits are under the direction of .V. T. McDaniel, Instructor of History, and J. A. Kirksey, Instructor of English and S. L. Ratliff, Principal of Carver High School.

DEFENSE EMPLOYMENT

The call continues to be made by certain industries for more men to man their plants for the production of national defense material. But we regret to say that particular emphasis is laid on qualified workers, experienced workers and workers with at least an academic training along many lines. It is unfortunate, however, that in many instances we find that there are too few of our young men qualified to fill these places. Therefore, we are calling upon the Board of Education to expand its program of technical training for Negro youth of St. Louis. Let the Board of Education make of the Booker T. Washington Technical High School a really technical high school, the same as that provided for the white youth at Hadley Technical High School. F. J. Jeffrey, assistant superintendent of instruction of the Board of Education, with all of his technical phrases, does not dare to come out with a clean cut statement of just why the Board of Education fails to provide for adequate training of the Negro youth. His stock in trade when cornered by interested colored citizens is what the Board is going to do. Just recently the loudly exploited statement that the Board of Education was going to spend about thirty-five thousand dollars to improve training facilities for Negroes at Booker Washington Tech has been torn down to a promise to spend five thousand dollars. And mind you, the latter five thousand dollars is still a promise.

The State Employment Office, we are reliably informed, is anxious to have Negroes with a little training along technical lines to register for future jobs. In the meanwhile we are told that as fast as the students at Hadley Technical High School are qualified, a job is waiting for them. But Mr. Jeffrey has so manipulated the program for the training of Negro youths that few, yes, very few, are qualified to meet the demands of the industries of today.

It is our belief that it is F. J. Jeffrey who is standing between the Negro families and their bread, and it is the duty of those affected to fight to remove Mr. Jeffrey from the position he now holds.

SCHOOL BOARD $5,000 Vs. $35,000

It has just been announced from the office of the Superintendent of Instruction. Dr. Homer W. Anderson, that approximately five thousand dollars for additional equipment at Booker T. Washington Technical High School has been authorized by the federal office of education for vocational training in defense work. This announcement followed a letter written to the Superintendent of Instruction by Sidney R. Redmond, president of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in which he reminded Mr. Anderson of the announcement made last spring that the Board of Education would immediately improve the Booker Washington Technical High School to the extent of thirty-five thousand dollars.

Such dilly-dallying tactics on the part of the Board of Education in dealing with the Negro youth is a shame and a disgrace to the citizens of St. Louis who boast of a respectable School Board. And to further hoodwink the colored people Dr. Anderson comes forth with another phantasmal statement saying that he has requested of the government two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to make additions to Booker Washington Technical High School. Whatever hope or consolation these statements bring to the colored people of the city could only be like the hope of catching the fleeting shadow or reaching the end of the rainbow. We make these comments based upon the promises and the attitude of Assistant Superintendent F. J. Jeffrey. It is a well known fact that Mr. Jeffrey has failed, utterly failed, to provide for the same sort of training for the Negro youth which he has provided for the whites. We presume that these statements, coming from the superintendent's office, are the voice of F. J. Jeffrey, his recommendations and his ideas. We do not believe that they are made in good faith, nor do we believe that Mr. Jeffrey has any intention whatever of carrying out any promises to give the Negro youth the same sort of training that is provided for whites.

Every time we have complained of the short end of training for the Negro youth we have been met with one subterfuge after another for a period of some eight or ten years. It is easy, absolutely dead easy, for the school officials to tell us one tale today and another tomorrow. Our requests have been met with statements that the government won't do this and won't do that. We have no proof whatever that any sincere effort has ever been made to provide the Negro youth with adequate vocational training in the school system in St. Louis. Surely it is time for us to take some other step to force the Board of Education to provide us with the things to which we are justly entitled.

Last winter we had promises of what would be done in the spring. When spring came it was what would be done in the summer, and now the summer has passed and we are far into the autumn, yet nothing has been done.

The United States government and the industries are calling—calling—calling, day in and day out for more and better trained men to help in this defense work. We understand that every white youth at Hadley Technical High School who has completed a certain amount of training has been employed in gainful defense work. A three-shift training program has been going on at Hadley for some time, preparing the white youth for this defense work, while little or nothing is being done for the Negro youth. Mr. Jeffrey says that the Board has neither the housing nor the equipment to give the Negro youth training. What are we going to do about it? Ere long the harvest will be passed and there will not be the need for the training nor the demand for the workers as there is today. How long are we going to wait? How long will we stand by and be fooled and cajoled out of our rights by designing school officials? Now is the time to think. Now is the time to act.

NEGRO STUDENTS PLAN SURVEY OF STANDARDS

Goldsboro, Jan. 17.—Students of the Dillard (Negro) High School are planning to make a survey of the Negroes of the Goldsboro section in order to learn the standards of the race in the section, H. V. Brown, principal of the school, has announced.

The survey is being sponsored by the Neighborhood P.-T. A. and the Citizens Improvement League through the Negro Community Chest. Results of the survey will be used in the civic classes of Goldsboro Negro schools, and may be used in revising the curriculum of the schools, and may also be published in book form.

The questionnaire includes spaces for information on the number of people in a family, how many are employed, whether their home is owned or rented, what conveniences, how many in the family are in school, and what work the students intend to take up later, church membership, membership in civic organizations, how leisure time is spent, kind of business engaged in, and whether insurance is carried.

NEGRO HIGH SCHOOL SPONSORS UNIQUE PROGRAM

In the process of public education, the mastery of the three R's is considered of fundamental importance. However, the importance of a good character, both to the individual and his community is so outstanding that it should not be overlooked, neither should it be taken for granted.

In the process of character building, there s no teaching that affords a firmer foundation than that of the Lord Jesus Christ. Cognizant of this fact, the Farmville Colored high school has for the past three years, sponsored an entire week of Christian Endeavor services. During the week, public services were held each night in one of the local churches. The entire community threw itself into these services and the result was all that could be desired. Each evening the church was filled to overflowing mostly with young people who listened attentively while the plain, simple teaching of Jesus Christ was expounded to them with the emphasis upon its relation to their success and happiness in this life as well as the life after death.

Similar meetings will be held this year beginning Sunday, March 2nd, and continuing throughout the week. No isms, creeds or doctrines will be discussed. The plain, simple teaching of Jesus Christ as it should be practiced in one's daily life will be the theme. The public generally is very cordially invited to attend these meetings.

The Farmville Colored school may well be called a pioneer in this broader view of public education as well as other things of value to its community. H. B. Sugg, its principal, is considered one mong the ablest Negro school men of the state. A visit to this school at work will convince one of this statement.

ARTHUR MANLEY QUITS POST AT STEPHENS - LEE

Arthur E. Manley, principal of Stephens-Lee (negro) high school since 1935, has resigned to accept a position with the state department of public instruction as inspector of negro high schools, it was announced yesterday.

The city school board is to meet on June 17 to fill vacancies in the teaching staff of the city system, and the question of Manley's successor is expected to be taken up at that time.

A graduate of Stephens-Lee high school and of Johnson C. Smith (negro) university at Charlotte, Manley has his M. A. degree from Columbia university, and is now working on his Ph. D.

Since Stephens-Lee is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, his successor will have to hold an M. A. degree, one of the requirements of the association. The school here is one of the few negro high schools in the state which hold membership in the association.

Finals Completed For Negro School

A large and interested audience, composed both of white and colored persons, attended commencement exercises at the local unit of the school system, the C. M. Eppes Industrial High School, held in the new gymnasium Friday night.

The principal address was made by Dr. Alonzo H. Hemingway, who directed his remarks to the graduating class.

The speaker developed his talk around the pupil in a towsack who later established a great institution, Booker T. Washington. With no money to pay his expenses, he successfully stood a test which resulted in a scholarship being awarded him. This test involved the sweeping of a room and the task was completed so satisfactorily that a white handkerchief showed no dirt or dust after having been passed over the surface of the swept rooms.

The Greenville colored high school has attained a high rank after 38 years in existence. Many of its graduates have "made good" after completing their studies there some going to further studies.

Three white men were honored on the program. They were Superintendent of Schools J. H. Rose, E. G Flanagan, chairman of the Greenville school board, and Mayor B. B Sugg. The 1941 commencement is expected to go down as the most outstanding in the history of the school. It was announced at the closing exercises that the name of the school in the future would be the C. M. Eppes Industrial High School.

Bids For New Negro High School In Eastern Part Of County May Be Received By Board Aug. 11

Building Costing About $30,000 Will Have 10 Classrooms And Auditorium, Barbour Says

Plans for the new Negro high school for the eastern section of Durham County have been completed by George Hackney, architect selected for the job by the County Board of Education, and bids probably will be opened by the board Aug. 11 at 2:30 P. M.

County School Superintendent Luther H. Barbour said that it has been planned to open the bids on that date, but that there may be a delay because he has been unable to obtain all the information needed in advertising for the bids.

If this information is not received in time to complete the series of advertisements required by law before Aug. 11, a later date will have to be set for opening the bids.

Hackney said that three contracts will be asked for, a general contract, one for plumbing, and one for heating. Contracts, if acceptable, will be let the day bids are opened.

The building will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000 and will have 10 classrooms and an auditorium, he said.

Barbour has stated that instead of holding the contract to a price for a certain size building, the school board will approve the construction of as much of the building as can be done for $30,000, if rising prices cause contractors to place too high a figure on the number of rooms desired.

The school originally was planned for 13 rooms and an auditorium, to cost about $42,000.

When it became apparent that only some $31,000 or $32,000 at the outside would be available for the project, the plans were scaled down, school officials hoping to get from nine to 11 rooms for that price.

For a time increasing costs, especially as evidenced in the excess of the new health building repair bids over estimates, caused a fear that the Negro school would have to be dropped for this year; but bids on the Hope Valley economics building, opened Monday, were so reassuring that it is expected a suitable structure can be built for the Negroes in the eastern part of the county.

This school, similar to the Little River School for Negroes in the western part of the county, has been sought by the school board for a long time.

It will be located on the same grounds as the present three-room Rocky Knoll School, in the O & C Junction section. It was planned to consolidate Rocky Knoll School, the two-room Page School, and the four-room Mill Grove School, in the new school. With the classes from these schools, plus four for the high school, the entire 13 rooms as originally planned would have been in use.

With the smaller structure as now planned, some of this consolidation may have to be delayed, or some arrangement may be worked out by using the old Rocky Knoll School, which was to have been used as a home economics and vocational agriculture building with the erection of the new high school.

In addition to the cost of the building, the school board must figure about $6,000 for accompanying expenses, such as $2,500 for a septic tank, $2,500 for a house for some faculty member who will safeguard the building, $600 for a well and pump, and for preparing playgrounds and lawn.

Ahoskie Colored High School To Be Named For Robert Lee Vann, Prominent Native Son

On Wednesday, December 10, at 12 o'clock noon, the Ahoskie Colored High School will hold memorial services for the late Robert L. Vann, a former native of this community, who was editor and publisher of the Pittsburgh Courier, a national Negro newspaper, and who served as First Assistant to the Attorney General of the United States.

A feature of the services will be the dedication of the school, which has 811 pupils and 26 teachers and which operates six buses, as the Robert L. Vann High School. The main address will be delivered by Dr. C. E. Askew, a former teacher of Vann and himself a native of the same county, who is now pastor of the Third Baptist Church of Detroit, Mich. Among other persons to speak will be: Ira F. Lewis, president of the Courier Publishing Company; President H. L. Trigg of the Elizabeth City State Teachers College; H. C. Freeland, principal of Waters Training School at which Vann received his early education, who is also president of the Northeastern District Teachers Association; J. R. Brown, superintendent of Hertford County Schools; Rev. R. H. Patterson, pastor of the New Ahoskie Baptist Church; Prof. C. S. Yeates of Ahoskie, a schoolmate of Vann, and Cola Newsome, a member of the senior class of the high school.

Robert Lee Vann was born near Ahoskie and was reared near Harrellsville, both in Hertford County. He overcame great handicaps to secure his high school training from the institution which is now Waters Training School, whose founder, the late Dr. C. S. Brown, gave him encouragement. In course of time he entered Virginia Union University, Richmond, Va., from which he was graduated with honors, although he had to work his way through.

Later completing his training in law, he became established in Pittsburgh, Pa., and there he became connected with the Pittsburgh Courier, which was then struggling in a small way. During Vann's management this paper grew to be one of the largest weeklies in the United States, and he himself rose to within one step of the National Cabinet as First Assistant to the Attorney General. He became ill in 1940, and died in October at the height of his career.

Special music for the memorial services will be sung by the Ahoskie Colored High School chorus, under the direction of Sherman Greene. These singers hold honors received at the State Music Festival in Greensboro and at the national convention of the New Farmers of America in Florida.

H. D. Cooper, principal of the school, is extending an invitation to all educators, patrons, and friends to be present at these services to do honor to this outstanding son of Hertford County.

Race Naval School Provided For In Will

APR 24 1941

The decision of the United States naval authorities to enlist colored Americans only as messmen may be changed some day when the terms of the will of Colonel John McKee, wealthy colored Philadelphian, are carried out. McKee died about two years ago.

In paragraph 27 of McKee's will, he provided for the establishment of a college in which "a number of poor colored male orphan children and poor white male children" could receive "a thorough naval education, similar to that taught in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, and in the United States Naval War College and Torpedo School, my desire being that said college shall equip skilled men for service upon the various warships of the United States Navy in case of there being necessity for their service in such capacity."

Secretary Knox told a committee and subsequently wrote Dr. John A. Kenney of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., that "it would be a waste of time and effort to recruit and train persons for general service, who by reason of their race and color could not properly and efficiently fill the higher rating."

Inability of colored Americans to "fill the higher ratings" is based, Secretary Knox told Dr. Kenney, on the failure of experiments made "immediately after the World War . . . to man two ships entirely with men of the Filipino race, officered by white officers" and a similar and later attempt to "man one of the tugs in Samoa with men of the Samoan race."

Water Exhausted; Loss Is Reported Almost $50,000

BY HARLAN EDWARDS
STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Irmo, March 18.--Repeating history of 30 years ago almost to the day, flames completely destroyed the $35,000 main building of Harbison Agricultural and Mechanical institute, a vocational high school for Negroes here today.

Total damage was estimated by Dr. J. G. Porter, superintendent, at between $47,000 and $50,000. Defective wiring was thought to have been the cause.

The fire started on the top floor of the three-story brick building shortly before 11 o'clock this morning and by three hours later, despite the frantic efforts of the Columbia fire department under Chief A. McC. Marsh, had burned through to the basement. Only a shell of the structure was left standing and late tonight the ruins were still smoldering. The fate of the building was sealed when the water supply ran out.

On March 17, 1911, flames completely destroyed the Harbison institute which was then located at Abbeville, according to Doctor Porter. In that fire three students were burned to death and several died later. No one was injured today.

BOOKS DESTROYED

Every book in the library, approximately 3,500, was destroyed with the exception of 300, mostly reference books, which were saved by Librarian Mabel Boulware. Last year's inventory showed that there were 3,000 books in the library valued at $1,600. Among those saved were the Britanica, Americana and Doubleday reference texts.

On the top floor of the building was the women's and teachers' dormitories and linen store room. Everything on that floor was a complete loss.

The second floor housed the home economics department, library and four classrooms. Some of the classroom equipment was saved.

PIANOS SAVED

The laundry, showers, dining room, pantry, store room and kitchen were in the basement. The only thing saved there was a large and valuable refrigerator. Four pianos distributed throughout the building were also saved when students and persons from the surrounding vicinity and nearby town rushed to help.

When the flames were discovered the Columbia fire department was called immediately and responded in record time. The flames were raging when two trucks led by Chief Marsh arrived. A light northwest wind fanned the flames into an inferno. Chief Marsh tried to bring two lines into play but the dwindling water supply forced him to abandon one of them. Water was being drawn from a nearby well and a reservoir some distance away. The chief expressed the opinion that had the water held out the building could have been saved.

Doctor Porter said of the firemen's efforts, "Chief Marsh and his men fought valiantly to save the building. They did everything humanly possible. We are deeply indebted to them and are highly grateful."

EXIT IS ORDERLY

The school is operated by the Northern Presbyterian church board with offices in New York City. Doctor Porter said that he had telegraphed his board of the disaster and was awaiting word from the members.

The 40 girls who boarded at the school were sent home this evening pending a decision as to whether a reconstruction program would be inaugurated. The school has an enrolment of about 373 of which 103 are boarding students.

IRMO BUILDING OFFERED

Supt. S. L. Lathan of the Irmo public schools, was among those who rushed to the scene when news of the fire spread. He offered Doctor Porter the facilities of the old Irmo grammar school to be utilized as classrooms and Doctor Porter said the offer would probably be accepted.

Superintendent Porter said that Chief Marsh had visited Harbison several weeks ago at the school's request and that he had made several recommendations which were in the course of being followed out. He said the fire chief had urged that the water supply at the school be increased by connecting two fire hydrants located on the property and by the addition of 600 feet of fire hose. Doctor Porter said that some of the suggested equipment was on the way.

ESTIMATED $47,000 LOSS

The building, according to the superintendent, was insured but he had no idea what the amount was. The building, he said, was almost 30 years old, having been built at a cost of $35,000 shortly after the school was moved from Abbeville following the fire there.

Students and workmen were still gathering up what equipment had been saved from the building late tonight.

Itemized account of estimated losses:

Building, $35,000; books, $2,000; bedding, kitchen equipment, furniture and other items, $10,000.

Doctor Porter pointed out that Harbison was the only Negro vocational school in Lexington county.

Urges Support At Once to Build At Harbison

To the Editor of The State:

The main building of Harbisor college, near Lake Murray, will be burning all night because of an inadequate water supply. This central building is a total loss and a terriffic blow to the daily life of the college as it contained executive offices, recitation rooms, chapel, dining room and some bedrooms.

Now here is a challenge to every Negro minister, educator, men and women of all callings to rally at once to assist this splendid institute.

For many years I have known the Harbison family of Pittsburgh, regarded by every Pittsburger as one of the leading families in the strong religious life of this great steel city.

Let the Negro race in Columbia, also South Carolina, send at once gifts large and small to President J. G. Porter, Harbison College, Irmo, S. C., so that restoration can be commenced next week; also everything made fire-proof and an adequate water supply installed at once. Also from this most destructive fire "a greater institution" to the glory of Christ and the Negro race will rise. There are many white friends who have benefitted from the thousands this excellent institution has brought South. Let all show a noble Southern magnanimous spirit at this time. President J. G. Porter is splendidly qualified to lead Harbison college to a more constructive practical Christian training institution. I thoroughly believe in him and his co-workers.

MANNING TRAINING SCHOOL IS BURNED

Manning, March 25.—Special: Fire completely destroyed the Manning training school for negroes in Manning late this afternoon. When the fire was discovered the entire east wing was in flames it had broken out inside the rooms. The origin is unknown.

The frame building had twelve rooms and an auditorium and was valued at $20,000. The firse burned so rapidly that the houses nearby were saved only by strenuous work of the local fire department.

Fifteen years ago the negro school building and furnishings on that same lot wer completely destroyed by fire.

Negro Students Awarded Prizes

DENMARK, April 21.—Employment of negro craftsmen on national defense jobs was the important question discussed at the second annual workers conference held Friday at Voorhees Institute. Leaders in the trade industries took part in the discussion.

In connection with the conference a trade tournament was conducted in which ten high school pupils participated, namely: Wilkinson Hi, Orangeburg; Wilson Hi, Florence; Mather Academy, Camden; Lincoln Hi, Sumter; Marion Hi, Marion; Marlboro County Training School, Bennettsville; Allendale Co. Tr. School; Boll St. Hi, Clinton; Booker T. Washington of Columbia.

The morning session was given over to the trade tournament in which representatives from the high schools competed for prizes in brick-masonry, carpentry, printing, general shop and drawing.

For excellence in carpentry, Henry Curry, Wilkinson Hi, won 1st prize, a $100 scholarship at 1941-42 at State A. & M. James Cook, Mather Academy, won 2nd prize, a hand saw. Hampton DuPre of Marlboro Tr. School received honorable mention.

In drawing, Esaw Simmons, of Voorhees, won 1st prize and received a complete drawing set. Ralph Lebby, Voorhees, won 2nd place and received one dollar.

In painting, Charles Houston of Voorhees won 1st prize, a set of brushes; Henry McFadden, 2nd prize, received one dollar, General Lee Rigens, of Wilson Hi, won honorable mention.

In general shop, Jas. Coleman of Voorhees, won 1st prize and received a complete set of tools. Eugene Brown of Mather Academy was 2nd and received one dollar.

P. V. Jewell, dean mechanic arts division, State College, presented the awards in carpentry.

J. E. Blanton, principal, Voorhees, presented awards in brick-masonry.

J. B. Felton, state agent for negro schools, presented awards to other winners.

W. H. Aiken, president of the National Builders Conference, of Atlanta, was the principal speaker at the afternoon session when the workers conference discussed the question of employment of negro craftsmen on national defense jobs.

Brewer High School Offers Defense Vocational Training Program

Brewer high school is being used as a center for defense vocational training for Negro boys.

A class in carpentry and woodwork under direction of the agriculture department was started Monday night, March 31st. This class is composed mostly of farm boys. They are taught to read blueprints, simple estimation and other knowledges necessary in the intelligent working with wood and lights have been provided so they may get experience in the skills that will be needed. The class is now remodeling a building which will be used for an automobile shop.

Work in automobile mechanics will be started Monday. This course will be under the direction of the trades department and will be given six hours each day except Saturdays. In addition to the repairs of automobiles, tractors and other gasoline motors, a grease pit and a wash rack will be equipped so as to give superior training in such skills as will prepare service station workers.

This training offers an opportunity for which thinking Negroes have been wishing for a long time. The race has not been able to make its full contribution to the development of the country because there have been few opportunities for training in the skilled trades and modern methods of doing things.

Every boy should find a way to take advantage of this chance. Indications are that after this terrible period that is demanding the best skills that the world has, for mechanized production and destruction, there will be such an advance in methods, implements and machinery that there will be no profitable place for unskilled hands and untrained minds. The work of the world will be done with improved methods and machinery.

The class in woodwork which is primarily for farm boys starts at seven in the evening and lasts until ten o'clock. Auto-mechanics is a day time course and is for city boys, but will accept rural boys who are able to find the time.

Parents owe it to themselves and to the nation to make a way for their boys to get this training.

FINALS PROGRAM BEGUN AT CARVER

Commencement exercises at Carver high school, negro, opened here with class day exercises yesterday, will continue with the baccalaureate sermon Sunday and be concluded with graduation exercises Tuesday night.

Feature of the class day program held on the school lawn was the dedication of the flag and flag pole on the grounds, donated by the class. Presentation was made by Willie Free, class president, and acceptance was by C. C. Woodson. Jerry Salters played the national anthem on the trumpet as the flag was raised and taps as it was lowered.

Chaplain Johnson, of the 50th battalion at Camp Croft, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the Mt. Moriah Baptist church Sunday afternoon at 3:30.

The 66 seniors will receive their diplomas at exercises to be held at the Mt. Moriah church Tuesday night with Rev. H. B. Jackson, pastor of Walker Memorial CMS church, as the principal speaker.

DOWNTOWN JUNIOR HIGH IS PLANNED

Adjunct to Rivers School to Be Set Up in Building Next to Memminger

Junior high school classrooms, acting as an adjunct of Rivers junior high, will be placed in operation next year on the Memminger high school grounds adjoining the Beaufain street auditorium.

Four rooms of the Hertz building, now used as a store house, will be converted into classrooms accommodating approximately 120 pupils. Seventh grade pupils of Crafts and Bennett schools will have their classes in the new building.

George C. Rogers, acting superintendent of city schools, explained that the move was made as a safety and economy measure. With the children removed from these two schools, he said, there will be only Simonton, a negro school, operating with classes on the fourth floor. Seventh grade pupils from the other elementary schools are attending Rivers junior high.

It was proposed some time ago, Mr. Rogers said, to have a junior high unit which could be attended by students south of Calhoun street. Hereafter, he said, junior high students living north of Calhoun street will attend Rivers, and those living south of Calhoun street will attend the new unit.

Five main reasons were listed by Mr. Rogers for creation of a junior high unit.

They are:

(1) Elementary schools are crowded and this will relieve congestion in Crafts and Bennett schools.

(2) It will enable school authorities to remove all elementary school children from fourth floor class rooms.

(3) All elementary schools now will have six grades.

(4) Fifty-three additional pupils will be assigned to Rivers junior high where there is more room.

(5) It will serve as an economic move, because children in the new unit can use the Memminger auditorium, gymnasium and art, business and home economics laboratories.

The faculty for the new unit will be drawn from the schools from which the pupils are taken, Mr. Rogers said. The same curriculum will be followed as at Rivers junior high. An attempt will be made, Mr. Rogers said, to establish a class in handiwork for boys. A wood working shop probably will be built in a building at the rear of the new school unit.

Speaking of the safety factor, he said, the board of trustees recommended several years ago that only three floors be used. It has not been possible to put this plan into operation, however, because of the large number of pupils. New school designs, he said, call for two floors and a basement.

James Simons school and Mitchell school have three floors each. They are relatively new schools, Mr. Rogers said. The other schools are quite old. Murray vocational school and Rivers junior high are fireproofed.

Mr. Rogers said the influx of national defense workers already had swelled the enrolment of all schools in the city. The present enrolment shows 280 more white pupils than last year.

There is a great need for new negro schools in this area, he said. Five negro schools handle 5,789 students and nine white schools handle 6,567 pupils.

It has been necessary to run a double schedule at some of the negro schools. Two faculties are required and classes are held in the morning and afternoon. It amounts to two schools being run in one building, he said.

Legislation to award federal funds for construction of new schools in Charleston already has passed the house of representatives and should appear before the senate this week, Mr. Rogers said. Even if the bill be passed this week, there will be a delay because federal investigators will have to come to Charleston to determine the need for construction. They will decide what will be built.

Mr. Rogers added that the recent construction of St. Andrew's high school and William Moultrie high school, at Mount Pleasant, has reduced the strain on city high schools. Charleston, however, still provides for high school students from James island and Folly Beach.

AVERY TO OPEN SEPT. 8

Institute to Begin 77th Term. L. H. Bennett is Director

Avery institute begins its seventy-seventh year Monday, September 8, at 8:30 a. m. The general assembly, to which the public is invited, will be held at 11:30 a. m.

Registration of all pupils will be held Thursday and Friday from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. All pupils are requested to bring their promotion cards, and new pupils will bring their transcripts, card or diplomas from the schools previously attended. Registration and athletic fees and tuition for the first month are due and payable on registration days.

The directorship of the school, vacated by F. A. DeCosta, has been filled by the appointment by the American Missionary Association of L. Howard Bennett, who is a resident of Charleston, son of the late Rev. H. W. B. Bennett of the A. M. E. church. He is a graduate of Avery and of Fisk university. Bennett served Fisk for four years as field secretary.

Bennett was awarded a Julius Rosenwald fellowship for graduate study at the University of Chicago, and passed a year in graduate study at that institution.

Other changes in the faculty include the appointment of Elizabeth S. Jackson, Springfield, Mass., as secretary-bookkeeper; Lois J. Lawrence of Memphis, instructor in education; and Lilly Mae Harding, Toledo, Ohio, critic teacher of first and second grades. Director Bennett said two additional appointments would be announced later.

Other members of the faculty returning to their posts are: A. W. Hoursey, who received this summer from the University of Michigan his M. A. Degree in secondary education and sociology; C. H. Nicholas, head of the department of science; G. P. Singleton, graduate student at the University of Michigan, and head of the mathematics department; Hattie Greene and Josephine A. Colston in the home arts department; F. A. Clyde, supervisor of the training school; W. E. Bluford, head of the social studies department and director of the student cooperative; C. H. Parker, of the department of mechanic arts; D. J. Moses, instructor in English and choral director; R. N. Scott, instructor of music and piano; S. A. Butler, teacher in the junior high school; S. L. Burroughs, a student at the North Carolina state college of negroes during the summer, and director of the library at Avery.

Memphis Teachers Establish Record For Community Work

MEMPHIS, Tenn., [illegible] 16—The often repeated accusation that many of the principals and teachers in Negro schools are interested only in the return of the time to go home, pay day and vacation, has been smashed and denied by the principal and teachers at the Booker T. Washington high school, here.

Principal Blair T. Hunt who has served in that capacity for several years, has not only done credit to himself, community and the teaching profession, but has set a new standard for others to follow in doing community, charity and uplift work in 1940.

His personality and dynamic influence moved his faculty and student body to raise and turn over to various organizations for charity and relief, $1,165.80, following are the names of organizations, and amounts to whom said amount was given:

Tuberculosis Christmas Seals sold	$ 30.00
Parent-Teachers drive	48.50
British Ambulance fund	65.00
Milk fund	222.50
Good Fellows at Christmas time	147.50
To charity	262.00
To Community Fund	390.00
Total amount	$1165.50

This amount does not include several pairs of shoes donated the unfortunate and poor, 63 free lunches daily and 100 baskets containing groceries, etc. at Christmas time.

Colored School Opens Practical New Service

A new service has been inaugurated by the home economics department of the Stigall High School. The teacher, Nelda McLin Williams, will serve as a coordinator for the housewives of Humboldt and the colored female household maids of Humboldt. The notice listed below indicates one service that will be rendered. A plan is being worked out which will enable anyone who desires household help to contact the teacher of home economics of Stigall High School, who will have a list of available help, both in school girls and adults who choose to register with her. There will be no cost for this service by the teacher. It should prove a great help to both housewives and workers.

Rev. J. D. McCord,
McReynolds High School,
South Pittsburg, Tenn.
Dear Rev. McCord:

I know you are surprised in hearing from me.

I am writing you concerning the job I am now holding. Your ability and your teaching and instructing make it possible for me to hold one of the best jobs, that the company for which I work, has to offer to colored men. I am instructor in No. 1 Grinding Room. I have fifty-four (54) men to instruct every day.

I hope you much success, I hope you will long have the opportunity to use your ability in inspiring others as you have inspired me. We need more men like you. With your ability you will, with your initiative, inspire others as you have already inspired me to take hold and to hold fast.

The only thing I regret is, that I didn't take the interest I should have taken, while in school. You can rely on me doing my best in everything I undertake.

If I can be useful to you at any time, I shall be more than glad to respond.

I hope the boys take interest in what you teach them, because they will need it. If I had only known then, what I know now I would be better now. Not only "General Trades," but mathematics play a big part in my daily occupation.

I am expecting an early reply, and am expecting to see you soon. I am,

Very truly yours,
Thurman (Rat) Shelton

Benjamin Franklin's "Plough deep while sluggards sleep," seems to have fastened its meaning under the hide of young Shelton, whose letter above is self-explanatory. He is making good and to show his gratitude for the help given him by his teacher, Rev. J. D. McCord. he is saying, "I hope you much success," and "with your ability you will, with your initiative, inspire others as you have already inspired me to take hold and to hold fast."

Praised by Pupil

REV. J. D. McCORD

Rev. McCord is head of General Building Trades department at McReynolds High School, the county's leading colored place of learning, here in South Pittsburg. He is also pastor of Hurst Memorial church in North Chattanooga. A graduate of Tuskegee Institute where he came in touch with the late Booker T. Washington daily, this man had inculcated into his educational make-up many of the fundamentals that made Washington the leader of his race, and, indeed, one of America's greatest characters.

McCord is also a graduate of Gammon Theological Seminary of Atlanta. He has done work in Tennessee State College, also the Kansas State College at Manhattan, Kan., and Educational Institute at Topeka.

CRAVENS RESIGNS POST AT DONALDSON SCHOOL

Thirkield E. Cravens, colored, resigned yesterday as principal of the Calvin Donaldson Junior High school after a hearing before W. T. Robinson, superintendent of city schools, in which Cravens was allegedly accused of taking food from the school cafeteria.

Supt. Robinson said Cravens' resignation had been accepted, but declined to comment on the reason for the resignation. He declined to say whether criminal charges would be brought against the Negro principal.

It was learned, however, that Cravens was allegedly caught by a truant officer in the act of taking surplus commodities from the school cafeteria.

Cravens had been principal of the colored school for the past twelve or fourteen years.

NEGRO GRADUATES WILL HEAR ATKINS

FWA Specialist Will Speak to Howard High Class of 140, May 30

Prof. James A. Atkins, specialist in Negro education, federal works agency, Washington, D. C., will deliver the commencement address to the 140 graduates of Howard High school, in Memorial auditorium, May 30, it was announced yesterday by Prof. William J. Davenport, principal.

The theme of all graduation activities, as well as the educational leader's address, will center around "The Negro in the National Defense Program."

"There is a very definite need for the awakening of our people as well as those of other groups to the place of the Negro in all phases of the national defense program. I particularly mean their training and aptitude for jobs that will permit them to earn a living, as well as contribute to their country on a par with other individuals," Prof. Davenport stated.

"That is the reason for our making national defense the main theme of all our activities at this time," he said. Prof. Atkins, is a well-known educator of Winston-Salem, N. C., and is in wide demand for the delivery of addresses to schools and colleges, and in assisting in compiling programs in the interest of Negro development and progress.

The commencement week program will open with senior class day exercises in the school auditorium Friday, May 23. Marion Elizabeth Heard will be presented the Ochs-Oakes award and winners of other awards and scholarships will be made known that night.

The Rev. A. L. Hickman, pastor of Warren Chapel A. M. E. church, will preach the commencement sermon Sunday, May 25, at 7 p.m., and special music will be furnished by the school's mixed glee club.

Walter Parks, president of the alumni association, has announced a special program in the school auditorium for Tuesday, May 20.

At commencement exercises, May 30, Eleanor Anita Bryson will deliver the valedictory address and Ruth Luvenia Brown will deliver the salutatory address.

633 High School Diplomas Will Be Conferred Here

A total of 633 high school diplomas will be conferred on graduates of ten white and one Negro county high schools in commencement exercises to be held over a five-day period from tonight through Monday night, it was announced today by County Superintendent of Schools W. C. Dodson.

Final meeting of Davidson County school principals for the current school year was to be held in the county court room at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

County elementary schools are to close their school year by Friday, and a total of 1,154 eighth grade certificates—1,085 to white students and sixty-nine to Negro pupils—are to be awarded, Dodson said.

The ten white high schools will graduate 621 students, and Haynes Negro High School will graduate twelve. Following is the schedule of high school commencement exercises:

Tonight, Bellevue; Thursday, Antioch and Goodlettsville; Friday, Cumberland, Donelson, du Pont, Isaac Litton, Joelton, Hillsboro, and Haynes, and Monday, Central.

Negro representatives of the county areas likely to be included in the establishment of the $39,000,000 TNT plant met with the school board Monday and submitted tentative plans for the relocation of Booker T. Washington High school. They also plan to build a community in which residents of these areas may live instead of moving to isolated sections.

B. Cortez Tipton, chairman of the community federation, and Reuben E. Smith, chairman of the executive committee of the organization, representing the 150 families who will be dislodged, headed a committee of seven, and presented a proposition to the board asking for the purchase of the Z. C. Taylor tract in Jersey, south of Bonny Oaks, to relocate the Washington school.

In accordance with the plan the county will purchase fifty acres and build a modern county school in place of the Washington school, and the community federation and residents of the dislodged area will purchase and build modern homes, with the school as the center.

Negroes of Tyner, Magnus Pond, Turkeyfoot, Eastdale and Summitt will be affected by the present plans for the plant. The Washington school will not be torn down, but will be used for offices of administration, it was stated by Prof. T. D. Upshaw, Jr., principal. It will therefore be necessary to construct a school at once if the colored children of the county are to be served at the next school term.

Washington High has been adjudged the best in the state for colored, and only last year expanded its program when public funds were used to build a modern trades building, gymnasium, and a building to house elementary and domestic science work.

Under the present plan, the fifty-acre tract will also provide for an experimental farm for raising foodstuffs, hogs and cattle to supply training for students and food for the school cafeteria, as well as a training school in domestic science for families in the community.

Of the 150 families to be in the proposed area, 98 per cent. are home owners, according to Chairman Smith. "Most of them work in Chattanooga, and surrounding territory, and three of them farm for a living," he said. "Requests for land in the proposed community area range from one-half to thirty acres a family."

"All homes to be built around the school area will have modern conveniences, in the interest of health and progress," he stated to the board.

Two other sites were offered as second and third choices by the committee after a poll had been made of the residents of federation. They were the Taney tract, on Brainerd road, and the Fox tract at Summitt.

Members of the committee were Smith, Profs. Upsaw and Tipton, Will Kelley, Mrs. L. Massengill, Bertha Fenessee and G. E. Leonard.

Whites Ask That Colored School Be Given to Them

DALLAS, Texas. — Reversing the usual procedure, a delegation of whites from the South Dallas area appeared before the school board, Tuesday night, and urgently requested that the Abraham Lincoln High School be given over to white pupils.

The school, built in 1938 at a cost of nearly a half-million dollars, aided by a Federal WPA grant, at present has an enrollment of nearly 1500 and a faculty of 34 teachers, under the direction of Principal T. D. Marshall.

County Affairs Discussion Held

Four Local Persons Lead Public Meetings In Albemarle Schools

With a total attendance of more than 500, the series of forum discussions on County Affairs opened last night at four high school centers with Judge Lemuel Smith, Henry A. Haden, Dr. T. S. Englar, and R. Claude Graham as speakers.

Judge Smith, who spoke at McIntire High School, struck the keynote of the meetings in his introductory remarks when he stressed the timeliness of such discussions in these days when "the world is upside down" and many are misled by the apparent success of undemocratic forms of government.

"It is incumbent upon all citizens to be informed about their government," he said, as he emphasized the necessity for study and discussion of public affairs as the basis for preserving and strengthening our democratic way of life.

Answers Questions

After presenting a general picture of the organization and operation of the courts, Judge Smith responded to a number of questions from the audience, most of which bore on methods of handling delinquents and criminals after conviction. He stressed the need for an effective parole and probation system and was emphatic in deploring the failure of the last legislature to provide for such a system.

Mr. Haden, speaking at Broadus Wood High School, Earlysville, gave facts and figures on County income and expenditures. Of especial interest to his audience were his statements concerning County debts and sinking funds. "The total debt now stands at $1,006,500," he stated, "and against this there is a sinking fund o $605,944.71. Of the total debt $86,000.00 will be due May 1, and the balance in 1947 and 1948." He stated further that Ivy, White Hall, and Charlottesville Districts would be able to pay out in full when their debts become due, and that Rivanna District may also be able to meet its debt provided sufficient yield can be realized from interest on sinking funds.

Dr. Englar Speaks

At the Red Hill High School Dr. T. S. Englar, director of the Joint Health Department, and Miss Byrd McGavock, County Health Nurse, outlined the scope of activities engaged in by the Health Department and explained particularly those services with which the general public is least familiar, notably the constructive educational work carried on.

R. Claude Graham, who has just been re-elected by the County School Board to serve another term of four years, and Mrs. Pearl McD. Burford, Rural School Supervisor, discussed the school administrative and instructional program with an interested audience at Stony Point High School. Mr. Graham gave figures showing that slightly over 70 per cent of the white children in the County are now enrolled in the eight larger consolidated schools. Consolidation has brought about the closing of all but fifteen of the one-room schools for white children in the County he stated. The Negro schools, however, are not consolidated to nearly so large an extent, 29 of the 34 Negro schools still being of the one-room type. The transportation problem growing out of school consolidations was subject matter for some discussion following the main speech by Mr. Graham.

Next Monday evening, the series will be continued with Judge Smith speaking at Greenwood; Mr. Haden at Crozet, Dr. Englar at Meriwether Lewis, and Mr. Graham at Scottsville. The public is invited to all meetings.

NEGRO SCHOOL DEDICATED

Hampton Institute Head Chief Speaker

(WILLIAMSBURG BUREAU)

The dedicatory address of the Bruton Heights school was given yesterday afternoon in the gymnasium of the school to a large crowd of the school's patrons. The speaker was introduced by Fred M. Alexander, State supervisor of Negro education and former head of the Newport News high school.

The main speaker, Dr. MacLean, stressed the point of building up education to make sense. He stated that the American system of education was the best in the world but it could be improved on by teaching the students subjects that would enable them to hold jobs and by putting education to work in the localities of the United States.

Cooperation also was stressed by the speaker who said that cooperation would help the Negroes to improve the conditions of their homes, to enable them to be better nourished, and to become better citizens in the community. He said the real test of the pupils does not come at examination time, but when he gets out into the world and finds out what good the subjects taught him has done for him and what the subjects will do for him.

Dr. MacLean, before coming to the Hampton institute, was the director of the General College of the University of Minnesota. He has been at the Hampton institute for approximately a year.

A mesasge to the class of 1941 was delivered by A. G. Richardson, Negro, assistant State supervisor of Negro education. He stressed cooperation for the common good in his talk. Other speakers on the program were Vernon Geddy, vice-president of the Williamsburg Restoration, and Rawls Byrd, superintendent of the Williamsburg school board, who also presented the superintendents and school boards of York and James City counties and the visiting celebreties.

Henry D. Carpenter Jr., Negro, principal of the Bruton Heights school, presided at this dedication and music was furnished by the Colonial Williamsburg quintet. Rev. Robert E. Lee, Negro, pastor of the Williamsburg First Baptist church, and Rev. T. H. Jones, Negro, president of the Ministerial Alliance, gave the scripture and dedicatory prayer and the closing prayer respectively.

Illiteracy In Alabama

The number of illiterates in Alabama is on the decrease, according to a tabulation of figures in the March issue of The Alabama School Journal, but there are still thousands of children in the state who cannot read and write. There is not a county in the state which does not have illiterates among its white children as well as among its Negro children.

The tabulation, made by R. L. Johns, director of the Division of Administration and Finance, State Department of Education, shows 53,839 children between 7 and 20 years of age who could not read and write at the time of the 1940 school census. That is 6.6 per cent of the total number of children of those ages.

There has been a substantial reduction, however, in illiteracy since the previous school census in 1938. At that time the number of children between 7 and 20 who could not read and write was 68,571 or 8.3 per cent of the total.

Illiteracy is found more among Negroes than among whites, but the improvement is found in both groups. The number of white illiterates in the age group named has been reduced from 25,236 in 1938 to 18,386 in 1940. The number of Negro illiterates of the same ages was cut from 43,335 in 1938 to 35,452. The percentage of white illiterates dropped from 4.8 in 1938 to 3.5 in 1940, while the Negro percentage was dropping from 14.6 to 12.

Here in Jefferson County we may take some pride in the fact that our illiteracy rate is the lowest of any of the 67 counties. The 1940 school census gave Jefferson 665 white illiterates between 7 and 20 and 844 Negroes. The white illiterates were 1 per cent of the total of white children, and the Negro illiterates were 2.1 per cent of the Negro total. The rate for both races was 1.4 per cent. No other county approached that figure very closely.

As might be expected, most of the illiteracy is found in the younger years of the period studied. Many children, because they live far from a school or for other reasons, are delayed starting their education. For that reason, of the 53,839 illiterate children of school age in Alabama, 49,992 are between the ages of 7 and 15, and only 3,917 between 16 and 20. In Jefferson County there are 42 in the upper age group and 1,467 in the lower, of both races.

Compared to what was true 10 or 20 or 30 years ago, these figures are encouraging. They show that substantial progress has been made in reducing illiteracy. The improvement, as The Alabama School Journal points out, has been due to "improved instructural procedures, availability of state-owned textbooks, better cooperation of parents in sending their children to school, and consolidation of small schools accompanied by improved transportation facilities."

However, there still remains work to do. Although there exists an irreducible minimum of illiteracy, Alabama has not yet reached that point. If all the state had the same percentage of illiteracy as exists in Jefferson County, there would be only 9,053 illiterate children in the state instead of the present 58,839. Jefferson County's better showing is due to factors that do not always exist in rural counties, but the record in Jefferson is proof that improvement can be brought about through gradual change.

While we are making an all-out effort for protecting democracy along certain fronts, it should not be forgotten that genuine democracy is impossible without a general high level of education.

WPA Negro School Holds Exercises

Graduates Hear Miss Leola Barlow, Of Teachers College

The auditorium of Booker Washington High School was crowded Friday for commencement exercises of the WPA Negro adult school. Numerous white friends of the graduates were among the interested listeners to the program, which opened at 8 p.m. with an invocation by the Rev. A. J. Watson, chaplain of the school and followed with a group of songs.

The address was delivered for the first time in the history of the school this year by a woman. Miss Leila Barlow, the commencement speaker, is completing her 11th year as head of the English department at State Teachers College. Introduced by Mrs. Camilla H. Hester, teacher at Booker Washington High, she spoke of the duties and opportunities for service that lie ahead of the youths who are receiving certificates at this time.

Miss Barlow, speaking on "An Emerging Social Order," said that the Negro in the years immediately following the depression has been confronted with inability to translate personal capital of service into self-support but with the present emergence of a social order in which social perception has increased and social conscience crown the government, especially the WPA, is attempting to eliminate such conditions.

She offered the hope that the new order would bring moral integrity, order with freedom and equality of opportunity.

Adult School At Jerusalem Is Successful

28 Students Enrolled For 6-Week Course During Summer

TALLASSEE, ALA., Sept. 3.—The Adult School taught in the Jerusalem Community closed August 29 after a six weeks' session. Six men and 21 women were enrolled. Julia McKinney, Loddie Russell and Ida Pearl Gray were the three students perfect in attendance. Julia McKinney age 72, a feeble old lady, who needed one-half hour to walk one-half mile said, "the school was too much help to her not to attend everyday."

Other than reading, writing and spelling, the pupils were taught citizenship, health and sanitation. The laws on public highways, on hunting and fishing grounds were taught. The majority of the students learned to bottom chairs with shucks instead of having to use goat hides and boards.

The people had not realized the danger of using water buckets and dippers at church services and two wine glasses used for communion, where 100 or more have to drink from. They have now begun to raise money to get a water cooler and communion set for the church.

They praised the superintendent of education, R. E. Trammel, for allowing the Summer school to be held at Jerusaleum.

SEP 4 1941

ILLITERATES EXCEED COLLEGE GRADUATES

Language Group Finds Few Even Go To High School

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—(INS)—Illiterates outnumber college graduates in the United States, according to the Modern Language Association of America.

This was brought out at the three-day meeting of the association, which revealed the following pertinent facts:

Among 75,000,000 adults in the United States there are one and two-thirds times as many complete illiterates as college graduates.

One in every seven persons, or 14 per cent, have high school educations.

Approximately half have not reached the eighth grade in school and a majority have such a low general reading ability that it "is not sufficient to provide them a basis for thinking, independently on many matters of importance.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 11—The latest report reveals that out of a total of 748,538 students enrolled in adult education classes of the Works Projects Administration during April of this year, 165,086 were Negroes.

These figures made public by James A. Atkins, specialist in Negro Education, Works Projects Administration, show the following enrolments for the race by types of classes:

Vocational training, 13,950; literacy, 64,273; naturalization, 1,156; homemaking and parent education, 24,315; other adult education classes acounted for 61,393 adult Negro students.

Mr. Atkins explained that these enrollment figures do not necessarily represent the total number of different persons enrolled. Some persons, he said, may be enrolled in more than one class and therefore are counted more than once.

By states, the six highest enrollments of adult Negro students were found in Alabama, 19,142; Texas, 14,078; Louisiana, 12 642; Ohio, 9,467; and Illinois, 7,721. Other states reporting enrollments ranging downward from 7,500 to 5,000 included Georgia, Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri, Virginia, Mississippi, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, and North Carolina. New York City reported 4,204 Negro students in its Adult Education Program. California had 2,662 and the District of Columbia, 1,835.

With vocational training occupying such an important place in national defense efforts, the WPA Negro Education specialist regarded the distribution of the largest classes of vocational trainees as significant.

New York City with 2,471 Negro vocational students enrolled in the WPA Education Program, headed the list, Mr. Atkins pointed out. Virginia was next with 1,101 and was followed in order by Missouri, 1,058; Ohio, 965; Illinois, 856 and Alabama, 814. Indiana had 801. Other states reporting over 500 vocational education students of the race were New Jersey, California, Tennessee and Kansas.

Reported as carrying the heaviest total Negro pupil load in the WPA Adult Education Program, literacy education classes enrolled 9,214 in Louisiana, 7,059 in Texas, 5,898 in Alabama, 5,698 in Mississippi, 5,188 in Georgia, and 3,949 in Tennessee.

The six states having the largest enrolment of Negro students in naturalization classes were Iowa, 296; Ohio, 217; Louisiana, 112; Pensylvania, 105 and New York City, 98. Tennessee also reported 98 Negro students in naturalization classes. Rhode Island had an enrollment of 71 students.

Illinois, with 2,261 Negro students, stood highest in homemaking and parent education class enrollments. Michigan followed with 2,094. Then came Virginia's enrollment of 1,984; Ohio, 1,918; Pennsylvania, 1,744 and Indiana, 1,420. Other states having 1,000 or more Negro homemaking and parent education students were Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Alabama and Louisiana. North Carolina had 983; New York City, 419 and the District of Columbia 78.

CHICKENS are coming home to roost in the South, where more than 100,000 men of draft age have been rejected for lack of education.

Poorly paid teachers, a poor quality of education and poverty combine to keep hundreds of thousands of youth, white and colored, either semi-literate or illiterate.

The result is that in the southern states hundreds of thousands of men have been rejected because THEY HAVE NOT A FOURTH GRADE EDUCATION.

This is not a record of which to be proud. Most of the states could do more for education than they are doing. The revelation of illiteracy and semi-illiteracy ought to serve to prod the educational leaders of the South to take corrective measures.

While it is true that colored youth are the greatest sufferers, hundreds of thousands of whites are ample illustration of Booker T. Washington's theory that one must stay down in order to keep another down.

The South is paying dearly for its blind obsession with the doctrine of racial superiority and its unenlightened program of "Keeping the Negro in his place."

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

TOO IGNORANT FOR THE ARMY

More than 100,000 young men in the South have been turned down by Selective Service Boards for lack of education!

The Selective Service Board has ruled that no selectees will be drafted who haven't a fourth grade education.

A modern army cannot depend on illiterates and semi-literates, and so in the South particularly a large segment of the population has been eliminated from the draft.

A highly productive peace-time civilization cannot be built upon a working population in which a high percentage is unfit for Army duty. Men who are not fit for Army service are likewise not equipped for the economic, social and political responsibilities of citizenship.

In 1939 there were 979,666 white children enrolled in the first grades of the South's public schools, according to James C. Derieux, a South Carolina newspaper man. But in the fourth grade there were only 617,998 enrolled. The 261,668 difference represents, for the most part, a difference in the number dropping out after one, two or three years.

For Negro children the difference was even more startling: 605,498 in the first grade, 251,316 in the fourth. The "mortality" was 354,182.

Children drop out of schools for two reasons:

Economic necessity, which forces hundreds of thousands of rural children, more boys than girls, to go to work to help the family eke out an existence.

Poor quality of education, which fails to capture the interest and imagination of many children.

The education being offered in thousands of schools is so unattractive and so unrelated to the every-day problems of living that neither pupils nor parents feel the product is worth the sacrifice required to get it.

The Advertiser knows of one school in Alabama where the attendance has almost doubled in three years. There has been no increase in population in the area, the only factor in the increase having been the vitalization of the school's program. Older boys and girls who had not attended school for four or five years, and in some instances even longer, returned because they were convinced the school had something worth getting.

In this instance, an imaginative principal and staff with above-the-average abilities were able to develop a program related to the needs of the area served. They have had to pay the price of over-crowded rooms and havier work loads, but even these handicaps have not discouraged them.

But as a whole Alabama cannot expect to get this kind of service from its teachers when salaries are not sufficient to maintain decent standards of living. At present there is a migration of able teachers away from the schools, and in many instances only an idealistic interest in their work has prevented good teachers from accepting better paying jobs.

Despite the fact that its effort is above the average as states go, Alabama could, of course, do even better. (The surplus now in the State's treasury is proof of that fact.) Year in and year out, however, the Southern states with low per capita wealth cannot maintain educational standards in line with those of the nation as a whole.

The present emergency proves—if any additional proof was necessary—that education is a national problem and should be a national responsibility.

A nation facing a crisis cannot depend upon poorly-educated men and women for effective agricultural and industrial production and the training of armed services. The strength of the whole is dependent upon the strength of every part right down to the last individual man or woman.

CONGRESSMAN MITCHELL ON PRACTICAL EDUCATION

NOV 29 1941

SPEAKING before the Louisiana Colored Teachers Association in New Orleans on November 19, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell of Chicago, called attention to the need for more practical training in our schools and colleges of the South. After pointing out that the number of adult illiterates between the ages of 21 and 35, as shown by the registration for the Selective Army Draft, is seventeen million Americans, and not five million, as was stated in the 1940 census, he told the teachers that theirs is a most important task in prepare the Negro youth for complete living and service to himself and his country. Then discussing the nature of education he said:

"Unfortunately for our group, we have not been any too friendly toward any type of training which does not tend to emancipate us from manual labor . . . In this scientific age, when we are traveling by air, and our ships are sailing under the water as well as on the surface of the water, our messages carried by telegraph, telephone, cable, wireless and by radio, it is of the highest importance that we, a minority group, economically America's weakest group, do not neglect that type of training which will enable us to type of training whith will enable us to work and figure permanently in the development of these great mechanized forces which play a major part in education, democracy and defense."

One of the things the present war has brought out is that we as a race have been paying more attention to the abstract theories of education and the classical side of education than we have to the more prattical side—that side which will enable our graduates to get immediate work upon completing their courses.

The skilled mechanics, the technician, is just as necessary to our type of civilization as is the professional man or woman, and there are more jobs in the former field than in the latter.

GEORGIA IS Conquering ILLITERACY

By JULIA MOSELEY.

IT IS EASY to sit down in an arm chair and think of reasons why children should go to school or for that matter why any of us did. Today with an aroused patriotism on all sides and the weight of decisions depending on the intelligence of people it is interesting to speculate on how many people in Georgia who are at least 10 years of age will be listed by the 1940 census as illiterates.

Back in 1930 the census came out with 210,736 illiterates 10 years of age and over for the state of Georgia. That amounted to 9.4 per cent of the population, and the count included both white and negro. Comparing the count on illiteracy for the past three decades and averaging the returns for 1940 promise to be only half those of 1930. The smaller table shows how progress in doing away with illiteracy for Georgia has run from 1900 to 1930.

When the 1930 census was taken 79 per cent of the population were 10 years of age and over. If the same figure still holds for the 1940 census, the 100,156 illiterates would amount to a tiny bit over 4 per cent. And this means that the illiteracy rate of 1940 has definitely gone down to less than half of what it was 10 years ago.

The repeated statement that effective democracy demands educated voters has implications right now. In 1885 the number of white people who couldn't read or write was almost the same as the number for the Negroes in 1930. The diagram for Negro illiteracy shows it to be greatest from 1900 to 1910, a period which followed the passing of constitutional amendments taking away the right to vote from illiterates in the southern states. Also, the least progress in doing away with illiteracy among white folk was in 1920 to 1930, when so many people thought they had prosperity and had to go to work. The dynamics of the population of Georgia have a part in the life of the future of the United States and doing things about illiteracy and inadequate education is one way to have more voters who know what is going on.

ILLITERATES HIGH AMONG REGISTRANTS

Sixteen Per Cent Could Not Write Names

Sixteen per cent of Georgia's 402,636 draft registrants are illiterate, according to reports from local boards which have classified 73 per cent of the men registered, it was revealed yesterday at selective service headquarters.

The reports, compiled through July 15, show that 8,830 white men and 27,086 Negroes have signed their questionnaires with an "X." Some 46,000 registrants could not write their names when they registered for selective service.

The Army has inducted 695 Georgians who can't read or write, 256 white men and 439 Negroes, through May 14. A regulation has since been added which places illiterates in Class 4-F, "physically, mentally or morally unfit."

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Georgia Editors Say:

ILLITERACY.

(From The Waycross Journal-Herald.)

That 16 per cent includes many more Negroes than whites.

We cite this merely to show that despite the marvelous advance Georgia has made in eliminating illiteracy, nevertheless some 46,000 registrants could not write their names when they registered for selective service.

That is the number, it is to be remembered, between certain ages. Outside those age limits are other illiterates.

It would be a fine thing if the effort to eliminate illiteracy in our state is continued until not a single illiterate remains.

Many of those who are illiterate will be delighted to have that condition removed.

Georgia is going forward. Let's make it an all-round advance.

She Learned To Read 75 Years Ago, Now She Is Learning How To Write

CHICAGO—(ANP)—Mrs. Anna Hayes, who learned to read when she was a ten year old slave on a Mississippi plantation, waited 75 years to learn how to write, but now that she's begun to actually write letters, she's eager to learn more.

A student in a WPA adult education class, she can be depended on to be present regardless of the weather. "I guess I'm doing pretty good", she says, with quite earnestness, "I write letters to friends in the South and I think they can read them because I get answers back. You know, after I started to learn a little, I just craved to be able to write a letter. It's a real pleasure to me, too. I'll go to school as long as I'm able or as long as it lasts. Some days, when there are lots of people there, we have a right good class".

Mrs. Hayes has two daughters, 20 grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. She lives with one daughter and when she isn't sleeping, eating or reading, she is usually found at the dining room table carefully practicing her exercises with paper and pencil.

"I could read when I was ten years old" she explains, "I lived on a plantation called 'Walnut Grove', owned by Mrs. Jane Sanders, a widow. The madame, as we called her, was teaching her five year old son to read. But he wouldn't learn his alphabet unless I was standing next to him. So I stood over him and learned it all, too. After that I read all the primers I came across, and I read the Bible and Sunday School books, though I didn't learn any more. I was the only slave of about 100 on the plantation who could read".

REALIZES AMBITION

Robert Brooks mails a letter.

ROBERT BROOKS, a venerable white-haired Negro, had just one consuming passion. He wanted to get letters delivered to him like his neighbors did. Sometimes he'd intercept the postman near his home at 1243 West 14th street.

"Wish I'd get some letters," he'd say. The postman, sympathetic but realistic, would reply: "You'll never get any unless you write some."

Though in his 60's, Brooks determined that he'd learn to write. Back in the deep South he never had a chance for schooling, but a chance came in Chicago, through the WPA's adult education program. He enrolled at the Maxwell Y. M. C. A., 1012 Maxwell street, according to H. M. McCullen, Cook County director of the program.

He began to study his alphabet and form his letters last summer. Just before Christmas he sent his first letter, a brief note to his teacher. He got an answer, his first visit by the postman, for a Christmas present.

Now he's become one of Uncle Sam's most persistent stamp customers, and the postman frequently rings twice at his home—in the same day.

NEGRO ADULT EDUCATION CLASS COMPLETES STUDY

The Adult Education class taught by W. H. Toler of Duncan has completed its program on Defense, it was announced this week. The program was carried out Monday night.

Speeches were heard from Rev. J. W. Keys on "The Negro and Defense"; from John Applewhite on "Farmer's Part in Defense" and the teacher on "Adult Education and Defense". The importance of raising all foodstuffs possible was stressed, as well as the principle of saving all that is possible and the maintenance of health.

STATES' FIGHT ON ILLITERACY MAKES GAINS, SAYS VISITOR

FEB 13 1941

North Carolina, ranking seventh among the states in illiteracy, according to the 1930 census, is rapidly reducing its once high rate through an extensive educational campaign, W. J. Trent, president of Livingstone College, Salisbury, N.C., said Thursday while visiting in Portland.

The educator said that compulsory public school education and the furnishing of textbooks to students had been instrumental in reducing illiteracy in the state. North Carolina, the college president declared, has five educational institutions for Negroes supported by the state, more than any other state in the union.

Livingstone College, named for David Livingstone, famous missionary and African traveler, is the chief institution of learning for the African Methodist Episcopal Church, a denomination which embraces 450,000 members, Trent said.

The Negro educator, who attended the recent Association of American Colleges convention at Pasadena, said he was impressed with the 'thoroughness" of both public school and higher education in the west.

Trent said that he was the first alumnus to become president of Livingstone College in the 59 years of its existence. Formerly a YMCA worker, Trent was elected president of the institution in 1925.

Trent visited J. F. Smith, pastor of the A.M.E. Zion Church, a Livingstone alumnus, while in Portland.

COLORED ADULT EDUCATION CENTER

The Colored WPA Adult Education Center with 75 enrollees observed National Negro Health Week in Louisburg the past week at Jack Hayes' old store. Martha Ella Perry is teacher-in-charge. The health program consisted of health discussions by prominent citizens. Home sanitation was demonstrated by the cleaning and rearranging of several homes. Healthful menus were planned and served to the community's under nourished. Health songs were sung and the colored minister, Rev. James Neal, cooperated by delivering an inspiring series of lectures on health. The students adopted as their slogan: "Health for Defense."

AN APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE OF SOUTH CAROLINA TO THINK.

Common prudence requires that we assume the continuance of selective service for many years, and that we make appropriate adjustments in our ways of life. One of these adjustments—and it is of great importance in South Carolina—must be made in the field of education.

This state is now granting, indirectly, exemption to about three-fourths of the Negro boys, and perhaps one-third of the white boys. All these boys are free from the obligations and are denied the privileges of selective service. Why? Because they are either illiterate, or semi-literate; because they have not the equivalent of a fourth grade education, and the armed services now require men who have the equivalent of at least a fourth grade education.

This is a serious situation, with long-term potentialities. South Carolina's quota of men for training will not be reduced. The ignorant will merely be passed over, and the selectees will come, necessarily, from the top flight of both races. This will be fine for the armed services, but it will not be fine for South Carolina. What can the illiterates and the semi-literates do in civil life? We shall have them on our hands as unskilled workers, as farmers who do not know how to farm, as misfits in society.

A gentleman who has given much thought to the problem writes to The State: "It seems to me that insomuch as illiteracy acts as exemption or certainly deferment, and since South Carolinians and people of the South are more or less inclined to volunteer in the service, and since the likelihood is that men with superior training in the profession of rebuilding the body and material wealth of the country are likely to be placed directly in the service, we are going to be in a very unenviable position at the close of the conflict. In other words, we are going to have taken out of training, perhaps, our leadership in the fields of engineering, medicine, chemistry and so on. It seems that the South will never recover if those who are taken are doing real service in the upper brackets and are put in positions which give no recognition to their capacities and training as valuable rebuilders."

Think of the situation in this way: Selectees in South Carolina, because so many of our young men are too ignorant to be acceptable to the armed services, must be chosen from a group of the choicer young men, and not from all the young men. It is possible that all Negro selectees must come from about ten or fifteen per cent of the young Negro men, because three-fourths of the Negro boys have not the required education, and of the remaining one-fourth, many will be physically disqualified, heads of families, or exempt for other reasons.

The general situation is discussed by Sadler Love in the Ed-Clip service of the cotton manufacturers' organization: "Figures based on the reports of the state department of education show what is happening in South Carolina," writes Mr. Love. "For example, in 1929 there were 120,639 children enrolled in the first grade, and in 1940 only 15,459 had reached the eleventh grade. The decline between the first grade and the eleventh grade, both Negro and white, was 87 per cent. The decline in white enrollment between the two grades was 72 per cent, and in Negro enrollment was 97 per cent. Stated more simply, of the white and Negro pupils enrolled in the first grade in 1929, four out of five dropped out before reaching the eighth grade, and seven out of eight dropped out before reaching the eleventh grade. That is an alarming picture."

Now consider the situation wholly apart from the military emergency, and from the probable continuance of selective service as domestic policy in the United States. Consider education in relation to income. Are the two related? Listen: In North Carolina a careful study has been made of 44,963 boys and girls. The results of this survey of youth have been issued in a volume "Paths of Maturity," from which this quotation comes:

"The effect of education upon the annual income of a family is indicated with startling clearness...The white fathers, for instance, who never went to school are estimated as earning a mean annual income of $861.11. Those who were graduated from high school nearly double this figure by having a mean annual income of $1,652.49, while those who went on to college, whether they graduated or not, push their mean annual income upward to $1,889.29. Negro fathers who never went to school have an estimated mean annual income of $692.85 as compared with a mean income of $850 for those who were graduated from high school, and $990.38 for those who went to college.

"Does education yield money returns? Seemingly so, for if we divide the difference between the income of those who never went to school and those who attended or graduated from college by sixteen—the assumed number of grades college graduation implies—we find an average annual increase in income for each grade completed by the white fathers of $64.26 and of $18.60 for the Negro fathers."

The quotations and the comments in this discussion explain why this newspaper has talked so persistently and insistently about reapportionment of South Carolina's public income, about putting more of that income into education efforts, especially in the primary and secondary schools.

Men are not rejected by the armed services because they do not have improved highways in front of their doors; or because their towns, cities, counties or states do not have new and modernly equipped public buildings; but they are rejected because their communities have not equipped them with the required minimum of education.

South Carolina's great need is for improved human beings. No other kind of improvement is fundamentally important. Give us improved men and women, and all other improvements worth while will come along as consequences of the better work done by trained people. Invest money in people, and there will be money to invest in things.

BLOW THE LID OFF!

Governor Maybank has called members of the state board of education, and others, to meet with him June 19 to consider the public education problems of South Carolina. The State hopes, earnestly, because of its devotion to South Carolina, that the consequences of the special meeting will be important; and The State believes the consequences can be made important if officials and citizens who understand the public education problems will fight hard enough, long enough, and loud enough.

A serious situation exists in South Carolina. About three-fourths of all young Negro men are ineligible for military service because they have not enough schooling. About one-third of all young white men are unwanted by the armed forces because they have not enough schooling. And the industrial development of the state—agricultural development, too—is being held back because we have not enough skilled workmen, and not enough young men with enough education to be trained as skilled workmen.

This condition is due to one general cause: South Carolina's failure to do a better job in primary and secondary education. This state has neglected its children of both races, and both races will pay heavily for that neglect. Shall we persist in the error of our ways, and therefore continue to pay heavily, and needlessly?

Call your meeting, Governor, and tell those who attend exactly what's what. Then tell all of us. Many of us are ready for you, or for somebody, to take the lead in a determined, planned fight for the development of the human resources of South Carolina.

This state must live now, and henceforward. It cannot live now, and thencebackward. Conditions never again will be as they have been. A complacent disregard for the training of a large number of our boys and girls is likely, under the swift changes of today and of tomorrow, to result in quick disaster.

The unschooled boy has no place now in war, and he will have no place in peace.

Blow the lid off, Governor! This is the time to put emphasis on the only kind of fundamental improvement there is—improvement of people.

Columbia, S. C. State

BALL AND CHAIN.

Figures taken from reports of the state department of education show that about one-third of the white boys enrolled in the first grade in 1936, had disappeared from the public school system by 1940. This implies that nearly all the missing one-third stopped school after one or two or three or four years.

Corresponding figures for Negro boys show that approximately three-fours of those enrolled in the first grade in 1936, had disappeared from school in 1940.

The armed forces have not the time to teach illiterates or semi-literates. Industry's preference is for workers who have more basic education than the average boy can acquire in two, or thre or four years in school. Modern farming requires the possession and the use of information.

What will South Carolina do about its boys? Do the people of this state wish a heavy proportion of them to be unprepared for war or for peace?

Adult Negro Program Set

Education Project Classes Meet For Six Weeks Starting Tuesday

Plans had been completed this afternoon for a negro adult education program centering in Sterling high school, and offering a variety of classes on Tuesday and Thursday nights for six weeks beginning next Tuesday night.

To facilitate attendance training centers are being set up at the high school, Phyllis Wheatley center, and at the Sullivan street, Gower street and Allen grammar schools.

Courses will be given in the various branches of domestic service the use of modern household appliances, correct service technique, writing, telephoning, conversation, menu making, planning and personal health, in addition to other vocational training, music and Bible study.

The program is being operated through the cooperation of city school officials.

Directing the project are J. E. Beck, J. W. Walker, Abbie Chapelle, Marie Fisher, C. E. Hammond and P. E. Stewart, registrar.

Educational Center Will Be Established In City

Adults To Be Offered A Variety Of Courses At W. Market Street School

A Citizen's Educational Center, giving Andersonians the opportunity to refresh themselves in various lines of cultural study will be held at West Market School during April. The course will last for five weeks.

A steering committee comprised of the principals of the seven grammar schools of the city are planning the courses to be offered at the center, courses which appeal to those persons who have had opportunity for advanced study as well as to those who have had limited opportunity for education.

The movement, sponsored by the State Adult Educational Department in cooperation with the Anderson County Department, is one which will have wide appeal to all persons who wish to refresh themselves along several lines of study.

List Courses

Such interesting courses as the following already have been planned in detail and will be offered: "Browning," by Miss Regina Cook Cowdrick, of the English department of Anderson College; "Shakespeare," by Miss Cowdrick; "Making Art a Hobby," by Mrs. M. D. Boulware, of the art department of Anderson College; "South Carolina History," by Dr. E. C. McCants, superintendent of city schools; "Bible Study," by Rev. James Appleby, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church; and "Child Guidance," by Miss Gladys Beach, personnel director of Anderson College. Other courses will be added to the list, it is said.

The educational center was planned following conferences, with J. C. Holler, county superintendent of education; Dr. E. C. McCants, superintendent of city schools; Miss Will Lou Gray, state supervisor of adult education; Avery Hunt, principal of West Market Street School, who has been designated director of the center; and Miss Lessie Moore, who will supervise similar programs in the county.

Twice Per Week

The center will be open twice a week on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 until 9 o'clock during a period of five weeks, Mr. Hunt has announced. During the allotted period each evening two classes will be held divided by an assembly period.

West Market Street school was chosen as the place for the center, because its auditorium will seat a large number of people. All principals of the grammar schools are cooperating as members of the steering committee to plan the courses of the program. Serving with Mr. Hunt are G. A. Garrett, of North Anderson; A. H. Fort, principal of North Fant; Mrs. Lottie Estes, Glenn Street; Mrs. John Lomax, East Whitner; J. M. Wingo, Kennedy Street; and Mrs. Maude Buchanan, Southside.

Each individual who enrolls will be allowed to take two courses among those offered. Further details concerning enrollment will be announced later.

Others Planned

The movement is one which has proved highly successful in other parts of the state. It is recalled that centers were held in Batesburg and Leesville during October. For several years they have been conducted at the Greenville High School and at Parker High in Greenville.

Miss Lessie Moore has charge of establishing centers in surrounding communities. Arrangements are being made for courses at Townville.

Negroes also will be given the opportunity of further study in a center which opens tonight at South Fant School, where six teachers are offering courses, Miss Moore stated. Others will be offered at Pendleton, Honea Path, Belton and at other points in the county. A total of twenty-one Negro teachers will have charge.

A wide-spread movement, the educational center will prove equally beneficial to all types of students. The public is urged to watch the newspapers for further announcements.

Buildings Improved To Take Care of Gains Of Columbia System

Columbia's progress and increase in population during 1940 was reflected in increased enrolment in the Columbia school system for the 1940-41 session, reports at the office of A. C. Flora, superintendent, show.

With only a few exceptions, individual schools showed consistent increases in enrolment. This was true for both white and Negro schools of the system.

Columbia high, 1,317-1,330; Dreher high, 710-823; University high, 309-317; Hand junior high, 567-487; Wardlaw junior high, 666-608; Hyatt Park junior high, 225-183. Total white high schools and junior high schols, 3,794-3,748.

Also, Arden school, 186-207; Withers, 27-51; Hyatt Park, 373-393; McMaster, 492-471; Moore, 263-276; Hamrick, 330-306; Logan, 574-625; McCants, 178-186; Schneider, 774-862; Taylor, 528-650; Watkins, 162-187; Kindergarten, 74-68. Total elementary schools, 3,961-4,282.

Total for all white schols, 7,755-8,030. This represents a net increase of 275 in the white schools.

For Negro elementary schools, 3,261-3,368; Negro high schools, 1,554-1,552. Totals for Negro schools, 4,815-4,920, an increase of 105.

The total net increase for all city schools was 380.

The teaching staff of the city schools was increased over the 1939-40 session to take care of the additional enrolment. The number of white teachers was increased from 291 to 301, and the number of Negro teachers from 127 to 132.

New Public Services

While enjoying an increase in enrolment in the schools, the administration endeavored to increase its services to the public during 1940. To serve not only school children, but to aid adults in learning new things or supplementing working knowledge in various subjects was the purpose of the administration.

To follow out this idea, a citizen's education center was inaugurated in April. At the center a variety of courses were taught once each week for several weeks. Subjects ranged from gardening to current history, from salesmanship to knitting. In all more than 30 different courses were offered. A similar center is planned for the spring of 1941.

In addition to this comparatively brief training course, evening classes were begun at Columbia high school. These were designed to supplement working knowledge of persons employed at various jobs, to enable them to perform their jobs more efficiently.

Further extending education facilities to adults, classes to train national defense workers were begun at the Columbia high school building. In cooperation with the defense education program of the U. S. office of education, classes for draftsmen, sheet metal workers, auto mechanics, and carpenters were inaugurated, and are still being carried on.

School Plants Improved

No new school buildings were built during the year, but the work of improving and maintainng in the best order possible the existing buildings and plants went forward. During the summer workmen renovated school furniture and built additional articles to furnish school buildings. Painting was done in a number of buildings, in some cases with the assistance of W. P. A. funds.

At present plans are on foot to install lights in a number of unlighted school rooms in the city, and to carry on other needed improvements. Authorization of a loan for the purpose has already been made by county authorities.

Two Adult Negro Night Schools To Open Classes Here Sept. 8

Two adult Negro night schools, with classes each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m., will open Sept. 8, Hugh Betts, Supervisor of Adult Education, announced yesterday. The classes will be held at Austin High School and Beardsley Junior High School.

Registration at the two schools will be held Sept. 2 through Sept. 8. First classes will be Sept. 8, Betts said. Lula Drake will be principal at Austin and Monroe D. Senter will be in charge at Beardsely.

"Knoxville has the distinction of having the only public adult education program for Negroes in the state. The Negro program for adults has been in operation continuously since 1929," Betts said.

Betts said more than 500 adult Negroes attended classes during the 1940-41 school year at the two schools. An enrollment of more than 700 is expected for the current year, he said.

The faculty for the Austin Adult Night School and subjects are: Virginia Reed, fundamentals; Letitia Johnson, fundamentals; Margaret Hannum, fundamentals; Wilbur Sims, mathematics; Neisco Jackson, English and Negro History; Edna Arter, English; L. C. Flack, science and history; Bessie Brice, typewriting; Nora Turner, foods; Edith Nowlin, shorthand and bookkeeping; Ruth Brice, art; Bessie Richards, music; Marcellus Saunders, music; LaFayette Wyly, barbering; Henry Lenoir, dramatics; Estelle Smith, first-aid; Irene Enloe, needlework and knitting, and Mabel Cloud, general sewing.

Beardsley Adult Night School faculty and subjects are: Elizabeth Brown, English; Saphorina Mason, fundamentals; Mildred Seals, fundamentals; Mrs. A. J. Bacote, history; H. H. Smith, mathematics; Mrs. L. Hargraves, dramatics and speech; David Howell, community problems; Cleo McMahan, handicraft; Elizabeth Fitzgerald, bookkeeping and typewriting; C. H. NIGHT SCHOOL FOR NEGROES

In reply to a question about a summer night school for Negroes in Richmond this year, you recently stated that none was planned. I am sure you will be glad to know that there will be a night school session for Negro adults at the Armstrong High School, beginning about the middle of May. This summer night school has been held for the past six years, under the sponsorship of the WPA, the State Board of Education, and the Richmond School Board. The director is Miss Cornelia S. Adair; the principal, A. L. Terrell. There will be ten teachers this summer, who will conduct classes in all grades from the first through the ninth. The school will be in session on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7:45 until 9:45 o'clock. There is no charge for tuition.—A School Man, Richmond.

Thank you very much.

Discovering State Illiteracy

Announcement has been made by the draft authorities in Virginia that of 201,993 men classified by local boards, 13,964 were forced to sign their questionnaires with a "mark" because they could not write. Of these latter, 6,684 are white men and 7,280 are Negroes. They represent about 7 per cent of the men classified during the period in question.

The proportion raises questions in the operation of the draft law that have far-reaching results. The Army is slow to accept illiterates. Consequently, the more illiterates who are placed in deferred classifications, the larger the number of educated men who have to be called on for Army service. This aspect of the matter is disturbing Lieut. Col. Mills Neal, State director of the draft. He is hopeful that changes in the regulations can be made to permit the utilization of more of these illiterate men, believing that in many instances they can perform valuable work in the Army. They probably can.

But the publication of the figures has had the further result of producing expressions of surprise in Virginia that the proportion of illiterates has been running so high. It should not. There is no secret about illiteracy in Virginia. The standard definition of an illiterate is a person ten years of age or older who can not write in any language. On this basis the Bureau of the Census has recorded that, on the basis of the 1930 Census, 162,588 persons in Virginia are illiterate and that the percentage for the State is 8.7.

The findings of the draft are actually less, although not much less, than the findings of the Census. The two are close enough together to serve as a rough check on each other and thereby to suggest that there is nothing surprising in the report of the draft authorities. They have merely collided with an ancient and lamentable Virginia condition which is better than the condition in some other States (North Carolina's 10 per cent, Alabama's 12.6 per cent, South Carolina's 14.9 per cent, for instance), but much worse than the national per cent of 4.3.

But the surprise may be beneficial. It may drive home to more Virginians the stern duty of bringing the State's literacy nearer the national level.

SNOW HILL NEGRO SCHOOL BEING REMODELED

Snow Hill Negro School of Wilcox County is receiving a remodeling of its girls' cottage. a woodwork shop, a music hall, and numerous other improvements as result of the NYA community assistance available to every district of Alabama.

The girls' cottage is being remodeled with an enlarged laundry, and foundation for the standard design woodwork shop is being dug. Ground has already been broken for the new proposed Aubrey Williams Music Hall to be built on the grounds.

A two-story dormitory for boys was built by the NYA at Snow Hill last year, and an addition has just been compseted to the NYA boys' cottage making possible the housing of 25 more boys. NYA girls serve meals to 200 in the cafeteria every day.

New dormitory to house 50 students and a sheet metal shop are going hp on the grounds of the Millers Ferry Negro School through the NYA program of community assistance.

Valued at $4,000, the dormitory is nearing completion, and foundations have already been dug for the sheet metal shop.

NYA's first boost to the Millers Ferry school was a gymnasium built last year, but Negro girls of Wilcox County have had a handicraft project for some time. They make chairs and hats out of cornshucks and weave baskets of pine needles.

Dr. John E. Bryan, state administrator of NYA, points out that this commdnity assistance is avvailable to every district in the state of Alabama.

Dr. Nathan W. Collier

The passing of Nathan W. Collier, late president of Florida Normal and Industrial Institute, at his home in Augusta, Ga., removes another landmark in the field of pioneer Negro education.

For forty-five years Dr. Collier had served this institution. His life and work have been to Florida youth what Dr. John Hope has been to Georgia and Booker Washington to Alabama.

MAR 2 - 1941

He was a quiet, unassuming man. His mild manners and his technique in getting things over brought many fine considerations to the institution he loved and served with so much vigor. He lives in thousands of hearts and efforts of the students. He felt that no task was beneath the honest effort of man and in all his work he dignified labor and its vital essentials.

With the passing of such men as Dr. Collier, younger men are faced with the challenge they have lived. In a few short years the scene will be completely changed and a new order will supplant the old. We are wondering if the young men will prove the steel and initiative of the old patriots who threw up the foundation and the bulwark upon which Negro youth are passing.

Dr. Collier claimed Georgia as his home and it was in quiet retirement at his cottage in Augusta where he passed after an illness of a long duration. Georgia was proud of him and delighted to honor him as her son.

As the recent custom, in commemoration of his untiring efforts and sacrifices, he will be buried on his beloved campus at Saint Augustine, where the memories of his last resting place will occupy the post of director and adviser in sweeping influence on that campus. There will still be a blessed presence of Dr. Collier near his tomb, where men may retreat for silent counsel with the great man who made the oldest city in the United States famous by having lived in it.

A Georgia Problem Remains Unsolved

In 1937, the legislature of Georgia accepted a gift from the Negro women of the state, in the form of a $26,000 building, debt-free, whcih was to house a training school for delinquent Negro girls. Located in Bibb County, near Macon, the school is an imposing edifice, designed and built in the most efficient manner. A single thought motivated these women; the erasure of an evil and deplorable condition from our state, the plight of the Negro girls who have started life on the wrong foot.

But today—as since the structure was given the state, it remains vacant, pending action of the legislature in appropriating funds for its operation. Why? We do not know, any more than our readers know, but the earmarked funds were not made available. Now where are these girls? They are roaming aimlessly about the streets and byways of this great state, a menace to themselves and to society, white and colored.

Self-help is a virtue worthy of attention from those in authority. This gesture on the part of the public-spirited Negro women of Georgia might be only the beginning. Without encouragement, however, what on earth can we expect of it? The matter has been brought up, batted down, tossed around until it is in all probability a discouraging factor to the people who really want to relieve this miserable condition.

The Negro women thought that a modern building, with pleasant environment, would be enough to encourage the State of Georgia to maintain what they had bravely begun. Not so, it appears.

The problem has elicited the support of most juvenile court authorities and judges in Georgia; would elicit the approval of them all. Just ask them. The time has certainly come when the individual citizen must arise, speak loudly, and see that an intelligent answer be given the question.

There are schools, reformatories and other institutions for wayward white boys and girls, and certainly the problem of the Georgia Negro could be solved as easily. It would require perhaps $25,000 annually to operate on a beginning basis, caring for 60 to 75 girls. Let us suppose that number of delinquents could be sent—free of their lack—into society from the institution annually. Figure it for yourself. Would that not be a pleasant relief for everyone concerned?

If you and your neighbor realize what is going on, and most of you do, talk this matter, think about it seriously. And for your own sake, tell your representatives what you believe. Will you?

Highway Board Debt Pay Plan Before House

Lovett Claims Measure Would Free Fund of Several Millions.

By JACK SPALDING.

A bill to permit the Highway Department to issue written acknowledgments of its debts that its embarrassed creditors would be able to assign to other parties was introduced in the house of representatives yesterday by W. H. Lovett, of Laurens county.

Lovett's measure would permit the Governor, state auditor and chairman of the Highway Board to audit and approve the board's obligations. The board would then be able to make written acknowledgment of the validity of the certified claims which would be assignable in writing to banks or other agencies or persons "free of equities, counter-claims, set-offs and recoupments against the department."

Effect of the bill, Lovett said, would be to make negotiable paper out of the claim certificates, freeing the several million dollars' worth of paper that has been frozen since federal indictments, among other things, have created doubt regarding the legality of some of the department's practices.

Exemptions Listed.

Before meeting in joint session with the senate the house heard the first reading of 16 new bills and voted heartily in favor of a resolution inviting Ted Lewis and his band to play for them at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

Before the house convened, the committee on the state of the republic met and reported favorably on all important bills before it with the exception of the measure repealing the one per cent allowance given motor fuel distributors to cover their collection costs.

Action on it was deferred. A companion measure which has passed the senate and was reported favorably by the house committee was called back for reconsideration.

New bills brought in addition to Lovett's included five by Fulton's delegation straightening out kinks in the county's budgetary system and purchasing department; an act by Representatives Candler and Turner, of DeKalb, to extend the Decatur city limits by 300 square feet; a measure to substitute lethal gas for the electric chair as a means of carrying out death sentences, and a bill making physical examinations necessary before marriage licenses can be issued.

The 300 feet the DeKalb representatives want incorporated in Decatur is part of a subdivision between Oakhurst and the Seaboard railroad.

Representatives Weaver and Bloodworth, of Bibb; Ansley, of Lee; Bynum, of Rabun, and Key, of Jasper, sponsored an act that would forbid dental colleges or dental departments of colleges and universities charging more for work done in clinics than the actual cost.

Welfare Fund Sought.

The Bibb and DeKalb delegations sponsored a measure asking the assembly to appropriate $15,000 to the State Welfare Department for the remainder of this fiscal year to equip and support a Negro division of the Georgia Training School for Girls near Macon; and $20,000 for its maintenance the next year.

Representative Sills, of Candler, asked the legislature to authorize the Board of Regents to establish an agricultural and mechanical training school for Negroes in southeast Georgia. The same legislator introduced a bill that would transfer the sale of game licenses from sporting goods stores and other establishments to county ordinaries' offices.

The bill to change the method of executing criminals was introduced by Representative Welsch, of Cobb, while Representative Looper, of Dawson, sponsored the measure requiring medical certificates before marriage.

TECHNICAL SCHOOL FOR NEGROES ASKED

I was in Atlanta a few nights ago, having carried my team up to play in the preliminaries of the Clark-Renaissance. I met an old friend of mine and during the ensuing conversation he asked me two questions: "If you were a representative in the Georgia legislature, what bill would you present to the body?" "What is to become of the old Clark University campus?"

These questions have started a train of thought in my mind. Clark University at present is located three miles from Atlanta on the South Pryor-Federal Prison car line and is one of the oldest colleges sponsored by the Methodist church in Georgia. A new plant is now being constructed for the college on the west side, hence what is to become of the old campus, buildings, etc.?

If I were privileged to be a member of the Georgia legislature I should present a bill urging the people of Georgia to purchase these buildings and convert this campus into an industrial or technical school for Negro youth similar to the establishment at Monroe for white.

At present trades or vocations taught in high schools are inadequate in that the emphasis is put on the academic work and when the course is finished the boys or girls are not particularly fitted for anything, having been exposed to a smattering of this and a smattering of that.

There are hundreds of Negro boys who are eager for technical training—the lack of which makes for their drifting into "anything they can get to do" and quite often into undesirable occupations that make them a liability to society. Negro boys, too, like to make things, grow things, mix chemicals, tamper with machinery, experiment with electricity, and to learn plumbing. In order to learn these things, now, it is necessary for them to go to an institution of higher learning which most Negro boys cannot afford to do.

Since I am a Negro and therefore cannot be a member of the legislative body of my state, I hope that someone who can will be touched with the vision of the great need of converting the old Clark campus into a school such as I described above and thusly help Negro youth to make a place for itself in society that will reflect credit upon the race and to the state which it lives in. A school of this kind will pay dividends in reduced funds needed to maintain reformatories, in a lessening of tax money needed to reduce sickness and alleviate poverty.

JURORS PRAISE SOME BRANCHES OF COUNTY WORK

Efficient Operation Praised in Report From Subcommittee

A number of departments of the Fulton County Government are being operated in a highly efficient and businesslike manner, according to the presentments of the March-April Fulton grand jury, which was specifically charged with conducting an investigation of county affairs.

The grand jurors commended the County School Department, headed by Superintendent Jere Wells, and the school building program under the recent $750,000 school bond issue.

The sheriff's office, under J. C. Aldredge, was found to be conducted in a businesslike manner, while the operation of Fulton Tower under Chief Jailer A. B. Foster and W. T. Turner, chief steward, was held to be a model in prison administration despite needed physical improvements.

The personnel of the Public Works Department, headed by A. A. Clarke, chief of construction, was held to be highly competent and on the job. The county's prison camp system was found to be functioning efficiently.

The grand jurors approved also the administration of the adult prohibition office under George Allen Maddox, and the County Alms House, under Mrs. Charles Boynton.

It was recommended, however, that the administration of the Negro Boys' Industrial Farm be given a thorough overhauling and that the White Boys' Industrial School, abandoned last year, be reopened.

The expanded County Health Department, under Dr. R. W. McGee, was found to be doing excellent work in safeguarding public health, while the County Farm program is being carried out with efficiency by Director S. D. Truitt. However, a vast improvement in the operation of the county's six farms could be effected if Director Truitt is given more authority to carry out his ideas, the grand jury held.

WESTERN UNIVERSITY AND KAN. VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

WESTERN UNIVERSITY in Kansas City, Kansas, and the Kansas Vocational School at Topeka are state-supported institutions for Negroes. Both schools have existed for a number of years in the state of Kansas with the backing and support of Negro denominations and tax-paid money. Since the very beginning of these schools in Kansas there has always been a controversy among various groups. But through it all the two schools have remained and are still part of the educational set up of the state of Kansas. Both schools, from time to time, have been used as political footballs for the Democratic and Republican parties as well as for the purpose of educating Negro youths.

Once more the two schools are tossed on the football field to be tossed about until some of the sides make a score. This time the issue pending in the State Legislature is for the consolidation of the two schools into one. This consolidation is said to be necessary in order to make a more adequate school and to cut down on expenses.

The present set up of the two schools regardless to what they have meant to the educational advantages of colored people in the past does not, in our opinion, measure up to the standards of Kansas education. That is to say, the set up is not adequate enough to give our boys and girls a complete education in any trade or phase of education desired so that they will be able to take their places in life and perform. Of course, we are not so stupid as to say that the schools are not doing some good. But most certainly they are not adequqately equipped to present a program of modern education. This,however, is attributed to a number of factors, namely ,a lack of appropriation, lack of interest on the part of Kansas Negroes, and because most people look upon the schools as a mere political football.

THE PRESENT PROPOSAL of the state Legislature to consolidate the two schools has met favorable reactions in some parts of the state and unfavorable reaction in other parts of the state. There are both negative and positive views given. Allow us to present some of the views as found by observations made by this newspaper.

1. We find a large number of Negro citizens who are in favor of the consolidation of the two schools because they see the need of an adequate vocational school for the training of Negro boys and girls. They say that the development in our present defense program is making a demand that Negro boys and girls be trained in certain phases of precision work: mechanics, aircraft work, sheet metal work, buildings and trades. They claim that neither of the two schools is equipped adequately to send boys and girls out into the world so that they can get jobs as skilled workers. This group, however, is divided on one point. Some are for the consolidation if they make Western University the main school, while others are for it if Kansas Vocational School is made the main school. They are together on one point, and that is that there is need for an adequate school for the training of boys and girls.

2. There is another group who are not for the consolidation of the schools under any circumstances. They are for the discontinuance of both The argument which they present is that the continuous bickering around with the two schools will eventually lead to the elimination of Negroes from other state institutions such as Kansas University, Kansas State Teachers college and the school at Manhattan. They further argue that the schools are operating under a jim-crow set up for the purpose of giving a few jobs to members of our race and giving politicians a chance to toss the schools about like footballs. They claim that the sacrifice of young people in these schools who come out not qualified to hold down first class jobs in trades does not justify the employment given to members of our group as instructors in state institutions. They further argue that the program of education in the state of Kansas should be broad enough to give members of our race who are qualified as teachers opportunity to work in any institution and not limit them to a jim-crow set up. They further say that they believe the preparation of our youth in efficiency and competency for jobs should be the most important feature of any educational program.

THESE TWO VIEWS as advanced by citizens over the state suggest one thing, according to our opinion, and that is the time is at hand for a show down on the two state schools. This show down must come between the Negroes in the state of Kansas and the administration in control. The time is at hand that the Negroes of Kansas must decide whether they want the schools or want a school merger under a separate set up. Also the Negroes of Kansas must realize that unless some program or agreement is worked out so far as these schools are concerned in the educational program of Kansas and the life of the Negro people—that the present set up of the schools is not meeting the requirements of the modern age in education of our boys and girls. They must realize that either the schools ought to be discontinued or one of them should be made a first class school, and that we must accept one of the two and run the risk, if we accept the latter, of being forced out of other state institutions. They must realize that if they want their boys and girls to measure up in the world and be able to compete with others, they must have the best of training. The present set up does not give them the best of training.

On the other hand the state administration must realize that in order to make either one of the schools come up to required standards more appropriation will be needed rather than consolidating the schools for the purpose of cutting the

Negroes Get Donation In Legislature

RALEIGH, Feb. 4.—(UP)—Thirty-two singing negro boys have accomplished what college presidents and state officials have been trying to do for three weeks—they got an actual donation from the legislature's joint appropriations committee.

Moreover the negroes got theirs in cash.

When the Morrison Training school of Hoffman, N. C., appeared to ask for an increased appropriation, Superintendent E. L. Boyd didn't follow the set procedure of pleading for an hour or so.

Instead he presented the reform school's glee club, directed by Edith Humbert.

The club sang three numbers and got two encores. Then the committee voted unanimously to pass the hat for the boys and a total of $12 was collected.

Meanwhile Boyd, in a brief and good-humored talk that brough frequent laughs from the committee, presented requests for $201,66 in new buildings and a $90,000 increase in the school's biennial appropriation.

Want Institution For Negro Girls

RALEIGH, Feb. 1—(AP)—Members of the North Carolina Interracial Commission, who conferred with Governor Broughton here yesterday, were assured by the chief executive that he would obtain for them a hearing before the joint appropriations committee on a request for an allotment to establish an institution for delinquent Negro girls.

The commission members told the governor there was a need for such an institution, where Negro girls could be trained for industrial and domestic work. Bishop Edwin A. Penick, Episcopal clergyman, and Mrs. W. T. Bost, head of the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, headed the delegation.

Proof of the Pudding

L. L. Boyd, superintendent of Morrison Training School for Negro boys, grew tired of trying to explain to legislators every two years just what his institution was accomplishing in the training and rehabilitation of youth.

So this year he tried something different.

When Boyd appeared in the purlieus of the State Capitol the solons expected the usual report and request for funds, a request, which, as usual, would be subjected to the paring knife before receiving the legislative O. K.

Much to their surprise there was no speech, no eloquent plea for increased appropriations. Instead Boyd ushered into the committee room a group of neat-appearing Negro boys. They lined up and entertained the solons with spirituals and folk songs. Every youngster wore the mark of intelligence and excellent training. Every boy looked as if he knew he was going some place in life.

Hence, the legislators were given the proof of the pudding. Boyd did not have to tell them what he and his assistants were accomplishing at Morrison Training School. They could see for themselves what was being done.

Students Win Strike Demands at Bordentown

APR 12 1941

PHILADELPHIA.

The first of a series of proposed new changes in student regulations, credited to a one-day strike went into effect at the Bordentown Manual Training School on Tuesday, with the extension of hours for socializing.

APR 12 1941

Also, it was learned, a study of student governing bodies is being made to ascertain the advisability of instituting a student court at the school for the handling of minor rule infractions.

Students Present Demands

These and other changes were included in a petition drawn up by the students several weeks ago and presented by representatives of the body during a special conference with the principal. The students stayed out of class that day, on March 17, awaiting the results of the conference.

According to W. R. Valentine, principal of the school, students will now be permitted to socialize on the campus after the dinner meal for forty-five minutes, three days a week, in addition to the regular periods already set aside.

A source close to the administration said that the student demands followed the visit of a group of persons from New Jersey, the previous Sunday, who mingled on the campus and attempted to incite the students by intimating that they were "not being treated right."

Blame Outside Agitators

This source expressed the belief that the visitors were members of a group in the State which has leveled an attack at the school, contending, among other things, that the institution was not accredited.

The registrar of Rutgers, who was quoted as saying that the school was not accredited, recently retracted the statement and said that a mistake had been made.

UNEVENTFUL WEEK ENDED BY SOLONS

Controversial Bills Placed Before House

18L

COLUMBIA, Jan. 23 —(AP)—The General Assembly wound up an uneventful week today but bills sure to provoke warm debate at some later date went into the hopper in both Senate and House.

Tomorrow's sessions in both houses will be limited to local matters. The House Ways and Means Committee and Senate Finance Committee also adjourned their joint appropriation hearings until next Tuesday.

A bill to repeal the 1939 passenger automobile inspection act was introduced in the House by a group of representatives headed by Grant of Chester and Odom of Darlington. A similar bill failed by a narrow margin to pass the House last year.

The act, which has come in for bitter legislative denunciation and equally as partisan defense, requires a semi-annual safety inspection of lights, brakes, horns and steering apparatus. Vehicles must pass the tests before they are given windshield stickers certifying that they are in good driving condition.

The perennial effort to have the state take over the Cooper river bridge at Charleston was launched again with introduction by the Charleston delegation of a bill that would authorize purchase of the bridge by the Highway Department.

The bridge, a giant cantilever span, is the only toll bridge remaining in the state. Its purchase price has been variously estimated in the past years at between $4,000,000 and $6,000,000. No price however, was mentioned in the bill, which provided for the issuance of highway notes of indebtedness in the amount of the cost.

Both the inspection act repeal bill and the Cooper river bridge measure went to the Roads, Bridges and Ferries Committee.

Senator Laney of Chesterfield authored a bill to provide free textbooks in the first seven public school grades. The cost was estimated by him at $360,000 a year. The measure went to the education committee.

Reps. Courney, Graham and McDonald of Florence and Byrd of Jasper sponsored a resolution that would have a House committee confer with President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Wickard on "methods and means of increasing the income of farmers." Referred to the agriculture committee, the resolution provided for the appointment of the committee members by the speaker.

Rej. Wolfe of York introduced a bill, referred to the labor, commerce and manufactures committee, to require hosiery mills to pay employes time-and-a-half for Sunday work.

When judiciary committee bills to ratify general election approval of constitutional amendments providing for biennial legislative sessions were reached on the House calendar, Rep. Berry of Richland interposed an objection to their immediate consideration. This automatically carried them over until next week.

Before the appropriation hearings ended for the week, the Ways and Means and Finance committees heard requests from the school book commission, the Confederate Infirmary, state treasurer, board of bank control, the industrial school for girls, chief game warden and the John G. Richards industrial school for Negro boys.

The Berkeley county supply measure became the first act of the session when it and another Berkeley act were ratified and sent to the governor.

Dedicate Library At Scottsboro

Mrs. Claude Davis, Miss Ruth Powell and Horace Moses, of the Huntsville Public Library went to Scottsboro this afternoon for the dedication of a negro library there, which has just been completed.

Judge J. S. Benson, of Scottsboro, was scheduled to make the dedicatory address. Mrs. Davis also was slated to speak.

The library there is housed in a remodeled and repainted house. The librarian is Horace Snodgrass, who has been largely responsible for making the house an attractive place for colored people to come and read.

Books are furnished by the regional system of the Huntsville library.

NEW LIBRARY FOR FLORIDA STATE SCHOOL

1941-1941

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Two telegrams, one each from Florida's United States senators—brought the news to the tireless, devoted President J. R. E. Lee that he has succeeded once more in procuring another much-needed building for the Florida A. and M. college—that the institution is to have a new library to replace the outgrown one which was erected in 1908.

The first telegram to President Lee was of December 13, from Senator Charles O. Andrews, as follows:

"President Roosevelt and WPA have approved WPA Project 50,501, providing for the construction of a library for Florida A. and M. college. Amount of federal funds, $59,758."

"I am glad to advise that the President has approved WPA Project 50,501 in the amount of $59,758.00 to construct a library building for the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical college. Regards."

To the sum above the General Education Board will add $25,000 for building a total of $84,758; and $10,000 for equipment.

When these two telegrams were read by a member of the faculty, at the close of Sunday vespers, a remarkable tribute was paid by the students; faculty; college and visitors from Tallahassee—white and colored—to President Lee.

Because the Sunday evening program was one of Christmas music, it was requested that no applause be given when the welcome news of the telegrams was recited; it was suggested that any who cared to show their appreciation for the man who toiled so successfully to widen the influence of the college might stand and remain standing until released by President Lee. As soon as the last word of the last telegram was read, the entire audience in absolute silence rose as one man, and showed that they do appreciate President Lee's years of faithful, productive service.

GROUND BREAKING FOR NEGRO LIBRARY SCHEDULED TODAY

Ground breaking ceremonies for the Dorsey Memorial Library for Negroes will take place at 17th st. and First ave. N. W. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. J. Avery Guyton acting chairman of the board of trustees in the absence of Lt. Commander William H. Green, chairman, will preside.

Mayor Clifford H. Reeder will break the ground and will speak. On the program will be the Rev. J. R. Evans, pastor of Mt. Zion Negro Baptist church, the Rev. J. E. Culmer, pastor of St. Agnes Negro Episcopal church, the Dorsey high school band and the negro singers known to radio audiences as Tropical Airs. The lot on which the library will be constructed was donated for that purpose by the late D. A. Dorsey, negro real estate owner and benefactor to his people. He also gave a park to the negro section and the lot on which the Dorsey negro high school is built.

The first unit of an adequate library for the negro section will be started at once with Paist and Steward architects and the M. R. Harrison Construction Corp. builders. When completed it will take the place of the small one-room library, known as the Dunbar Branch of the Miami Public library now in operation by the city. The late Dorsey appointed a board of trustees in connection with his gift of the lot for a library on which was named white and negro leaders, among them Lt. Commander Green, who is chairman, the late Judge Frank B. Stoneman, friend and adviser of Dorsey, Mrs. T. V. Moore, Mrs. M. F. Wittichen, then president of the Miami Woman's club, and the Rev. Culmer, Dr. George W. Hawkins, Lovell Richardson, Ann Coleman and Annie Twine. Mrs. J. Avery Guyton was appointed to the vacancy left by Judge Stoneman's death.

The Washington Heights Library Assn., headed by Dr. Hawkins, was instrumental in raising $2,500 towards the building fund. The library committee under which the Miami Public library, Flagler Memorial library, Dunbar Branch Negro library and St. Albans Negro library in Coconut Grove are operated is Mrs. Moore, chairman, Mrs. Thomas T. Stevens, vice chairman, Mrs. J. Lawton Rast, secretary, Mrs. Fred W. Hosea, Mrs. Hayes Wood, Mrs. Lon Worth Crow and Mrs. W. A. Haggard.

Doors Will Swing Open Today At Dorsey Memorial Library

A long-cherished hope of negroes in Miami's northwest section will be realized today when the new Dorsey Memorial library at N. W. Seventeenth street and First avenue opens its doors.

Formal dedication ceremonies will be held later, probably this fall, but the library will begin lending books today in order to meet the deadline set by the late D. A. Dorsey, negro leader, who donated the site for the library and for whom it is named.

When he signed the deed shortly before his death on Feb. 29, 1940, Dorsey stipulated that title to the property should revert to him if it could not be actually used for a library within 18 months.

City Provided $7,000

The city of Miami came to the rescue with appropriations totaling some $7,000 to complete the building, which had been started with the $2,600 raised by the Washington Heights Library Association. This club was organized June 6, 1939, under the joint sponsorship of the Miami Woman's club and the Friendship Garden and Civic club for negroes.

Ground-breaking ceremonies took place on July 6, and the one-story, concrete block and stucco building was rushed to completion. Plans for the structure, which now contains a lobby and two wings, one for children and one for adults, call for addition of a work room later.

2,000 Books On Shelves

Some 2,000 books formerly housed in the Dunbar branch of the Miami Public library, 2059 N. W. Sixth court, have been moved into the Dorsey Memorial library as the nucleus for the new collection. Operated under the supervision of the Miami library committee and Mrs. Frances G. Parsons, librarian of the city public library, the new institution will be open for the present from 2 to 7 p. m. every week-day.

DEDICATE NEGRO LIBRARY TODAY

Susan Dorsey Will Unveil Picture of Donors At Ceremonies

Dedication of the Dorsey Memorial library for negroes at First avenue and N. W. Sixteenth street at 4 p. m. today will close Miami's observance of National Book week.

Constructed on a lot donated by the late Dana A. Dorsey with funds raised by the Washington Heights Library Association and the city of Miami, the library will serve Miami' entire negro population of approximately 35,000.

Dr. Robert L. Allen, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, will give the dedication address and pictures of the late Dana and Rebecca Dorsey will be unveiled by their daughter, Susan Dorsey.

Reeder To Accept Deed

Mayor C. H. Reeder will accept the deed from the library trustees, and a response to his greetings will be made by Mrs. T. V. Moore, chairman of the Miami Woman's club library committee.

The Rev. J. W. Drake, pastor of St. John's Baptist Church, will give the invocation and Rev. H. W. Fayson, pastor of Bethel A. M. E. Church, the benediction.

The Dorsey high school band, directed by Principal David Dobbs, will play and the Tropical Airs chorus will sing negro spirituals. A book shower will be held, with guests asked to donate books for the library.

Mrs. J. Avery Guyton, chairman of the library board of trustees, will preside.

Negro Library Dedication

THE new negro public library will be dedicated today with appropriate ceremonies.

The structure is a credit to the colored population of the city which has worked and sacrificed to bring it to realization, assisted by a group of white citizens representing the Woman's club.

The dedication is open to the public. You can do a fine public service by donating a book or books to the nest egg of 2,000 volumes with which the library starts.

OUR LIBRARIES

THE BEST ANSWER TO ANY irresponsible criticism of New York's public libraries is to be found in the annual report just released. The 160 pages show the wide service these institutions are rendering on the cultural front. It also shows how sadly lacking has been the required public support. In the words of Dr. Harry Miller Lydenberg, library director, "The breaking point is not far distant." MAR 29 1941

Harlemites will be pleased to note the account on pages 123-124 of the fine work of our own Schomburg Collection. This is the first time we have noted such a section in the yearly review. According to this statement, the attendance of the Schomburg Collection was about 13,000 persons for the year. Students, writers and laborers were served. Exhibits were prepared for the New York Worlds Fair, the American Negro Exposition of Chicago and for the Library of Congress. The rare Frederick Douglass newspapers were put on microfilm. The catalogue is in process of revision. Tough reference questions were answered. The Honor Roll in Race Relations was a success. Gifts were received from the President of Haiti and from many authors.

It is high time that we should realize that the Schomburg Collection is not "just another library." It houses samples of the culture of Negro peoples in all times and from all parts of the world. In this sense, it is an invaluable repository of history and literature. MAR 29 1941

It is good to know that actual construction of the new 135th Street Library is in the offing. Here the Schomburg Collection, as well as the other departments of the library, will find a new and larger home. It is earnestly hoped that with this new building will come ample provision for books and personnel. In these days when so many billions are being spent to destroy, is it too much to request that a few thousands be spent to preserve some of the real values of civilization?

Miss Madison Inducts New Library Note

MAY 10 1941

By OLLIE STEWART

NEW YORK

Some people wish for jobs and some people make their own. Miss Dorothy Madison, who lives here at 853 St. Nicholas Avenue, belongs to the latter group. She took a novel idea and worked at it, and now there's little danger of her being unemployed.

What does she do? Well, I'll let her tell you. . .

Walking Librarian

"I walk," says Miss Madison, "about ten hours a day, three or four days a week. I have a regular route and regular customers. I carry with me several books. My customers select a book, read it and keep it a week—and pay me a quarter."

Sounds simple, doesn't it? Well, there's a lot more to it than meets the eye. MAY 10 1941

First off, Miss Madison had to buy books before she could rent any. She had to invest a tidy little sum in the hundreds of volumes she now has. Every time a best-seller comes out, she has to invest some more.

Then books wear out, and people move suddenly, and children occasionally tear off covers, and houses catch on fire. And in addition to these things, human beings are so constructed that some of them are onery enough to read a book and say they didn't like it to keep from paying the fee.

Miss Madison rests up at night by doing her own book-keeping. She tops this off with a liberal dose of book reviews—reading metropolitan papers religiously, and trade papers and sales charts from other cities.

Caters to Women

"Most of my customers are women," she says. "I find them home in the morning as a rule, but sometimes I have to make a second trip in the evening.

"'Native Son' is still being asked for. I have about ten copies and they're kept pretty busy. For the average best-seller I buy about eight copies. MAY 10 1941

"'The Big Sea' by Langston Hughes has been pretty popular, but I find that a lot of people do not hear about books written by colored authors sometimes for months after they've been on the market."

Dorothy Madison didn't start out by being a walking library. She opened a book store in 1937—and after a couple of hopeful years had to admit to herself that while books are a great boon to the mind, they are definitely not what the landlord likes to receive on the first and the fifteenth in lieu of cash.

But while she still had the store, she made the momentous discovery that the average person likes to read, but dislikes to go out to get a book—and hates even more to have to return it. So the store became past history, she made delivering and collecting books her job.

"I have made a lot of friends," she will tell you. "And because I've had to read my own books, I've got more education than I got in school."

And since she has to be pretty sure that people will rent a book before she invests two or three dollars in it, this reporter was anxious to know what mental yardstick went with her when she went downtown to buy a book that was not a best-seller.

"I look for a certain ending," she said. "Almost everybody likes a success story. When I find one, I buy it. And I know it will rent."

Terms Library Facilities For Research In Race Schools Poor

scholar. Of the 595 public libraries in the 13 southern states which have been surveyed, only 83 were reported as giving service to Negroes. In some of the state, county and municipal archives of the region the Negro is sometimes permitted to use the ocuments 'somewhere in the building.' More often—especially in the deep South—he is not.

"In summary, it may be said that when the present inadequate reasearch facilities—meaning books, buildings, library personnel—to expect important work in any quantity is to indulge in the illusion of an idle dream."

To correct the situation that now exists Dr. Reddick advocates that a thorough test be made in the courts of the procedures of certain tax supported libraries of excluding Negroes. He is also in favor of trying to induce the federal government and any such foundations which plan to esatblish regional library centers in the South to have any grants-in-aid which may come from them should carry the proviso that Negro scholars shall have access to the materials.

To build up directly the libraries in Negro colleges, and to build up a few great collections of Negro literature are other steps which the author advise should be taken.

Schomburg Curator Disputes Hampton President's Claim

Jan. 27, 1941

Enthusiastic But Not Accurate, Dr. Reddick Contends

NEW YORK CITY—(SNS)—"More enthusiastic than accurate" was the response of Dr. L. D. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg Collection when he was shown the recent statement of President Malcolm MacLean of Hampton Institute that the Hampton Library of Negro literature is "on par with or even superior to the famed Schomburg Collection of the New York 135th Street library and the Moorland Negro Collection of Howard University."

"I have just had an opportunity to examine the newly issued catalogue of Hampton's Negro Collection", continued the Curator, "and if it shows what that library contains—and it is supposed to do this—and if president MacLean has been quoted accurately—and the press release was from Hampton—the simple fact is that not only does the Schomburg Collection contain almost twice as many volumes and documents as does Hampton's but also the New York institution holds on shelf number one, more rare and valuable books than are in the entire Virginia library."

"The real question, however", Dr Reddick concluded, "is not which of the dozen-odd collections of Negro literature scattered over the country is the biggest. They are all small and inferior. More irreplacable and invaluable material on the history of the Negro is lost each year than is possessed by any of these little libraries.

"The important question which should be receiving our attention is to get all interested institutions to cooperate in a system and to get some real money to collect these valuable books and manuscripts now going to waste. For example, the cost of one bombing plane would adequately endow the Schomburg Collection for the next ten years".

Negro Library Circulates 1,032 Books 5,000 Times

The negro population of Statesboro and Bulloch county like to read as well as the white population.

Records reveal that 8 books in one section of the county circulated 65 times in one week and in another section 13 books circulated 74 times in one week. These figures indicate the interest in the negro branch of the Bulloch county library but the lack of books to supply the demand.

The negro branch of the library moved into new quarters the first of this month with 1,032 volumes. The librarian, Ester Best, is a graduate of Georgia State College at Savannah. The library committee is H. Van Buren, H. K. Gross, Maenelle Dixon, Julia P. Bryant, James Prestley, Peter Wilson and U. S. Grant.

According to the records of the negro branch of the library 684 books were circulated during the month of February of this year and the 1,032 books had a circulation of approximately 5,000 for eleven months of last year.

The librarian points out that the adult readers want to read about their own race. They want to read books written by negro writers. She states that the negro children have shown an intense desire to read, but because of a limited number of books they have not been able to satisfy that desire.

The negro library is a branch of the Bulloch county library, and is located on Cotton Avenue near the negro school.

Negro Library Gets $1,000 From Rosenwald Fund

According to an announcement made this week the Bulloch County library had been given $1,000 by the Julius Rosenwald fund to be applied on books for the negro branch of the county library. New books for the negro branch will be ordered soon.

Dr. C. M. Destler, member of the library board, reported the donation to the board at its regular monthly meeting held in the library Saturday afternoon at last week.

Plans for the organization of summer vacation reading clubs were suggested and studied. It is expected that these clubs will be organized at various centers in the county where books are being distributed.

Mrs. Nan Edith Jones, librarian, reported that a total of 4,183 books were checked out during the month of May. The bookmobile reported a circulation of 3,129 books. The largest daily circulation was 488.

Mrs. Fred Hodges, chairman of the library board, presided at the meeting.

Morris Brown Gets $9,000 For Library

According to an announcement just released by President W. A. Fountain, Jr., the General Education Board has made a grant of $9,500 to Morris Brown College to expand its library facilities.

Out of this grant $7,500 has been allocated for books and current periodicals, while the remaining $2,000 will be used for equipment.

This generous grant by the General Education Board will give the students an excellent opportunity to do most of their research work and collateral reading in the college Library.

During the past week, Turner Theological Seminary was formally opened for the year, with appropriate exercises in the college chapel. Dr. Charles L. Hill, dean of the Seminary, delivered the principal address, using as his subject, "Can Christianity Survive?"

The Holy Communion was administered by Rt. Rev. W. A. Fountain, Sr., Presiding Bishop of the Sixth Episcopal District of Georgia. Several visiting ministers were present.

Hon. James H. Porter, Chief Patron Of Georgia Baptist College, Macon, Georgia, Gives The School $30,000.00 To Erect An Academic Building

To the Many Friends of Georgia Baptist College:

I have just received a letter from President C. J. Gresham, Georgia Baptist College, Macon, Georgia, acknowledging receipt of $55.95 remitted to the school through me by the Georgia Baptist Association, Atlanta, Georgia. Dr. Gresham also advised me that Mr. Porter had given the college $30,000.00 to erect an Academic Building. The building will consist of eight or ten rooms more or less. A chapel seating 500 or 600 people, administrative offices for the officers and rooms for the advanced students.

I think this is information that the public should be fully advised of.

President Gresham informs me that the school is in better shape in every way this year than last year—in money and students. He reports that he is able to meet the salaries of the teachers promptly, when due and to pay off other current bills when due. This is information that the friends of the college ought to know. God helps those who honestly strive to help themselves. And He is helping our college because under the leadership of President Crouch and his faithful co-workers, we are striving to make good in spite of efforts of others to make us fail. At Dublin at our State Convention we hope to complete our budget of $20,000.00 to cover the convention's yearly expenses. Mr. Porter told us sometime ago to pay our teachers promptly and keep our credit, and not fret about the building. That problem would take care of itself.

Yours for the work,
G. W. JORDAN,
President Sunday School Convention.

Library Problems In South Discussed at Atlanta Univ.

MAR 22 1941

ATLANTA, Ga.—Educators and librarians from approximately twenty-five southern colleges, library officials in several of the leading universities in the United States, representatives from major foundations, state agents in Negro schools, and state library supervisors gathered at Atlanta University last weekend to take part in the two-day Library Conference sponsored jointly by the Carnegie Corporation of New York and the General Education Board.

More than one hundred persons were in attendance at the proceedings which were open by invitation to persons interested in the betterment of library facilities for Negroes in the southern states.

The general theme of the conference was "Library Needs of the Community—Equipment and Service of the Librarian—with Particular Reference to the South and the Negro."

The conference was planned by President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta University with the assistance of President Florence M. Read of Spelman College and President Benjamin E. Mays of Morehouse College. All sessions were held in the Atlanta University Library and were presided over by President Clement.

DISCUSS FACILITIES

At the opening session Friday morning, Miss Anita M. Mostetter, secretary of the board of education for librarianship of the American Library Association, spoke on "Questions for a New Library School"; and Dean Louis R. Wilson of the Graduate School of Library Science at the University of Chicago, addressed the conference on "Factors Conditioning Library Facilities in the Southern States." General discussion on these subjects was opened by Dr. W. W. Bishop, distinguished librarian at the University of Michigan.

MAR 22 1941

At the afternoon session, Dr. Frederick P. Keppel, president of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, was the first speaker. Others on the program were Miss Tommie Dora Barker, dean of the Emory University Library School, whose subject was "The Education of Librarians for Service in the South"; Mrs. Eliza Atkins Gleason, librarian of Talladega College, who discussed "Public Library Service for Negroes in the South"; Mrs. Ruth Theobald Young, visiting lecturer of the Emory University Library School, who spoke on "A State Program for Library Extension"; and Miss Ernestine Rose, librarian of the 135th Street Branch, New York Public Library, who discussed "The Library — An Intelligence Center for the Community"

Saturday morning at a University Convocation in Sisters Chapel, Spelman College, members of the Conference were special guests of the affiliated institutions. An inspection tour of the campuses took place before the Conference sessions were resumed in the library.

The principal address at the morning program was delivered by Miss Florence R. Curtis, formerly director of the Hampton Library School. Her subject was "Problems and Conditions which the Librarian Faced and the Progress which has been Made."

Several speakers took part in a panel discussion concerned with "The Problems Which the Librarian Faces—with Particular Reference to the Work of the Negro College and the High School." Fred McCuistion, field agent of the General Education Board, served as chairman of the discussion, which was participated in by Mrs. Hallie Beacham Brooks, librarian of the Atlanta University Laboratory School; Walter G. Daniel, librarian of Howard University; Wallace Van Jackson, librarian at Virginia Union University; Miss Virginia M. Lacey, catalogue librarian at Atlanta University; Dr. Louis Shores, director of the library school at the George Peabody College for Teachers; and Miss Charlotte Templeton, librarian at Atlanta University. The conference was brought to a close with a general summary of the happenings during the two-day session by Dr. Carl H. Milam, executive secretary of the American Library Association.

NOV 8 1941

Catholic Institution Now Has 110 Charges, Some of Whom Will Choose to Remain in Its Wholesome Environs

By EDWINA HARLESTON

BALTIMORE.

For nearly half a century the House of the Good Shepherd, located on Calverton Road and Franklin Street, has served as a refuge and rehabilitation center for wayward and homeless girls.

Maintained by the Catholic order, Sisters of the Good Shepherd, white, the institution provides a home for 110 girls whose ages range from ten to twenty-one years.

Most of the inmates are placed there by juvenile court judges; some of them are sent by their parents, while still others come of their own accord.

Learn Practical Subjects

In addition to elementary and junior high school training, the girls are given instruction in domestic science, commercial subjects, dramatics, and music.

They have formed a twenty-piece orchestra and a choral group of about sixty voices. They have made public appearances on several occasions and broadcast over local radio stations twice last year.

In an effort to give each young woman the type of training she will find most useful upon her discharge from the House of the God Shepherd, courses are also provided in fine and plain sewing, crocheting, laundry work, general housekeeping and cooking.

NOV 8 1941

Chief Aim: Character

According to Sister Mary, the Mother Superior, the chief aim of the school's activities is character - building. The girls are taught, first of all, respect for themselves and for the rights of their neighbors.

"Our moral training consists principally of giving each child a pleasant, definite occupation; thus accustoming her to the responsibilities of life," the Mother Superior stated.

Although the inmates attend Catholic services, they are not compelled to become Catholics. A number of them join voluntarily.

Careful Attention to Health

Health and recreation have a definite place in the program of the school. Each girl submits to a complete physical examination upon admission, and medical, dental and specialized clinics are maintained by the home under the supervision of competent physicians and nurses.

During the summer months the girls play baseball and other out-of-doors games on the playground adjoining the buildings. Sound motion pictures, table games and radio entertainment are provided for winter recreation. There is also a library at their disposal.

Some Join Sisterhood

Girls who choose to remain in the institution at the end of their rehabilitation period assist the sisters as monitors—and general helpers, while still others join the Magdalen Order, a cloistered sisterhood.

The Baltimore House of the Good Shepherd is made up of the convent, which is the residence of the sisters; the training school and the Magdalen Home, a separate convent for colored women.

1 of 350 Such Homes

This institution is one of 350 homes scattered over the world under the direction of the Good Shepherd Order. It receives its support from State and city appropriations, and from the proceeds of the large laundry.

Dime A Dozen Awards

AN ANSWER

By L. D. REDDICK
Curator, Schomburg Collection, New York Public Library

FEB 22 1941

Under a front page caption, "Dime a Dozen Awards," an editor of the Pittsburgh Courier disagrees violently with the selections for the Spingarn Medal and the Honor Roll in Race Relations. As for the Spingarn Medal, we leave that to the N. A. A. C. P. Let us examine the strictures on the Honor Roll.

Now, it is surely the Constiutional right of this editor—or anybody—to disagree with these selections, but is it fair or accurate to term them "dime a dozen?" He thinks that the achievements of those listed do not have "social value." All that we say is that evidently some people think that they do.

But the gross misunderstanding behind the editorial is revealed in the implication that the selections were made in some sort of cheap, hurried or cavalier fashion. Nothing could be further from the truth.

A committee of 100 persons scattered throughout the country submits nominees. These 100 persons represent virtually every field of endeavor, every political faith, creed and class. Among them are newspaper editors, labor leaders, college presidents, sports writers, youth leaders, business men, artists and athletes. The results are tabulated. If these persons—each well known in his own field—are unable to exercise the good judgment the editor finds so lacking, then who is? FEB 22 1941

This particular editor, apparently, is piqued because one of his reporters was not so honored. In fact, "every step taken in behalf of Negro aviators, civil and military was engineered by this Negro reporter, backed by this newspaper" (iPttsburgh Courier). If this correspondent exerted half such influence, he is doubtless doing a very great work; however, the committee of 100 did not rate him above the others. As a matter of fact, the two feature columnists of the Pittsburgh Courier who served on this Committee did not even mention his name. Perhaps it was merely an oversight. All the same it may cause some readers to wonder whether or not the editorial rather than the Honor Roll is really the "irreducible absurdity."

Finally, all the above facts as to the painstaking and impartial method of conducting the poll, even the names of many of the members of the committee of 100, were sent to the office of The Pittsburgh Courier in the various press releases. Could it be that the busy editor does not read his own mail? If the editorial writer did not know the facts, he was uninformed; if he did know the facts, his editorial was irresponsible. We choose to believe the former.

Sincerely yours,
L. D. Reddick, Curator

Transfer of the famous collection of rare books by and about Negroes, and of paintings, sculptures and countless pieces of native African art, was made necessary by the alteration now being done there. A new wing is being added reaching from the rear of the present building to 136th St. The collection will be returned to enlarged and modernized quarters in about six months.

Branch libraries in various parts of Harlem have temporarily assumed the functions of other departments of the 135th St. Branch.

SCHOMBURG COLLECTION GETS FIRST EDITIONS

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—With the addition of the manuscript and galley proofs of Anna L. Curtis' "Stories of the Underground Railroad," published on September 15 by the Island Workshop Press, the Schomburg Collection of Negro literature now includes a round dozen first editions, manuscripts, and galley proofs of recent books, Curator Lawrence D. Reddick announced this week.

The entire collection consists of some 10,000 books, 3,000 manuscripts, and several thousand etchings and pamphlets, by and about Negroes covering all phases of their history both in Africa and the rest of the world. "Stories of the Underground Railroad" is a compilation of short stories chiefly about Quaker children who were instrumental in helping slaves escape to the North in the years just prior to the Civil War. One story tells of the heroism of Harriet Tubman, an escaped slave who returned again and again to lead her friends and relatives to freedom. Miss Curtis, an active member of the Society of Friends, is the first person to write these tales, which have heretofore lived mainly in the family records and memories of the descendants of the children who are the heroes and heroines of the book.

Among the recent manuscripts on display in this collection are such well-known titles as Richard Wright's "Native Son", Henrietta Buckmaster's "Let My People Go", Angelo Herndon's "Let Me Live", Langston Hughes' "Not Without Laughter," Waters Turpin's "O Canaan," Du Bois' "Dusk of Dawn," and Countee Cullen's "The Lost Zoo.' One of the most interesting of its first editions is that of the poems of Phyllis Wheatly, who was kidnapped in Africa at the age of eight and sold in the Boston slave market to the Wheatley family, many years before the Revolution. Her owners soon recognized her ability and educated her, helping her to publish her poetry.

The galley proofs of "Stories of the Underground Railroad" are already on view in the collection, and the manuscript will arrive next week.

135th ST. BRANCH LIBRARY

FOR MORE than a decade, residents of Harlem agitated for enlargement of the 135th Street Branch of the New York Public Library to take care of the Schomburg Collection of books and historical manuscripts on the Negro, but it remained for Mayor LaGuardia to find the money for this project.

On Tuesday afternoon, October 28th, the Mayor will lay the cornerstone for the Extension to this branch library, which is a four-story fireproof structure on the site of the home of the late A'Lelia Walker at 104 West 136th street. Costing close to a quarter of a million dollars, this addition makes the 135th Street Branch one of the largest and most important in the public library system.

The Mayor's interest and help in bringing this public project to fruition is but another bit of evidence that the Negro peoples of New York have at City Hall a Mayor who is not only interested in their physical welfare but also in their cultural development.

New Wing Of Public Library Which Is Under Construction

Cornerstone For Extension To 135th Street Branch Public Library Is Laid At Exercises

The cornerstone of the extension to the 135th Street Branch of the New York Public Library, was laid on October 28th. at four p. m. Frank L. Polk, president of the Board of Trustees of the New York Public Library, presided at a short ceremony, at which the speaker were Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Major Irving V. A. Huie, Commissioner of Public Works. Miss Ernestine Rose, Librarian of the 135th Street Branch Library. Thomas B. Dyett, vice-chairman of the Library Citizen's Committee of the 135th Street Library, Justice Myles Paige of the Court of Special Sessions, and Borough President Stanley M. Isaacs.

The 135th Street Branch Library, built from funds given to the City by Andrew Carnegie, has been serving Harlem since 1905. The need for remodeling and expansion has long been felt, and the administration has been strongly supported by the efforts of the Library Citizens Committee, twenty public-spirited members of the community. The great public sentiment in favor of the project was voiced in a petition with over 9000 signatures, presented to the Mayor in the Spring of 1940.

The new structure, which extends the library through the block from 103 West 135th street to 104 West 136th street, was designed by Louis Allen Abramson under the supervision of Major Irving V. A. Huie, Commissioner of the Department of Public Works. The construction which is expected to be completed in the early part of 1942 will cost approximately $200,000.

The first floor consists of one open room for the circulation of books to adults, as well as an office and work room. There is a "browsing room" for adults on the mezzanine and rooms for special exhibits meetings and recorded music.

On the second floor there is a reference room for adults a reading room and club room for young people and a small conference room with books for parents and teachers.

The Schomberg Collection of Negro Literature and the office of the Curator Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick are situated on the third floor. For users of the collection there are, as well, an exhibition room, a lecture room. and two seminar rooms.

The old building the entrance of which is on 135th street, is being remodeled, and will contain the children's library, with room for circulation, story hours, and reference work. In the basement of the old building the auditorium, with a stage, will continue to be used for amateur dramatics. There will be an auditorium in the basement.

WPA Project For Negro Library Branch Approved

President Roosevelt has approved for the Granville County Library Board a Works Project Administration project for erection of a library building to serve the colored citizens of Oxford and Granville county.

The project has been in process for approximately 12 months and word of the approval by the President came Saturday from Congressman A. D. Folger of the Fifth District.

The WPA will make a contribution of $2,277 to the project while a like amount will come from local sources, including taxes levied for the Granville County Library and from voluntary contributions.

The project for erection of the library, which is to be located on a lot granted by the Board of Town Commissioners, just north of the Colored Baptist church on Granville street, also contemplates the development of a recreation center for colored citizens and the lot, which is quite large, may also be used as a site for a proposed club building for colored people.

The Library Board, of which B. W. Parham is chairman, has approved plans for the building and these plans also have been approved by WPA officials. The structure will be a one-room frame building, of cottage design, with basement. It will be 40 x 20 feet, with sufficient windows to provide a well-lighted building.

Influential colored citizens of the county have said they would sponsor the development of a recreational center on the property, Mr. Parham said. News of the approval of the project brought joy to the colored people, who have waited patiently for establishment of a branch of the county library to serve their requirements.

The colored branch will operate under the supervision of the Granville County Library Board.

PLAN CAMPAIGN FOR NEGRO LIBRARY AID

Plans for a campaign during the week of March 16-22 to raise funds for a new building for use of the New Bern colored library were made Wednesday at a meeting of the white and negro directors of the library at the West street school.

The week's drive will be opened with a mass meeting on Sunday afternoon, March 16, at which talks and musical selections will be featured. It will be closed with a public program of local musical talent as a benefit performance to obtain additional money for the library.

A lot just across the street from the Good Shepherd hospital has already been purchased by the library directors, using chiefly the proceeds from the benefit program given here last year by Nell Hunter, Negro soprano soloist from Durham.

Plans for an attractive building of brick veneer have been drawn by Raymond Fuson, local architect. WPA aid will be sought for erection of the new building. Voluntary contributions will be asked of both white and negro residents for the sponsors' part of the cost.

The library is now maintained with city, county and WPA aid, but it has far outgrown its present cramped quarters in a tiny room at the Negro high school building. There are approximately 1,000 books, and the circulation figures are high. A number of magazines are bought regularly, and others are donated. Copies of the Sun-Journal, donated by the management, are on the shelves daily.

Besides being used for general reading, the library is a chief source of material for the Negro school reference work. Residents of the surrounding territory, as well as the city, use its volumes.

N. C. Negro Librarians Meet Here

Convene at J. C. Smith Friday and Saturday

The eighth annual meeting of the North Carolina Negro Library Conference will be held at Johnson C. Smith University Friday and Saturday.

Convening for the first time in Charlotte, the conference has as its theme "The Library in the World Crisis." Over 150 librarians and library scientists are expected to attend.

Registration will begin Friday morning at 12 o'clock in the Carnegie Library and, after an initial business session at 3 P. M., the convention will formally get underway at 5 o'clock in the University auditorium in Biddle Memorial Hall. Dr. H. L. McCrorey, president of the local institution, will extend a welcome to the conference; Mrs. Charliese P. Sheffield, of State A&M College, Orangeburg, S. C., will bring greetings from the South Carolina Negro Library Association, and the principal address: "Negro America Faces the Future," will be delivered by Dr. Ira De A. Reid, professor of sociology at Atlanta University.

DINNER FRIDAY

At 8:30 Friday night, Johnson C. Smith University will be host at a conference dinner in the University refectory. Dr. M. J. McCrorey, wife of President McCrorey, will bring greetings on behalf of the University. An address: "Negro Librarians Face the Future," delivered by Dr. Eliza Atkins Gleason, director of the School of Library Science, Atlanta University, will be the high spot of the dinner. The day's session will be brought to a close with a special party at the Grand Theater at 11 P. M.

The convention will continue Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock with group discussions on various phases of library work. Led by Miss Robbie L. Goodloe of North Carolina State College for Negroes in Durham, the college librarians will concentrate their discussion on the panel: "Educating for a New World Order". Other problems for discussion are: "Adult Education in the Public Library", "Library Service to Rural People", "How the Public Library May Help in the Present World Crisis", and "Vitalizing the School Library Through the Library Club."

FINAL SESSION

After a final business session at 11 A. M., the convention will end in a luncheon at 2 P. M. Saturday afternoon in the University refectory.

Survey Shows Need Of Branch Libraries

Hoyt Galvin Issues Report On Book Survey—Shows That Branch System Is Desired, Particularly For Children and Among Negroes.

Need for branch library service—particularly for children and Negroes—was seen as result of a sample survey made by the Charlotte Public library, according to the library director, Hoyt R. Galvin, yesterday.

Among adults the survey showed that the present system of having a large central library served approximately the areas of the city which could naturally be expected to be interested in using the library's facilities.

Using maps of the city, the library staff studded them with pins to represent the persons on the library's rolls, the number whom the library served on the sample day. The results, children, and Negroes were marked by diffently colored pins.

Most striking evidence for the need of branches was presented by the Negro survey. Pins were clumped around the Brevard street institution and almost nonexistent in other Negro-populated areas, except for Biddleville which was marked with a scattering of pins.

BROOKLYN READERS.

The map showed that 80 per cent of the Negro library users came from Brooklyn, and the area adjacent to it. The Biddleville users were explained by the presence of Johnson C. Smith university there.

The survey among child users showed that the library's facilities were used in overwhelming proportion by children living in adjacent neighborhoods. But Mr. Galvin pointed out that the quality of a pupil's school library had a great influence on whether he made use of the city library's services.

White adult users were spread out more proportionately than in other classifications. Heaviest concentration of librarygoers was marked in Elizabeth and Colonial Heights and in nearby Fourth Ward.

Surprising lack of library-users were noted in the bare areas of Myers Park and Eastover. Director Galvin said those sections were explained by the heavy concentration of book clubs there and the fact that the residents bought their own books.

Negro Readers Being Served By Waverley

The Waverly branch of the Richland county public library will take a large part in the celebration of Book week among the Negro residents of the community.

Many programs and events have been scheduled for this nation-wide celebration among the Negro schools of Columbia and Richland county in cooperation with the Waverley branch library. The principals and teachers will stress the need and importance of going "Forward With Books."

Waverley school has arranged a display of posters and book jackets around the walls of the library and the entire school will take part in a Book week contest.

Each teacher will select a book to read to her class. Then the children will reproduce it on the classroom window-sill. The Waverley branch librarian, Julia Talley, will judge the displays and the winner will be announced over the school radio program.

The radio program will be devoted to the Book week slogan, "Forward With Books." A short histor yof Book week will be given and a story will be told by Katherine Wheeler of the Waverley branch library.

New Howard and Saxon, under the supervision of their principal, C. W. Madden, have received a special group of books which the teachers will use for Book week. Many of the classes are planning window-sill displays and other exhibits.

In all the schools the first, second and third grades will make book marks. Those teachers of the second, third and fourth grades, who can make the arrangements will bring their classes to the Waverley branch to introduce them to the "Wonderland of Books."

The Waverley branch invites all teachers of the city and county schools as well as all parents to visit the library to become acquainted with the librarians and the book collection.

At the branch there are many posters on display and many new books available. For classes visiting the library stories will be told suitable to the grade and an introduction to the library will be given.

The Old Library Building Is Now Vacated and May Be Used for Library for Negroes

The old building which has housed the Mullins Library since 1910 was vacated last week. Books, book shelves, and furniture were moved to the beautiful new building just completed.

Mrs. Mary Yarboro is supervising the work of moving from the old building and is also in charge of adapting the old shelves to the spacious new Library and reading rooms.

The new building not only makes a fine appearance from the outside, but causes one to swell proudly upon viewing the interior. With its high windows showering floods of soft light into the reading rooms, the building and its architectural design make the large rooms ideal for use by research students and casual readers.

The organization of the Mullins Library harks back to the year 1907. In that year, Mrs. S. Hughes Schoolfield, envisioning greater and better things for Mullins, called together a mere handful of ladies of Mullins. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Schoolfield. For the purpose of sponsoring a Library a civic league of ladies was formed. Officers of the organization were Mrs. W. H. Daniel, Sr., president; Mrs. Richard Winstead, vice-president and Mrs. L. L. Rogers, secretary. (It is significant to note there was no treasurer). Unfortunately, a complete list of those present at the first meeting is not available. Within a few months, the first Library was opened in a rented room on second floor on upper Main St.

Meeting with initial favor, a strong public demand arose to obtain a larger building and more books.

An appeal was made to the Mayor, J. Lee Platt, and council, composed of J. T. Schofield, J. F. Byrd, F. Chalmers Rogers, Dr. J. M. Bethea, and E. G. Carmichael. The meeting was held on the second floor of the old Enterprise building, then standing on the site now occupied by the James L. Martin hospital. The year was 1910. The mayor and council voted unanimously to donate $300 with which to purchase the small lot on Main street, the same as that on which the Library now being vacated stands. J. Lee Platt, who had contracted with the owner, Dr. Jno. J. Bethea, to purchase the building and lot for the future home of The Enterprise, graciously yielded to the wishes of the Library sponsors, and the lot and building were acquired for Library purposes. In the granting deed it was stipulated that in the event the lot ceased to be used as a Library project, it would revert to the Town of Mullins.

At the time of the purchase of the lot, W. A. Hardwick owned and operated a store on the corner of Main and Wine. The Hardwick site became the object of the ladies of the Civic League, and ways and means studied with the view of acquiring it. Since it was on the corner and adjoined the lot already owned by the Library, it was most essential that it be added.

Mrs. S. Hughes Schoolfield bought the property and by a generous donation of a large portion of the original cost, made possible its becoming a part of the Library lot. Ladies of the Civic League, hereafter mentioned, and many other residents of the town and patrons of the Library worked hard and long to complete the purchase.

The beautiful building, which now adorns the corner, is a monument to the industry and perseverance of many persons throughout the 34 years since the beginning of the Library proposal.

Among the charter members of the Civic League, original sponsor of the Library, who contributed liberally of time and funds in interest of an ever greater Library and more adequate facilities, were: Mesdames W. McG. Buck, S. H. Schoolfield, Richard Winstead, L. L. Rogers, J. Lee Platt, F. A. Smith, Wm. Scott, J. R. Williams, A. T. Helms, H. O. Schoolfield, R. H. Hubbard, C. J. McCall and Miss Edna McCall. Their earnest efforts and the help of Rev. B. K. Mason, J. Lee Platt, A. T. Helms, C. J. McCall, W. McG. Buck of Mullins and Henry Buck, of Marion, and the continuig fight of a host of other residents here, finally resulted in the erection of the magnificent building in 1941.

Since 1907, the Librarians have been: Mrs. W. McG. Buck, 1907-08; Mrs. Pearl N. Bethea, 1908-10; Mrs. Lucy J. Corley, 1910-12; Miss Edna McCall, 1912-18; Mrs. W. McG. Buck, 1919; Mrs. S. R. Cooper, 1920; Mrs. Richard Winstead, 1921; Mrs. Mary Yarboro, 1922 and continuously since that year.

Howard High Branch Plans to Ask for Redecorated Reading Room

The Howard High School Branch library, situated in the basement of the school, is the main source of library facilities for Negroes. Last year it circulated a total of 12,816 books for adults and children, according to records available at the institution.

The three workers at the institution have dispensed 9,854 adult and 2,962 children's books on card, and will be in position to do more with a little aid," they state.

On account of the overcrowded condition at Howard, the main reading room has to be used during the day by students for homeroom and study purposes, and seats are scarcely available for grown-ups during these periods.

"There is need for new books, paint for the dingy walls, floor covering and window shades," the management stated. "We plan a spring drive to meet these needs and seek the support of the public in our efforts."

Community branches are maintained at East Fifth Street Junior High school and Calvin Donaldson and Orchard Knob Junior High and Booker T. Washington High schools. New books are needed at all these stations as well as the Howard High branch.

An open house program will mark the reopening of Murphy branch library for Negroes, 208 North University Avenue, Friday. Children have been invited to inspect the newly decorated library quarters from 3 to 6 p. m., and adults from 7 to 9 p. m.

At 8 p. m., a program will be given with C. W. Cansler, chairman of the Library Committee, presiding. Short talks will be made by Miss Helen M. Harris, librarian of Lawson McGhee Library; a representatives of the Lawson McGhee Board of Trustees; the Rev. B. B. Harris, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church at Knoxville College; and the Rev. F. C. Spurgeon, pastor of Clinton Chapel AME Zion Church. The choir of the Roger Memorial Baptist Church will sing, and the pastor, the Rev. L. A. Alexander, will offer the invocation.

Hostesses for the open house will be Mesdames J. L. Cary, Mildred Ward, U. S. Clark, B. M. Benton and S. H. Hatley and Misses Alfreda Delaney and Mabel Williams.

Use of the building, which is located opposite College Homes, is given to the city rent free by the American Missionary Association. A branch library was operated in the building several years ago but was closed during the depression. Meanwhile library service to this community has been continued from a room in one of the Knoxville College buildings.

Circulation of books from the Murphy Branch will begin Oct. 21, on the following schedule: Tuesday, 1 to 5 p. m.; Thursday, 1 to 5 and 6 to 9 p. m., and Saturday, 9 to 12 a. m. Mrs. Sallie J. Carr and Mrs. Eloise Pickett Bruce, librarians at the Free Colored Library at Vine and Nelson Streets, will be in charge.

Members of the Negro Library Committee who have cooperated with Miss Harris and the Board of Trustees of Lawson McGhee Library in bringing about the reopening of Murphy Branch are C. W. Cansler, chairman; Mrs. I. B. McAdoo, secretary; Mrs. J. H. Presnell, O. T. Hougue and the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon.

Negro Library Observes First Year Tomorrow

Harmon Foundation Art Will Be Exhibited In Open House

The Robert Robinson Negro library of Alexandria at 638 North Alfred Street will observe its first anniversary tomorrow with an afternoon of open house. The public is invited to visit the building and view a special exhibit of Negro art sent as a temporary collection by the Harmon Foundation of New York.

Last year in response to a pressing need for the library facilities, the city government erected the new building and established the service. Although it is maintained as a separate organization, it is under the supervision of the Alexandria library.

Evelyn R. Beam who holds a librarian's certificate for the Commonwealth of Virginia, is the assistant in charge. She received her librarian's degree at the Hampton Institute and taught at Newport News high school. She has also given summer courses in library work at Atlantic University.

According to Miss Elizabeth Watson, head librarian for Alexandria, figures on the amount of service offered by the Negro branch this year give an excellent and far above average rating to its members as borrowers and readers. A registered membership of nearly 600 persons is reported, showing that 12 per cent of the Negro population of Alexandria have become active borrowers in the library's first year, and have read an average of 20 books per person.

An indication that high school and elementary school students are using the library books to supplement their school work is shown in the fact that half of the borrowers are children through high school ages.

The exhibit featured in the anniversary observance centers on paintings by Negro artists. It will be on display from tomorrow afternoon through May 21.

Plans Okayed For Library

Funds of $20,000 Are Set Aside

Proposed plans for the Gainsboro branch library were approved by a committee of colored citizens during a conference held yesterday afternoon at the main library in Elmwood park.

Attending the conference were Edmund Goodwin, chairman of the library board; Miss Pearl Hinesley, librarian of the Roanoke public library; Architect B. N. Eubank, of the firm of Eubank and Caldwell, which prepared the plans; and Rev. A. L. James and Attorney Jacob L. Reid, member of the colored committee. Unable to attend the meeting was Dr. E. D. Downing, third member of the colored committee.

The Gainsboro branch library, which will serve the colored citizens of Roanoke, will be erected on the northeast corner of Patton and Gainsboro avenues and will face Patton avenue. It is planned also to build a new main library in Elmwood park.

Funds totaling $20,000 have been set aside for the Gainsboro branch library, this to include the cost of new equipment as well as the cost of the building. WPA assistance will be sought, however, and this should increase the amount of money available for the project appreciably.

Preliminary estimates will be obtained on the cost of building the new branch library, Mr. Goodwin said, adding that the architects would begin drafting working plans if these estimates are in line with expectations. Since it is planned to seek WPA assistance, no general contract will be let but the work will be done under the supervision of the architects.

The library board approved the plans for the branch library recently and then submitted the plans to the colored committee. After conferring with various colored citizens, the colored committee met Monday.

Plans call for a building similar in appearance to the Raleigh Court branch library. The building, to be of red brick, will have one story with a main reading room 78 feet long by 28 feet wide. In an alcove opening off of this room will be an alcove in which the reference department will be quartered. A lecture room will open off of the main reading room also.

Colored Group Given Branch Library Plans

Plans for the projected building of the Gainsboro branch library were given yesterday to a committee of colored citizens, which will study them for several days before giving its approval or disapproval.

The plans were presented to the group at a meeting yesterday afternoon by Edmund P. Goodwin, chairman of the library board, and others. The branch library is to be built on the northeast corner of Patton avenue and Gainsboro road on property acquired recently from St. Andrew's Catholic church.

The colored committee comprises Rev. A. L. James, Dr. E. D. Downing, and Jacob Reid, attorney. The colored librarian is Mrs. Virginia Lee. After the group approves the plans they are to be presented to council for approval.

Gov. Allows 3 Million for Institutions

BALTIMORE

Seven State institutions for colored people and nine State-aided institutions will receive in excess of $3,000,000 during the next two years as a result of the State Legislature's recent approval of Governor Herbert R O'Conor's budget recommendations, an AFRO survey shows this week.

APR 19 1941

In addition, $350,000 of this amount will go toward equalization of teachers' salaries in the Maryland counties and $50,000 will provide scholarships for Maryland students who desire to study at institutions of higher learning outside the State.

A comparison of the O'Conor appropriations with those during the years 1938-39, when the late Harry W. Nice was Governor, shows that Governor O'Conor has allotted twice as much to our institutions as did his predecessor. Mr. Nice appropriated only $1,392,204 as compared with the present governor's three million.

$1,372,434 to Four Schools

Largest increases over the Nice administration provided by Governor O'Conor are for the Cheltenham School for Boys (which during the Nice administration was in process of becoming a State institution), which during Mr. Nice's term received only $90,000 for that two-year period as compared with the $558,378 provided by Mr. O'Conor for the next two years.

Morgan State College (which was not State institution during the Nice regime) will receive a total of $519,800 during the next two years as compared with the $120,000 it received during the previous administration.

Princess Anne College, which was denied appropriations for new buildings during the Nice term, which allowed only $51,966, will be able to add at least one new building with the $151,966 allowed by the present governor.

The Maryland School for Girls at Glenburnie will receive twice as much ($142,290) during the next two years as it received under Mr. Nice, when it was allowed $77,280.

Henryton Figure Lower

The remainder of the seven State-supported institutions all get considerably more than they received under the Nice administration except the Henryton Sanatoruim, whose appropriation during the next two years is slightly less than that awarded by Mr. Nice.

Under the Nice administration, this institution received $228,110, and during the next two years under Mr. O'Conor it will receive $215,340.

Bowie State Teachers' College, which received $100,028 under Mr. Nice, will receive $162,050 under Mr. O'Conor; Crownsville State Hospital, which received $573,820 under Mr. Nice, will get $822,800 under Mr. O'Conor.

Other Allotments Maintained

Of the State-aided institutions, only one will receive increased appropriations over those granted by Mr. Nice. This is the Home for Friendless Colored Boys at Catonsville, which received a total of $4,000 under Nice but will get $5,400 during the next years.

Five of the State-aided institutions will receive the same appropriation for the next two years they were allowed under the Nice regime. They are: Shelter for Aged and Infirm Colored People, St Peter Claver School for Girls, Provident Hospital, the A.M.E. Home for Aged, and the Maryland School for the Blind.

Only Three Take Cuts

The remaining three have been allotted less than they received during the Nice regime. They are the Mission Helpers' Day Nursery, which will get $2,000 as compared with $4,000 it received from Mr. Nice; the House of Good Shepherd for Colored Girls which is getting $2,000 less than the $8,000 allotted by Mr. Nice, and the N. M. Carroll Home for Aged, which is getting $1,000 for the next two years as compared with the $2,000 awarded it by Mr. Nice.

The following table shows the comparative appropriations for the two administrations:

Emergency Home For Negroes Seeks Funds

The Booker T. Washington Emergency Home for negroes, which has operated here for the past eight years, is making a quiet campaign among its friends, both white and colored, for contributions which will carry forward its program. The Home is an affiliate of the Booker Washington Association which is state-wide in scope.

The home at Selma is caring for needy, dependent negroes who receive no other aid, a total of 63 inmates having been registered. In addition the home has provided operations for 55 persons, has cared for 32 transients and has furnished medical care for 559 prenatal cases. This work has been done through the public's support.

Colored Old Folks Home Dedication Scheduled Today

Ceremony Will Mark Official Completion Of Renovation Project

Formal opening and dedication of the Colored Old Folk's Home on Spring Hill Avenue at Mobile street will take place at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, according to an announcement yesterday by the Rev. U. J. Robinson, chairman of the board of trustees.

The building has been remodeled and renovated throughout at a cost of more than $3,500, raised by donations from friends and the sale of a small piece of property. The administration is making an effort to have the home equipped with new beds, curtains, rugs, chairs and other furnishings to make the residents more comfortable.

A brief program has been prepared for the dedication service, which will be open to the public. Missionary societies, clubs and other organizations are requested to send delegations. Many of the white missionary societies have expressed a desire to be present.

The Colored Old Folk's Home is one of the agencies assisted by the Community Chest.

It Won't Be Long Now

JAN 1 1941

Soon the Georgia legislature will be gathering at the state capitol for their regular session. There'll be a new, yet old, governor, Gene Talmadge, inaugurated. There'll be changes at the capitol, and its adjuncts. And there'll be talk. Lots of it. Talk and talk and talk. For that is the one thing a legislature never fails to do. The members like to hear themselves orate.

There'll be a lot of important measures and issues up for decision. Undoubtedly there'll be factionalism and partisanship. There always is. But we may reasonably hope that, out of it all, something or other good for Georgia will result, before adjournment sine die.

There will be scads of people asking the legislators to enact this or that. A few of these who ask will be sincerely patriotic Georgians, asking only those things they deem good for the state. Others will be motivated by selfishness, seeking something for themselves, some special opportunity or privilege.

Some will get what they ask and many will be disappointed. That, again, is always the way.

A Matter Of Decent Justice.

There is one issue that will be before the legislature, however, that I'd like to do some asking about. It is a comparatively minor affair, yet one that involves something vastly important. For, involved in it, is the decency and the humanity we like to think associated with the name "Georgian."

It is an issue that has been up before and has hitherto been denied. Few people have talked about it, few have known about it, for the interested folks are largely of a comparatively inarticulate group in our population. Yet, the denial of this request has been a black mark against Georgia, one that I truly hope the coming legislature will erase.

School For Negro Girls

JAN 1 1941

Georgia has provided institutions, some of them fine, some inadequate, where various classes of our society may find rehabilitation after they have gotten off on the wrong foot in life. There are training schools for delinquent white boys and for delinquent white girls. There are reformatories and educational opportunities even in our prisons.

There is, however, no institution for Negro girls who need a helping hand and guidance back into the right pathway of life.

Some years ago desirous of remedying this lack, the better class of Negro women, all over the state, decided to do something to remedy this lack. They didn't ask the state to defray the cost. They didn't even ask their white friends.

They set to work and subscribed the needed money among themselves. Organizations of Negro women, all over the state, took part and raised the money. They built the institution. It is in Bibb county.

Then they gave it, a free gift, to the state which is their state, just as it is ours. The state they want to help and the state they love.

Today, as ever since it was so proudly and beautifully given to the state by those Negro women, that institution stands empty, locked and idle, because the state has refused the small appropriation needed to operate and maintain it. It is cruel thing the state of Georgia has done to these Negro women and a thing which I sincerely hope the coming legislature will have the decency to correct.

True, the place is not large enough to care for all the unfortunate Negro girls who need its services. But it will help many of them, and because it cannot work a miracle for all is no reason it should not do what it can for all it can reach.

An Example For Encouragement

JAN 1 194

What these Negro women did, in erecting that building, could be an example of tremendous imoprt to all Negroes of Georgia. It is a symbol of the best in their race and a promise of greater self-help to come. But, if the great state of Georgia so scorns such a gift, what encouragement can there be for public spirited Negroes of the future?

JAN 1 1941

There is a lot involved, much more than appears on the surface, in this request. It could easily mean tremendous things for Georgia in the future if the legislature looked with sympathy and understanding in this instance [illegible] of surrendering in[illegible] outworn prejudice.

Race Institutions Benefit From Will Involving $622,000

FEB 14 1941

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(SNS)—Henry Abraham, 88, 1711 South 4th Street, left an estate of $622,000 when he died January 31. The bulk of that estate goes to relatives, but quite a few orphanages and institutions received $500 each. Among them are two colored institutions. The Red Cross Hospital and St. James Old Folks Home get $500 each. The Little Sisters of the Poor get $500 and they include colored people in their charitable work.

JOE LOUIS AND BILL ROBINSON ENTERTAIN COLORED ORPHANS

Joe Louis and Bill Robinson were honor guests of 200 children living at the Colored Orphan Asylum in Riverdale, New York, Sunday, in an "Achievement Day" program, emphasizing the accomplishments of the Negro in American Life.

A surprise guest, who came in at the last minute was John Kieran, of "Information Please" fame, and sports writer for the New York Times. Introducing the world's heavyweight champion and the beloved dancer to the wide-eyed children and a group of other guests, Dr. Thomas W. Patrick, Jr., chairman of the arrangements committee, and medical director at Riverdale, pointed out that "Uncle Billy" and "Uncle Joe" have risen to "the highest pinnacle of endeavor" during the past week Bill Robinson in entertainment, as the headliner of the President's Birthday Ball; Joe Louis, in sport, as the successful defender of the world's heavyweight championship for the thirteenth time.

Dr. Patrick also cited the achivement of Richard Wright, in letters, as the winner of the Spingarn Medal, for his novel "Native Son." Mr. Wright sent his regrets through Dr. Jesse Miller, who assisted Dr. Patrick with the arrangements.

With Joe Louis acting as the referee, future aspirants for his crown battled in an improvised ring in the third-floor auditorium of the Administration building. In the "Paperweight" division, Andy Davidson (55 lbs.) fought Ishmael Aruz (54 lbs.); Rudolph Corning (66 lbs.) was up against Herbert Aruz (71 lbs.) in the "Spiderweight bout; and in a special "Speed vs. Weight" contest.

Following the boxing the youthful audience began to clamor for Bill Robinson and the genial entertainer danced while the children clapped hands and stomped their feet until the wooden floors of the auditorium creaked.

"What is the oldest institution for colored children in the country"? Dr. Patrick asked John Kiernan, of "Information Please." "Why, the Colored Orphan Asylum," I think, the columnist replied. "And the largest?" The answer, again, was the Colored Orphan Asylum.

Other notables were introduced during the course of the program including E. Sims Campbell, cartoonist, Elmer Carter of New York Unemployment Appeal Board, and Fredi Washington, actress.

SUPPORT IS URGED FOR NEGRO YOUNG

MAY 4 - 1941

Orphan Association Reports 221,816 Days' Care Given to Children in Year

387 IN FOSTER HOMES

Wider public support is needed to expand the insufficient community resources for the care of Protestant Negro children who must be removed from their own homes by the Children's Court or Department of Welfare, Henry R. Murphy, executive secretary of the Colored Orphan Asylum and Association for the Benefit of Colored Children, 5901 Palisade Avenue, Riverdale, declared in the organization's 104th annual report, covering 1940, made public yesterday.

During the past year the organization gave a total of 221,816 days' care or the equivalent of a full year's care to 607 children. At the beginning of the year the agency cared for 166 children at Riverdale, 387 in foster homes, four in Downingtown Industrial School and fifty-five at Camp Norge, and gave after care to thirty-two, a total of 644.

MAY 4 - 1941

Last June Camp Norge was closed and some of the children there were transferred to the Children's Aid Society. As of Oct. 31 last, the census showed 632 children under the organization's care.

During the year 101 children were committed to its custody and 117 were discharged. The average age of the children was 12 years; the average length of stay, five years and seven months.

The foster home service was improved through the opening of a Harlem office at 306 Lenox Avenue. Psychological and psychiatric services have been made available for foster home children who have special behavior and emotional problems. Both foster home staff and cottage care personnel have been increased.

MAY 4 - 1941

Operating costs during the year amounted to $322,257. Income was $308,677, but $15,484 was earmarked to carry over to the new fiscal period, leaving a deficit of $29,164 for the twelve months.

Officers of the organization are Mrs. Willard Parker, first directress; Mrs. Lawrence Orton, second directress; Mrs. Frederick Garnjost, third directress; Mrs. Peyton F. Anderson, secretary; Mrs. Paul D. Donchian, treasurer, and Miss Constance Wright, assistant treasurer.

Within three years qualified Negroes have replaced white workers as pediatriciah, nurse, secretary, dietitian, head of clothing department, matron and now assistant superintendent.

Mr. Poe came to Riverdale eight months ago as Institutional Case Worker from Philadelphia, where he has been engaged as a supervisor in the Department of Public Assistance.

Mr. Poe's wife, the former Miss Frances Thornton, has been employed as Case Worker in the Agency's Foster Home Department, located at 306 Lenox avenue.

Wiltwyck School for Negro Boys Offers Young Pre-delinquents a Chance at Life

Graduates Sent Back to Homes After Training

By ROBERT BAGAR,
World-Telegram Staff Writer.

Two little colored brothers were doing the Edgar Bergen-Charley McCarthy act in a Harlem street late one night. The older played ventriloquist with a wooden doll, to the huge enjoyment of bystanders, and the younger went around with his hat in his hand collecting pennies.

The Wiltwyck School for Negro Boys considered that "predelinquency," a transitional state lying between normality and possible criminality. So the youngsters, through the recommendation of the children's court, were remanded to the school for spiritual, moral and physical regeneration.

There are many such cases at the Wiltwyck School, which is a project of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, Bishop Manning president.

Court Saw Need.

Situated on a wooded estate on the Hudson near Esopus, N. Y., Wiltwyck was started four years ago as an experiment after the Juvenile Court, noting that resources were endless when it came to removing a maladjusted white child from his home, pointed out to Bishop Manning that there was no similar organization for the betterment of Protestant Negro boys, among whom a considerable number were beginning to show predelinquent tendencies.

Since the school's founding other institutions have taken Negro youngsters under their care and given them further training in vocational subjects. Or home conditions have been improved to give the youngsters a chance to prepare for normal, healthy lives.

Under the guidance of the Rev. T. W. B. Magnan, rector of the school, a staff of case-workers, headed by Esther M. Hilton, and a number of Negro councillors and teachers—white and Negro—the boys undergo a course of treatment and education based on individual leanings.

Mary Bryan, one of the case-workers, explained that the children are put under subtle but strict surveilance from the moment they become candidates for the school. All of them must be recommended by the Children's Court; all of them must be predelinquents, that is, youngsters whose environment might lead to delinquency, yet whose records show nothing more serious than truancy, or petty stealing or similar faults.

At the Wiltwyck School for Negro Boys.

Take Pride in School.

And the supervision continues even after "graduation" from the school, "graduation" signifying the child's readiness to re-enter his home and, of course, the home's fitness to receive the child.

"The children are so proud of Wiltwyck that they sing its praises among their friends when they leave," Miss Bryan said. "There's a rigid code up there, by the way, you've got to prove your mettle before you can be accepted as an equal. One little boy, whose case I was working on, had heard about that and he asked me, 'Is it true that you got to fight your way in there?'"

This week "commencement" exercises are being held at Wiltwyck. Some 20 youngsters will "graduate," either to their own homes or to foster homes, which have been selected in association with other groups, or even to some other school by way of a scholarship. All of them have passed the course of schooling, which is under the supervision of the New York Board of Education.

There is to be a varsity banquet, and prizes will be awarded to the best students. In short, the boys are made to realize that this is a school they have been attending and not a penal institution.

ORPHANAGE BUILDING TO BE NAMED FOR ROBERT SHEPARD

Son of First Superintendent Colored Institution to Be Principal Speaker at Exercises Saturday Afternoon

Rev. Marshall Shepard, pastor of Olive Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa., and a member of the Pennsylvania State Legislature, will deliver the principal address at the Granville County Day to be observed Saturday at the Colored Orphanage of North Carolina near Oxford.

The Philadelphian is a son of the late Rev. Robert Shepard, superintendent of the Orphanage for 23 years, and in whose honor the boy's dormitory is to be named at Saturday's exercises.

Superintendent T. A. Hamme said a large crowd of people from Granville and nearby counties was expected to attend the exercises. Interest in the occasion has been developed through the colored schools and the churches and other organizations and individuals.

The exercise is to begin at 2:30 with music by the Colored Orphanage Band under the direction of Madison Lennon. The Colored Orphanage P.-T. A. Choir is to sing before the address of Rev. Marshall Shepard. Mrs. M. B. Williams, who has conducted the financial campaign in the colored schools, and Rev. F. H. U. Edwards, who has directed the campaign in the churches, will make their reports.

Representatives from the Board of Directors of the Orphanage will conduct the formal program naming the building.

Superintendent Hamme prepared the following statement on the early days of the Orphanage and the hardships endured by the man whose memory is to be perpetuated in the naming of the boy's dormitory in his honor:

As a rule, every institution has a struggle for an existence in its beginning. The Colored Orphanage at Oxford is no exception to this rule. The early history of this institution is a story of the life and sacrifices of Rev. Robert Shepard, who was its superintendent from 1884 until 1907. He was born of slave parents, Richard and Flora Shepard in Raleigh, North Carolina. When a small boy he was given to the daughter of the family as a wedding gift. He was taken to a new home away from his mother whom he never saw again. He grew to young manhood without a mother's love or care. This experience helped to fit him for the work of caring for motherless boys and girls after he reached maturity.

At the time he was chosen superintendent, there were tweny-one acres of land, a small house, delapidated barn, and eight children who were being cared for by a matron, who washed and ironed to help support them while the Board was trying to secure a superintendent.

There was no room at the Orphanage to furnish living quarters for the superintendent. Nevertheless, he gave up his three churches and came to the work without salary or even the promise, since the Board was at the time without funds. Whenever it was necessary for the Board to meet, these good men furnished their own transportation.

Rev. M. C. Ransome gave Rev. Shepard board and lodging until such time that he could solicit enough from churches and friends to provide a place for himself at the Orphanage. He found himself confronted with seemingly insurmountable obstacles, but undaunted courage and faith in God and his fellowmen, he carried on.

He went to churches, conventions, associations, fraternal organizations, and individuals, and inch by inch, saw the work expand. He purchased stock and started a farm, secured a cow and some hogs to help in providing food for the children. As time went on a frame build-

County Home Negro Quarters Criticized In Report Of Jury

Recommendation Is Made to Judge Ervin That Adequate Provision Be Made For Inmates—Sheriff Says Federal Requirements For Jail Are Met.

The Mecklenburg county grand jury yesterday recommended in the report handed to Judge Sam J. Ervin, Jr., in criminal superior court that adequate provision be made for caring for the Negro inmates at the county home.

The grand jury said that they found on inspecting the county home that the beds in the Negro quarters are worn out. The report said that tentative plans of the county commissioners either to build a new Negro building at the county home or repair the present one are excellent and that something along that line should be done.

The report complimented Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, who have charge of the county home. The report was signed by Foreman J. B. Watt and Secretary Llewllyn Griffith.

SATISFY U. S. OFFICIALS.

The report of Federal prison officials with regard to the county jail was shown the grand jury by Sheriff G. Mack Riley, who has charge of the jail, and it was explained that the provisions of the report have been complied with.

The findings of the Federal inspector were substantially in accordance with those of the county commissioners, the grand jury and the sheriff. Strict organization of personnel of the jail and careful enforcement of regulations such as those against allowing pistols to be carried by guards were advocated. All of these matters already have been threshed out, Sheriff Riley explained, and the regulations placed in effect.

In Judge Ervin's court Robert C. Neal was found guilty of manslaughter, and the trial of L. S. Gaddy on assault charges was begun. Gaddy was arrested by I. E. Pendleton, special deputy sheriff assigned to the airport. The affair drew for Pendleton from Sheriff Riley a reprimand because the special deputy tried to operate outside his sphere of influence. 1

ORPHANAGE HOLDS EXERCISES TODAY

Colored Institution at Oxford to Honor Founder, Ex-Slave Born Here

Oxford, April 18.—Granville County Day is to be observed at the North Carolina Negro Orphanage near Oxford, Saturday, Superintendent T. A. Hamme announced today.

The day is to bring to a close a financial campaign conducted among friends of the Orphanage in Granville and nearby counties. As a part of the program, the boys' dormitory on the campus will be named in honor of the first superintendent of the institution, Rev. Robert Shepard, who served for 23 years from 1884 until 1907, before he was succeeded by the late H. P. Cheatham.

Principal speaker for the day will be Rev. Marshall Shepard, son of the former superintendent, who is now pastor of Olive Baptist Church, Philadelphia, and a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature.

Robert Shepard was born of slave parents, Richard and Flora Shepard, in Raleigh. He was given as a small boy to the daughter of his owner's family as a wedding gift. When he became superintendent of the Orphanage, there were eight children being cared for by a matron and the institution property included 21 acres of land, a small house and a dilapidated barn. Today, the Orphanage is caring for about 175 children, has a number of modern brick buildings and a large farm on which food is grown.

Colored Orphanage

Over in Oxford last Saturday exercises were held at the Colored Orphanage for North Carolina that served to call attention to the high type of work being done by that worthy institution. The boys building was named in honor of Rev. Robert Shepard, superintendent of the orphanage for twenty-three years from 1884 to 1907, and the program was built around that service.

This home for fatherless and motherless colored children is not so well known as its neighbor in another part of town, the Oxford Orphanage, but for many decades it has been carrying on humbly and quietly in fulfilling a noble mission of reclaiming waifs that but for its sheltering arms might become liabilities of society.

Like many another institution, it had an inconspicuous beginning. Rev. Robert Shepard was one of its first superintendents. He was born in Raleigh of slave parentage, and when but a small boy was given to a daughter of the family as a wedding gift, was taken to a new home and away from his mother, whom he never saw again.

At the time he came there were twenty-one acres of land, one small house, a dilapidated barn and other modest equipment. Shepard gave up the pastorate of three churches and accepted the work, without salary. He had a vision of service and fought through the best he could. He builded well, and his successor, the late H. P. Cheatham, who died only a few years ago, found himself in better position to go along with the work because of what had been done before him.

The orphanage today receives some State aid, and is helped from other sources. It has been conducted in a manner that has won the respect of Oxford people and many citizens of the State who know something of its achievements and problems. T. A. [illegible] is its present superintendent, and is building modestly and without fanfare in trying to serve to the utmost the colored children committed to his care.

It is one of the few colored orphanages in the State, which makes demands upon it all the greater and its problems the more urgent. But there is much to commend it, and its accomplishments are largely, though on a much smaller scale, of the same general nature and character as those of similar institutions for white children.

It is deserving of all the support it is receiving, and more, and is destined to play a still greater role as it caters to the extreme needs of orphan children of the colored race.

Colored Orphanage Will Be Dedicated

Supt. T. A. Hamme, Formerly Negro County Agent In Durham, Announces Plans

Oxford, April 1.—(Special)—Plans were completed today by the executive committee of the Colored Orphanage for a program to be held on April 19 to dedicate one of the boys' dormitories in memory of the late Robert Shepherd.

The dedicatory address will be given by Shepherd's son, Rev. M. L. Shepherd of Philadelphia, who is a representative from Philadelphia to the Pennsylvania legislature.

Plans were announced tonight by T. A. Hamme, superintendent of the Colored Orphanage, following a meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees. The committee consists of Dr. E. E. Toney, Ben W. Parham and Dr. R. L. Noblin, all of Oxford.

Also at the dedication meeting, reports will be made by leading citizens in each community and church as to the amount of money collected in the first public drive made in Granville County for the Colored Orphanage since T. A. Hamme became superintendent. Hamme tonight said it was his aim to better acquaint the people of Granville County with the Colored Orphanage.

15,000 Attend Annual All Day Affair

Visitors Attracted From Several States

By A. A. MORISEY

OXFORD, N. C.—A mammoth throng of an estimated 15,000 persons laid aside all cares and partipicated in the fifty-eighth anniversary of the Oxford Orphanage, here last week.

The affair which had as its purpose the commemoration of the founding of this institution many years before and a review of the service it has rendered to the community, took on the characteristics of a carnival.

A heavy downpour just at the time of the scheduled program outdoors sent the thousands scurrying for shelter, which was not available for all and found some crowded beneath the many oaks which "leaked" and gave little protectoin. Hence the program moved into the school chapel where just a few of the mob could attend. Prior plans were for an outdoor program with an amplifying system.

The Rev. A. S. Croom, pastor of the Union Baptist Church, Durham, N. C., made the main address.

NOTED VISITOR PRESENT

A noted visitor was the Rev. Marshall Shepard, pastor, Mt. Olivet Baptist Church, Philadelphia and member of the Pennsylvania State Legislature. Rev. Mr. Shepard is a native of this city and was born on the campus of the orphanage which his father, the late Rev. Robert Shepard, was superintendent.

Attorney C. W. Parham, member of the board of directors gave a history of the institution which fifty years ago has less than fifty acres o land and today has more than five hundred acres.

John W. Mitchell, state farm agent and newest member of the board of directors, took the collection.

The speaker was introduced by the Rev. G. W. Watkins, pastor of the First Baptist Church, here. The Rev. H. S. Davis, principal of Mary Potter School, said the invocation. Dr. E. E. Toney, chairman of the board of directors, introduced visitors. T. A. Hamme, superintendent, was master of ceremonies.

Music was furnished by the school band under the direction of Madison Lennon who was making his last appearance with the group. He recently resigned his position.

Some idea of the size of the crowd may come from some observations made by this writer as he moved about the mob.

PICTURES MADE OF ALL

There was every opportunity for each person attending to take back a souvenir of the day and every one could have it in the form of a picture which would be made in just a few minutes by the fifteen or more photographers scattered about the grounds. And even then they stayed so busy they probably never got around to making everybody before the sun went down.

As for food there was an overabundance of it and the stand operators "hawked" their wares in true carnival style as did the others who had almost anything desired, on sale. There were truck loads of watermelons, and peaches for those appetites.

Adding to the true carnival spirit was the swing, one sideshow and numerous vendors of balloons, hats, pins, flags, and what have you.

The afternoon of the day before the anniversary the crowds began coming in, principally the folk who ha dto arrange their stands and get things all set up for the big day which would come when business would boom and it had to be made in one day, or else.

STREETS OF CITY CROWDED

Not only did the spacious orphanage campus take on the holiday atmosphere but so did the entire city where every street was crowded with the many visitors in town.

The affair is of more than local significance as was attested by the license plates which were from several states other than this one. Folks from northern states took advantage of the day to come down when old acquaintances would be renewed here where very relative or former neighbor would gather.

A veteran of the annual "fiesta" told us that all in all the day was one of the most successful he had seen in the forty years he had been attending and the crowd was one of the most orderly. Had it not been the deputized officers and members of the State Highway Patrol on duty would have made it so.

RATLIFF SPEAKS AT LANDER

Negro Educator To Be Chapel Speaker Tomorrow Morning

Dr. W. M. Ratliff of the Interacial Commission and the field agent for the Jenkins Orphanage of Charleston will be the speaker at Lander College Monday, April 28th at 10:45 a. m. in the Chapel.

Dr. Ratliff will be presented to the students and friends of the college by J. S. Wilburn of the Cooper Furniture Company. Religious, business and civic groups of Greenwood are invited to attend.

Dr. Ratliff has spoken in most of the colleges in South Carolina and in many of the leading colleges and universities of America. He was educated in South Carolina and other Southern schools.

The Jenkins Orphanage is the largest Negro Orphanage in the world and the only orphanage in South Carolina that receives both colored boys and girls and has the endorsement of the leading religious, business, educational, and civic organizations of South Carolina.

Many colored children from Greenwood county are now being trained in the institution.

Negro Orphan Home Lacks Supplies

180

Supplies of groceries have been exhausted at the Adam Brown orphanage on Wadmalaw island, which houses twenty-five negro children, the Rev. J. O. Clark, of 114 Bogard street, superintendent, said yesterday. He said the children also needed clothes, and appealed for donations of any kind of groceries and clothing.

Contributions may be sent to him or to Mrs. Richard H. Lane, of 3 Ashley avenue, a member of the white advisory board for the orphanage.

NEGROES PLANNING ACTIVITIES TODAY

Ordination of Pastor and Two Silver Benefit Teas for Orphans Scheduled

Negro churches and charitable organizations have scheduled activity today which includes the installation of a newly ordained minister, the closing and beginning of anniversary weeks and two silver teas for the benefit of the Colored Orphans' home.

The Rev. I. A. Brydie, who was recently ordained at New Zion Baptist church, will be officially installed as the pastor of the St. Annea Baptist church, Bakewell, in an all-day service and ceremony.

The installation sermons will be preached by the Revs. D. D. Sparks and A. T. Wade.

Members of Prospect Baptist church, Dodson at Citico, begin their week's celebration of the fourth year of the pastorate of the Rev. William O. Jones, with a program in charge of the laymen, today at 3 p.m.

Each night through next Monday services will be held at 7:30 p.m., with programs in charge of the junior church, tomorrow night; Volunteer club, Tuesday; Eureka club, Wednesday night; Sunday school and Baptist Training union, Thursday; the Morning Star club, Friday night, and an all-day service next Sunday, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

A citizens' and members' banquet will end the observance next Monday night, with Louis Lane as the toastmaster and the Rev. Jones, the principal speaker.

At the Independent African Methodist church, 411 East Ninth street, in the Masonic hall, the Rev. M. C. Griffin, pastor: the Rev. J. L. Miller, pastor of St. John Independent A. M. church, Bessemer Ala., will be the principal speaker at the 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. worship hours.

The third anniversray of the Rev. W. W. Huff as pastor of New Enon Baptist church, Fort Cheatham, closes this afternoon when the anniversary sermon will be preached by the Rev. A. Kelley, pastor of New Home Baptist church.

Services have been held each night during the past week, and programs have been in charge of local pastors and their choirs.

Youth day will be observed at Patten Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Zion church, today when the junior church will be in charge of services, according to the Rev. J. S. Davenport, pastor.

The sewing unit of the woman's auxiliary of the Colored Odphans' home sponsors two silver teas today to raise funds for the orphanage.

From 4 to 7 p.m., they will be at the Phillis Wheatley branch Y. W. C. A., and for patrons of the west side there will be a similar affair at "Uncle Bim's" place, 327 West Ninth street, at the same hours.

Funds raised at the latter place will be spent for an Easter Egg hunt for the children at the Holly street institution.

NEGRO ORPHANS' HOME IN NEED OF EQUIPMENT

The Colored Orphans' Home on Holly street is badly in need of "a sink with a drain board," and cooking utensils such as large pans, dishes and silverware, according to an appeal made yesterday by Chairman Olivia Harris, of the committee on donations.

"It is possible that some person or persons may have such things that our auxiliary, working in the interest of the orphanage, might use to help the situation for better health and sanitary conditions," she stated, and added that donors may contact the committee headquarters at 426 Vine street, or call 6-1836.

Last week the home received five dozen garments, needles, thread and buttons, from the Violet Social club.

Donations were made to the committee of management of the seventy-five Negro women, organized early this year to assist in the upkeep of the institution.

LIONS PLAN PROGRAM TO FIGHT BLINDNESS

Work To Be Particularly For Those Over 16

HOSPITALIZATION NEEDED

Dr. E. C. Ellett Addresses Club At Gayoso Meeting—W. W. Simmons Is Named Head Of Recommendation Committee

With Oakville Sanatorium for tuberculosis control and the Lions Open Air School for the children needing special health care well established as projects of former administrations, the Lions Club yesterday announced a program for the prevention of blindness, particularly for residents of the Tri-States over 16.

Dr. E. C. Ellett, national vice president for the Society for the Prevention of Blindness, told the club yesterday at the Gayoso that there is a definite need for a permanent organization and a sustained effort for prevention of blindness in Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi.

"The P.T.A. and Junior League take care of the problem of eye needs of infants and children up to 16, but there is a great need for hospitalization treatment for the indigent," he said.

"Simple medical and surgical treatment of the indigent is not the problem, since doctors in their private capacities give freely of their services to these patients, but there are many who need hospital care for special eye treatment and can not afford it," he pointed out.

He explained that only people living in Memphis can be treated at the John Gaston Hospital and the Memphis Eye, Ear Nose and Throat Hospital, which provide the only accommodations for both white and negro patients. Memphis hospitals have only limited facilities for treating charity cases.

Forming the Sight Conservation Committee to present recommendations for the club's program at the meeting next Tuesday are W. W. Simmons, chairman; Dr. Louis Levy, Dr. W. E. Ragsdale, W. B. Stevens and Clifford D. Pierce.

Lena Jones Is Guest

Assistance to the blind has been one of the club's projects for several years, and Lena Jones, one of the persons aided in getting a "Seeing-Eye" dog, was among the guests at the meeting yesterday.

Membership keys were presented Bill Fielding, E. Frank Hein and George Tidwell.

HERBERT GRAF ASKS COURT AID IN SUIT

Sevierville Man Seeks $935 on Note Bought at Auction.

Herbert Graf, architect, has appealed to Circuit Court an effort of two Sevierville men to collect a $935 judgment by way of garnishment proceedings.

Mr, Graf is the supervising architect on the new Home for Dependent Negro Children and is to receive a fee of approximately $2000 for his services.

The judgment against the architect was rendered in General Sessions Court last month in favor of J. C. Allen and Burt Ketner, of Sevierville. The Sevier County Christians came into possession of a note signed by Mr. Graf when they purchased at auction the remaining assets of the former Holston-Union National Bank at a receiver's sale.

After the judgment was given, a garnishment was served on County Judge S. O. Houston seeking to levy on Mr. Graf's fee as architect on the new Negro Home project.

No date for hearing in Circuit Court has been set.

COURT VOTES TO BUY TRACT

Reverses Early Action on Western Ave. Home Site.

Reversing its action of a few hours earlier, Knox County Court late Monday voted to buy a 15-acre tract of the T. F. Fitzgerald property on Western Avenue for the site of a new Hofe for Dependent Negro Children.

The action brought heated protests from several members of the Court, who declared the squires were "breaking faith" with a West Lonsdale delegation that had appeared to ask the Court to choose another site for the building. This delegation had been told that no action would be taken on selecting a site until July.

Ratify Bond Sale

The Court also adopted, with two dissenting votes, a resolution ratifying the sale of $100,000 in highway equipment bonds. The two squires who voted against ratification were W. H. H. Southern and J. Frank Russell. Squire Southern declared the bond issue had been pushed through County Court by members who held county jobs or were influenced by promises of jobs for relatives or themselves. He insisted the bonds should have been subjected to a referendum and said they would have been overwhelmingly defeated.

Squire Southern, with Squires C. D. Frazier and Ollie Bean, also protested the action in ordering purchase of the Fitzgerald property.

Squires Rupert Reynolds, Ed Giffin and J. C. F. Herrell led the fight in favor of prompt action, declaring that further delay would add "four or five thousand dollars to the cost of the project."

Failed First Time

The motion to buy the property lost on first vote due to a lack of a majority when four squires "passed" without voting. The question was immediately brought up a second time and on roll call vote the purchase was approved by a vote of 21 to 7.

During the morning session the court had approved zoning regulations for the county.

The resolution places all of Knox County under zoning regulations, with specific zoning of the Tenth District and of the Alcoa Highway in the Fourteenth District.

County Court must hold a public hearing on the zoning regulations after 30 days, and must again approve the resolution in July for it to become effective.

The bond issue sales were to be taken up during the afternoon and approval of the sale was expected to be only a formality.

Argument Gets Hot

Most heated part of the meeting came over selection of a site for the proposed home for Negro children. One of the bond issues to be approved later in the day was sold to provide funds for the building.

The county has had a tract on Western Avenue opposite New Gray Cemetery under option for more than a year. Today a large delegation of West Lonsdale residents appeared to protest building the Negro home at that point.

The County Court committee in charge of the project met prior to the general meeting of the court and voted unanimously to recommend the Fitzgerald site on Western Avenue. The program was upset, however, when Squire R. C. York announced that an offer had just been made by H. E. Rogers to donate a six-acre tract, the property also facing Western Avenue but adjoining the property of Knoxville College and Beardsley Junior High School, both colored schools.

After hearing H. D. Blanc, J. G. Hansell, D. B. Sanderson and H. S. Householder speak in protest to selection of the Fitzgerald property, and the Rev. E. A. Jackson speak in favor of that site with the declaration that "no matter where you pick a place you will have delegations of white residents opposing it," the court voted to wait until July to make its choice.

It arrived at that point by a devious route, including roll call vote on a motion to table a motion to wait, as well as roll call vote on the direct question.

The motion to defer action was made by Squire Doyle King, who declared that he wanted to wait to see if the county could save the $5000 set aside for purchase of a site. The motion to table was made by Squire Rupert Reynolds.

On roll call the motion to table lost by 18 to 14 and the motion to wait until July won by 20 to 12.

Adopt Zoning Rules

Lengthy discussion of the zoning regulations presented by W. C. McCammon Jr., engineer-secretary of the Knox County Planning Commission, brought on two sharp disputes, but on final vote the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The first zoning dispute was brought on by Squire C. V. Fisher, who asked Mr. McCammon if the Planning Commission "intended to enforce all the restrictions included in the resolution."

Mr. McCammon replied that the restrictions would not have been placed in the resolution if there had been no intention of enforcing them.

"I don't believe the people will stand for some of them," Squire Fisher protested, and in explanation said restrictions would impose undue hardships on dairy farmers.

Withdraws Objection

Mr. McCammon challenged the statement and pointed out that no restrictions were in the resolution that could apply to dairy farming or any other agricultural activity. Squire Fisher then withdrew his objections and voted to approve the resolution.

Sharpest argument came over an attempt by Squie W. H. H. Southern to have members of the County Court ruled ineligible to hold places on the Board of Appeals set up under the zoning resolution.

The Planning Commission had recommended that a board of three members be named and made no recommendation as to who should be selected.

Squire Reynolds moved to amend the resolution to provide for five members on the appeals board and specified that three of the members should be justices of the peace and two other residents of the county outside the city.

Southern Protests

Squire Southern protested that three members were sufficient and that members of the County Court should not serve because they would not be eligible to draw pay for their services and should not be asked to serve without pay.

"No member of this Court who is named on the board is going to ask for pay for his services," Squire Reynolds retorted. He did not say how he knew that to be true.

"We are going to elect members of this court to these places and then they will be asking for pay, no matter what Squire Reynolds says about it," Squire Southern said.

Cites Patriotism

Squire Reynolds leaped up to repeat that no justice of the peace would ask for pay, adding that "they are just as patriotic as anybody else."

Squire Southern demanded a ruling from Judge S. O. Houston and the county solicitor, but Judge Houston declined to make a ruling, declaring that "since none of the members of the court will ask for pay there is no need for a ruling."

The motion to name five members on the appeals board was carried on a voice vote and election of the members of the board was deferred until the court meets again in July.

NEGROES ARE TO HAVE NEW NURSERY SCHOOL

Project Is Sponsored At William Foote Homes

The nursery school at William Foote Homes, first to be established at any Tennessee housing project, will go into operation today. The original enrolment of 10 children is expected to be expanded eventually to about 30.

Officials of the Memphis Housing Authority, Works Projects Administration, the City Board of Education and the City Health Department will make an inspection of the equipment which has been set up this morning.

The nursing school was designed for the benefit of the low income negro families in the project and their children. It is sponsored by the Board of Education.

The staff will consist of a teacher, an assistant, a maid and a cook.

COURT VOTES TO BUY TRACT

Reverses Early Action on Western Ave. Home Site.

Reversing its action of a few hours earlier, Knox County Court late Monday voted to buy a 15-acre tract of the T. F. Fitzgerald property on Western Avenue for the site of a new Hofe for Dependent Negro Children.

The action brought heated protests from several members of the Court, who declared the squires were "breaking faith" with a West Lonsdale delegation that had appeared to ask the Court to choose another site for the building. This delegation had been told that no action would be taken on selecting a site until July.

Ratify Bond Sale

The Court also adopted, with two dissenting votes, a resolution ratifying the sale of $100,000 in highway equipment bonds. The two squires who voted against ratification were W. H. H. Southern and J. Frank Russell. Squire Southern declared the bond issue had been pushed through County Court by members who held county jobs or were influenced by promises of jobs for relatives or themselves. He insisted the bonds should have been subjected to a referendum and said they would have been overwhelmingly defeated.

Squire Southern, with Squires C. D. Frazier and Ollie Bean, also protested the action in ordering purchase of the Fitzgerald property.

Squires Rupert Reynolds, Ed Giffin and J. C. F. Herrell led the fight in favor of prompt action, declaring that further delay would add "four or five thousand dollars to the cost of the project."

Failed First Time

The motion to buy the property lost on first vote due to a lack of a majority when four squires "passed" without voting. The question was immediately brought up a second time and on roll call vote the purchase was approved by a vote of 21 to 7.

During the morning session the court had approved zoning regulations for the county.

The resolution places all of Knox County under zoning regulations, with specific zoning of the Tenth District and of the Alcoa Highway in the Fourteenth District.

County Court must hold a public hearing on the zoning regulations after 30 days, and must again approve the resolution in July for it to become effective.

The bond issue sales were to be taken up during the afternoon and approval of the sale was expected to be only a formality.

Argument Gets Hot

Most heated part of the meeting came over selection of a site for the proposed home for Negro children. One of the bond issues to be approved later in the day was sold to provide funds for the building.

The county has had a tract on Western Avenue opposite New Gray Cemetery under option for more than a year. Today a large delegation of West Lonsdale residents appeared to protest building the Negro home at that point.

The County Court committee in charge of the project met prior to the general meeting of the court and voted unanimously to recommend the Fitzgerald site on Western Avenue. The program was upset, however, when Squire R. C. York announced that an offer had just been made by H. E. Rogers to donate a six-acre tract, the property also facing Western Avenue but adjoining the property of Knoxville College and Beardsley Junior High School, both colored schools.

After hearing H. D. Blanc, J. G. Hansell, D. B. Sanderson and H. S. Householder speak in protest to selection of the Fitzgerald property, and the Rev. E. A. Jackson speak in favor of that site with the declaration that "no matter where you pick a place you will have delegations of white residents opposing it," the court voted to wait until July to make its choice.

It arrived at that point by a devious route, including roll call vote on a motion to table a motion to wait, as well as roll call vote on the direct question.

The motion to defer action was made by Squire Doyle King, who declared that he wanted to wait to see if the county could save the $5000 set aside for purchase of a site. The motion to table was made by Squire Rupert Reynolds.

On roll call the motion to table lost by 18 to 14 and the motion to wait until July won by 20 to 12.

Adopt Zoning Rules

Lengthy discussion of the zoning regulations presented by W. C. McCammon Jr., engineer-secretary of the Knox County Planning Commission, brought on two sharp disputes, but on final vote the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The first zoning dispute was brought on by Squire C. V. Fisher, who asked Mr. McCammon if the Planning Commission "intended to enforce all the restrictions included in the resolution."

Mr. McCammon replied that the restrictions would not have been placed in the resolution if there had been no intention of enforcing them.

"I don't believe the people will stand for some of them," Squire Fisher protested, and in explanation said restrictions would impose undue hardships on dairy farmers.

Withdraws Objection

Mr. McCammon challenged the statement and pointed out that no restrictions were in the resolution that could apply to dairy farming or any other agricultural activity. Squire Fisher then withdrew his objections and voted to approve the resolution.

Sharpest argument came over an attempt by Squie W. H. H. Southern to have members of the County Court ruled ineligible to hold places on the Board of Appeals set up under the zoning resolution.

The Planning Commission had recommended that a board of three members be named and made no recommendation as to who should be selected.

'Well-Burned' Brick Sought For Negro Children's Home

A request that the Home for Dependent Negro Children to be built in Lonsdale be constructed of "well-burned" brick rather than concrete blocks or concrete cement brick will be made to county authorities.

The decision was made at a mass meeting of Negro citizens Sunday night at Tabernacle Baptist Church.

The resolution adopted read, "We, the following citizens assembled . . . prefer that the home . . . be constructed of well-burned brick rather than concrete blocks or concrete cement brick. We feel that the burned brick will make a healthier and drier building for the taxpayers' money than otherwise."

It was signed by the Rev. L. W. Veal and E. R. Strickland and carried the note: "1000 people present."

The resolution was addressed to County Judge S. O. Houston, the Building Committee, and Squires R. C. York, L. M. Scruggs, A. L. Cardwell and Frank Winick.

A similar resolution was adopted at the Rogers Memorial Baptist Church, where the Rev. L. A. Alexander is pastor and William Brooks is secretary.

Rev. Daley Speaks At Reform School

MAR 15 1941

MT. MEIGS, ALA., March 14. — The Rev. R. A. Daley delivered an excellent message to the students and teachers of the Alabama Reform School on Sunday afternoon. The girls' glee club under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Charles and Miss L. Belle Abernathy delivered appropriate music.

Professor Stanley Rembert with one section of the school band accompanied by President Wingfield were participants on the Young People's Day program at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church. The group received much commendation for its appearance.

Mrs. J. R. Wingfield attended the State Parents-Teachers Association held in Montgomery Tuesday and Wednesday. Miss Elizabeth Charles and Miss Elvira Smith were delegates from this institution to the P.-T. A. meeting, attending Wednesday. All the academic teachers were relieved Wednesday evening to attend the Alabama State Teachers Association in session at State Teachers College, Montgomery.

The school band, under the direction of Prof. W. O. Wilson, entertained the State Teachers Association with music at the opening program Thursday. Miss Smith sang "God Bless America," accompanied by Mr. Rembert, music director.

Mrs. Katherine M. Cook of the division of special problems of the National Department of Education, Washington, D. C., accompanied by a committee of three, also of Washington, and a committee from the State Department of Education, headed by Dr. J. S. Lambert, were visitors of the institution recently. They were also dinner guests and expressed on their departures favorable comments relative to the program carried on at this institution.

George W. Jones of New York, brother of Luther E. Jones, director of the dairying and poultry department of this school, was a recent visitor.

Mt. Meigs Students Present Playlet

MAR 31 1941

MT. MEIGS, ALA., March 29.—The program rendered in Rogers building of the Alabama Reform School Sunday afternoon was in charge of Miss Mary H. Chisholm, who presented the playlet, "How He Popped the Question." The characters were principally from members of the intermediate classes. The band furnished numbers in harmony with the romantic comedy.

Visitors present at the chapel hour were Mrs. Rosa Chisholm and her children, Mr. and Mrs. Poole, of Montgomery. Other visitors to the campus were W. E. Cooper and Harry Wright, officials at Prairie Farm.

Tuskegeeans of this school, Charles Maffett, L. E. Jones and Prof. J. R. Wingfield, were hosts to the Montgomery-Tuskegee Alumni Club which met in the M. M. Washington hall Tuesday at 8 p.m. J. F. Scott, president, presided. The program opened by singing "America" with Miss Mary H. Chisholm at the piano; contributions to the program were made by a special group of band boys; W. O. Wilson, band director, with a trombone solo; vocal solo, Miss Elvira Smith, accompanied by S. T. Rembert; instrumental solo, Miss Wilhelmenia Gray; reading, Mrs. Bertha J. Carter. Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, guest speaker for the evening was presented by President Wingfield. He spoke on the "Defense Program" and the contribution that Tuskegee Institute is making towards it, telling of the progress of the institution in recent years. Dr. Patterson was accompanied by J. Julius Flood, personnel director; Capt. R. S. Darnaby, alumni secretary of Tuskegee Institute, and Guy R. Trammell, chairman of the J. B. Washington Memorial Scholarship Foundation.

After participating in a few lively games during the social session, directed by Mrs. Bertha J. Carter, delicious refreshments were served in the dining room to 87 guests. Mrs. Fannie Sprott and Miss Johnnie M. Blunt, assisted by others, acted as hostesses for the occasion.

D. C. Institution Going Under Negro Control

WASHINGTON, (ANP) — Colored administrative officials will take over the National Training School for Girls at a nearly date, according to an announcement from the office of the welfare director for the District.

Due to the fact that 66 of the 72 inmates of the school are colored, the Board of Public Welfare has decided to remove the white to private homes and turn the entire building and facilities over to Negroes.

At present there are 25 members on the institution staff of whom 11 are white. Every effort will be made by the Board to find spots for these employees and for the director, also white.

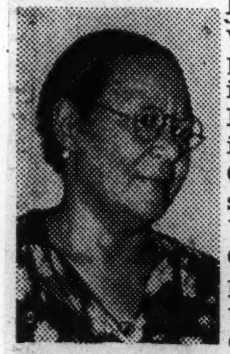
New Girls' Training School Head Has Long Record of Service

By MABLE ALSTON

WASHINGTON

Among the few women who have spent most of their lives helping others is Mrs. Rachel Henry Galloway, newly appointed superintendent of the National Training School for Girls, who assumed office on Wednesday. Mrs. Galloway's experience as a teacher and social worker began in the public schools of Washington, where her ability soon brought her to the position of model or critic instructor.



Mrs. Galloway

Headed Croome School

In 1915 Mrs. Galloway (then Mrs. Henry) accepted a position as principal to Croome Settlement School, which was founded by the late Miss Susie Willes, white, of Croome, Md., an idealist who was deemed a fanatic by the general white community.

This institution is the only school to which the Board of Public Welfare can send those wards who are not mental defectives or advanced delinquents.

The building which was constructed in 1900 was superior to any school in that section, but when it was opened for colored children, there was a wave of resentment that all but destroyed the building, but did not deter Miss Willes in her objective.

In brief, the structure stood unused for years, after which it was returned to its owner. Meanwhile Miss Willes had built another smaller school in which the work was allowed to progress.

Dream Realized

"The vision of the late Miss Willes," said Mrs. Galloway, "has reached perhaps a fuller realization than even she had dreamed. She built this school to combat illegitimacy among the young colored girls of that section and to give them better training than the county schools offered."

It was in 1915 that the first group of girls was sent to the school by the Board of Public Welfare.

Mrs. Galloway said that the complete story of the institution cannot possibly be written, for it will continue through the offspring of those who have been helped there.

Reasons for Success

She attributes the success of the school first to the normal home life lived by the girls with their animal pets, gardens, and with the children of the older girls who have married and settled in the village.

Second, the honor system is carried out, and she said that a spirit of co-operation and group leadership is built up in which the stronger girls are taught that it is their obligation to help the weaker ones.

A warm friendship has been developed between the parents and the school and community co-operation has been a prime motivating force in the school's program.

Plans New Program

Referring to her new position, Mrs. Galloway said that she hopes to institute at the National Training School a new educational set-up for the girls, a program which will take care of their academic, vocational, and business needs.

An excellent placement service(this term she prefers to "parole") which will link the girl, the school, the home and the community is a second objective.

To Use Honor System

She expects a great deal to be accomplished in morale, cultural, and religious developments from a well directed recreational program.

Here, too, she is bent upon instituting the honor system so that this school will become a parental rather than a penal institution.

Finally, and perhaps most important, will be the attempt to foster an active parental and community interest.

She says that she believes that sincere, practical love will be the surest cure for delinquency, and that no normal-minded girl is really bad.

Mrs. Galloway is the mother of two children, Dr. Myrtle Henry, assistant professor of English at Howard University, and Barrington Henry, local business man.

MILITARY TRAINING AT ST. CHARLES.

The mismanaged St. Charles School for Boys is in the headlines again, under somewhat different circumstances from those that cause its usual notoriety. Instead of its escaped inmates preying on the public, one of those inmates is dead as the result, it is alleged, of an assault by an employé at the school.

FEB 27 1941

The law will deal with the employé. In passing, it may be noted that his act cannot fairly be charged to Gov. Green or the governor's new director of public welfare, Mr. Brandon. The employé was a holdover, sponsored in the expiring days of the Stelle régime by a Democratic county chairman, and had a record that should have barred him from any public job. Gov. Green is going to need more than six weeks to clean up the Augean stables that he inherited at his inauguration.

Without extenuating this employé's apparent brutality, it should be recognized that there is and always will be, so long as the courts of Cook county follow their present commitment policy, a most difficult disciplinary problem at St. Charles. Most of the inmates are hard cases. The majority of them, if they are not confirmed criminals, are on the road to becoming such. They need to be ruled with a firm hand, both for their own good and for the protection of the community.

Director Brandon is working on a plan to install senior students in sociology as house fathers in the cottages at the school. Presumably they would hold these positions for periods of a few months or a year at most, since the salary scale in state institutions can hardly attract college trained personnel to permanent service of this rank.

This would certainly be a good thing for the budding sociologists. They may learn that there are many things in the world that they never dreamed of in their cloistered studies. Whether it will be a good thing for the inmates and the institution will only be shown if it is tried.

If there were not more pressing demands for their services at present, Mr. Brandon might well consider the substitution of retired sergeants and petty officers from the army and navy for his young sociologists. He should certainly give close study to the possibility of instituting military training at the school, either in conjunction with his house father proposal or as a substitute for it.

The most satisfactory method of instilling discipline in a group of problem characters is to make the members of that group, under careful supervision, responsible for maintaining it themselves. Military organization is ideally suited to this end.

The boys who are sent to St. Charles are going to be in this world a long time. Those of them who can be taught self-control and trained to earn a living have a chance to spend that time as useful citizens instead of public charges behind the walls of some prison.

FEB 23 1941

THE fatal beating of James Williams at the St. Charles school for boys last week was a disgrace to our penal institutions. The facts that have been uncovered since his death have shown that employees at that institution are chosen in a manner that produces the results of which we now complain. The only qualifications for employment were the facts surrounding an applicant's political activities. If his political boss recommended him that was the test of his ability. That the applicant might have been arrested for drunken driving a number of times, as was the case with Williams' assailant; that he had been arrested a number of times for beating policemen; as was also true of the assailant, made not one bit of difference. As a matter of fact this part of the employee's record was never gone into although it was a matter of public record where any penal institution could obtain it without the slightest inconvenience.

The beating Villiams was brutal and without justifica It is unfortunate that the treatment ac...ued inmates at the institution are revealed but it is most unfortunate that a homicide had to be committed and that a Negro boy was the victim before the public became aware of the nature of disciplinary action meted out at the institution.

Robert Adams and William Laird are now held on murder charges for the death of Williams. Those responsible for the employment of these men should also share the blame. It is obvious that if men had been chosen to work at St. Charles who were capable to perform the delicate duties incident to correctional institutions Williams would still be living.

Two Training School Attendants Held For Killing Negro Youth

FEB 22 1941

ST. CHARLES, Ill. — Roberts Adams, 32, of Lanark, Ill. an attendant, and William Laird 27, house officer, were held without bail Friday on a charge of murder for the brutal death of James Williams, 16-year-old Negro inmate.

State's Attorney Charles G. Seidel said that an autopsy showed that the youth had died as result of a beating administered with a club and a brass fire hose nozzle. The fatal beating occurred in the disciplinary cottage.

Seidel said that Williams had complained of feeling ill and had asked to be taken to the hospital before the outbreak of an argument with the attendants.

2 GUARDS HELD FOR KILLING BOY AT ST. CHARLES

Youth Beaten To Death

FEB 23 1941

Charged with murdering James Williams, 16, who a year ago was sent to the St. Charles School for Boys for auto thievery, two white employees of the reform school, Robert Adams, 33, and William Laird, 27, were arrested Thursday on orders of the state's attorney of Kane county.

Charges were preferred against the guards after an investigation by officials and statements from other prisoners of both races who saw the fatal beating which took place Wednesday night in one of the disciplinary cottages.

Witnesses said Adams was drunk and slapped and struck Williams with a paddle and pinewood club, and Laird beat the youth with a heavy hose nozzle. The beating started in the afternoon when Williams complained of illness as he and others were shoveling coal. Adams, who later admitted having three drinks of whiskey before going on duty, made the youth step in line and slapped him, telling Williams he would give him a "hot reception" as soon as they arrived at the cottage.

When the boy was slow in removing his clothing later at the cottage prior to taking a shower with the others, witnesses said Adams hit him with a wooden paddle. A few minutes later he again hit the lad, breaking the paddle. After ordering another inmate to get the brass nozzle and club from the shelf, Adams again started beating Williams. The latter tried to protect himself and fled to another room where a tussle started. There Laird, who had entered meanwhile, was ordered to get the nozzle and hit Williams. He did so and the boy fell to the floo...

Witnesses said Adams continued to beat the unconscious youth until John Armstrong, chief disciplinary officer, summoned by other inmates, arrived. Williams was rushed to the hospital where he was found to have suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and severe brain concussion.

Investigators later found the splintered paddle, club and nozzle on the floor. It was also learned that Adams was not permitted to use the club, which is for the protection of night guards from attacks.

Charges of murder have been placed against both men by the Kane County state's attorney after other prisoners of both races testified they saw the lad beaten up in one of the disciplinary cottages the night before.

Adams is said to have been drunk and to have slapped Williams and struck him with a paddle, and pinewood club. Laird is said to have beaten the boy with a heavy hose nozzle.

The boy committed to the home a year ago for car-stealing, complained of illness while shoveling coal, was slapped by Adams and promised further punishment later.

At the cottage, preparing, with 2 other boys, to take a shower, Williams is said to have been set upon again by Adams with the paddle and, after that broke, with the club. Laird entering meanwhile, is alleged to have procured the hose nozzle at Adams' order and joining in the beating until Williams fell unconscious.

Rushed to the hospital by John Armstrong, chief disciplinary officer of the institution, Williams was found to have suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and brain concussion, died shortly afterwards.

2 INMATES GO ON RAMPAGE WITH BUTCHER KNIVES

MAR 1 5 1941

Slash Boy; Subdued After Wild Night.

MAR 1 5 1941

Twenty-seven hours of rebellion and terrorism by two inmates of St. Charles School for Boys who were armed with butcher knives was disclosed yesterday when the two were held to the Kane county grand jury on charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

The two slashed another boy, terrorized the inmates and employés in their cottage, defied school authorities from Wednesday night until Thursday night, and finally were cowed by two deputy sheriffs.

The rampage was the latest in a series of scandals involving the school during the last few years. An inmate was beaten to death a month ago, allegedly by two employés, one of whom admitted he had been drinking. The employés are awaiting trial on charges of murder. A state investigation of the school is under way.

Story of Outbreak.

Charles G. Seidel, state's attorney of Kane county, pieced together the following account of the latest outbreak: MAR 1 5 1941

John Demitralis, 16 years old, who was sent to the school 36 months ago from Chicago for burglary, and William Davis, 18, of Harrisburg, colored, serving his second term for delinquency, quarreled with another inmate over a pair of stolen earmuffs. Other inmates in Madison cottage, where the boys were quartered, sided against Demitralis and Davis. The two ran to the cottage pantry and seized 14 inch butcher knives.

Then they slashed Robert Nolan, 18, another inmate, three times on the left hand and arm. The other inmates, terror stricken, stood at one end of the cottage with the cottage house father and his two assistants. Demitralis and Davis stood at the other end, brandishing the knives and daring the three officials to disarm them.

Locked in Basement.

Other authorities of the school came to the cottage, and the two shouted defiance at them. "They said they were tough guys and wanted to be sent to Pontiac penitentiary—even if they had to commit murder to get there," said H. E. Johnson, assistant to William T. Harmon, director of the school.

The two finally were persuaded to enter the basement of the hospital—carrying with them one of the knives and a broken bottle—where they were locked in. Thruout the night they whooped and shouted in the hospital, and Thursday morning they again dared the authorities to capture them.

Wilbur Seidel and Conrad Hoaglund, Kane county deputy sheriffs, were called. They stood outside the basement door, their hands on their revolvers, and ordered the two inmates to surrender. The two came out meekly and were taken to the Kane county jail.

Nolan was treated at the institution hospital. MAR 1 5 1941

Classed as Incorrigibles.

School officials said Demitralis and Davis had been sent to the disciplinary cottage frequently and were classed as incorrigibles by employés.

They said it is that type of inmate that will be transferred from St. Charles to the new branch at Sheridan when it is completed in May. The Sheridan unit is being constructed along reform school lines.

In Harrisburg it was learned Davis first was sent to St. Charles in 1936 and was placed on probation a month later. He was found delinquent again March 31, 1937, and was returned to the school.

6 Joliet Guards to Curb Toughs at St. Charles

MAR 17 1941

Six experienced guards were transferred yesterday from Joliet penitentiary to the St. Charles School for Boys on orders of Rodney H. Brandon, state director of public welfare. Brandon said the shift will be permanent and asserted it will help to put a stop to the scandals which have marked the operation of the school in recent years.

The latest outbreak occurred last week when two tough inmates went on a rampage, slashed another boy, and threatened other inmates and officials. MAR 17 1941

Know How to Handle Toughs.

"The new guards have dealt with all sorts of criminals and know their business," Brandon said. "They have been chosen because they know how to deal with tough prisoners efficiently and firmly. And this time they'll not be sent back to penitentiary duties because it is thought their services are no longer needed at the school."

This last reference was to the recall of a dozen guards a week ago on the recommendation of William T. Harmon, the school's superintendent, who told Col. Frank D. Whipp, state superintendent of prisons, that all was serene at the school and that the guards were not needed. The guards had been placed at the school following the death of a 16 year old inmate who was beaten by a house father and another employé.

Brandon said he will confer with Harmon today or tomorrow on a plan whereby the new guards will be placed directly in charge of the 60 toughest and most rebellious inmates, who are scheduled to be shifted early in June to the new Sheridan branch of the school. MAR 17 1941

Segregation of 60 Asked.

"These 60 incorrigibles can be selected from the body of inmates," Brandon said, "and set off in specific cottages, and the six guards then will be placed in charge of the group. They will live with them, get to know them, and try to learn their grievances and faults. Then when the boys are transferred to Sheridan, the guards will go along as the nucleus of the supervisory organization there."

The Sheridan branch, now being completed near Sheridan, in La Salle county, about 20 miles southwest of Aurora, is to be run along the lines of a reform school. It will receive only the toughest trouble makers from the St. Charles school and will accommodate 62 inmates.

The cost of the Sheridan building is $250,000. It will be built of brick and will have cell blocks. A fence similar to the one at St. Charles will surround the institution.

HOLD 2 ACCUSED IN BOY'S DEATH AT ST. CHARLES

FEB 14 1941

Charge Clubbing by Drunken Official.

Inquiry was begun by state and Kane county authorities yesterday after a young inmate of the St. Charles School for Boys died in the school hospital from injuries allegedly inflicted in a beating by a school attendant and house officer in one of the disciplinary cottages.

The victim was James Williams, 16 years old, colored, of 1260 Jefferson street, who had been sent to the school in February, 1940, after having been found in a stolen automobile.

Those accused of the beating and held on orders of State's Attorney Charles G. Seidel of Kane county, are Robert Adams, the attendant, and William Laird, acting house officer. Frank D. Whipp, the new state superintendent of prisons, went to St. Charles from Springfield to direct the state's investigation.

Statements taken by Seidel from several of the 47 boys who witnessed the beating charged that Adams was drunk, that he had struck Williams with his fists, a paddle, then a club, and that Laird had beaten the youth on the head with a heavy hose nozzle. Adams admitted hitting the prisoner with a club, but both men denied to Seidel that they had used the nozzle.

Seidel said the beating occurred Wednesday afternoon when Williams and the other inmates were shoveling coal near the Pierce disciplinary cottage where they were quartered.

Williams complained to Adams, according to the statement taken from Palmer Richard, 17, colored, of 5322 Dearborn street, that he had a severe cold because he did not have enough blankets at night. [Each cottage inmate is supplied with two light blankets.]

Charges Attendant Was Drunk.

"Adams was drunk," Richard said, "and he staggered over to Jim and hit him. He told him to get back in line and said, 'I'll give you a hot reception when I get you in the cottage.'" FEB 14 1941

After the detail was dismissed, the boys trooped to the basement shower room in the cottage, according to the testimony. There, Richard and other boys told Seidel, Williams again told Adams he felt ill, but Adams ordered him to take a shower with the others, striking him on the back with a wooden paddle.

While the others were dressing, Adams hit the boy again with such force that the paddle split, according to the other inmates' statements. Then, they said, the following ensued:

Williams shouted, "You can't do this to me. I didn't do anything."

Calls for the Hose.

Adams yelled and swore at the boy. "I'll give you the hose!" He ordered another prisoner, Norman De Vore, to get the hose and he took down the nozzle and a club from a shelf. He advanced toward Williams and began beating him with the club. Williams picked up a chair and tried to protect himself. Adams chased him into the shower room, where the boy slipped and struck his head against a washbowl.

The two grappled on the floor and rolled into the dressing room. There, Laird, who had entered while the fight was in progress, took the nozzle from Adams.

When Williams struck him as they fought, Adams yelled to Laird, "Hit him with the nozzle!"

"Laird then hit Williams on the head twice," Richard said. "Williams stopped fighting and was quiet on the floor. Adams kept hitting him."

Dies of Skull Fracture.

Other boys meanwhile had summoned John Armstrong, chief disciplinary officer. He ordered Williams taken to the hospital, where Dr. Harry Nierenberg said the boy's skull had been fractured. Williams died early yesterday.

De Vore, Edward Burtch, 19, and Robert Lauderback, 18, two other inmates, corroborated Richard's account of the beating. De Vore said he saw Adams take several drinks.

Adams admitted striking Williams with a club. "I told him to sweep up the dressing room," he said. "He refused and hit me with the broom. Then I hit him back." Laird denied hitting the boy.

Williams had been sent to the disciplinary cottage a week ago after he was caught stealing ink. Adams has been at the school since Jan. 16, 1940. Laird was recreational director of the institution until three years ago, when he left. He returned to the school about two months ago.

Reform School Girls Dramatic In Their Revolt Against Authorities

GENEVA, Ill.—Seven girls, shut up in the State Training School for Girls here, were accused this week of starting a riot. Seven girls, between 15 and 19 years of age shut away from the world they had known all their lives, shouted encouragement to three white girls who attempted to escape from the institution into their lost world. Their sympathetic attitude was caught by other girl inmates. All of them revolted against authorities.

When the seven girls were heard by authorities, they defiantly barricaded themselves in a cottage recreation room. Later, Mrs. Elizabeth Lewis, managing officer of the school, called police, saying that there was a riot at the school.

The girls removed the barricade when Sheriff Marcus W. Damisch arrived with deputies. They were forthwith taken to the county jail where they awaited charges by Mrs. Lewis.

Police said that two razor blades and a pen knife were taken from the girls at the jail.

The event was turned into a general "holiday" for the girls of both races. It is said that doors were smashed, furniture upset, and room decorations ruined. Furthermore, girls took advantage of lipstick and powder they'd been denied by raiding the housekeeping matron's room, and beautifying themselves.

The girls—heroines or martyrs, according to interpretation—were: Evelyn Neita, 16, of 6326 Indiana avenue; Katie Okennan, 17, 4717 Champlain avenue; Wilma J. Draughn, 16, 4636 Vincennes avenue; Ossie Jackson, 15, 4609 Champlain avenue; Elizabeth McWilliams, 18, 3202 Vernon avenue Gladys Adams, 17, 1026 Roosevel road and Mary Hicks, 17, 1451 Wes Thirteenth street.

MAY REMOVE WHITES FROM GIRLS SCHOOL

D. C. Institution Expected To Be Turned Over To Negro Administration

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Colored administrative officials will take over the National Training School for Girls at an early date, according to an announcment from the office of the welfare director for the District.

Because 66 of the 72 inmates of the school are colored, the Board of Public Welfare has decided to remove the whites to private homes and turn the entire building and facilities over to Negroes.

At present there are 22 members on the institution staff of whom, 11 are white. Every effort will be made by the board to find spots for these employees and for the director, also white.

The National Training school, a correctional institution, has frequently figured in the news because of difficulties arising from management of the inmates.

Charges of inefficiency and mismanagement were placed against a former director who was removed after a bitter fight.

Frequent disturbances have made the school a sore spot in the District government and agitation has been going on for sometime for a change in the administration of the institution.

A new provision in the District Appropriation Act calling for assignment only of colored wards to the institution and the making of other provisions for white girls precipitated the change.

POLICE JURY URGES NEGRO REFORMATORY

Among the resolutions passed at the annual Louisiana Police Jury Association convention held in Monroe this week was one to construct a state reformatory for negro youths.

This need has been vitally felt on many occasions by Washington parish, as negroes who are under age limits for penitentiary terms cannot be properly disciplined.

Attending the meeting were ten of this parish's twelve police jurors and the secretary, Mrs. Letha Bateman.

Jurors attending were Buster Burkhalter, Curt Crain, Ollie Seal, H. J. Foil, Horace Walters Louis Adams, Y. M. Miley, A. W. Fussell, Wesley Thomas and President Walton J. Richardson.

Conditions In Negro Reformatory Should Disturb Tennesseans

Knoxville Negro leaders are much concerned, and have been for some years, over conditions in the Herbert Domain Reformatory, legally titled the State Training and Agricultural School for Colored Boys.

Well may they be disturbed, and with equal justification the white population of all Tennessee may be concerned, about this institution, which is another, and perhaps the rottenest, spot in Tennessee's institutional system.

Reference to this reformatory, located fifteen miles from Pikeville, in Bledsoe County, is pertinent because Sunday it was announced in Nashville that the superintendent had been fired, but expected to appeal his dismissal to Governor Cooper.

It would seem that an opening having been created by the discharge of the present superintendent, a splendid opportunity is provided for the Governor to initiate a reform in this institution which has been demanded, in the interests of humanitarianism and society generally, since the ill-starred day when it was founded in 1917.

Because none but the thoughtless will feel that the continued operation under state auspices of what is scarcely better than a kindergarten for the training of young Negro criminals is of any more importance to the Negroes of the State than to the white population. Criminality draws no color line and the criminal is the collective problem of the total population.

For the information of the reader, it may be said that the Herbert Domain reformatory is an institution established for the alleged training of Negro boys between eight and eighteen, who are committed from County, Criminal, Juvenile, or United States Courts for any felony, misdemeanor, or delinquency.

Conditions are as dismal, facilities for training are as inadequate, and the ravages of political control in this institution present as dismal a picture as any Nazi concentration camp one would care to make comparison.

An excerpt from the comment of the "Handbook of American Institutions for Delinquent Juveniles" will provide a pretty fair picture of the state-operated institution, and particular attention is directed to the characterization of it as "one of the most negative and ineffectual institutions visited so far in this nation-wide survey."

Says the Osborne report:

"Inadequate appropriations, bad housing, poor location, meager and run-down equipment, the absence of any plan or program, a strictly punitive approach, and a technically untrained staff and administration combine to make the State Training and Agricultural School for Colored Boys one of the most negative and ineffectual institutions visited so far in this nation-wide survey.

"Among the schools visited, Pikeville stands as the most desolate and forbidding. Its lonely, isolated, and inaccessible mountain top location is poorly suited to human habitation, to say nothing of its use as a place for children's training school.

"The geographic factor is one of the many reasons why funds should be made available for Pikeville's immediate discontinuance. Further money appropriated for the upkeep of an institution with such debasing standards will simply represent an additional waste of public funds. Nothing short of false economy or failure on the part of responsible public officials to recognize the importance of proper care of delinquent children has permitted the continuance of Pikeville for so long a period."

Governor Cooper has consistently spurned all suggestions, including those made by The Knoxville Journal in reference to state mental institutions, to remove Tennessee institutions from politics. All of us know that this is a first step toward removing our system from the semi-barbarous methods which have made them a shame and disgrace for as many years back as we can remember.

Behind the present efforts of the Negro leadership in Tennessee to bring about an improvement in the Pikeville reformatory should be aligned the full force of enlightened and humanitarian opinion throughout the state. Governor Cooper could do his administration credit by personally directing the reforms demanded by the situation. We shall await developments, if any, with interest.

Praises Editorial On Pikeville Reformatory

Editor, Knoxville Journal:

I have just noticed in the March 14 issue of The Journal your editorial touching conditions in the Negro reformatory in Pikeville.

I have never visited this institution, but I can say that its malodorous reputation has reached me from several sources. Your editorial is not only timely, but courageous and statesmanlike.

One thing is certain—the citizens of Tennessee ought not to stand for spending state money to support state institutions which, like Pikeville, notwithstanding its ostensible purpose, are actually committed to producing criminals in the state. As a member of the group that is immediately affected by this institution, please accept my thanks.

Editor, Knoxville Journal:

We wish to thank you on behalf of the Ministry of the Negro Churches in Knoxville for the fine editorial you published Friday, March 14, relative to the conditions at the Reformatory for Negro boys in Pikeville. If we had more men of courage as you to speak out against the horrors of that institution, a blot from the name of Tennessee will be removed. Dr. W. O. Baird Is Named Commissioner Of Institutions

Announcement of the appointment of Dr. W. O. Baird, prominent Henderson physician, as State Commissioner of Institutions to succeed Andrew T. (Tip) Taylor, was made by Governor Cooper Saturday.

Dr. Baird will go to Nashville today, but will not assume his new duties until some time next week.

In announcing the appointment, Governor Cooper stressed the fact that Dr. Baird was not an applicant for the political post and that he was "drafted" for the commissionership.

"Dr. Baird is one of the state's best known physicians," the Governor said. "and his excellent business judgment makes him ideally fitted for the commissionership. He is interested solely in giving good service to the public."

Dr. Baird, past president of the Tennessee Medical Association, is a member of the Selective Appeals Board for the Seventh Congressional Destrict. Late in 1939 Governor Cooper made him chairman of a commission to conduct an investigation of state institutions, and one of the committee's chief recommendations was for a tubercular hospital for the State at Nashville.

Dr. Baird and his committee also suggested improvements for the Tennessee School for the blind, the State Industrial School, negro boys' reformatory and negro girls' reformatory, and the reformatory for white girls at Tullahoma.

As State Commissioner of Institutions Dr. Baird will have supervision over the state's 15 institutions, including prisons, reformatories and hospitals, over the building program provided for in the $1,673,000 bond issue of October 1939, and serve as an ex-officio member of the pardon board.

Many Interests

Active in business here as well as in the medical profession, Dr. Baird is a director of the First State Bank, and owner of the Henderson Compress Company.

The position which Dr. Baird is assuming is that made vacant by the resignation of Commissioner Taylor, who is now a candidate for Judge of the newly-created Madison County Court of General Sessions in a special election to be held May 7. Mr. Taylor was named to the institutions position at the beginning of the Cooper administration in 1939.

Since his new position is not a permanent one, Dr. Baird is giving up his extensive medical practice only temporarily, and will continue to maintain his residence here. He expects to spend about five days each week in Nashville.

Honor Marian Anderson At Temple University

18q(1)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. —(ANP)—10,000 graduates and townspeople cheered to the rafters of Convention hall when Marian Anderson, famed and beloved contralto, had been bestowed upon her the honorary degree of doctor of music by Temple university on Thursday.

It was another triumph for the local girl who has truly made good, and who, despite the plaudits of royalty and the heads of nations; despite rise from humble means to rather comfortable income, has remained sweet and warm-hearted.

For hundreds, nay, thousands of the people stretched out in the indoor arena, nothing was quite important as the time when Gertrude D. Peabody, dean of women, presented Miss Anderson, and when, a few minutes later, the pinkish-colored hood was draped about her.

Used Opportunities

After noting that Temple university had invited Miss Anderson to accept the honorary degree even before the Philadelphia (Bok) award was voted her last March, Dean Peabody continued in the citation of Miss Anderson:

"We recognize that good citizenship, through full service, can only be attained through development of the potentialities of the individual. Therefore, we pay special tribute, today, to Miss Anderson's intelligent use of her opportunities for the training and development of her beautiful voice and for the spirit motivating her gracious utilization of the perfected talented.

"We present her to these graduates as a symbol of the philosophy underlying our university. Probably there are no such possibilities of vocal perfection among these young people but there are hundreds of other human abilities—all of them like Miss Anderson's voice—as useless as Ali Hafed's undiscovered diamonds unless accompanied by vision, determination, courage and plenty of hard work. Miss Anderson's struggle and success is a perfect symbol of hard work. cess is a perfect symbol of the Miss Anderson's struggle and suc-Conwell dream." (Dr. Russell Conwell was founder of Temple university).

Voice Recognized

"Her start, like that of Temple itself, grew out of the sympathetic support of a Philadelphia church group. Fom the beginning her voice has been recognized for its sheer beauty. She has won many important competitions. She has sung before world-famous people and with outstanding orchestras. She has received most distinguished recognitions, including a degree from Howard university. Her status among musicians can be appreciated by recalling the fact that Arturo Toscannini once said to her that "A voice like yours is heard only once in a hundred years."

"I am proud, President Beury, to present for the degree of doctor of music, Marian Anderson, artist, citizen, and exemplar of all for which Temple university stands."

At this point, President Charles E. Bury conferred the degree "with all the rights, privileges and opportunities thereto appertaining."

Following the ceremonies, Miss Anderson and her mother, Mrs. Anna Anderson, were luncheon guests of the trustees of the university, together with other recipients of honorary degrees: John J. Shaw, state director, department of health, who received the degree of doctor of public laws; the Rev. William S. Skinner, doctor of divinity; Charles M. A. Stine, vice president; E. I. duPont, Dr. Charles E. Beury, president de Nemours and Company; and of the university who retires with the end of this school year.

MARIAN ANDERSON

Among the Negroes in the graduating classes were: Frank A. Reed (bachelor of sacred theology) who won four prizes in the school of theology, and Louise M. Barns of Chester, and Frances R. Walker, who received his master of arts degrees in education.

Heroic Well Digger Dies In Line Of Duty

Uncle Randolph Won Carnegie Medal In '31 For Rescuing Farmer

ENTERPRISE, Ala.—"Uncle" Randolph Flowers, aged Negro well digger, who won a Carnegie medal in 1931 for his heroic rescue of a young white farmer, Thursday morning came to his death, as he would have preferred, at the bottom of a well.

Flowers was overcome by poison gas shortly after he entered a well in the Mount Pleasant community, and O. V. Arrington, white FSA farmer, narrowly escaped death in attempting the Negro's rescue.

Engaged to repair an abandoned well at the home of a Negro tenant farmer, Flowers succumbed to poison gas a few minutes after he lowered himself into the well. Mr. Arrington, who lived at an adjacent farm, went to the rescue and succeeded in tying a rope around Flowers before he was overcome himself.

As spectators gathered about the scene, a Negro youth named Lampley volunteered to enter the well with a rope around his waist and another for the two gas victims. All were raised to the surface and Arrington was revived by artificial respiration.

In 1931 at great personal peril "Uncle" Randolph entered a caved well near New Brickton and rescued Homer Boutwell, young farmer, who had been buried under an avalanche. He was awarded a Carnegie hero medal and $1,000. He used the money to buy a small farm near Enterprise.

Temple Degree to Contralto

Rochester To Give Dr. Carver Award; Hampton Cites Soprano

Three nationally known institutions of higher learning are paying honor this commencement season to three of the most outstanding men and women of the Negro race who have achieved.

Marian Anderson, renowned contralto, will receive the honorary degree of doctor of music from Temple University on June 12, thus receiving the second great recognition from her home town during the year. She was recently voted the 1940 Philadelphia (Bok) Award.

Carver Gets Degree

Dr. George Washington Carver, the distinguished agricultural chemist of Tuskegee Institute, will be given the honorary degree of doctor of science by the University of Rochester, New York, on June 16. This famous, ex-slave scientist, who has discovered hundreds of usable products in the southern soil and common plants and vegetables, last week was awarded the Variety Club's annual plaque for humanitarian service.

On Tuesday of this week, Hampton Institute honored one of its former students, Miss Dorothy Maynor, noted soprano, who has reached astounding heights in a short time. She was cited on Tuesday by Hampton Institute as "the outstanding" alumnus of 1940, and before an overflow crowd of 4,000, was presented the Hampton Alumni medal by Dr. Malcolm MacLean, president.

Miss Anderson, Philadelphia's gift to the concert and music world, already holds the honorary degree of doctor of music from Howard University. She also has the distinction of having sung for President and Mrs. Roosevelt and before the King and Queen of England. She was voted the Spingarn Medal in 1939.

All Three Outstanding

Dr. Carver, born in Alabama, was once exchanged for a mule, but he lived through this to graduate from the University of Iowa and to be elected to learned societies in Europe and America.

Miss Maynor has been almost a miracle, having made her debut less than two years ago and now listed as one of the best box office attractions in the nation. She began singing in Norfolk, Va., her home city, and later, as a member of the famous Hampton Institute Choir under Dr. R. Nathaniel Dett.

At Hampton, 225 graduates, who received master of arts and bachelor of science degrees and diplomas, 16 certificate winners, and the thousands of visitors in Ogden Hall, saw Miss Maynor honored at the 71st annual commencement exercises. The Alumni Award followed the voting of 54 Hampton alumni chapters thruout the country.

Other Prizes

Dr. MacLean awarded the annual James E. Gregg Prize for the student who has made the most of his opportunities in the trade school to Isaac Bismark Ridley, of New Bern, N. C., who majored in electricity; the James E. Gregg Prize for the student who made the most of her opportunities in home economics was divided between Miss Calander L. Riddick, of Powellsville, N. C., a junior in the Division of Home Econmics, and Miss E. Virginia Robinson, of Newport News, Va., also a junior in the Division of Home Economic. The James E. Gregg prizes were $20 each.

Emanuel A. Bertrand, of the Virgin Islands, a freshman work student in the Division of Business, was awarded the $25.00 first prize in the Armstrong League Essay Contest, and the second prize of $15.00 went to Ako Adjei, of Accra, Gold Coast, British West Africa.

Esther Fairfax King, of Beckley, West Virginia, was awarded the bachelor of science degree in Education with highest honors for having finished with an average over 2.5. Calista Virginia Sheppard, of Norfolk, Va., of the Class of 1940, also was awarded the B.S. in Education with highest honors.

Lillie Mae Williams, of Wilmington, N. C., was awarded the bachelor of science degree in Education with high honors.

Twelve graduates of the Division of Education, four from the Division of Business, and one from the Division of Home Economics were awarded their degrees with honors. These included Serlena Hunt, N. Harlem Lad Wins Scholarship Award To Howard Univ.

John Davis Giles, of 302 West 119th street is walking on air these days, for he received word from Howard University that he made the highest rating of 87 candidates in this area who took the competitive scholarship examination.

Young Giles was born in Wilson, N. C., but was brought to Glen Cove, L. I., when about three years old. Here he went to school till the death of his mother last fall, when he transferred to Benjamin Franklin High School in Harlem. There he is completing the general course majoring in languages. His hobbies are playing the piano, reading and all kinds of sports.

Miss Layle Lane, a teacher at Franklin, was especially happy at Giles' well deserved success, "for the young man," she explained," was reluctant at first to consider the competition."

First Negro Gets Ph. D. From Research

NEW YORK—(ANP)—The Negro to receive a Ph. D. degree from the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science, New School of Social Research is Warren Brown, former newspaperman and now executive secretary of the "March on Washington" committee, who was handed his sheepskin at ceremonies held Tuesday.

This distinction is tremendously heightened when it is known that the graduate faculty, founded in 1933, is comprised of learned scholars who formerly instructed in such world-famed institutions as the University of Berlin, the University of Vienna, and Old Heidelberg, and who are now refugees from war-torn Europe.

It was the original intent to found here just such an institution as Heidelberg with its high scholarship and traditions. Later, however, it was thought best that if German culture was to be disseminated here it should be done through the various schools and universities now established simply by adding these scholars to the faculties of these educational centers. This particular school is the only one that was left intact.

Mr. Brown majored in sociology and his dissertation is entitled "The Negro Press in the United States and Social Change: 1860 to 1880." The subject is not a new one to Mr. Brown for he received his bachelor of science degree in journalism from New York university, having previously done work at the University of Wisconsin. He received his master's in sociology from the New School.

At various times in his career he has been assistant editor of the New York Amsterdam News under William Kelly; assistant editor of the "Christian Plea," house organ of the United Christian Missionary Society of Indianapolis. For six years he was a case supervisor with the home relief bureau of the department of public welfare.

In the preparation of his thesis, Mr. Brown compiled the only complete check-list of Negro newspapers in existence, beginning with 1828 and coming down to the present. This check-list gives such data as the date of first publication, its editor, and the place where exhibits may be seen or copies obtained of all papers. Part of this check-list is being incorporated in the dissertation, but it is the intention of the author to publish it complete under separate cover.

It is understood that Dr. Don Fernando De Los Rios, former ambassador to the United States from loyalist Spain, has become interested in this work and is seeking to have Mr. Brown collaborate with him on a sequel to the text on Negro newspapers. Material dealing with secret orders prior to and during the civil war period, uncovered by Dr. De Los Rios in Cuba more than 15 years ago, indicates that a definite relationship existed between the orders and these publications. He is also said to have in his possession original documents formerly belonging to the late premier of France, George Clemenceau, bearing upon this tie-up. It is this material that would be the basis of the new book.

Mr. Brown, member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, has hopes of teaching. At present, however, every effort is being exerted to make the March on Washington, supported by A. Phillip Randolph, Walter White and other leaders, a success.

Gets First Ph.D. Of University In Exile

10,000 See Marian Anderson Get Doctor Of Music Degree

Temple University President Lauds Her as "Good Citizen"

PHILADELPHIA.—(ANP)— 10,000 graduates and townspeople cheered to the rafters of Convention hall when Marian Anderson, famed and beloved contralto, had bestowed upon her the honorary degree of doctor of music by Temple university on Thursday.

It was another triumph for the local girl who has truly made good, and who, despite the plaudits of royalty and the heads of nations; despite rise from humble means to rather comfortable income, has remained sweet and warm-hearted.

For hundreds, nay, thousands of the people stretched out in the indoor arena, nothing was quite important as the time when Gertrude D. Peabody, dean of women, presented Miss Anderson, and when, a few minutes later the pinkish-colored hood was draped about her.

PAY HER TRIBUTE

After noting that Temple university had invited Miss Anderson to accept the honorary degree even before the Philadelphia (Bok) award was voted her last March, Dean Peabody continued in the citation of Miss Anderson:

"We recognize that good citizenship, through full service, can only be attained through development of the potentialities of the individual. Therefore, we pay special tribute, today, to Miss Anderson's intelligent use of her opportunities for the training and development of her beautiful voice and for the spirit motivating her gracious utilization of the perfected talented.

"We present her to these graduates as a symbol of the philosophy underlying our university. Probably there are no such possibilities of vocal perfection among these young people but there are hundreds of other human abilities—all of them like Miss Anderson's voice—a useless as Ali Hafed's undiscovered diamonds unless accompanied by vision, determination, courage, and plenty of hard work. Miss Anderson's struggle and sucess is a perfect symbol of the Conwell dream." (Dr. Russell Conwell was founder of Temple university).

SUPPORTED BY CHURCH

"Her start, like that of Temple itself grew out of the sympathetic support of a Philadelphia church group. From the beginning her voice has been recognized for its sheer beauty. She has won many important competitions. She has sung before world famous people and with outstanding orchestras. She has received most distinguished recognition, including a degree from Howard university. Her status among musicians can be appreciated by recalling the fact that Arturo Toscanini once said to her that "A voice like yours is heard only once in a hundred years."

"I am proud, President Beury, to present for the degree of doctor of music, Marian Anderson, artist, citizen, and exemplar of all for which Temple university stands."

At this point President Charles E. Beury conferred the degree, "with all the rights, privileges and opportunities thereto appertaining."

GUESTS AT LUNCHEON

Following the ceremonies, Miss Anderson and her mother, Mrs. Anna Anderson, were luncheon guests of the trustees of the univerity, together with other recipients of honorary degrees: John J. Shaw, state director, department of health, who received the degree of doctor of public laws; the Rev. William S. Skinner, doctor of divinity; Charles M. A. Stine, vice-president; E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company; and Dr. Charles E. Beaury, president of the university, who retires with the end of this school year.

Among the Negroes in the graduating classes were: Frank A. Reed (Bachelor of Sacred Theology) who won four prizes in the school of theology, and Louise M. Barnes f Chester, and Frances R. Walker, who received master of arts degrees in education.

EDWARD V. WILLIAMS of Ellsworth, Kas., is shown in the cap and gown he wore Monday night when he received the doctor of medicine degree from the University of Kansas at Lawrence. He is being hailed as the first Negro graduate of the medical school of the university.

For years Negroes took premedical courses on the Lawrence campus, but were barred from the medical school which is located in the Rosedale section of Kansas City, Kas. In the fall of 1937 Williams was the first to enroll. Since that time two other Negro students entered the school.

Williams was a brilliant and studious undergraduate, being awarded the Phi Beta Kappa key in 1935. He is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

Nursemaid To Be Honored By Law For Heroism

MAR 15 1941

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.—(ANP)—In recognition of her heroism in saving her 3-year-old white charge from death or serious injury at the hands of an automobile driver, Estelle Manuell, 20, a nursemaid, will be the guest of honor of the Cumberland County Law Enforcement Officers association at its next meeting March 19. MAR 15 1941

The nursemaid shocked little Maxine Loot down and stood between her and an approaching automobile driven by Herman Capps who disregarded a red light. The car caught the nurse's coat, tearing it and bruising her, but did not strike the child.

Miss Manuell stood modestly in court when the mayor congratulated her and extended to her the invitation to be present at the law officers' meeting. "You not only performed an heroic deed at the risk of your life", the mayor said, "but you have set a shining example for all the other nurses of children in the city." MAR 15 1941

The officers plan to contribute toward an "appropriate present" for Miss Manuell.

A SCULPTOR

FEB 13 1941

Born at Lexington, Ky., April 4, 1874. I attended and graduated from Chandler Normal School at Lexington.

I studied art in New England Conservatory of Music at Boston and Cincinnati Art Academy.

After teaching for a few years I began as demonstrator of anatomy for Dr. J. W. Pryor at the State College of Kentucky. In 1903 I entered the field of modeling. Marshall Bullitt, (attorney) who was solicitor general of the United States used my models in the R. C. Whayne insurance case at Louisville, Kentucky.

I experiment with minature modeling, making models of the old Transylvania University of Lexington, this model was later used by Prof. Burris A. Jenkins on exhibition at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis in 1904.

I made busts of some of the leading peoples of the day: Booker T. Washington, Frederick Douglas, Bishop Richard Allen, P. L. Dunbar, W. C. P. Breckenridge, Gen. Cassius M. Clay, Dr. DuBois, Prof. Kelly Miller, judge M. W. Gibbs, Benjamin Gay, (banker) and others.

I assisted in preparing the government exhibit at the U. S. National Museum for the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, under the direction of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, (anthopologist and curator) in 1915.

I made casts of many odd subjects, such as: The heart, kidneys, spleen and other human organs taken at post-mortems, operations etc. A great deal of my work has been used in schools, Museums and much of it was sold to places like: Field Museum of National History, Chicago, Ward's Museum, Rochester, N. Y. and U. S. Smithsonian Institution, Washington.

FIRST NEGRO GENERAL

"To the men of Color—Soldiers! The president shall be informed of your conduct on this occasion. The representatives of the American nation shall applaud your valor, as your general now praises your ardor. The enemy is near. His sails cover the lake." That was General Andrew Jackson addressing the volunteer soldiers of my Race in 1812.

The Negro soldiers have served with distinction in every war that the United States has waged. Crispus Attucks, at the Boston Massacre, Peter Salem, at the battle of Bunker Hill, or Peter Bigstaff, who with the Tenth Cavalry rode into an ambush at Carrizal, Mexico. Although outnumbered almost ten to one, these black soldiers dismounted in the face of a withering machine fire, deployed, charged the Mexicans, and killed their commander.

There is not a finer piece of soldierly devotion and heroic comradeship in the history of modern warfare than that of Peter Bigstaff. He might have faltered and fled a dozen times, saving his own life and leaving his commander, Lieutenant Henry Adair, to fight alone. But it never seemed to occur to him. He was comrade to the last blow. And finally when Adair fell in his tracks, with his head in water, with superb loyalty the "Black Trooper" turned and went back to the maelstrom of death, leaned his commander against a tree and left him there dead with dignity, only when it was impossible to serve any more. MAR 13 1941

Almost 345,000 soldiers secured through selected draft, four Colored Regiments of the regular Army, and every Negro National Guard unit were mobilized for the World War. And among 200,000 of these soldiers sent to France, a great number received Citations for Individual Gallantry in Action. Four Regiments and a Battalion were awarded the Croix de Guerre by the French military authorities. Up to 1921 there had been selected eight National Guard units stationed at various localities throughout the United States.

I served as 1st Lieutenant in Cuba during the Spanish American War and later in the Phillipine Islands. In 1905 I was detailed by the War Department as instructor in military science and tactics at Wilberforce, U. I was later appointed 1st Lieutenant of the Tenth Cavalry. And very recently I was appointed Brigadier General of the U. S. Army by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Trustees Meet At Tuskegee

MAR 28 1941

TUSKEGEE, ALA., March 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, headed a group of distinguished members arriving today for Friday and Saturday meetings of trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, often a benefactor of nationally-known Tuskegee Institute.

Mrs. Roosevelt came here from Albany, Ga., where she addressed a civic club earlier in the day.

The trustees, following a business session, will visit two rural projects conducted under the Institute's school of education, New Rising Star and Harris Barrett Schools. Later they will go to "The Bucket" Theater on the Russell plantation, where farmer adults will present a play.

MAR 28 1941

The Tuskegee Institute weaving school, opened March 5, and rural health projects, especially those for training of midwives, shop workmen, aviators, and public health workers also will be visited.

Besides Mrs. Roosevelt, Rosenwald trustees arriving today included Dr. O. M. Bousefield, Fred Wale, Dorothy Elvidge, Edwin R. Embree, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Frank.

AUTO MANUFACTURER HAS LONG CONFERENCE WITH TUSKEGEE'S FAMOUS SCIENTIFIC EXPERT

Mr. and Mrs. Ford Inscribe Names in Cement Of Building Which Will be Memorial to 'Peanut Wizard'

MAR 21 1941

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE. —Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, accompanied by Mrs. Ford and a secretary, spent several hours at Tuskegee institute, Tuesday, conferring with Dr. F. D. Patterson, the president, and Dr. George W. Carver, Tuskegee's distinguished scientist.

Mr. Ford arrived at Chehaw in his private car early Tuesday morning, and was met by Dr. Patterson and hurried to Dorothy hall, where Dr. Carver awaited him. After he and Mrs. Ford had signed the official visitors' book, Mr. Ford went to Dr. Carver's quarters, where they were left alone for an hour's conference. Immediately following the conference Mr. Ford participated in the dedication of the George W. Carver museum by the insertion of plastics made of soy beans and soy fibre into a concrete slab.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ford inscribed their name in the cement. The ceremony was witnessed by several institute officials and a group of students. The slab is prominently located in the museum and signifies the deep interest of Mr. Ford and Dr. Carver in the industrial utilization of farm crops.

Mr. Ford visited with Dr. Carver and manifested keen interest in the native fibres that are on exhibit, and the uses that have been made of waste material. He later visited the Tuskegee Institute airport and expressed considerable interest in the progress that the students are making in the program and the future that aviation offers. While at the airport, students in the secondary course of instruction were going through their maneuvers. Several took off and landed, and Mr. Ford commended the students on the efficient manner in which they handled their planes.

Mrs. Ford was shown through the girls' industrial building and the department of home economics and expressed delight in the preparation of the Tuskegee women students for useful and successful living.

After having lunch in Dorothy hall, the distinguished visitors were welcomed and shown the grounds of the Veterans' hospital by Dr. Eugene H. Dibble, manager. Upon the completion of their tour of inspection of the reservation, they were driven to Chehaw, where they boarded their private car for Atlanta.

AN INSURANCE MAN

MAR 20 1941

Almost 200 years ago "The Presbyterian Ministers' Fund" a life insurance company, was first to cast its lot upon the land that lies between the peaceful and the troubled waters that bound the new world—America.

Fortified with the knowledge that their foundation was sound, they proceeded to build and establish prestige. And today, they guide the future of thousands of families over the length and breadth of the world.

MAR 20 1941

There are at present some 50 Negro insurance companies, and about 30 of which are members of the National Negro Insurance Association. They have a total annual income of more than $15,000,000 with over $285,000,000 in force on one and one-half million policies.

During the depression years the companies were seriously affected, but the present outlook is much brighter and a good deal of the losses have been regained. Today—while perhaps it could hardly be thought surprising if the opposite were true—the challenging fact of the matter is that a number of circumstances have made moderately favorable conditions in this field for Negro insurance business men.

I began business in Atlanta, Ga., 1885 as a barber shop owner employing 75 men in three shops. Later I founded the Atlanta Mutual Insurance Company, strictly an industrial insurance business. We soon absorbed eight other companies, making it the largest of its kind in America owned by Negroes.

MAR 20 1941

Afterward, I became president of the Atlanta State Savings Bank, and then the South View Cemetery Association and finally, came into possession of a great deal of properties, including the Gate City Drug Store Inc.

Over the years I concluded that, any business must either meet the test of constantly changing conditions, or submit to revision.

Heroism in Fayetteville

Estelle Manuel, 20-year-old Negro nurse, saved a life at Fayetteville the other day, but with no thanks to Mr. Reckless Driver.

Walking across the street in the uptown business district with her charge, little Maxine Lott, 3, the colored girl saw an automobile crash the red light and zoom rapidly upon them. Quickly she knocked the child down and stood between it and the racing car.

The car caught Estelle's coat, tearing it, and bruising her slightly, but did not strike the child. Herman Capps, 19, the driver of the car, was held by police on reckless driving charges. Court officials have decided to honor the young heroine with "an appropriate present," and the child's mother has promised her a new coat.

These honors are richly deserved by the heroic young woman whose courageous action counteracted the foolhardy and dangerous act of the automobile driver. But it is to be hoped that Fayetteville folk in honoring her will not neglect the duty of impressing the unheroic motorist with the gravity of his offense. Usually, when reckless drivers swoop down upon little children there are no guardian angels, white or black, around to throw their bodies between innocent childhood and roaring death.

Mrs. M. McDavid Completes 27 Yrs. As Teacher

JUN 29 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (By Samuel A. Boyea for ANP) — "...And that the income from this money should be used to encourage moral influence and social refinement which shall promote peace in the land and goodwill among men."

And thus one of yesteryear's "Beautiful people" gave birth to a fund which was solely intended for "that great class of Negroes to whom the smaller rural or community schools are alone available" in the Southern United States community. The donor was Anne T. Jeanes of Philadelphia; the gift of $1,000,000; the time April 22, 1907.

Since that day Negroes have been prominent in the activity of the Jeanes Foundation. Most outstanding contributor of the race to the spirit of the Foundation is reserved, highly esteemed Mrs. Mary Foster McDavid. Now the State Jeanes Teacher and supervisor of the 41 county Jeanes teachers in Alabama, Mrs. David has completed 27 years' service with the foundation. She was born in Union, S. C., and moved of an early age with her parents to Spartanburg, where she attended the public rural schools of Spartanburg county. After completing her elementary courses, she entered school at Tuskegee institute and completed her Normal and Industrial courses during Booker T. Washington's administration. Since completing her normal courses, she has attended school at Kansas State college, State college of South Carolina, attended one term at Hampton institute on a fellowship granted by the General Education Board and one term at Tuskegee on a scholarship granted by the Southern Education foundation. There she earned her bachelor's degree under Dr. Patterson's administration.

She has spent the most active years of her life as a Jeanes teacher, but has also found time to fulfill the office of president of the National Congress of Colored Parents and Teachers.

After a few minutes' talk with Mrs. McDavid one realizes how deep is her interest in her life work. She is very grateful for the opportunity that the donor his given to "that great class of Negroes—the men and women of my race."

Recalling the work with which she has been associated, Mrs. McDavid said:

"Through the years, Jeanes teachers of Alabama have been untiring in their efforts to encourage local committees and county school authorities to provide better school houses for rural Negro children—first, through the aid of Julius Rosenwald fund, and in recent years, through the aid of PWA, WPA, and NYA building programs. They have assisted teachers in the solution of their classroom problems by school visitation and by individual, group and county-wide conferences. They have helped in problems of school attendance, general school improvement, school ground improvement and beautification, health and other matters tending to general community betterment.

"They have improved the teaching service by encouraging classroom teachers to increase their efficiency. They have brought about a better home-school, parent teacher relationship through parent-teacher organizations, parent-study groups, and parent teacher leadership short courses in higher institutions of learning. Morevoer it may be truthfully said, that Jeanes teachers in American and Alabama have been influential factors in the extension of elementary school terms for Negro children from four and one half to seven months."

The greatest that could be said for the Jeanes teachers of Alabama is that they have inspired boys and girls in the most remote rural districts to remain in school and complete their elementary courses; th[illegible] have been instrumental [illegible]iding junior and senic[illegible]school privileges throu[illegible]nsolidation of schools and t[illegible]rtation of pupils; and they hav[illegible]tempted to show the general pu[illegible]ic the fine points in the Negro boy and girl through country-wide play days; county district and state songfests; state oratorical contests, and state academic meets—through these media, the people of Alabama have been brought to appreciate such traits as scholarship, musical ability, manual skills, sportsmanship, social graces, and pleasing personalities, as found in the Negro youth of Alabama.

"Perhaps in the wave of the future," confessed Mrs. McDavid, "there will be no place for philanthropy. This much can be said, judging from the work of the Jeanes foundation, that a little thing like a beautiful sentiment can lead to great practical achievement if the spirit of that sentiment is honored and respected."

Mrs. McDavid is now writing the first draft of her autobiography, entitled "We, the Jeanes Teachers."

F. H. Henderson Honored By Fort Valley State College

F. H. Henderson, Sr., grand old man of Cuthbert colored education, was the recipient of a distinguished service award from the Fort Valley State College, well-known colored institution, at Fort Valley Tuesday during impresive exercises.

Prof. Henderson, now past 80, has served Cuthbert's colored schools as a principal for 61 years, coming here as a teacher in 1880. Thousands of colored men and women, now distributed over a wide area, received their education in his class room and, without exception, are wiser and happier citizens for his instruction and influence.

Throughout his 61 years of service here, Prof. Henderson has enjoyed the high esteem of the Cuthbert white people and largely through this cordial feeling they gave their aid years ago in floating the first bond issue ever voted in the South for the erection of a Negro school.

Fletcher Henderson, Jr., the professor's distinguished son, who disregarded his father's earliest wishes that he interest himself musically in the classic and religious and become famous as the country's most talented dance music arranger and as a band leader, gave a special radio broadcast this week in honor of his father's Fort Valley College honor.

BLACK MAN'S HEART

The fine phrase of Henry Grady is needed to accord just due to the great act of two black men who sustained burns and injuries in rousing the otherwise doomed residents of the flame-swept apartment that was at 1809 Pennsylvania. Some are living because of the alert courage of the two passing Negroes, Howard McIntosh and Fred H. Higgins.

Henry Grady would have understood these two men—the Henry Grady who, in his great speeches on the New South and the race problem, remembered to thank God for a mother safe in her sanctuary because her faithful Negroes "put a black man's loyalty between her and danger." Or the Grady who caught that other vision of his father stricken in battle and the "slave struggling through the smoke, winding his black arms about the fallen form, reckless of lurking death."

There was no call of duty for Howard McIntosh and Fred Higgins. They could have gone on but for that stern sense of human responsibility in the heart that ignores danger and reaches out to save.

Because of human intolerance and wrong headedness we despair of settlement of the race problem. It is always capable of settlement if we balance accurately human values. It is as possible here in Dallas as Henry Grady saw it possible in the New South. The fine act of a McIntosh and a Higgins attests to that.—Dallas Morning News.

CHICAGO X-RAY EXPERT EARNS HIGH RANKING IN RADIOLOGY

Provident Hospital Specialist Earned Rating At Recent Meeting Of A. M. A.

CHICAGO, July 17 (ANP)—Dr. Benjamin W. Anthony, head of the department of roentgenology at Provident hospital, has just been notified that he will be awarded the highest earned honor in his specialty, a certificate by the American Board of Radiology.

Examinations for a specialty rating were taken by Dr. Anthony when the American Medical Association held its annual convention in Cleveland a few weeks ago. He is one of the few Negroes in America to receive this coveted honor and one of the 17 connected with Provident, either as an interne or a staff member, to receive a certificate from one of the specialty boards.

Born in Columbus, Miss., Dr. Anthony received his A. B. degree from Talladega in 1922 before entering the University of Chicago where he took his B. S. in 1924. He then entered medical school and finished Rush in 1927 after winning acclaim as an outstanding student. Passing the Cook County hospital examination for an internship, he trained there 18 months and then engaged in general practice before taking post-graduate work at Chicago U. In radiology in 1929 under a Rockefeller foundation grant.

STUDIED ABROAD

After serving three and a half years as resident house officer in radiology at Billings hospital of Chicago U., he was named to Provident as radiologist when its present buildings were [illegible] in 1933. For six months he was also engaged in that work at old Provident.

More recently Dr. Anthony studied X-ray and radium thereapy under a group of internationally famous specialists, among them Dr. Henri Coutard of the Curie Institute, Paris; Dr. Max Cutler and Sir G. Lenthal Cheatle of London. This special work took place at the Chicago Tumor Institute.

His certificate shows him an outstanding specialist in roentgenology and all its branches, including radium thereapy.

WHO AM I?

AUG 28 1941

Henry N. Wilcots

Of the many things that I am sure, the most outstanding is that the problem of the twentieth century is the problem of the colorline.

It seems along ways back on that winter-day in a wee wooden schoolhouse in the hills of New England, where the dark Housatonic winds swept between Hoosac and Toghkanic to the sea, that a ten cent visiting card suddenly brought to my realization that I was different from the others. AUG 28 1941

Slowly, but steadily, in the following years a vision began to take form and replace the dreams of my boyhood days.

After appeasing an intellectual hunger at Fisk, Harvard and even the University of Berlin after, again the smoulderingembers had been fanned into news fires from atrocious crimes against my people I dreamed yet another dream, of an organization so effective and so powerful that when discrimination and injustice touched on Negro, it would work ceaselessly to make Americans know that so-called "Negro Problems" is simple one phase of the vast problem of the democracies and that those who wish freedom and justice for their country must also wish it for every black man in the world.

Previous to 1750, while the fire of African freedom still burned in the viens of the slaves, there was an all leadership or an attempted leadership with but one motive, revolt and revenge. It was tyified in the Maroons, the Danish Blacks and Cato of Stono.

But, today, my journey is done, and behind me lay hill and dale, and life and death. How shall man measure progress there where the dark-faced Josie lies? How hard a thing is life and love and strife and failure—is it the twilight of nightfall or the flush of some faint dawning day—or is it "DUSK OF DAWN."

Who Am I?
Answer: W. E. Burghardt DuBois.

Rosenwald Fund Opens Offer For '42 Scholarships

OCT 12 1941

Applications To Be Received Until January 5, 1942

CHICAGO—(A N P)—Receipt of applications for 1942 Julius Rosenwald fund fellowships began last week, according to William C. Haygood, director for fellowships. The fund offers fellowships under two categories; to Negroes, and to white southerners who wish to work on some problem distinctive to the south and who expect to make their careers in the south. Applications will be received until Jan. 5, 1942.

Both types of felowships are intended to provide opportunities for special experience or advance study to individuals who have already given evidence of exceptional ability and who wish to prepare themselves further. The fellowships are not restricted to any special subject or activity, being open to scholars, scientists, and persons now engaged in or who plan to go into the fine arts, creative writing or journalism, education, agriculture, business or public service.

The requirements for receiving a fellowship are that applicants be between the ages of 22 and 35, although the committee will consider very exceptional cases on their merits; that completion of general college course or general professional course is made before filing application, or evidence is given of maturity and preparation which may be regarded as the equivalent of a general education of at least collegiate standard.

Students of law, medicine, or the ministry can be considered only for advanced work beyond the initial professional degree. The fellowships are open to men and women.

The terms of the fellowships will normally be one year, with renewals being considered only in exceptional cases. The award in each case will be determined on the basis of expected expenses involved and of all other factors which enter into the given application, including the length of time proposed. It is held that awards will average $1,500 for a full year's work.

Unless candidates show an exceptional record of accomplishments and have definite plans for further preparation for distinctive service, they need not apply for the application. The committee on fellowships requires full information about the personal history of the applicants, their education, and experience, and a definite statement of the proposed study or investigation, all of which must be submitted upon a prescribed form furnished by the fellowship committee.

Removal And Unveiling Of The Frederick Douglass Memorial Monument

SEPT 4, 1941, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

OCT 30 1941

By JAMES EDW. MASON

My dear Editor:

I delayed in writing you these lines because I supposed that one of the correspondents would have sent a copy of the important event to the Star of Zion before now.

I was intimately acquainted for years with the imortal Frederick Douglass. He was an active member of the A. M. E. Zion Church in New Bedford, Conn., a local preacher, and superintendent of the Sunday School. Because of unexpected occurrences and local affairs, he suddenly departed from New England for Europe, and the American Eagle of slavery screamed as he saw his prey in the mane of the British lion. His impressive personality, and marvelous eloquence aroused thousands wherever he journeyed in England, and the British Isles.

Returning to America he made Rochester his habitat, and retained membership in the Zion A. M. E. Church, Favor Street. He used the basement of the Church as a place for his printing press, and the publishing of the "North Star of Liberty," through which he sent forth his mighty philippics, that echoed around the world. I contacted him subsequently on many occasions, and in several important public functions.

By the request of the Board of Bishops, I was the guest speaker with Frederick Douglass at the Mass Meeting of the Zion Church, Washington, D. C., during the early nineties, preparatory to the one hundredth anniversary of the Zion Methodist denomination in New York City. It was an unusual gathering of the leaders and we were received cordially by the Deputy of the District of Columbia. In his eloquent address, Frederick Dougless, among other things said, "What I am is largely in consequence of the impression made upon me during the early years of my activities as a member of the A. M. E. Zion Church in New Bedford, Conn.

It was my duty to make the introductory address when he delivered his last public lecture on "John Brown," in the County Lecture Course at Freeville, N. Y. The occassion was memorable, and he had a representative audience. I am secretary and lecturer of the Monument Committee nearly 50 years ago when Mr. J. W. Thompson first contemplated the Douglass Monument erection.

Recently lecturing for Livingstone College near Rochester, I was informed of the removal of the monument from the unsightly location, resultant from the rapid growth of the city, and increasing business interests. I was asked my opinion relative to the removal; made a special visit, and I was greatly pleased with the decision of the city council and committee.

The park is adjoining the famous Lilac Grove visited annually by tens of thousands of admiring tourist from all parts of the United States. Highland Park is one of the most beautiful in the country, and the location of the monument is in close proximity to the new Open-air Ampitheatre erected by the city at a cost of nearly forty thousand dollars.

Frederick Douglass like the eloquent magnetic orator, Dr. Joseph C. Price, was larger than any one denomination, and belonged to all nations regardless of color. It was highly appropriate therefore that the Rev. Dr. James E. Rose was elected by the Mayor and City Council as chairman and General Manager. Dr. Rose is the leading colored clergyman in the city of Rochester, and one of the best trained men of Afro-American descent; graduating with special honors from Colgate University, and the Baptist Theological Seminary. Representing the largest colored religious organization in the city, and as pastor of his present Baptist Church for over twenty years, he has the confidence of the public generally, and secured the cooperation of the white citizenry, as well as the colored organizations in the state.

The re-dedicatory exercises of the Frederick Douglass Monument on the new site in Highland Park were especially. interesting. The black-frocked dignataries of the Colored International Masonry and the red-turbaned Shriners were present from their celebration in Buffalo. They re-enacted in Rochester a scene of years ago in one of the most unusual ceremonies of the city's history. The granite slab supporting the statue of Frederick Douglass, the great abolitionist, and the placing of the corner stone by the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons under the leadership of the Past Grand Master was especially impressive.

Among those who took part in the special exercises and representative of the original one at Central Ave., 42 years ago were, John G. Lee, Historian of the Grand Lodge; Leon J. Dubois, Chaplain; William H. Stockton. John W. Wesley Dobbs, Grand Master of the Georgia Grand Lodge in his eloquent address closing the ceremonies, said: "Frederick Douglass possessed such a burning desire for freedom that not even slavery could hold him. He dedicated his life to the proposition that all men are created equal."

Also participating were: Imperial Potentate Raymond E. Jackson of the Ancient Egyptian Arabian Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, who led the musicians. Prominent among the guests were: Grand Master William W. Stringe of Miss.; Past Grand Master Lewis W. Ray of Washington, D. C.; G. O. Carrington of Delaware; J. E. Dixon, South Carolina Grand Secretary; Past Grand Master Edgar Smith of Washington, D. C. and Shriners D. L. Oliver of Los Angeles; W. A. Holloway of Atlanta; Dr. John Moore of Flint, Mich., and Joseph Craford of Atlanta, Ga.

The week following these exercises over three thousand of Rochester citizens watched the shroud slipped from the bronze image of Frederick Douglass to whom the city dedicated the statue nearly a half century after the death of the eminent statesman. The unveiling of the monument on its new and lofty site in Highland Park was the prelude to many tributes.

The civic leaders included Mayor Samuel R. Dicker, Frank W. Gannett, the great newspaper representative; Walter White of New York, Secretary of the NAACP and J. Finley Wilson of New York, Grand Ruler of the Negro Elks of the World, who extoled the influence of Douglass upon the course of American history and mankind. Rev. David Rhim Williams, D.D., minister of the Unitarian Church, and successor to the Rev. P. C. Gannett, who conducted the last rites of Frederick Douglass, described the Negro leader "as a true prophet of the Living God, and added that thats the spirit that will save America and save the world."

The Rev. James E. Rose, Chairman of the celebration gave a vivid description of the Rev. F. A. Thompson, who labored faithfully to make the monument a possibility. Grand Ruler Wilson of the Elks in the ending of his animated address said, "America is willing to spend millions for Great Britian and China to aid in the suppression of the World War but has overlooked in spending some millions in giving democracy to the black man in Louisiana, Alabama and Maryland, where the late Frederick Douglass fought to be free."

The music by the two great bands, singing by a chorus of over 50 interracial voices, led by the noted musician and director, Dr. Nathaniel Dett, was inspiring and uplifting. The selection above all others thrilling attending thousands, was composed one night by the gifted and noted evangelist singer, Rev. Alonzo Scott, officiating pastor at the Douglass A. M. E. Zion Church, the week preceding the first celebration.

The chorus is as follows:

"His name shall live forever,
For honor wrote it high;
The memory of his greatness
Shall never, never die."

Miss Ann Nesbit, a native of North Carolina, delighted all with her harp. The surprise of the day was the unusual skill and manipulation of the two finely trained drum corps, one of 30 pieces, consisting of boys and young men of the city as they marched over the long route, directed by Louis Scott.

In the evening a program at the Douglass A. M. E. Zion Church, Favor Street, Rev. J. B. Brown, pastor, once the underground railroad station during the dark and starless nights of slavery, was held in honor of the eminent statesman. A representative mixed audience was present and an excellent program presented.

Mr. Haley Douglass, Washington, D. C. grandson of the celebrated abolitionist, delivered an address of unusual interest and illumination. He brought to his hearers convincingly the important facts that we were not only in a world war affecting all nationalities, but the condition and position of Negroes especially. It was the duty of the colored race throughout all lands to become more united, especially in America, and awaken to the immediate necessity of their privileges and rights in the greatest democracy beneath the sun.

Mr. White, the secretary of the N. A.A.C.P., was present and spoke again with unusual power and eloquence. He emphasized the danger of indifference on the part of our racial group of the existing order of public affairs, and to attain what belongs to our group in the state and in the nation, the race must awake.

By the generosity of Rev. William T. Rives, a musical recital was presented by Miss M. Holland of Auburn, N.Y., a gifted rising star soprano singer who surprised and pleased the audience greatly. Mr. William Warfield, Rochester, who recently captured a scholarship in competition with a large number of singers in the west, and who is now a student of great promise at the Eastman School of Music was encored.

Timely remarks were made by the Editor of the Voice, Mr. Coles, and concluding statements by the writer.

Thus ended the historic day, as the shades of evening enfolded thousands of rejoicing citizens, visitors, and night pinned it with a star.

Only Race Graduate of Missionary Institute

By C. M. LONG, D.D.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—A new installment to a very long story was written here recently when Miss Jettee Lois Anderson, hard-working missionary student who refused to become discouraged, was graduated from the Christian and Missionary Alliance's Missionary Training Institute at Nyack-on-Hudson, N. Y.

JUN 28 1941

When Miss Anderson, only Negro among a class of 125, received her diploma she was then able to realize fully one of her most burning ambitions—to fit herself for able service on the mission fields.

Her lot has not been an easy one but some phases of her life are interesting if unfortunate in detail. Left an orphan child by fate, she was carried by some German people to live with them in the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia. These German people remained her guardians for a number of years.

FIRST STEPS TO SUCCESS

Later Jettee found her way to the little town of Charlottesville, Va., famous today as the home of two members of the presidential family and also as the site of the University of Virginia. Miss Anderson had made a profession of her faith before her arrival in Charlottesville.

However, she soon made her way to the First Baptist Church, where this writer was pastoring. Miss Anderson decided to cast her lot with the people of that church.

JUN 28 1941

Shortly afterward she came in contact with the late Dr. A. A. Graham, who was then pastoring in Phoebus, Va. Dr. Graham was instrumental in securing for Miss Anderson an entrance to boarding school. Even here she found that she had to work and fight discouragement in order to gain her end.

Years later in the city of New York she found employment which ultimately enabled her to enroll at the Nyack school, the largest of its kind in the United States. Often she changed jobs when a new one promised more rapid advancement.

Sears, Roebuck Offers $11,600 In Scholarships

ALCORN, Miss.—(ANP)—Sears, Roebuck and company will make available to several Negro colleges $11,600 to be awarded to worthy farm boys entering the freshman college class next year to receive training in agriculture.

In a letter to President W. H. Bell, chairman, executive committee, Conference Presidents of Negro Land Grant colleges, dated May 21, among other things, J. C. Haynes, southern public relations department at Sears and Roebuck, Atlanta, stated "The idea in making these scholarships available is to provide a lift over the hill for a few outstanding farm boys who could not otherwise go to college." The assumption is that the boys will be interested in farming as a career."

BOWDOIN GRAD WINS ORATION CONTEST PRIZE

David W. Daly Dickson Is 12th Negro To Finish From Institution

BRUNSWICK, Me.—At the 136th commencement of Bowdoin college here, June 21, David Watson Daly Dickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Dickerson of Portland, Maine, was graduated climaxing a brilliant undergraduate career.

JUL 5 1941

Dickson's commencement speech, "The Liberal Arts College Today," won the Goodwin commencement prize for the best undergraduate commencement oration.

Standing first in a class of one hundred forty-one students, and receiving an A.B. degree, summa cum laude, with high honors in English, Dickson became the twelfth Negro to graduate from Bowdoin in the past one hundred and forty-seven years.

After winning a competitive State of Maine scholarship, Dickson entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1937. His name appeared on the dean's list for four years, and he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic society, in his junior year, at which time he was awarded the Goodwin Phi Beta Kappa prize.

He was a member of the debating council which he served as manager and president. He played in the college band, and was sports managing editor of the college weekly, the "Orient," during his third year. In his senior year, Dickson was president of the Classical club, and co-chairman of the Red Cross Drive committee.

Dickson received the grade of "A" in all subjects throughout his four college years, thus establishing a record only once before duplicated in the history of the college.

He is the second member of his family to be elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and the third of his family to attend Bowdoin, a small New England college, all of whose Negro graduates have been outstanding students.

Although the number of Negro students who have attended Bowdoin is small, this college has been closely associated with Negro education. One of the first Negroes to be graduated from an American college, graduated from Bowdoin in 1928, and General Otis O. Howard, founder of Howard university, Washington, D.C., was a Bowdoin graduate.

A grant from the Julius Rosenwald fund and a scholarship from Harvard university, will make it possible for Dickson to continue his studies in English at the graduate school of that institution next year.

Peters Wins One First And A Third Place In Typing Contest

Woman with Electric Machine Comes out First with 149 Words

CHICAGO — (ANP)—A world's championship on portable typewriters with a new record of 115 net words per minute, and third in the contest on standard machines were won by Cortez W. Peters at the Sherman Hotel Friday night. It was the first world championship contest since 1937.

Three contestants broke the world record for the professional one hour event on standard machines. It was believed the contest would be between Peters and Albert Tangora, white, who for many years have been recognized as the world's fastest, but an upset occurred when Miss Margaret Hanna, white, using an all-electric machine established a new record of 149 net words per minute for the hour writing.

Many observers, however believed Miss Hanna did not provide fair competition for the hand-operated machines used by Peters and Tangora. With the electric machine the carriage return is automatic, the shifting for capitals is automatic, a light shows when the end of a line and the end of a page are reached.

On the hand machine all such operations are manual and consume both time and energy. A feather's touch will operate the sensitive electric machine but a half inch stroke is necessary for the hand model.

JUL 2 1941

The previous record, set on a hand mechine, was 141 words per minute by Tangora. At that time Peters' mark was 138. This year Tangora raised his speed to 142 while Peters was a fraction better than 141, thus causing all three winners to break the old mark.

LEVY WILL PROVIDES FOR RACE

HOUSTON, July 24—In the will of the late Leon Levy, Houston businessman, a provision of the annual award of a medal for Negro high school students was made. The medal, which will be known as the Julius Levy Medal, will be given to the most outstanding Negro student for distinction in oratorical ability. The will after making bequests and annuities to members of the family and various charities, creates a trust fund of the Leon Levy's interest in the undivided estate of his parents, Jacob and Regina Levy. This trust fund is to be known as the Jacob and Regina Levy Trust Fund. The income from this trust fund is to be invested until the fund amounts to $500[illegible]. Thereafter the income from the trust is to be divided equally and used for relief of white and Negro families in distress. The estate is estimated at more than $75,000, and Jonas Levy, a brother of the late Leon Levy, has been named executive without bond. Mr. Levy died June 28. The will also provided for a new city park.

Swingmaster, Dad Honored At Fort Valley

[Special to The Telegraph]

FORT VALLEY, July 29—Fletcher Henderson Jr., "swung it" with "Georgia On My Mind" tonight to provide a rhythmatic climax to a day that saw his father presented a scroll in recognition of 61 years of fruitful effort for the Cuthbert school he heads. The band leader's music was broadcast through 150 stations of the Mutual network from the college this afternoon.

The Negro orchestra leader, himself winner of the golden trophy annually awarded the number one music arranger, barely got to Fort Valley State College in time to participate, and as he thundered on the 400-mile auto-trip for the ceremony, he said "Georgia on My Mind" was just that.

The scroll, bearing names of 800 teachers, was presented Professor Henderson by Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of the college, and the recipient expressed appreciation feelingly. The son said he could "not command words to express my appreciation," and later was at the piano as his 14-piece orchestra rendered his father's favorite, "Humoresque."

Some of the outstanding numbers of the night concert at the college were "Russian Lullaby" and "St. Louis Blues," marking the "swing" phase which followed the renditions of the classics, the field to which his father had vainly attempted to confine his son years ago.

Henderson, Veteran Educator To Receive Ft. Valley Award

Prof. Fletcher Henderson, Sr., principal at Cuthbert, Ga., for 61 years, will receive the second annual Fort Valley State award at 4 p.m. today in the chapel of the Fort Valley State College, for distinguished service for the education of Negro children in Georgia. It is expected that hundreds of educators, friends and admirers of the veteran educator will be present for the ceremonies.

The annual award scroll that will be presented Prof. Henderson, will include the names of more than one thousand teachers of the state, enrolled during the two terms of the 1941 summer session.

Climaxing the honor to be paid Prof. Henderson will be the concert and dance program, featuring Fletcher Henderson Jr., and his orchestra, composed of 14 artists playing the surging, brilliant and rahpthmic arrangements that have made this dynamic director one of the greatest names in modern music. For the second successive year Fletcher Henderson has won the nation's gold trophy, awarded annually to the outstanding arranger in all America.

Those who expect to share in this occasion are again reminded that in consistent with the nature of this celebration, no admissions will be sold at the door. Only subscribing patrons in advance, who wish to help defray transportation costs, will be admitted. Maconites who have not already mailed their money to L. R. Bywaters, are urged to subscribe by high noon today at the Macon Telegraph and News [colored department], 558 New street. If you will have guests, they too must be listed as patrons in advance and the patron fee of 55 cents paid for them. James O. Slade is chairman of the Henderson Award dance. A motorcade from Atlanta and other middle Georgia towns will be made to the campus of Fort Valley today.

Found Juliette Derricotte Scholarship Fund At Fisk

It has just been announced that a Juliette Derricotte scholarship fund of $5,000 has been established at Fisk University as a memorial to the late Juliette Derricotte by Mrs. Florence Al[illegible] Roblee and Mrs. Louise [illegible] McCarthy, who is Mrs. Roblee's daughter. Both Mrs. Roblee and Mrs. McCarthy are members of the Young Women's Christian Association and the former is also a member of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., New York.

As president of the local Y. W. C. A., Mrs. McCarthy played a leading part in securing the camp for the Wheatley Branch and said that she felt that no better name could be given it than Camp Derricotte.

At the time of her death Miss Derricotte was Dean of Women at Fisk University and the scholarship in her honor is to be awarded to a woman student, preferrably from St. Louis, who is in her junior or senior year and is preparing for Christian social work.

Atlantic City Annual Award Voted To Two

C.M. Cain, Housing Manager, And Athlete Are Honored

ATLANTIC CITY—At a meeting of the Atlantic City Board of Trade, last Wednesday, the executive committee and the Board of Trade voted the annual awards to one outstanding athlete and one outstanding adult citizen.

The athletic award was won by William Nichols, outstanding football player and New Jersey All-State Guard, who received a bid for a scholarship at the University of Georgia. Nichols refused because of the Jim Crow laws of Georgia.

C. M. Cain, manager of the Federal Housing project, was given the outstanding citizens award for meritorious work done in housing and the field of social science.

Mr. Cain is a graduate of Lincoln University and was given the honorary degree last year of Doctor of Humane Letters by the University.

White Boy Rescues Pal From Swimming Pond

CHURCH ROAD, Va.—(ANP)—Many things happen in the south which seem paradoxical to folk in other sections who seem not to realize that mistreatment can be the exception rather than the rule in most places. For example, last week a number of boys were swimming in Hobb's pond, the best swimming hole in the vicinity. There were both colored and white boys cooling off in the pond, most of them between ages of nine and 15.

Bossie Peace, 15, a colored boy who lived in the nearby community of Wilson, stepped into a hole and went down. It was late afternoon and most of the boys had gone, but the spot was dangerous and those boys who remained watched rather fearfully. Suddenly Bobbie Springston, a nine-year old white boy whose parents are prominent in Dinwiddie County, flashed through the water and caught Bossie as he was going down the third time. The colored boy was too large for Bobbie to handle easily but he struggled with him until he got close enough to the bank for the others to grab him and give first aid.

"Gosh! I had to do it," Bobbie said when praised. "Nobody else would even try, it looked like."

Nation Polled To Find 12 Leaders Of '40

JAN 25 1941

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—The nation-wide poll to decide the "American Negroes of distinguished achievement, 1940" is nearing completion. This annual poll is being conducted by the Schomburg Collection of Negro literature of the New York Public Library. The results will be announced over a national hook-up of the Columbia Broadcasting System and through the press during Negro History Week.

The purpose of this survey is to discover the twelve outstanding Negroes (or organizations) of the past year in terms of sheer merit, courage and social value to the race and to humanity. Selections will be made irrespective of class, creed or location. Thus, a labor leader from Texas stands on an equal plane with the New York artist.

At the same time the six white persons or institutions which have done the most for the improvement of race relations and the advancement of the Negro as a FULL MAN during the past year will be announced.

Receives Master's Degree

RAYMOND E. HARDIMOND

At the commencement exercises of DePaul University February 4th, Raymond Elliott Hardimond of St. Louis will be awarded his Master's Degree, marking the first time that a Negro has received such an honor from that institution. Hardimond, whose thesis is "Methods of Administering Visual Aids in Education," is a graduate of Sumner High School here and is an instructor in the Chicago public school system. Mrs. E. A. McKinney, 4110 West Belle place, and W. H. Mitchell, 4005 Page boulevard, are his cousins.

Spingarn Gold Medal Is Awarded To Author Of Book-Of-Month

Richard Wright, 32-year-old author of "Native Son" and "Uncle Tom's Children," is the twenty-sixth recipient of the Spingarn Gold Medal—awarded annually to the American Negro who made the highest achievement during the preceding year.

Wright's book, "Native Son," a book-of-the-month for March, 1940, sold more than 215,000 copies within the first week of publication and during a period of six weeks went beyond the 250,000 sales.

Wright, a native of Mississippi, wrote the book in Brooklyn after receiving a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1939. The medal will be presented to him at the annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to be held in Houston in June.

The Spingarn medal award was instituted by the late Joel E. Spingarn, who was formerly president of the N. A. A. C. P., to "call the attention of the American people to the existence of distinguished merit and achievement among American Negroes, to serve as a reward for such achievement and as a stimulus to the ambition of colored youth."

Dr. Bond Honored for Brilliant Research

Chicago. MAR 15 1941

Dr. Horace M. Bond
Honored For Research

MAR 15 1941

Dr. Bond's work on Negro Education In Alabama, has been misunderstood; and only a few persons beyond the circle of seroius scholars have learned what it is about. When they look at the title, they think that Dr. Bond has given the usual account of the rise and progress of the schools in Alabama and of their founders. The book is not concerned with such a simple or elementary account.

By CARTER G. WOODSON

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The reward of national recognition has come to Dr. Horace Mann Bond, distinguished scholar and educator and president of Fort Valley College in Georgia, because of his unusual scholarship in the production of his recent work Negro Education in Alabama.

This book has been crowned with the stamp of excellence by the American Educational Research Association, a department of the National Education Association of the United States, and selected by the committee of awards as one of the six best pieces of research in the field of education for the three years from 1936-1939.

OTHER HONORED

The other scholars of the country honored along with Dr. Bond are Dr. H. M. Bell of the American Youth Commission, Professor Guy T. Bushwell of the University of Chicago, Professor Leslie L. Chisholm of Columbia University, Professor Fletcher Harper Swift of the University of California, and Professor L. L. Thurstone of the University of Chicago. MAR 15 1941

Dr. Bond has given brief treatment to such serious matters as the education of the Negro under the peculiar institution of slavery, the social forces of the reconstruction period, the effect of politics of that time on the system, and its objective and content.

OF HIGH ORDER

The consensus of opinion is that it is of such a high order that it marks an epoch in educational research in the United States. This author has lifted the task of the study of education above the level of merely compiling the enrollment, atendance, the number of graduates, and the cost of maintaining schools.

Through his book we see education as a force in the lives of the people and the various factors which have determined what that education should be.

Dr. Bond is now serving as president of Fort Valley College in Georgia, as the successor of the late H. A. Hunt. Because of the high estimate of Dr. Bond's ability, foundations are now giving considerable sums for the larger development of that institution.

Scholarship to Margaret Carter

APR 12 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Miss Margaret Isabelle Carter, assistant to the dean of women, and instructor in psychology at Fisk University, has received one of the six unrestricted fellowships awarded by the American Association of University Women for graduate study during the year 1941-1942.

She plans to continue her psychological studies at Radcliff College. APR 12 1941

Miss Carter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ulysses T. Carter of Providence, R.I. She was graduated from Brown University in 1937, summa cum laude, in psychology. She received membership in Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi (National Honorary Society) in the junior year. In 1937 she was granted the Anne Crosby Emery Alumnae Fellowship from Brown University, which is awarded annually to the highest ranking woman student in the senior class.

As an undergraduate student she was interested in world affairs and an active member of the campus International Relations Club which she served as vice-president during her junior year.

Columbia Graduate

During the school year of 1937-1938 she combined graduate study and teaching at Atlanta University, from which institution she holds the degree of master of arts. The following year she studied at Columbia University as one of the four President's University Scholars, receiving the degree of master of arts in June.

She holds membership in the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority and the National Association of College Women, and is an associate member in the American Psychological Association.

Seeks Doctorate

The Margaret Snell Fellowship from the American Association of University Women will enable her to complete residence requirements for the doctorate in psychology.

CARNEGIE MEDAL

PITTSBURGH—Only one of the fifty-seven awards of medals for acts of heroism presented by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission this year went to a colored person, according to the current report of the organization.

Norman J. Masslieno, 26, of Panama City, Fla., who saved W. George Logue, oil dealer, from drowning during a storm on August 12, 1929, was given a bronze medal and $500 toward the purchase of a home or other worthy purpose.

Since 1928, with the exception of two years, the number of colored heroes recognized has been limited to two. In 1936, a record was set when five persons were honored. In 1929, four received the medal.

THEY MADE 1940 HONOR ROLL FOR DISTINCTIVE SERVICES TO RACE

FEB 1 5 1941

FEB

The honor roll for race relations for 1940 lists twelve Negroes and six white persons and organizations for outstanding achievements during the past year and having contributed the most to further racial amity. The nation-wide poll to select the honorees was conducted by Dr. L. D. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg Collection of the New York Public Library and announced last Sunday over the "Wings Over Jordan" program.

The Honor Roll is a regular feature of Negro History Week and is being currently celebrated over the nation.

1 5 1941

Miss Phillippa Duke Schuyler, sensational child prodigy whose genius has won for her many honors the most notable of which was the "setting aside of a 'Phillippa Schuyler Day" at the New York Worlds' Fair; Eddie Rochester' Anderson, for his weekly radio performances and his role in the premier of "Buck Benny Rides Again"; Kenny Washington, brilliant U.C.L.A. football star who was appointed on the freshman coaching staff of his alma mater; Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, who rose from the ranks of an enlisted man to the highest position ever attained by a Negro in the United States Army, and Dorothy Maynor, young concert artist whose charm, grace and beautiful soprano voice is the rave of music critics.

Colored Nurse To Be Honored For Heroism

A 20-year-old colored nurse will be honor guest at the next barbecue meeting of the Cumberland County Law Enforcement Officers association, March 19, and Mayor H. C. Blackwell will present her with "an appropriate present" for "services rendered."

The proud recipient of this honor is Estelle Manuel, young negro woman who lives in the Evans Hill section of the city, and who has been an employe of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Lott of the Rainbo hotel for the past three years.

Estelle saved the Lotts' child, Maxine, 3, from possible death or serious injury yesterday, when an auto drove through a red light in the business district toward them. She knocked the child down and stood between her and the car. The car caught Estelle's coat, tearing it, and bruised her slightly, but did not strike the child.

The driver of the car, Herman Capps, 19-year-old farmer of the Raeford road, was bound over to recorder's court after a hearing before Mayor Blackwell this morning on reckless driving charges.

Estelle stood modestly in court this morning, when Mayor Blackwell congratulated her and extended the invitation in behalf of the police body.

"You not only performed a heroic deed at the risk of your own life," Mayor Blackwell said, "but you have set a shining example for all the other nurses of children in the city."

Estelle volunteered no statement other than that she has been working with the Lott family for about three years.

Mrs. Lott, who works at a roadside restaurant, the Top Hat, and whose husband works at Fort Bragg, praised the nurse highly and said she was planning to give her another coat for the one damaged.

The police force and Mayor Blackwell will "chip in" and buy her a present.

TWO STUDENTS WIN IN ESSAY CONTEST

Negro Children Take Honors in Drive to Cut Homicide Rate for Chattanooga

Joyce Gay and Bobbie Burton, colored school children, were the winners in the "Thou Shalt Not Kill" essay contest announced at the recent mass meeting of Negroes at the New Monumental Baptist church on East Eighth street, it was announced yesterday by the Rev. William C. Upshaw, pastor of the church, and Mrs. Katie E. Smith, contest supervisor.

The winners will be given prizes at this morning's services at the church. Mrs. William A. Banks was awarded honorable mention for her poem "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

The sponsors of the contest expressed appreciation yesterday to the local newspapers for publicity on the contest and The Chattanooga Times for an editorial, to Commissioner E. R. Betterton, Atty.-Gen. Peabody Howard, Attorney G. W. Chamlee, Detective E. E. Smith, Judge Martin A. Fleming, Dr. L. L. Patton, the New Monumental choir, Bessie Brock, Ida Smallwood, Emma Reynolds and the colored Y. W. C. A.

One cause of homicides in Chattanooger is the great number of newcomers from other cities, not originally Chattanoogans, who do not know or care, what our city stands for. Anyone can move into a city but in many instances they are not the better element. Those who are substantial citizens and have established homes, do not cause this blight on any city.

Leniency of punishment is a contributing factor. They know from the light sentences given previous offenders that Chattanooga has not yet seen the necessity of giving the extreme penalty. The knowledge that capital punishment will be given will stop homicides.

The lack of education has much to do with our murder rate. Children are allowed to drop out of school too early. Many of them when they leave school are not prepared to hold jobs, and are not able to attend night school to prepare themselves, because there is not a vocational school here. At 16 they are ready for trouble, unless they have something to employ their lime.

I suggest these remedies to prevent so many homicides.

First—Capital punishment or imprisonment for life.

Second—A university for our city (colored) which will add a dignity to our city, and will raise the standard which is now low.

Third—Vocational training for boys who leave school early for work.

Fourth—A Negro Y. M. C. A. building for wholesome enjoyment, or the location of clean supervised places of recreation.

Fifth—The location of an interested truant officer on Ninth street.

Ill Student Hears He Has Won Contest

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—(SNS)—The hospital is no place for James S. Moseley, tall, restless Hampton Institute Trade School student from Germantown, Philadelphia. But on Monday evening, the montonous routine of hospital life was broken for the talented Hamptonian, when the nurse brought a radio that would soon tell the world via an NBC network show, that he had been awarded first prize in a national contest sponsored by Scholastic Magazine. for the best original airplane design drawing.

Prizes are nothing new to the good-humored lad, who lay in the Dixie Hospital with an infected leg. He saw the Washington Monument and all the rest of the Capital by winning an essay contest in Negro history while in high school. The Iver Johnson bicycle he rode as a boy is another mark of achievement. But this cash award and scholarship to study aeronautical engineering at Carnegie Tech is, he admits his biggest achievement.

Though his bed was covered with airplane magazines, James talked endlessly about track—a high jump was the cause of his present confinement—and the freshman football and basketball he had played this season. His ability to come out ahead of contestants from 3,499 other schools submitting designs for the Higgins Award, was secondary to his enthusiasm for athletics.

However, he already knows what drawing instruments he is going to buy with the $25.00 cash award which is only a part of his first prize. Though he loves Hampton Institute, he will take advantage of the Carnegie Tech scholarship which is the other part of his award. The Hampton student plans to be an aeronautical engineer—though his profession will always have tough competition with his love for sports.

The drawing that won the award for him was an original design of a single seat pursuit plane. He also had to develop the assembly and do detail drawings of the master connecting rod and articulated rods for an aircraft radial engine. Before coming to Hampton and working with John L. Frank, his drafting teacher who helped immeasurably in preparing him for his entry in the Higgins Award contest, James taught resign as an instructor of an NYA project. While there, he organized an aviation club and won more prizes for model airplanes in several national contests.

Though he seems slated for a prize-winning career, the lanky Hamptonian sincerely hopes that he will not have to learn of his future successes while turning restlessly in a hospital bed.

WM. GRANT STILL

ARTHUR B. SPINGARN

CHARLES S. JOHNSON

The recipients of honorary degrees from Howard University, this year will be Dr. Charles Spurgeon Johnson, sociologist, author and editor; William Grant Still, composer and arranger, and Arthur B. Spingarn, prominent New York attorney and president of the NAACP, it was announced this week by university officials.

The three men will be honored at the annual commencement exercises to be held at Howard University on June 13, and will be feted at a dinner to be given by the Howard University board of trustees on the same date.

Dr. Johnson, director of the department of social sciences at Fisk University, was born July 24, 1893, in Bristol, Va. He attended Wayland Academy from 1909 to 1913, and received his A.B. degree from Virginia Union University in 1917. He attended the University of Chicago in 1918, and received the honorary degree of Litt. D. from Virginia Union University in 1928.

Founder of Magazine

Dr. Johnson was a fellow in sociology at the University of Chicago, where, in 1922, he published his book "The Negro in Chicago." Since then, he has written numerous books, papers and articles, and was the founder and editor of "Opportunity" Magazine.

He was formerly the director of the National Urban League, and was awarded the William E. Harmon Gold Award for Distinguished Achievement Among Negroes in Science, in 1930. Dr. Johnson is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, and has been a member of the Research Staff of the Tennessee Valley Authority. He married Marie Antionette Burgette in 1920, and is the father of three children.

William Grant Still was born May 11, 1895 in Woodville, Miss., and married Grace Bundy in 1915. He received his education at Wilberforce University, Oberlin Conservatory of Music, and the New England Conservatory of Music.

While at Oberlin, Mr. Still received a scholarship in composition for meriterious work in theory, having accomplished a year's work in less than three months.

After having studied a year under the eminent composer, Varese, Mr. Still's "From the Land of Dreams," a composition for chamber orchestra, was performed at Acolian Hall, wth Vladimir Shavitch, of the Syracuse Orchestra, conducting.

In addition to his work as a composer of serious music, Mr. Still is also an arranger, having orchestrated a number of successful musical shows. "Running Wild," "Dixie to Broadway" and the "Fifth Edition of Earl Carroll's Vanities" are among these.

Mr. Spingarn, prominent New York attorney, who was recently elected president of the NAACP, has been associated intimately with the work of the NAACP for more than a quarter century. He was chairman of the association's national legal committee for twenty-seven years.

Mr. Spingarn received his A.B. degree from Columbia University in 1897 and was awarded the A.M. degree from the same university two years later. He graduated from the Columbia Law School in 1900 and has practiced law in New York since that time.

Mr. Still was educated at Wilberforce University and the Oberlin and New England conservatories of music. In addition to his compositions of serious music, he has orchestrated such musical shows as "Running Wild," "Dixie to Broadway," and Fifth Edition of Earl Carroll's "Vanities." He composed the theme song for the New York World's Fair.

Mr. Spingarn, before his election to the presidency, was chairman of the NAACP's national legal committee for twenty-seven years. He is author of "The Negro and War," owns a special collection of books by and about the colored race in America, Africa and the West Indies, and has built up a research library on the race for scholars.

Dr. Johnson received his A.B. degree (1917) and the honorary degree of Litt. D. (1928) from Virginia Union University and has attended the Universtiy of Chicago. He was the founder and editor of Opportunity magazine, received the Harmon Award in 1930 and is a trustee of the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

FIRST NEGRO GETS PH.D. AT N. Y. INSTITUTE

School Of Social Research Awards Degree Upon Ex-Newspaperman

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — The first Negro to receive a Ph.D. degree from the graduate faculty of political and social science, New School Social Research, is Warren Brown, former newspaperman and now executive secretary of the "March on Washington" committee, who was handed his sheepskin at ceremonies held Tuesday.

This distinction is tremendously heightened when it is known that the graduate faculty, founded in 1933, is comprised of learned scholars who formerly instructed in such world-famed institutions as the University of Berlin, the University of Vienna, and Old Heidelberg, and who are now refugees from war-torn Europe.

Brown majored in sociology and his dissertation is entitled "The Negro Press in the United States and Social Change: 1860 to 1880." The subject is not a new one to Brown for he received his bachelor of science degree in journalism from New York university, having previously done work at the University of Wisconsin. He received his master's in sociology from the New school.

At various times in his career he has been assistant editor of the New York Amsterdam News under William Kelly; assistant editor of the defunct New York Daily Citizen; reporter for the Chicago Defender; and editor of the "Christian Plea," house organ of the United Christian Missionary Society of Indianapolis. For six years he was case supervisor with the home relief bureau of the department of public welfare.

Brown, member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, has hopes of teaching. At present, however, every effort is being exerted to make the March on Washington, supported by A. Phillip Randolph, Walter White and other leaders, a success.

COLLEGE STUDENT AT 77!

Negro High School Principal of Cynthiana Ky., Is To Be Graduated From U. C.

Seventy-seven years is a ripe age for a college student, and sufficient to give William Eli Newsom of Cynthiana, Ky. a Negro, the distinction of being the oldest member of the 1941 graduating class at the University of Cincinnati, officials of the school disclosed last night.

Newsom, at 77, is both a veteran among educators and a veteran among students. Principal of a high school at Cynthiana he began his undergraduate career more than 50 years ago.

At the university's sixty-third commencement Friday night in Nippert Memorial Stadium, Newsom will receive the degree of bachelor of science in education. Much of his university work in recent years has been in Teachers' College summer session courses.

Newsom's long career as a student was begun at Waldon College, Nashville, Tenn. in 1870. He was born at Kingston Springs 21 miles north of Nashville. Newsom attended Waldon College two years. Later he studied for summers at Fisk University.

When he completed 25 years as principal of the high school in Cynthiana, citizens there gave him a testimonial at the school's commencement. He is interested in music and trains the choir of a church in Cynthiana. He has one son.—Enquirer.

WHO AM I?

By
Henry N. Wilcots

FATHER OF RUSSIAN LITERATURE

My father was a Russian nobleman who could trace his lineage six centuries back. My mother was a descendant of an Abyssinian prince.

As a boy I was brought to Russia in the tumultuous period just after the reign of Peter the Great. There I saw and felt a Russia that had become a vast plantation with only one master and many millions of slaves. There I heard the sagas of the fields, full of pathos and beauty, as haunting as is to be found anywhere in the world.

I entered the lyceum at Tsarskoye Selo a school founded by Alexander I, where I had the privilege of companionship with a host of friends by whom were faithfully potrayed the better things of life. Among those friends were Baron Anthony Delvig.

Later I went to St. Petersburg, a city built in the marshes of the Baltic and given its German name by Peter the Great. Here I met in fashion the aristcratic youth of the day liberal ideas and moral license went hand in hand.

It was in St. Petersburg that I took to the pen and began writing what I saw and felt and, it was that pen that finally sent me into exile.

It was in exile that I wrote such pieces as: "The Prisoner of the Caucasus." And that magnigcent tragedy, "Boris Godunov."

My end was inevitable from a devotional insantity to my wife—yet even an ending can become immortal as "Monument."

Nay, I shall not completely die;
in Sacred strains.
My soul survive my dust; for ever is its worth

In my "Golden Cockerel" the touch of the most vital motivating force for good among mankind, either as individuals or as broups or nations, is truth expressing itself in kindly benevolence and good will.

Who Am I?; Answer:Alexander Pushkin.

CRISIS MAGAZINE COUNTS 4,969 COLLEGE GRADUATES

1890 8/1/41

New York--There were 4,964 Negro college graduates during the school year 1940-41, according to the tabulation of The Crisis magazine made public in its 30th annual education number for August.

There were ten doctors of philosophy. Two from Illinois, and one each from Michigan, Western Reserve, Northwestern, Cornell, Harvard, Radcliffe, Columbia, and Ohio State.

From Howard university there were 156 graduates with the bachelor's degree, 38 with a master's degree, and 76 with professional degrees, including 21 doctors, 18 dentists, and 14 lawyers. Meharry Medical school had 48 doctors, 9 dentists and 10 nurses.

Atlanta, the leading graduate school of the race, had an enrollment of 268 and 50 graduates with a master's degree. For the first time in its history the University of Kansas graduated a Negro doctor of medicine.

Largest enrollment in Negro colleges was at Howard, 2,810. Among mixed colleges, New York university had 687 Negro students enrolled; Ohio State was second with 333.

The August Crisis contains photographs of graduates, information about honor students, and pictures of the faculties of six leading institutions.

Miss Lulu Merle Johnson Receives Ph. D. In Iowa

1890

IOWA CITY, Iowa.—Among the recipients of the degree of doctor of philosophy in the University of Iowa's history department was a poised mellow-voiced woman outstanding among her fellows in one respect. She is Lulu Merle Johnson, the first Negro woman to wear a doctor's hood in an Iowa institution, and one of the scant handful of American Negro women attaining such a status.

AUG 9 1941

Her story is another version of a familiar pattern, the story of the farm girl who achieves distinction, for her father was an Iowa farmer. She was born near Gravity, Iowa, on the land which her grandfather had purchased in the year 1822.

Though she and her family were the only Negroes in the community, she does not recall that it set her apart in any way. In high school, she was the captain of the girls' basketball team, and like most other girls, she served her turn as secretary of a Sunday-school class.

After her graduation from the Clinton high school to which she went her senior year, she came to the university and remained until she received her M.A. degree in 1930. Here again, she was doing pioneer work, for she and a fellow-student, Missouril Allen were among the first Negro women to receive master's degrees from Iowa.

Her first job took her south, a region which she knew by tradition, for her family could remember a slave grandmother and tales of southern reconstruction. She became assistant professor of history at Talladega college, a Congregational school at Talladega, Ala.

From ther she was transferred to the position to which she will return in September—that of assistant professor of history in Tougaloo college, Tougaloo, Miss.

Attaining Ph.D. status has not been easy, because of the same difficulty most students have—getting enough money. A grant from the Rockefeller foundation has enabled Miss Johnson to complete her work during the past year.

Miss Johnson knows personally all the Negroes who have received Ph.D. degrees from Iowa. To date, they are few.

Negro women holding Ph.D.'s are comparatively rare. Priro to 1936, the last statistics available, only 12 American Negro women held this degree. Two of these 12 had gotten the degree at European universities.

Miss Johnson feels that her hard work was worthwhile. Deeply interested in Negro education, she insists that Negro teachers must be better trained.

"A Negro child coming from the south to the Northern or Middle Western states, finds himself handicapped," she says. "Both better schools and better teachers are necessary."

AUG 9 1941

She is proud of the work which her own college is doing. Tougaloo has a bi-racial faculty. Such an arrangement offers many advantages to both students and teachers, she feels.

Negro Students Now Receiving Scholarships

1890 8/1/41

By LEON TAYLOR

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (ANP) — Negroes are anticipating a showdown on the momentous question of higher education for the Negro as provided by the state.

A group of energetic leaders in this city recently drew up plans to inaugurate proceedings against the commonwealth by first having qualified students apply for professional courses at Kentucky State College in Frankfort.

It they are unable to obtain such there, and this state school offers few, applications for entrance will then be made at the University of Kentucky in Lexington. Admittance refusal there as authorized by state law—will furnish grounds for court action which ultimately will decide once and for all the educational guarantees of Negroes as defined under the laws of this state and by decisions of the supreme court.

WAIT TRAINING

According to a member of the sponsoring body, "Our aim is to obtain broadened fields for life pursuits .... We want all professional training for our youth that is provided for others by law."

Though a single fundamental objective is sought, it can be attained in only 1 of 3 ways as outlined by the committee: first, admission to all state-supported schools without regard to race or color; second appropriation of several millions of dollars to establish complete professional schools at Kentucky State College in Frankfort; third, provide ALL necessary funds to enable Negro students to complete four-year courses in northern institutions.

The first method will necessitate a repeal of the Day law which separated races in public schools; the second and third would call for huge appropriations, many times more than now apportioned in the feeble and abortive gesture aimed at easing over a troublesome bump.

NOW GIVEN DOLE

Under the present setup, Negro students seeking a course not offered at Kentucky State are given a dole from the state treasure, an amount far insufficient to begin to meet necessary expenses.

When the question of admission to the University of Kentucky first came into prominence several years ago, President Frank L. McVey merely stated that he was bound by law to refuse a Negro admission. Sen. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, governor of Kentucky at the time, sought to calm the situation temporarily by immediately transferring money from his emergency fund and making it available for the expenses of Negro students studying out of the state.

With the retirement of Dr. McVey from the presidency of the University of Kentucky and the election of Dr. Herman L. Donovan as its head, the question of admitting Negroes there has arisen with new vigor. Thus the president-elect at the very outset of his tenure willl be faced with one of the most important issues of his career, and one which may set a precedent for the whole south, if carried through as now planned by the group recently organized.

Kentucky needs no new -precedent for the admission of Negro students to its institutions of higher learning. Long ago Berea college listed many Negroes in its enrollment who enjoyed the thorough training of that pioneering school. However, shortly after the turn of the century, with the passage of the Day law in 1904, Berea was forced to yield to the separation of races.

Iowa Woman Wins Ph. D.

Iowa City, Ia.—Dr. Lulu Merle Johnson, after August 1, will be the first Negro woman ever to receive a Ph. D. degree from any educational institution in Iowa. She passed her doctor's degree tests, recently at Iowa University, Iowa City.

A Gravity, Ia., farm girl, she was graduated from Clinton high school, where she lived with a sister and brother in law; obtained a M. A. degree from Iowa university in 1930, immediately beginning work on that advanced degree after receiving her B. A. degree.

Dr. Johnson is assistant professor of history of Tougaloo college, Tougaloo, Miss. Her chosen subject is history.

WHO AM I?

By
Henry N. Wilcots

When George H. White, the last Negro member of Congress from the southern states, delivered his valedictory speech, January 1901, although it attracted little attention at the time, the incident marked the end of an important epoch for the colored people.

Up to that time, Washington had seated some twenty Negro Congressmen and two Negro Senators. Contrary to the belief of many today that, representatives of the race during reconstruction period were an ignorant and incompetent group, ten were college graduates and the others had acquired rudimentary educations. They were earnest, ambitious and industrious leaders, as illustrated by Mr. Hiram Revels and Mr. Blanch K. Bruce in the Senate, and Messrs. Rapier, Lynch and Rainey in the House.

As a migrant from the South, as a laborer seeking to earn a living in the North, as a business man in a growing Chicago community, as a precinct captain in the Republican party, as the first Negro Alderman elected 1915, and as a party organizer I participated in the political hopes, triumphs, disappointments, setbacks, and advances of my people.

I had come to Chicago when there were only fourteen thousand Negroes in the city. But thanks to God for the great flock of migrants from the South that sent me to Congress from the First Congressional District of Illinois in 1928 that shattered a long tradition.

NAVAL CAPTAIN

Born in Beauford, S. C., April 5, 1839. I began work as a "rigger" and learned the arts and craft of ships and sailors.

My first experence was with the "Planter" a steamer plying in the harbor of Charleston, as a transport in 1861.

In the record of the House of the 47th, Congress is to be found a "bill authorizing the Presdent to place me on the retired list of the Navy" and, a detailed account of my service.

On May 13, 1862, the Confederate steamboat, the "Planter", a special dispatch boat of General Ripley, a Confederate commander, was transporting guns and amunition from Cole,s Island to James Island. She had just returned to Charleston and the crew had retired in the city for the night, leaving a crew of eight colored men on board. This was the hour that I had long waited for. On consulting the crew they all agreed to co-operate and deliver the boat with its rich cargo to the hands of the Federal Fleet, then blockading the port off the barr.

At 2:00 a.m. we glided out of the harbor and steamed up the wharf where, my wife, three children, four other women and three men waited to embark.

Remembering the habits of the captain (Relay) and with his huge straw hat on my head, I blew the usual signal, folded my arms across my breast and proceeded down the bay. On and on we sailed, nearing Fort Sumter, I gave the required signal as cooly as if General Ripley (himself) was on board. Sumter answered my signal "all right" and the "Planter" moved on toward Morris Island, a light artillery base.

When at last it was realized that the Planter was headed toward the Federal fleet, Morris was signaled to stop her, bot fortunately too late. When Captain Nichols observed the approaching ship I saluted the Captain and delivered the "Planter" to him.

Afterward, I was ordered to pilot the Augusta, a flag ship off the Barr and then the Crusader, a gun boat at Simmon's Bluff, it was here that I engaged in a sharp battle June, 1862. Later, I was made blockade pilot plying between Charleston and Beauford removing torpedoes. I was piloting the Monitor Keokuk when she was attacked off Fort Sumter, 1863, she was struck 96 times, and nineteen hits passed through her. She retired, and the following morning she sunk. I left her just before she went down, and was taken on board of the Old Ironside with the remainder of the crew.

December, 1863, while the Planter was under the command of Cap Nickerson, was attacked off folly Island Creek Captain Nickerson became demoralized and deserted his post. I entered the pilot-house took command of the boat and carried her safely out of danger. For that act of bravery I was promoted by order of General Gilmore, to the rank of CAPTAIN.

Last spring, Miss Jametta I. White of Charleston, S.C. (left), and Miss Margaret P. Smith of Newport News, Va. (right), were the high-ranking students out of the 213 who took the all-expense scholarship examination offered by Talladega College, Talladega, Ala. Because of the inability on the part of judges to differentiate between these two high-ranging students, two all-expense scholarships were awarded, renewable for a period of four years. For the fifth consecutive year Talladega College offers an all-expense scholarship examination to high school seniors and recent graduates in thirteen Southern States. The highest ranking student in this examination is granted an all-expense scholarship, $306 for women and $318 for men, renewable each year if the student's achievement warrants it. In addition to the all-expense scholarship Talladega College grants smaller scholarships to those who rank high in this examination.

1940 Honor Roll Selectees Include Three Athletes, Two Comedians, a Famous Scientist, a Child Prodigy and the Winners of An Irish Sweepstakes Prize Who Placed Their Money in a Low-Rent Housing Development.

JAN 13 1941

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The names of 11 Negroes, 3 white persons and four organizations were placed on the honor roll in race relations for 1940 and announced last Sunday by Dr. L. D. Reddick over the "Wings Over Jordan" program. Outstanding among those cited were Justice Hugo L. Black of the U. S. Supreme Court, three athletes and the Benjamin Mason family of Philadelphia.

The honor roll is a feature of Negro History Week and is the result of a nation-wide poll conducted by Dr. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg Collection of Negro Literature of the New York Public Library. No attempt is made to rank the honorees in relation to the importance of their contribution to racial amity.

Each year the poll is conducted to select the 12 Negroes and 6 whites who have most distinguished themselves for work in the improvement of race understanding "in terms of real democracy." No honoree is chosen more than once to a place on the list

"The efforts of those named demonstrates that democracy is indeed worth saving at home as well as abroad," said Dr. Reddick in making the announcement.

The citations read as follow:

CAROL HANSBERRY, who with his staff of lawyers, won a victory before the United States Supreme Court which outlawed the residential restrictive covenants of Chicago property owners. These covenants would raise a color bar against Negro citizens living in certain areas of that city.

DOROTHY MAYNOR, for her beautiful voice and personal graciousness.

WILLIAM "DOLLY" KING, of Long Island University, Brooklyn, New York. The football, basketball and baseball star who is generally considered to be the greatest athlete in the history of that university.

KENNY WASHINGTON, of the University of California at Los Angeles, former "All-American" who made good in his first season as coach at his alma mater. He is the only Negro holding such a position in a leading American university.

HENRY ARMSTRONG, boxing history's only triple crown-holder. When he lost his last title in 1940, he went down like a champion. Armstrong has consistently stood against the segregation of Negro pugilists.

WILLIAM GRANT STILL, for his theme music for the New York World's Fair and for the score to Katherine Garrison Chapin's poem "And They Lynched Him on a Tree."

THE BENJAMIN MASON FAMILY, of Philadelphia, who invested the $150,000 won on a sweepstake ticket in a block of low-rent cooperative homes.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL BENJAMIN O. DAVIS, who rose from the ranks to the highest position attained by a Negro in the United States Army. Brigadier-General Davis demonstrates the possibilities of the democratic principle in all phases of national defense.

THE AMERICAN NEGRO EXPOSITION AT CHICAGO, conceived by James W. Washington and directed by Truman Gibson, Jr., this was a magnificent display of the cultural contributions of the Negro to American life.

COUNTEE CULLEN, for his book "The Lost Zoo," a high quality work of the imagination, written for children and others.

JUSTICE HUGO L. BLACK, in delivering two notable decisions of the United States Supreme Court, freeing Negroes who had under torture confessed to crimes, denouncing exclusion of Negroes from trial jury panels and declaring that the Constitution of the United States required that "protection to all must be given—not merely promised."

THE COURIER-JOURNAL, of Louisville, Kentucky, which has been conspicious for its fair treatment of the Negro in both its news and editorial columns. Also, it is the only Southern daily which carried (each Tuesday) a column of opinion written by Negroes.

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS, under the direction of Archibald MacLeish, has liberalized its employment policy and for the first time in history rendered an art, music, and book festival commemorating the anniversary of the proclamation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, who has repeatedly used the weight of his reputation to speak out for minority rights. In his own words "This country has still a heavy debt to discharge for all the troubles and disabilities it has laid on the Negro's shoulders.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA at Los Angeles has led the way by appointing to its coaching staff its great football star, Kenny Washington, who happens to be a Negro.

JACK BENNY, for recognizing dramatic talent irrespective of color. His fellow-comedian, "Rochester," is cast in roles that are neither personally humiliating nor indirectly derogatory to the Negro people.

Open Letter to Negro Teachers Of St. Louis

JAN 17 194

Dear Teacher:

The Negro teachers of the public schools have always been the target for the general public to shoot at. We have been criticised for our moral standards or lack of them; we have been charged with failing to bear our share of public relief; we have been accused of living beyond our means; we have been said to lack the virtue of thrift necessary to avoid financial embarrassment and even bankruptcy. No group comes in for so much unfavorable publicity as the teaching group. We are the topic of discussion in the pulpit, in the press and in any social gathering.

This constant tendency to "ride" the teacher will not stop until the teachers become more definitely organized around something in which the teachers have a common interest—an interest from which the teachers can gain personally and at the same time achieve group solidarity.

There is no type of organization that can obtain a group solidarity among the teachers in a finer way than 100% membership in the St. Louis Progressive Teachers' Credit Union. There is no greater need for the Negro teachers of St. Louis than professional interest in each member of the group and professional solidarity. Each teacher has been pursuing his solitary way totally unmindful of the fact that what happens to one member of the group lifts or debases all of them.

It is the purpose of the Credit Union to promote thrift among its members and to educate them in the process of handling their own financial affairs. It is to provide a convenient method of saving, with security of principal, an attractive rate of dividend, a reserve which is readily available in an emergency, and credit facilities at reasonable interest rates.

THE CREDIT UNION IS SAFE 1. The treasurer is bonded. 2. All payments must be made by check and must be counter-signed by the president. 3. It is under the supervision of the State. A representative from the Department of Securities examines the credit union at least once a year. 4. No loan to a director, officer, nor committee members shall exceed the amount of his share holdings 5. All money of the credit union is kept in banks.

The Progressive Teachers' Credit Union was chartered December 9, 1936. There are now 162 members. These members have paid in shares account some $5,000. Since May, 1937, it has loaned more than $11,000 to its members. The third 6 per cent dividend will be paid January 17 1941. It has helped several teachers to solve financial difficulties that threatened to become very embarrassing. If you do not need it then join with the teachers to render service to some less fortunate teacher who is struggling to get on his feet. Heavy interest rates on loans are keeping many teachers in the financial ruck.

WASHINGTON

Miss Lois M. Jones, instructor of art at Howard University, was awarded the Robert Woods Prize of fifty dollars for landscaps painting at the fiftieth annual exhibition of the Society of Washington Artists, now being held here at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, it was announced this week. The competition was open to artists of all races residing in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, and more than 700 paintings were submitted to the art jury.

Miss Jones

She is also represented in the exhibition by a painting entitled "Luxembourg Gardens, Paris," which was painted while the artist was studying abroad in 1938, under the famous artists, Montezin, Berges, Maury, and Alder.

Miss Jones has illustrated four books, won numerous art prizes and exhibited in galleries throughout the country. She is represented by mural works at Howard University, Atlanta University, and the Harlem Branch Library.

The artist is a graduate of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and in 1938 received a certificate from the Academie Julian, Paris, France, where she studied on a General Education Board fellowship. She has been an instructor in design at Howard University for the past ten years.

MANY "FIRSTS" IN 1940

MODERN FARMER

Highwater Marks Reached and Epochs Established Last Year.

FEB 1 5 1941

This past year—1940—brought several "firsts" to Negro Americans—public and official recognition of accomplishments in servide to humanity and the arts. The Post Office Department issued a commemorative postage stamp bearing the picture of a Negro, Booker T. Washington—the first time in history. The War Department created the first Negro General—promoting Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, a West Pointer, to this higher rank. Other recognitions by the Federal Government were: The appointment of a Negro, judge William H. Hastie, as assistant to Secretary of War Stimson; appointment of a Negro, Campbell C. Johnson, as executive assistant to Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, National Selective Service Director. MODERN FARMER

The Federal Courts in 1940 handed down several opinions which, added to those of previous years, indicate that Negroes are on the road to equality before the law. In the field of public education, Federal District Courts of Maryland and Virginia-North Carolina enjoined local school boards against maintaining differentials in teachers' salaries on the basis of race. There are 1305 counties in 13 of the 17 states maintaining separate schools for Negro and white children, to say nothing of the huge number of independent schools. So this year will doubtless see many suits, entered by Negro teachers against school boards, seeking equal pay for equal work. FEB 1 5 1941

The criminal courts of the South have had the attention of the United States Supreme Court in two memorable decisions delivered by Justice Hugo Black from Alabama. The first decision in this field on appeal from Florida reversed the verdict of the State Courts in sentencing Negroes on the evidence of confession by extortion. The second decision on appeal from Texas reversed the sentence of a Negro on the grounds that Negroes were systematically excluded from Grand Jury service.

In the field of art, Hattie McDaniel received the Academy Award for her interpretation of the role of "Mammy" in "Gone With the Wind." MODERN FARMER

Negroes themselves celebrate the 75th anniversary of Emancipation by holding the American Negro Exposition in Chicago, July 4-September 1. It is estimated that more than two million persons visited the Exposition which was devoted to displays showing the progress of the race in agriculture, industry, the arts and sciences.

Also the George Washington Carver Foundation for Research in Creative Chemistry was established at Tuskegee Institute. The nucleus of the fund was the life savings of George Washington Carver —$35,000—the scientist born a slave.

At Tuskegee Institute was built the first center for the cure and treatment of Negro victims of infantile paralysis. A grant of $161,350 by the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation made the center possible. FEB 1 5 1941

In the field of labor, the Federal District Court of Dallas, Texas, handed down a decision which held that tips could not be counted as wages under the Court's interpretation of the Wage and Hour Law. The Court also ordered the Terminal and Union Stations affected by this decision to pay back wages in the sum of $88,500. Though this decision on tips and wages was rendered without racial application, in effect it applies almost exclusively to Negroes since they hold a practical monopoly in this field. This decision, however, does not appear to be an unmitigated victory. The Red Caps may have thought that tips would constitute a bonus to wages. Managers of Union Stations thought otherwise. Red Caps are required to turn in all fees for handling baggage. The company pays the legal wages out of the fees, keeping any surplus of fees over wages. The traveling public is being made aware of this arrangement by the Red Caps themselves. —Exchange.

CURRENT OPINION

ANOTHER OF THE LITERATI AWARDED THE SPINGARN MEDAL

MAR 2 1941

It's a thankless job to sit down and pick out the man of the year as the Spingarn Medal Committee did last week.

There are so many nominations which might be made that no matter upon whom the choice falls, it can hardly be unanimous.

So the committee chose Richard Wright, author of "Native Son", which Dorothy Canfield Fisher calls "a very harrowing tale" of Bigger Thomas, who finds the conflict between American ideals and American race prejudice too much for his simple mind. But he wants freedom badly enough to kill for it and he justifies himself by saying it must have been right because he feels better.

It's quite a revolutionary book, just as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was nearly a hundred years ago—that is if Bigger Thomas is a true counterpart of Richard Wright or thousands of other young people today who have come to the conclusion that to resort to violence is the only way to end the caste system. MAR 2 1941

Bigger Thomas is the spiritual and literary descendant of the real Nat Turner, and Denmark Vesey. Even Frederick Douglass had moments in which he hated his tormentors as bitterly as did Bigger Thomas.

Mr. Wright's contribution to current-day literature is important, and the Spingarn Medal committee is to be congratulated upon its choice. MAR 2 1941

This isn't exactly the question we started out to raise, however. We note that in the past twenty-six years the committee has made similar awards to six authors, eight educators, four leaders in national movements, three singers and composers, two actors, one soldier, one insurance executive and one physician.

Therefore, 88 per cent of those honors have gone to literati and artists and a bare 12 per cent (actually three in number) to those in more practical occupations.

No clergyman, attorney, industrial chemist, architect, labor leader, social worker, or politician has ever been chosen the Spingarn man of the year.

We have no idea whether there is any moral to this, but if there is one, we imagine it has something to do with the fact that the award committee is drawn principally from the literary group.

Second Nation-Wide Poll For Distinguished Negroes

JAN 25 1941

The nation-wide poll to decide the "American Negroes of distinguished achievement, 1940" is nearing completion. This annual poll is being conducted by the Schomburg Collection of Negro literature of the New York Public Library. The results will be announced over a national hook-up of the Columbia Broadcasting System and through the press during Negro History Week.

The purpose of this survey is to discover the twelve outstanding Negroes (or organizations) of the past year in terms of sheer merit, courage and social value to the race and to humanity. Selections will be made irrespective of class, creed or location. Thus, a labor leader from Texas stands on an equal plane with the New York Artist. At the same time the six white persons (or institutions) who have done the most for the improvement of race relations and the advancement of the Negro as a full man during the past year will be announced.

According to Dr. L. D. Reddick, Curator of the Schomburg Collection, nominations have come in from all over the country. Among those sending in nominees are:

Dr. Ambrose Caliver of the U. S. Office of Education, Langston Hughes, Arna Bontemps, President, H. M. Bond of Ft. Valley College, T. Arnold Hill of the National Youth Administration, Angelo Herndon, Editor G. James Fleming of the Philadelphia Tribune, Claude A. Barnett of the Associated Negro Press, Elmer A. Carter, Ellner W. Henderson and St. Clair Drake of the Illinois Commission on the Urban Colored Population, President Rufus Clement of Atlanta University, Walter White of the N.A.A.C.P., Prof. M. B. Tolson of Wiley College, Enoch P. Waters of the Chicago Defender, Editor Charles Thompson of the Journal of Negro Education, George S. Schuyler of the Pittsburgh Courier, Rev. A. Clayton Powell of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, Rev. Wm. Lloyd Imes of the St. James Presbyterian Church, Editor Edward Lawson of Opportunity, Dr. Charles S. Johnson of Fisk University, Prof. Harcourt Tynes of New York City.

Dr. Alain Locke of Howard University, Miss Miriam Matthews of the Los Angeles Public Library, William F. Savoy of Columbus, Ohio., Dr. Ira De A. Reid of Atlanta University, Editor Louis E. Martin of the Michigan Chronicle, Editor Roy Wilkins of the Crisis, Dr. Max Yergan of the International Committee of African Affairs, Editor P. B. Young of the Norfolk Journal & Guide, President R. Heroism Wins $200 Award for Officer Dodson

PHILADELPHIA

The two hours of his holiday time that he used to trail and capture an armed desperado, while others were putting the finishing touches on Christmas trees, paid dividends Tuesday for Alonzo E. J. Dodson, 54-year-old veteran police officer.

For the action singled him out from among numerous other members of the police and fire departments who performed acts of bravery last month, and earned him the hero award medal for December and a check for $200 from a local daily.

Mindful of Crowd

Off duty and shopping in the vicinity of Fifty-eighth and Haverford Avenue, Christmas Eve, Dodson spotted a man who generally answered the description of a suspect wanted for a series of holdups on his beat.

Afraid to tackle the man, later identified as William Nelson, 29, for fear of injuring a pedestrian on the crowded thoroughfare, in case of gun play, Dodson trailed his man and waited.

For two hours he followed his man, "window shopping" when even the suspect would look nervously about. Nelson walked to the door of a drug store at Fifty-eighth and Race, three times, but each time changed his mind when he saw customers in the store.

Tried to Draw Gun

Finally about half an hour before midnight, Nelson started into the store, was stopped by Dodson, who disarmed him of a .38-calibre revolver which he attempted to draw.

Indicted by the grand jury for hold-up and robbery, attempted hold-up and robbery, and carrying concealed deadly weapons, Nelson has a long record of arrests, police said, and admitted that he had robbed the same store twice before.

Had Several Commendations

A member of the force since 1911, Dodson, attached to the Sixty-first and Thompson station, has been commended a number of times for his bravery and alertness. He has a son, Alonzo, Jr., who is a graduate of Wilberforce University.

Two firemen, Adam Eitelyerg and Stanley Kostro, both white, who risked their lives to rescue four children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cowan during an early morning fire at 1500 Fawn Street, were presented medals of honorable mention during ceremonies held in the executive offices of the local daily.

Three of the children, however, died from burns and suffocation.

Union Teacher Gets Dispatch Honor Call

JAN 16 1941

RICHMOND—Dr. Henry Jared McGuinn, Union University's director of social sciences, is no mere bookworm but, on the contrary, he likes to make things work; and that goes for his sociology too.

Consequently, last week when The Richmond Times-Dispatch selected 13 Virginians for its annual honor roll, Dr. McGuinn was one of that sometimes-eschewed number.

Dr. McGuinn's selection was based on the fact that, during 1940, he had not only thought that Richmond's slums should be cleared but he came out from among his books and sold the city the idea.

Did Superlative Job

Net result: Dr. McGuinn is now a member of the Richmond Housing Authority; the Federal Government is sponsoring the slum clearance; Dr. McGuinn is credited with not only doing his job, but with doing it "superlatively well"; he becomes the fourth Negro in as many years to be chosen to the Times-Dispatch honor roll.

A graduate of Union, from which he received the bachelor's degree, and Columbia University, from which he received the master's and doctor's degrees, Dr. McGuinn was a field worker in 1929 of a study of Negro farmers conducted by the Virginia Agricultural Station; in 1936 he held the directorship of a survey of the training and employment of Negro workers in both white-collar and skilled jobs.

Four Negroes Honored

Negroes who have preceded Dr. McGuinn on the honor roll are: W. M. Cooper, extension director of Hampton Institute; L. F. Palmer, principal of Huntington High School, Newport News; and P. B. Young, editor of The Journal and Guide newspaper.

In conferring the honor, the Times-Dispatch said:

"A place on the honor roll goes only to those who achieve above and beyond what is expected of them. It is not sufficient to do a job well. It must be done superlatively well."

CHEMICAL SOCIETY HONORS L. A. HALL, EXPERT ON FOODS

JAN 31 1941

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — Lloyd A Hall, who is chief chemist and director of research for a large food manufacturing company, addressed the commercial chemistry section of the Chicago section, American Chemical society, Friday at their monthly meeting at the Stevens hotel

The address, "The Origin and Preparation of Spices" was illustrated with colored lantern slides and was heard by a large crowd, including many visitors attending the National Canners convention. It was of timely interest for the reason that the spice supplies of the American food industries are seriously threatened because of the war.

Hall said: "The present spice stock is sufficient for from two to four years, but the United States Governor should assist and encourage farmers to grow domestic crops where agricultural conditions are favorable, to take care of, at least, partial requirements of the food industries."

Hall also discussed the bacterial contamination of spices and related food ingredients, and their relation to acceleration in food spoilage. He described in some detail the research which he and his co-workers have done during the past five years on the purification of spices which has resulted in four patents, each, in the United States and Canada.

This sterilizing process, discovered by Hall and workers, has no effect on the materials being treated except the practical elimination of the micro-organizms, and improvement in taste and stability of the food.

Selfless Heroism In Gadsden

Nothing is more thrilling than selfless heroism.

The Trade School News of the Alabama School of Trades, Gadsden, tells a story of one of the students there that is worth repeating. If a boy ever deserved the Carnegie Medal, we believe this one does.

Here is the story as told by the student newspaper:

A middle-aged Negro woman, Bessie Patterson, was rescued from the Coosa River the 28th of September by Therald Manry, a student in the electrical department of the Trade School.

Manry, better known as "Pee Wee" by the students, was hitch-hiking from town late Sunday afternoon when he saw a crowd gathering on the Coosa River bridge. When he reached the crowd, Manry saw some one struggling in the water 100 feet below. He asked if anyone was going after her, but no one answered.

Climbing down through a manhole in the bridge to a pier below, Manry removed his clothes and dived into the water after the Negro.

After swimming down the river about 125 yards, he reached the woman. Manry urged the Negro woman to calm herself in order to save her energy which she did, and he towed her safely to shore.

Fire Marshal E. L. Mount, who had been summoned to the scene, applied artificial respiration.

For his heroic act the people of Gadsden have shown their appreciation in many ways. The following awards have been given him: Five dollars from the Colwell Realty Company, five dollars from a group of ladies from the Reich Hotel, and a two-months pass to the Princess Theatre given by Mr. Dixon, the manager.

Manry's act brought praise from many other citizens, and the civic leaders of Gadsden said an effort would be started in trying to obtain a Carnegie medal for him.

The Rev. E. M. Wilson, pastor of the Friendship Baptist Church, colored, suggested that a committee of representative Negro citizens be formed to visit young Manry at the Trades School and personally express their appreciation for his heroism.

"Pee Wee" Manry, who enrolled in the Trade School six months ago modestly disclaimed credit for his feat saying it could have been accomplished by any other person.

All the boys at the Trade School believe that Manry fully deserves all the credit he has received.—The Anniston Times.

Honor Grad Gains Select Society

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 29—Mr. Erskine G. Roberts, assistant professor of mechanic arts at Lincoln University was notified recently that he had been sponsored to a national founder of the Society for the promotion of Engineering Education by Professor H. V. Curtis, Dean of the Engineering School at the University of Missouri. Membership in this select society is limited to those who have made definite contributions to the field of engineering-and whose names are proposed for membership by a member of the society.

Attains Front Ranks

Mr. Roberts is an honor graduate of Northeastern University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology-holding an M. S. in Mechanical Engineering from the latter institution. He was employed for four years as machinist and draftsman in industry. Then, joining the faculty at Tuskegee, he was instructor in electricity and assistant director of field and design engineers in mechanical and construction work. Moving to Howard University, he served as instructor of mechanical and electrical engineering. While in Washington, D. C., Mr. Roberts became director of an engineering business, that went into government work as assistant and associate engineer of the Federal Works Agency's Power Division.

It was while he was at Howard University that Mr. Roberts met Professor Curtis. At that time, Professor Curtis was Chief Chemical Engineer for the T. V. A. and chairman of the examining committee for accrediting the Howard University Engineering Schools.

To Lincoln In 1939

Mr. Roberts came to Lincoln University last year. His work at Lincoln has included; the setting up of modern equipped machine heat treating and metallurgical laboratory, valued at $20,000; the rehabilitation of the university's power plant; and the designing of mechanical equipment for the Journalism building now under construction, and for several other buildings on the campus-including the maintenance building, the proposed new power plant, and the Home Economics Cottage. He is ground School Instructor in the Mechanic Arts department for the Civilian Pilot Training course.

For the past several years, Mr. Roberts has designed equipment, made reports and surveys leading to extend improvements throughout the East in residential, housing and institutional building-this work was done in conjunction with leading architects.

In the government service he served as examining engineer flaws, specifications, and construction details of power plants and distribution and generating systems which were proposed and built for cities and states throughout the country with the the aid of Federal money. This work included administrative duties, writing engineering reports and surveys, and making rate and market studies to support the decisions presented in specifying the use of government funds.

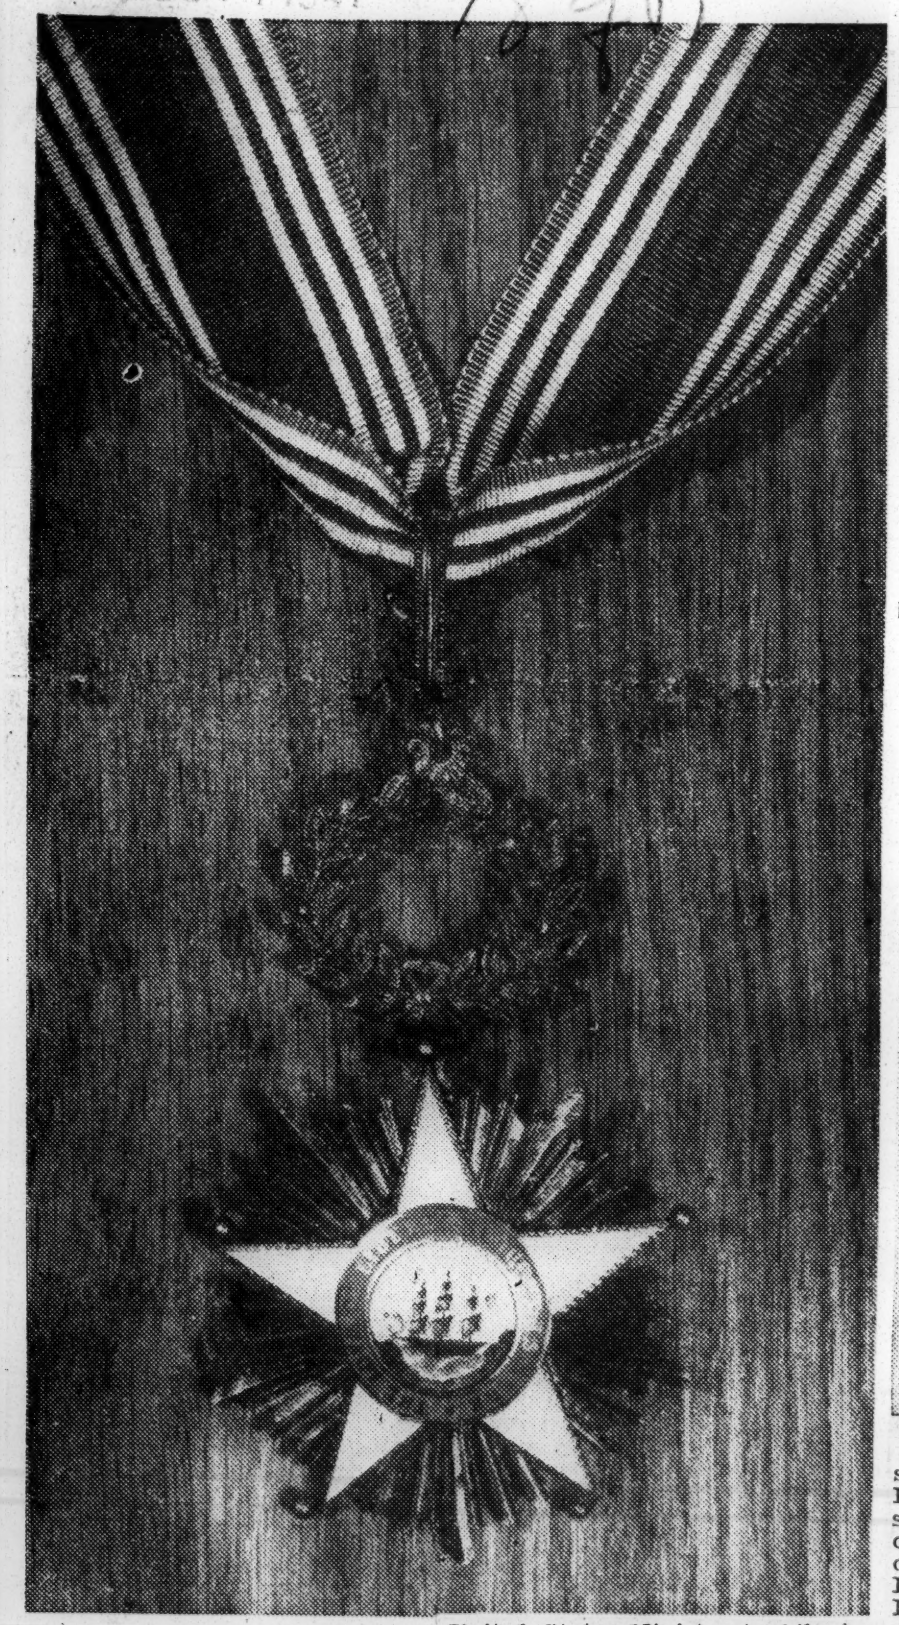
Haitian Decree For Dubois



Word has just reached the United States that on September 29, 1941. His Excellency Edwin Barclay, president of the Republic of Liberia issued a decree which named Dr. W. E. B. DuBois of Atlanta University, Knight Commander of the Liberian Humane Order of African Redemption. This action was taken on the advice of the Honorable Lester A. Walton, United States Minister to Liberia.

The Order of African Redemption was founded in 1879 by President Anthony W. Gardner just after he, himself, had been decorated with the Knight Grand Cross of the Spanish Order of Isabella Catolica. It consists of a star with rays pendant from a wreath of olives. American Negroes who have formerly received the Order are Booker T. Washington and the late Bishop Alexander Walters of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. Among the distinguished white men who have received it is Frederick Starr, former professor in Chicago University.

Dr. DuBois was associated with President King of Liberia at the second Pan-African Congress in Paris in 1921. After the third Pan-African Congress held in London, Paris and Lisbon in 1923, he visited Liberia at the time of the second inaugural of President King. He was designated by President Coolidge as special representative with the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary. At the time this was the highest rank ever given a minister to Liberia and it made Dr. DuBois dean of the diplomatic corps then in Monrovia. Dr. DuBois has written of Liberia in various American periodicals like Foreign AFFAIRS and in his books THE NEGRO and BLACK FOLKS: THEN NOW.

Six Scholarships Offered Negro Writers by Authors' Organization

Hoping to discover new Langston Hughes' and Richard Wrights, the Writers' School this week announced that six free scholarships would be awarded to young Negro men and women during the fall session which begins Oct. 6.

Sponsors of these scholarships are well known Negro writers, all members of the League of American Writers, including Richard Wright and Dr. Max Yergan. Successful candidates may enter any one of thirteen classes, which cover a wide variety of writing techniques and will be taught by well known American writers.

Applications for one of these scholarships should be made immediately to Nan Golden, registrar of the Writers' School, and should be accompanied by copies of the candidate's writing as well as an endorsement from a recognized organization, such as the YMCA, YWCA or trade union. The Writers School is located at 381 Fourth Ave., New York City.

Professor Henderson Makes Sixty

Ripe in years of experience and happy over the fruitage of a wide distribution of young men and women in every corner of the globe who sat at his feet, Professor Fletcher Hamilton Henderson, principal of Randolph County Training and Howard Normal School of Cuthbert, Ga., passes on to the retired list of Georgia educators. In fitting tribute to him for his long years of satisfactory service, the county authorities designated him principal-emeritus, which place he will hold during his lifetime.

OCT 25 1941

Professor Henderson needs no introduction. His work needs no expositions, both are permanent and well known fixtures in the annals of pioneer Georgia education.

After his graduation from Atlanta University, he came to Cuthbert to succeed President Richard Robert Wright, himself a graduate of Atlanta University. Howard Normal was among the first schools in the state to afford at public expense high school training for colored youth. From the beginning it strictly adhered to the principles of thoroughness and was well a protege of Atlanta University.

From its doors have come leaders who have made their emphasis on the rostrum of public service.

A few years ago Howard Normal School evolved into the Randolph County Training School. In that it reached forth a larger programme, becoming the center of the agricultural and manual arts activities for Southwest Georgia. A large and competent force of teachers are employed at this plant and it is fast taking its place among the leading institutions of its kind in this state.

Professor Henderson's heart is in his work. In the far noon of life he looks over a work well done. His eyes dimmed by age and hard work are brightened with the vision of his work going on to higher levels. He will spend in his beloved Cuthbert the rest of his days among the cedars that waft to the skies the hymn of love and tender sacrifice about his school—made famous by a golden chain unbroken spanning sixty years of effective service.

Highest NFA Award Given To Dr. Gandy

PETERSBURG, Va.—The honorary superior farmer's degree, the highest award given by the New Farmers of America, was bestowed upon Dr. John M. Gandy, president of Virginia State College, here on October 16 by Paul Davis Vann, student at the college and national treasurer of farmer's organization, in Virginia Hall auditorium before the student body and faculty.

DR. GANDY

It is the first time in the history of the organization that the pin has been given to an outstanding race leader.

Action for the award, along with three others, was taken at the recent national meeting at Florida A. and M. College. They were the Rev. Glenn Settle, "Wings Over Jordan" program; Dr. J. R. E. Lee, president, Florida A. and M. College, and Charles King, assistant to the director of the Farm Credit Administration.

Said Mr. Vann, in making the presentation, "This pin that I'm about to present to you, is formed, first into an open ball of cotton which symbolizes a new era in Negro agriculture and Negro life in general; the plow, which symbolizes labor, without which, neither knowledge nor wisdom can accomplish much, and the owl which symbolizes knowledge and wisdom.

"All of these things, Dr. Gandy, we have seen in you and your work. By the presentation of this pin, the New Farmers of America are attempting to honor and recognize your achievements and contributions to the Negro race in general."

Dr. Logan Named To Haitian Order

WASHINGTON, D. C. (SNS) — M. Elie Lescot, president of Haiti, has just named Dr. Rayford W. Logan, professor of history at Howard University, Commander in the Order of Honor and Merit, it was revealed today by university officials.

This signal honor, which is the rank above Chevalier, was conferred upon Dr. Logan especially because of his recent book entitled "The Diplomatic Relations of the United States with Hiati, 1776—1891," published by the University of North Carolina Press.

Professor Logan is a product of the Washington High Schools and of Williams College, Class of 1917. Immediately after leaving college he enlisted in the First Separate Battalion, D. C. National Guards. He was promoted to first lieutenant and saw action in the Argonne Forest with the 372nd Regiment of Infantry where he received a concussion of the brain.

Dr. Logan remained a number of years in Europe as secretary and interpreter of the Pan- American Congresses and as sercetaire-adjoint of the Pan-American Association

After his return to the United States he taught at Virginia Union University, served as assistant to Dr. Carter G. Goodson, and became head of the department of history at Atlanta University.

Dr. Logan obtained his doctorate from Harvard University in 1936, and since 1938, he has been a professor at Howard University. He is a member of the Advisory Committee of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Richard Wright, Author of "Native Son," Is 26th Winner of the Spingarn Medal

FEB 8 1941

Because "He has given to Americans who have eyes to see, a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive," Richard Wright, 32-year-old author of "Uncle Tom's Children" and "Native Son," the 1940 best-seller novel, was made the 26th recipient of the Spingarn Gold Medal at a meeting of the award committee held here Thursday, January 23, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced.

The committee's formal citation said the medal was awarded to Mr. Wright "For his powerful depiction in his books, "Uncle Tom's Children," and "Native Son", of the effect of proscription, segregation, and denial of opportunities to the American Negro. He has given to Americans who have eyes to see, a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive. The Award Committee salutes Mr. Wright as one of the most powerful of contemporary writers."

Accepting the medal, which will be presented to him at the Association's 32nd annual conference to be held in Houston, Texas, June 24-29, the noted author issued the following statement from his home in Brooklyn, New York:

"It is with a deep sense of responsibility that I accept the Spingarn Medal. I accept it in the name of the stalwart, enduring millions of Negroes whose fate and destiny I have sought to depict in terms of scene and narrative in imaginative fiction. It cannot be otherwise, for they are my people, and my writing—which is my life and which carries my convictions—attempts to mirror their struggles for freedom during these troubled days.

FEB 8 1941

"To be more explicit, I accept this award in the name of my father, a sharecropper on a Mississippi plantation, and in the name of my mother who sacrificed her health on numerous underpaid jobs, and in the name of the millions of others like them, whose hope for peace and security reflects the aspirations of the common people everywhere during this period of war and cataclysmic social change."

Name Honorees In Wings Over Jordan Program February 9th

FEB 15 1941

NEW YORK. — Showing slight odds in favor of cultural and athletic achievements, the 1940 Schomburg Collection Honor Roll in Race Relations announcing the names of 12 Negroes and six white persons was made public Sunday, Feb. 9 over the "Wings Over Jordan" radio program by Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg Collection of Negro Literature of the New York Public library.

Each year a nation-wide poll is conducted by the Schomburg Collection to determine the dozen Negroes (individuals, organizations or institutions) who have most distinguished themselves during the past year; and the half dozen whites (individuals, organizations or institutions), over the same period, who have done the most for the improvement of race relations "in terms of a real democracy." This is a feature of Negro History Week. No attempt was made to rank the names.

Dr. Reddick said in the course of the announcement that the efforts of those named demonstrate that democracy is indeed worth saving at home as well as abroad. The citations were as follows:

Negroes

LEO HANSBERRY, who with his staff of lawyers, won a victory before the United States Supreme Court which outlawed the residential restrictive covenants of Chicago property owners. These covenants would raise a color bar against Negro citizens living in certain areas of that city.

DOROTHY MAYNOR, for her beautiful voice and personal graciousness.

WILLIAM "DOLLY" KING of Long Island university, Brooklyn, New York. The football, basketball and baseball star who is generally considered to be the greatest athlete in the history of that university.

KENNY WASHINGTON of the University of California at Los Angeles, former "All-American" who made good in his first season as coach at his alma mater. He is the only Negro holding such a position in a leading American university.

HENRY ARMSTRONG, boxing history's only triple crown-holder. When he lost his last title in 1940, he went down like a champion. Armstrong has consistently stood against the segregation of Negro pugilists.

WILLIAM GRANT STILL, for his theme music for the New York World's Fair and for the score to Katherine Garrison Chapin's poem "And They Lynched Him on a Tree."

THE BENJAMIN MASON FAMILY of Philadelphia, who invested the $150,000 won on a sweepstakes ticket in a block of low-rent cooperative homes.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL BENJAMIN O. DAVIS, who rose from the ranks to the highest position attained by a Negro in the United States army. Brigadier-General Davis demonstrates the possibilities of the democratic principle in all phases of national defense.

THE AMERICAN NEGRO EXPOSITION AT CHICAGO. Conceived by James W. Washington and directed by Truman Gibson, Jr., this was a magnificent display of the cultural contributions of the Negro to American life.

COUNTEE CULLEN, for his book "The Lost Zoo," a high quality work of the imagination, written for children and others.

Whites

JUSTICE HUGO L. BLACK, in delivering two notable decisions of the United States Supreme Court, freed Negroes who had under torture confessed to crimes, denounced exclusion of Negroes from trial jury panels and declared that the Constitution of the United States requires that "protection to all must be given—not merely promised."

THE COURIER-JOURNAL of Louisville, Ky., which has been conspicuous for its fair treatment of the Negro in both its news and editorial columns. Also, it is the only Southern daily which carries (each Tuesday) a column of opinion written by Negroes.

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS, under the direction of Archibald MacLeish, has liberalized its employment policy and for the first time in history rendered an art, music, and book festival commemorating the anniversary of the proclamation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, who has repeatedly used the weight of his reputation to speak out for minority rights. In his own words "this country has still a heavy debt to discharge for all the troubles and disabilities it has laid on the Negro's shoulders."

THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA at Los Angeles has led the way by appointing to its coaching staff its great football star Kenny Washington, who happens to be a Negro.

Richard Wright To Receive The Spingarn Medal

FEB 7 - 1941

Author Is Chosen for 26th Award

Will Be Presented At Annual NAACP Meeting

NEW YORK — Because "He has given to Americans who have eyes to see, a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive," Richard Wright, 32-year-old author of "Uncle Tom's Children," and "Native Son", the 1940 best-seller novel, was made the 26th recipient of the Spingarn Gold Medal at a meeting of the award committee held here Thursday, January 23, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced today.

Acclaimed As Writer

The committee's formal citation said the medal was awarded to Mr. Wright "For his powerful depiction in his books, "Uncle Tom's Children," and "Native Son", of the effect of proscription, segregation, and denial of opportunities to the American Negro. He has given to Americans who have eyes to see, a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive. The Award Committee salutes Mr. Wright as one of the most powerful of contemporary writers."

Johnson, president of Howard University; and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune. National Youth Administration official.

FEB 7 - 1941

Expresses Thanks

Accepting the medal, which will be presented to him at the Association's 32nd annual conference to be held in Houston, Texas, June 24-29, the noted author issued the following statement from his home in Brooklyn, New York:

FEB 7 - 1941

"It is with a deep sense of responsibility that I accept the Spingarn Medal. I accept it in the name of the stalwart, enduring millions of Negroes whose fate and destiny I have sought to depict in terms of scene and narrative in imaginative fiction. It cannot be otherwise, for they are my people, and my writing — which is my life and, which carries my convictions—attempts to mirror their struggles for freedom during these troubled days."

The Spingarn Medal Award was instituted in 1914 by the late Joel E. Spingarn, who was formerly president of the N.A.A.C.P. It is awarded annually to the American Negro who has made the highest achievement during the preceding year or years in any honorable field of human endeavor. Its purpose is to "call the attention of the American people to the existence of distinguished merit and achievement among American Negroes, to serve as a reward for such achievement, and as a stimulus to the ambition of colored youth."

Mr. Spingarn died in July, 1939. In his will he set up a trust fund of $20,000 to pay and provide for the continuance of the annual award.

Books Scored

"Native Son", a Book-of-the-Month Club selection for March, 1940, sold more than 215,000 copies within the first week of publication, and during a period of six weeks went beyond 250,000 sales. Today it is still selling a considerable number of copies weekly. Material for the novel, which created wide discussion when it was first published, was based partly on boys he met in a Chicago rehabilitation school for Negro "Dead End" kids, and partly on the Robert Nixon case, according to Wright.

Nixon was a young Negro who died in the electric chair in Chicago in August, 1938, for killing a white woman.

"Uncle Tom's Children," a book of four long short stories, won high praise from the critics, when it was published in March, 1938. The stories won for Wright a $500 prize offered by Story magazine for the best work submitted by a WPA writer in a nation-wide contest.

Wright spent two and one-half months in Mexico last year. In collaboration with Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize winner, he has recently completed the dramatization of "Native Son". The play is expected to be ready for Broadway next spring.

Another of the Literati Awarded the Spingarn Medal

It's a thankless job to sit down and pick out the man of the year as the Spingarn Medal Committee did last week.

FEB 15 1941

There are so many nominations which might be made that no matter upon whom the choice falls, it can hardly be unanimous.

So the committee chose Richard Wright, author of "Native Son," which Dorothy Canfield Fisher calls "a very harrowing tale" of Bigger Thomas, who finds the conflict between American ideals and American race prejudice too much for his simple mind. But he wants freedom to live badly enough to kill for it and he justifies himself by saying it must have been right because he feels better.

It's quite a revolutionary book, just as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was nearly a hundred years ago—that is if Bigger Thomas is a true counterpart of Richard Wright or thousands of other young people today who have come to the conclusion that to resort to violence is the only way to end the caste system.

Bigger Thomas is the spiritual and literary descendant of the real Nat Turner, and Denmark Vesey. Even Frederick Douglass had moments in which he hated his tormentors as bitterly as did Bigger Thomas.

Mr. Wright's contribution to current-day literature is important, and the Spingarn Medal Committee is to be congratulated upon its choice.

FEB 15 1941

This isn't exactly the question we started out to raise, however. We note that in the past twenty-six years the committee has made similar awards to six authors, eight educators, four leaders in national movements, three singers and composers, two actors, one soldier, one insurance executive and one physician.

Therefore, 88 per cent of those honors have gone to literati and artists and a bare 12 per cent (actually three in number) to those in more practical occupations.

No clergyman, attorney, industrial chemist, architect, labor leader, social worker, or politician has ever been chosen the Spingarn man of the year.

We have no idea whether there is any moral to this, but if there is one, we imagine it has something to do with the fact that the award committee is drawn principally from the literary group.

Rode Black Mare In 1906 Derby—

Former Jockey, Prairie View Graduate, Is Meat Specialist

MAY 10 1941

HOUSTON—(ANP)—Orphaned at an early age, later becoming a runaway from an orphan asylum, J. H. Williams, known as the only Negro meat specialist in the South, and one of the country's foremost authorities in the curing and preservation of meats, now holding the important position of district county agent in Texas under the national defense program, has had a varied and interesting career.

The second annual South Texas meat show was held here recently. Over 1,600 pieces of farm cured and preserved meats were shown, most of which sold at the pegged price of 50 cents per pound and directed attention of the public on the work being done by this pint-sized man in Texas. He is known to intimates as "Pee Wee" Williams and his work has raised the standards of health and living for thousands of Negroes who participate in the extension work conducted by Texas.

MAY 10 1941

Once a Jockey

He has been a stable boy, exercise boy, jockey, Barnum and Bailey circus man, ranch hand, rodeo performer, trainer of horses, packing house employe, ranch foreman and is a World war veteran. He finished his schooling following his return from France in 1918. He was wounded in action at Soissons and Metz.

Born in Louisville, he and a younger brother were placed in an orphan asylum when their parents died. He later ran away and became a stable hand at Churchill Downs. Gaining a large amount of experience on the track, he soon rose to be one of the leading jockeys of that day. He rode Black Mare in the Derby of 1906. It was while a jockey that the nickname of "Pee Wee" was fastened to him for life.

Following an injury on the track while riding a horse, he drifted westward and became a ranch hand for Col. Zack Mulhall, owner of one of the biggest ranches in Oklahoma. His knowledge of horses made him an expert horsebreaker and trainer and he soon became ranch foreman with several white employes under him. Col. Mulhall treated him more like a son than employe, according to Williams.

Entry into the World war drafted him for the army. Though he had broken hundreds of horses to be sold to the army he was placed in the infantry, despite efforts of friends to secure him a place in the cavalry. He served 11 months overseas, returning home as a sergeant.

He went back to ranching following his release from the army. It was during this time that he entered many rodeas, winning several prizes. He also spent a period with Barnum and Bailey's circus before going to Chicago where he worked in the packing houses.

Prairie View Graduate

Deciding to enter and finish school, he came to Texas and entered Prairie View State college, 115 miles from here, graduating in 1924. He also attended Iowa State college at Ames, Iowa after receiving his B.S. in agriculture from Prairie View.

MAY 10 1941

Entering extension work in Milam county, in 1925, his knowledge of meats and their cure and preservation, learned from ranchers in Oklahoma, soon led to his promotion to agent in charge of meats. According to him, the ranchers had a secret methods of preserving meats which has later been adopted by Texas A. M. college, white, which is a leader in this movement.

In the nine years he has been in charge of this work in Texas, he has saved farm families thousand of dollars in prevention of spoilation of home cured meats. Millions of pounds of pork and beef products are preserved in Texas each year. There are 200 agents working under him, all appointed by the state, which pays a small part of the $1,800 yearly salary. The counties in which they work pays the larger part of this salary. All are taught the methods being used by Williams.

While preservation of meats is his job and his contribution to national defense, his hobby is the tanning of fine leather. So excellent is his leather-craft, that he is called to Tuskegee yearly to teach classes. He is said to be the only Negro in America capable of teaching this fine art.

MAY 10 1941

In speaking of the work with colored farm families, he said to this reporter: "There is usually one well trained man in half the communities we work with. He is capable of doing this work well. They are responsible in no small way for the scope of this work. The Negroes contribution to national defense will be through development of cured meats, to breed a type of hogs of a definite weight, which will more nearly supply the demand of packers. Packers demand a hog in a weight range of 175 to 225 pounds. They need not be pure bred hogs but should be well bred."

When asked what was the difference in packing house meat and home cured, he replied: "The meat cured at home is slow cured, giving it a chance to dry out, thus making a more solid piece of meat. The gravy from such a ham is rich, red and tasty. Packing house meat is usually less solid, the grease from the fats being watery. Connoiseurs of meats enjoy the taste of farm cured hams and bacons."

Young-looking, short, energetic, Williams is an indefatigable worker, is an interesting talker, knows meats as perhaps no other man in the country, does. He has been a judge of meats in all sections of the state, judging meats in the shows which are held often.

Janitor Turns Chemist; Discovers 25 Products

MAY 10 1941

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., May 8—Tutored whenever opportunity permitted, by Dr. S. J. Lloyd, Dean of the School of Chemistry at the University of Alabama here, and devoting all of his spare time to research experiments, Sam May, head janitor for the school, has already developed upward of 25 separate products, some of which are believed to have commercial possibilities, from vegetables and cover crops as well as a variety of ordinary weeds heretofore considered useless pests.

From the fibre of the okra plant, a vegetable whose edible seed pods are on every Southern home and restaurant menu throughout the summer months, May has produced thread closely resembling silk, demonstrating that it may be woven into a soft, glossy fabric; and performed other remarkable feats of like nature, much in the same manner as the famous scientific wizard Dr. George Washington Carver of Tuskegee Institute.

During the recent annual Chemistry Day observance at the university, products of the research work of May, who is said to be remarkably adept at working out chemical formulas and equations, formed one of the most interesting of the many exhibits displayed.

REELECT MRS. FAY ALLEN TO LOS ANGELES SCHOOL BOARD

LOS ANGELES.—Mrs. Fay E. Allen, the only Negro ever to be elected to the Los Angeles board of education, was reelected in a city election here Tuesday, May 6.

Mrs. Allen ran without benefit of machine politics and into the opposition of some Negro leaders. She polled more than 128,000 votes. It required 126,000 to return her to office and there are about 60,000 Negro residents of Los Angeles hardly 40 per cent of whom voted.

Mrs. Allen is a music teacher at the Thomas Jefferson high school. She is an official in the local Musicians Union. During the campaign, she did not receive the full support of the Negro group but was openly campaigned against by many disgruntled political leaders.

Mrs. Allen is the only Negro woman in the United States holding a school board office by general election.

Richard Wright Wins The Spingarn Award

FEB 1 1941

Richard Wright, 32-year-old Negro author, has been awarded the 1940 Spingarn medal for his two books: "Uncle Tom's Children" and the best-seller "Native Son," it was announced here yesterday.

The Spingarn medal is one of the most widely known awards in the country.

The award was made by the Spingarn Award Committee, which met here last Thursday, Jan. 23, according to an announcement by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

RICHARD WRIGHT

Accepting the medal which will be presented to him at the Association's 32nd Annual Conference to be held in Houston, Texas, in June the noted Negro author stated:

"It is with a deep sense of responsibility that I accept the Spingarn medal. I accept it in the name of the stalwart, enduring millions of Negroes whose fate and destiny I have sought to depict in terms of scene and narrative in imaginative fiction. It cannot be otherwise, for they are my people, and my writing—which is my life and, which carries my convictions —attempts to mirror their struggles for freedom during these troubled days.

"To be more explicit, I accept this award in the name of my father, a sharecropper on a Mississippi plantation, and in the name of my mother who sacrificed her health on numerous underpaid jobs, and in the name of the millions of others like them, whose hope for peace and security reflects the aspirations of the common people everywhere during this period of war and cataclysmic social change."

SALUTE AUTHOR

The committee's formal citation said the medal was awarded to Mr Wright "For his powerful depiction in his books, "Uncle Tom's Children," and "Native Son," of the effect of proscription, segregation and denial of opportunities to the American Negro. He has given to Americans who have eyes to see, a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive. The Award Committee salutes Mr. Wright as one of the most powerful of contemporary writers."

Wright is the 26th recipient of the Spingarn medal which is awarded annually.

Wright spent two and one-half months in Mexico last year. In collaboration with Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize winner, he has recently completed the dramatization of "Native Son." The play is expected to be ready for production on Broadway in the Spring. He is working on a 30,000-word commentary text for a picture book dealing with Negro life in the United States. A novel which seeks to portray the effects of urban industrial civilization upon the personalities of Negro women, has been "moving along," he says, and he expects to complete it by next Fall. Wright's brilliant short story, "Bright and Morning Star," is now in the process of publication by International Publishers.

FEB 1 1941

LIST OF WORKS

The following is a list of Mr. Wright's published writings:

Spingarn Medal Goes to Wright

FEB 8

NEW YORK — Selection of Richard Wright, author of "Native Son," as the twenty-sixth recipient of the Spingarn Medal, was announced by the NAACP last week.

The award committee, meeting here on Thursday, picked the 32-year-old novelist, "for his powerful depiction in his books, 'Uncle Tom's Children,' and 'Native Son,' of the effect of proscription, segregation and denial of opportunities to colored Americans.

FEB 8 1941

Must Face Picture

"He has given to Americans who have eyes to see," the committee's statement continues, "a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive. The award committee salutes Mr Wright as one of the most powerful of contemporary writers."

Accepting the medal, which will be presented to him at the association's thirty-second annual conference to be held in Houston, Texas, June 24-29, the noted author issued the following statement from his home in Brooklyn, N.Y.:

Credits Suffering Millions

"It is with a deep sense of responsibility that I accept the Spingarn Medal. I accept it in the name of the stalwart, enduring millions of colored Americans whose fate and destiny I have sought to depict in terms of scene and narrative in imaginative fiction.

"It cannot be otherwise, for they are my people, and my writing—which is my life and, which

"To be more explicit, I accept this award in the name of my father, a sharecropper on a Mississippi plantation, and in the name of my mother, who sacrificed her health on numerous underpaid jobs, and in the name of the millions of others like them, whose hope for peace and security reflects the aspirations of the common people everywhere during this period of war and cataclysmic social change."

Awarded Since 1914

The Spingarn Medal Award was instituted in 1914, by the late Joel E. Spingarn, who was formerly president of the NAACP. It is awarded annually to the colored American who has made the highest achievement during the preceding year or years in any honorable field of human endeavor.

Mr. Spingarn died in July 1939. In his will he set up a trust fund of $20,000 to pay and provide for the continuance of the annual award.

Committee Members

Members of the award committee are:

Dr. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the New York Community Church; Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, National Youth Administration official.

Was Best Seller

"Native Son," a Book-of-the-Month Club selection for March, 1940, sold more than 215,000 copies within the first week of publication, and during a period of six weeks went beyond 250,000 sales. Today it is still selling a considerable number of copies weekly.

Material for the novel, which created wide discussion, when it was first published, was based partly on boys he met in a Chicago rehabilitation school for colored "Dead End Kids," and party on the case of Robert Nixon, who died in the electric chair in Chicago in August, 1938, killing a white woman.

Has Had 5 Translations

Wright wrote the book in Brooklyn, N.Y., after receiving a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1939. The novel has been translated and published in the Portuguese, Russian, German (Swiss publishing house), English (British), and Swedish language.

"Uncle Tom's Children," a book of four long short stories, won high praise from the critics when it was published in March, 1938. The stories won for Wright a $500 prize offered by Story Magazine for the best work submitted by a WPA writer in a nation-wide contest.

Wright spent two and one-half months in Mexico last year. In collaboration with Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize winner, he has recently completed the dramatization of "Native Son." The play is expected to be ready for production on Broadway in the spring.

A NEW SPINGARN MEDALIST

The Spingarn Medal Committee has selected as the 26th recipient of the Spingarn Medal, Richard Wright, author of the novel, "Native Son." FEB 8 1941

The Spingarn Medal is awarded annually "to the American Negro who has made the highest achievement during the preceding year or years in any honorable field of human endeavor," and in this instance Richard Wright is supposed to fill the bill.

There is usually some doubt in the minds of thoughtful American Negroes each year when the Spingarn Medal winner is announced, as to the merit of the award, and the selection for 1940 will perhaps have some dissenters.

It is often thought that the Spingarn Medal Committee looks around to see which Negro has received the most applause from white people and then makes him or her the year's medalist.

Mr. Dooley once said that "Th' Soopreeme Court follows th' election returns." It seems that the Medal Committee acts on the same principle.

Those who have not critically read "Native Son" will applaud the selection of the Committee, but the discerning minority will find it difficult to share this enthusiasm.

Mr. Wright's portrayal of Negro life and character leaves a great deal to be desired by Negroes, regardless of what white people may think.

A LIBRARIAN

MAR 27 1941

For almost a quarter of a century as assistant librarian of Congress, my work took me through million upon millions of pages of evey kind of book imagineable, and among them was Gregorie's "Inquiry Concerning Intellectual and Moral Faculties and Literature of the Negroes."

Two fallacies have been long entertained regarding the Negro. The first, that Theodore Roosevelt was the first president of the United States to entertain a Negro in his home. The second that Paul Lawrence Dunbar, was the first Negro poet in America. MAR 27 1941

But, the man whom credit is due for saving to the American people L'Enfant's original plan of the city of Washington, and that was later sold to Governor Woodward for laying out the plan of Detroit, was in reality, the first to be formally invited as guest to the home of Thomas Jefferson, at Monticello, who was then president of theUnited States—and that man was none other than Benjamin Banneker.

The second fallacy is as easily exploded as the first, for Jupiter Hommon wrote the poem, "An Evening Thought," in 1760 and that year antedates Phillis Wheatley's first poem by about ten years. And, Wheatly's first poem was written when Dunbar was only one year of age.

To the great mass of readers, it will be news to learn that Robert Browning, Henry Timrod, the Southern poet, Alexander Pushkin, Russia's greatest poet and Alexander Hamilton, the American statesman, were octoroons. And the same can be said of General Dumas, father of Alexander Dumas, and so was the imortal author of "Monte Cristo" and "The Three Guardsmen."

MAR 27 1941

The second president of the republic of Mexico was a colored man. And so was the man in comand of the French troops in China during the Boxer uprising—General Dodd.

My own compilation of "Murray's Encyclopeda of the Colored Race," was the result of more than twenty years research and labor as assistant librarian to Ainsworth R. Spofford, librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C.

MAR 27 1941

To contend that the Negro race has been without frequent manifestations of genius, is to speak without knowledge of historical facts.

Who Am I? Answer: Daniel Murray.

FOUR ALABAMIANS GET FELLOWSHIPS

MAY 1 - 1941

(From Yesterday's Final Edition)

Four Alabamians and two Mississippians were among 24 white Southerners and 40 Negroes selected out of more than 500 applicants for Julius Rosenwald Fund fellowships totaling $100,000 and averaging $1,500. Associated Press reported Tuesday night.

The Alabamians were listed as William O. Brown, of Howard College; Leon F. Sensabaugh, of Birmingham-Southern College; Frederick S. Barkalow, Jr., of the Alabama Department of Conservation, and Thomas N. Roberts, Negro, of Tuskegee. A fellowship was also awarded Bell I. Wiley, University of Mississippi, and Edward A. McLellan, Summer, Miss., the dispatch said.

The fellowships were granted, it was explained, in two categories; to white Southerners who wish to work on some problem distinctive to the South and who expect to follow their careers in that region and to Negroes in any field from any part of the United States.

Georgians Win 7 Rosenwald Fellowships

MAY 1 - 1941

Among 64 Granted $1,500 To Advance Study of Problems

MAY 1 - 1941

Seven Georgians were among the 64 receiving the Julius Rosenwald Fellowships totaling $100,000, according to an announcement made yesterday in Chicago.

Four of the Georgia winners are white, while three are Negroes. The fellowships, averaging $1,500 each, were granted in two categories. One for Negroes in any field and any par of the United States, and to white southerners who wish to work on some problem distinctive to the south and who expect to follow their careers in the south.

The Georgia white winners are: Frederick S. Barkalow, of Marietta, a graduate of Georgia Tech, now employed by the Alabama Department of Conservation; Glenn W. Rainey, also a Tech graduate; LeRoy W. Watson Jr., a graduate of Georgia, and Gordon R. Willey, of Macon.

The Negro winners are John Hope II, Spelman and Atlanta University; Mahlon C. Rianey, Brunswick, and Mabel Smythe, Fort Valley State College.

Barkalow has already had a year of post-graduate work at the University of Michigan, where he studied zoology and plans to return to Michigan to seek his doctorate.

Pulitzer Awards

MAY 10 1941

The advistory board of the Graduate School of Journalism of Columbia University, which constitutes the Pulitzer Award Committee, may affect the air of gods on Olympus but their feet are immersed in the mire of present-day frictions and antagonisms. The board has again labored and brought forth a curious set of selections. Year after year the selections in the fields of drama, history, editorial writing, biography, reporting, poetry, cartooning and the novel have become more curious. We are slowly coming to the conclusion that if the awards ever had any merits, they are totally without merit today.

The awards clearly reflect the prejudices of the members of the board and nothing else. They are supposed to be given for the most significant contributions in the various fields. We are of the opinion as are many other fair-minded people white and Negro that the most significant contribution in the field of the novel was made by a young Negro, Richard Wright. Mr. Wright's novel, NATIVE SON, employed a technique that was new in the American novel. Except for Doistoyefsky and Gorki the profound depths reached in this novel have never been equalled before.

The book was well written. Probably its worse crime was that it carried a message. We can conceive of how this failed to meet with the approval of Mr. Howe, formerly of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Frank R. Kent of the Baltimore Sun, and Dean Carl W. Ackerman. A book with social implications in these times is a dangerous thing, indeed to such gentlemen.

MAY 10 1941

Thirty-nine literary critics selected Hemingway's FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS, as the best novel of the year. The Pulitzer committee ignored this and made no selection. No explanation of their failure to select any novel was made public by the trustees. The terms of the award are "for a distinguished novel published during the year by an American author, preferably dealing with American life." It was pointed out that this latter qualification may have weighed against Hemingway's book because it dealt with the fascist war of intervention in Spain. Then why not NATIVE SON? It clearly meets this qualification. Could it be that it meets it too well? Is it too close to the American scene? The gentlemen of the board should tell us. We are sure that anything they have to say on the subject would be most enlightening.

Curious though, that this should be the objection in a novel when the award in the field of drama was made to Sherwood Anderson for his THERE SHALL BE NO NIGHT. This play dealt with the war against the Swedo-Finnish rulers of Finland by the Soviet Union. The conditions for this award are "for the original American play, performed in New York, which shall represent in marked fashion the educational value and power of the stage, PREFERABLY DEALING WITH AMERICAN LIFE."

It is no accident that the Pulitzer award goes to not a single Negro in any field. It is no accident that they had to dig up an unknown poet by the name of Leonard Baker and award his innocuous vaporing. How does it happen that they pick a slopily sentimentalized cartoon by Burck to give the award for cartoons and Westbrook Pegler, that reactionary anti-labor, anti-Negro baiter possessed of a Civil War mentality, for distinguished reporting? Remember its award to GONE WITH THE WIND in 1937 and see if you do not agree with us that there is a definite pattern in the method of the committee's awards. It is a curious note of the times, and yet not so curious, that none but THE HOLLOW MEN are appreciated by those who would control not only the economic destiny but the literary fate of the country.

There is a healthy antidote to this sort of thing. It may be found in the number of genuine peoples' artists and writers that are more and more coming to the front today. It is to be found in the wholesome, enthusiastic acceptance of these artists and writers by the people. Despite the Pulitzer awards or any other such Olympian set of gods, Negroes may be justly proud that they are represented among these progressive artists and writers. They are writers and artists with a message. It is the message of the future and the winds of tomorrow guide their sails. The gentlemen may reject Richard Wright today, but history and the people will reject the gentlemen of the committee tomorrow.

RECOGNITION IS GIVEN SOUTHERN NEGROES

James McDonald, a 21-year-old Negro artist of Greenville, S.C., was featured in a special article in the "Greenville News" of March 9th. The white daily carried a three column cut showing the artist and two of his paintings. Of McDonald himself the "News" commented: "His earnestness and willingness to learn; his determination to master racial barriers between him and a cherished career and his exceptional gift of using a brush has given McDonald ambition to conquer all underlying currents to do something that will be worthwhile—despite hardships in his life."

Dr. George W. Carver has developed a new drug from the persimmon for the treatment of pyorrhea. The drug is in the experimental stage and Dr. Carver asked that it not be put on the market until it had been thoroughly tested by the dental profession. The Dental Society of the John A. Andrew Clinical Society of Tuskegee Institute agreed to this request and appointed a committee to carry on control experimentation of the drug.

Meharry Medical School, Nashville, Tenn., one of two such schools for Negroes, says in a recent report that the rural Negro doctor of the South treats about five hundred patients a year, nearly half of which are "charity cases."

Dr. Horace Mann Bond, President of Georgia State College, Fort Valley, has received special citation by the American Education Research for his book on "Negro Education in Alabama."

"One Tenth of a Nation," a film showing Negro education in the South, has just been releasd in New York. Produced under a grant from the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation it takes 26 minutes to show. The actors are Negroes. The film shows both the poor run-down, rural Negro schools and the institutions of higher learning. Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, Dr. J. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, secretary of the National Y. M. C. A., Claude A. Barnett, of the Associated Negro Press, and Dr. Arthur Wright, of the Southern Foundation, engaged in the preliminary work on the picture.

Collier Anderson Wins History Oratorical Bee

FEB 22 1941

Collier Anderson, recent winner of the Boys High School Oratorical Contest, added another notch to his success on Sunday afternoon when he won the championship in the Eighth Annual Negro History Bee of the Students' Literary and Debating League at Carlton Y.M.C.A. There were twelve contestants and the special speaker was Roy Wilkins, editor of the Crisis magazine.

Anderson was the only veteran in the contest. Two years ago he was also the winner but could do no better than second last year. The 1940 champion was Canute July who defaulted this year. At his graduation from P. S. 35, Anderson was the valedictorian of his class.

The runner-up was George Carroll, a newcomer. Mr. Carroll is a student of Brooklyn College and he missed four questions, while the winner missed three. He was vigorously applauded by the vast audience for his effort. Clarence McAllister, graduate of James Madison, won the third prize, having missed five questions. Anderson received ten dollars as a reward and Carroll, five dollars.

Mr. Wilkins dwelt on the need of the study of Negro history and suggested that Negroes should also carry the message to white groups so that there might be a better understanding and appreciation of our position. At the close of the address, Miss Myrtle Creasy, the League publicity chairman, presented Mr Wilkins with the club's annual membership in the NAACP. She urged other Negro groups to take out memberships in this organization, thus assisting in promoting its work.

Piano selections were offered by Miss Doris McCatty, Miss Violet Ifill, and Miss Doris Wiltshire, who played the Negro National Anthem. Wesley McD. Holder, founder and president of the League presented the prizes. Randolph O'Neale was the interlocutor and Clyde G. Atwell was chairman. The program was arranged by Junious Watford, the club's vice-president.

Dr. Rayford Logan Honored With Commander Of Order Of Honor And Merit By Head Of Haitian Government

NOV 1 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—M. Elie Lescot, president of Haiti, has just named Dr. Rayford W. Logan, professor of history at Howard University Commander in the Order of Honor and Merit, it was revealed today by university officials.

This signal honor, which is the rank above Chevalier, was conferred upon Dr. Logan especially because of his recent book entitled "The Diplomatic Relations of the United States with Haiti, 1776—1891," published by the University of North Carolina Press.

First Lieutenant

Professor Logan is a product of the Washington High Schools and of Williams College, Class of 1917. Immediately after leaving college he enlisted in the First Separate Battalion, D. C. National Guards. He was promoted to first lieutenant and saw action in the Argonne Forest with the 372nd Regiment of Infantry where he received a concussion of the brain.

Dr. Logan remained a number of years in Europe as secretary and interpreter of the Pan-African Congresses and as secretaire-adjoint of the Pan-African Association.

After his return to the United States he taught at Virginia Union University, served as assistant to Dr. Carter G. Woodson and became head of the department of history at Atlanta University.

Dr. Logan obtained his doctorate from Harvard University in 1936, and since 1938, he has been a professor of history at Howard University. He is a member of the Advisory Committee of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

$1000 Scholarships Awarded By Omega Psi Phi

OCT 24 1941

WASHINGTON—Edward Ferguson, Jr., an instructor in biology in the Stowe Teachers College of the St. Louis Public Schools, St. Louis, Mo., has been chosen to receive the third annual Omega Psi Phi Fellowship of $500, it was announced this week by Dr. W. Montague Cobb, chairman of the Scholarship Commission.

At the same time, Dr. Cobb announced the names of recipients of $100 scholarships for five students in undergraduate school.

The grant awarded Ferguson will enable him to spend one semester in residence at the University of Illinois for completion of the requirements for the Ph. D. in Zoology, including the preparation of a doctoral dissertation on "The Life Cycle of Some American Ostracoda (fresh-water shellfish)."

He has already received the A. B. (1929) and M. S. (1933) degrees from the University of Illinois, majoring always in Zoology. He has served as Professor of Biology in State A. & M. College, Orangeburg, S. C., 1929-32, 1933-36; and in Southern University, Scotlandville, La., 1936-37, 1938-40. During the year 1940-41, he was a teacher of biology in the Sumner High School of St. Louis, Mo. He is a member of the Sigma Xi, Phi Sigma, American Microscopical Society and American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Ferguson is a native of Dawson, Ga. He is 34 years old, is married and has two children. Two articles from his pen have been published in the Journal of Negro Education and his success in teaching has been highly commended.

Scholarships

The five scholarships of $100 each went to Andrew Norwood Aheart, 20, senior at Virginia Union University, Richmond, who received a similar award last year; Daniel Webster Boddie, 19, junior, also at Virginia Union University; Ernest James Davis, 18, junior at Howard University, Washington; LeRoy Wilson Bowers, 18, junior at Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte; and Reuben Ernest Lawson, 19, junior at Virginia State College, Ettrick, Va.

Aheart is from Wildwood, Va.; Boddie comes from New Rochelle, N. Y.; Davis is a Washingtonian; Bowers' home is in Orange, N. J. and Lawson lives in Danville, Va.

Members of the Scholarship Commission include, besides the chairman, who is professor of anatomy, Howard University School of Medicine; S. Randolph Edmonds, Professor of Dramatics, Dillard University; Dr. Percy L. Julian, chemist; Dean David A. Lane, Louisville Municipal College; Dr. S. Milton Nabrit, Atlanta University. Z. Alexander Looby, of Nashville, Tennessee, is Grand Basileus of the Fraternity.

3 NEGROES ARE NAMED ON LIST OF CITATIONS

Acts Of Bravery Fail To Adhere To American Color-Line Credo

PITTSBURGH.—(ANP) — The Carnegie Hero Fund commission, in its fall meeting here last Friday, announced that out of 24 acts of heroism recognized during the last year, two Negroes were awarded a bronze medal, two white men received like awards for attempts to save the life of a Negro. Two men, one white and one colored died in rescuing attempts.

NOV 8 1941

The first award went to Wess Scott, 60 years old, Abbeville, S. C., who successfully saved Eugene Morrow, 44, from gas suffocation in a 65 foot well on April 17.

Scott had three other men lower him into the well by a rope tied around his thigh, and when he reached Morrow, he fastened the rope around Morrow, who was then drawn to the surface. Scott was then brought up from the well.

A medal was awarded to Johnnie H. Coffield, Midland, Tex., whose son, Eddie B., 16, died while attempting to save Wilbert Ball, 10, from drowning in the South Concho River, San Angelo, Tex., on May 23. Wilbert fell into the river in eight feet of water, five feet from the bank.

Coffield, although a poor swimmer, and fully clothed, dived into the water and came within four feet of Ball. Coffield sank and was drowned, but another unidentified man rescued Wilbert. The luckless rescurer's body was recovered 40 minutes later.

James Patrick Knight, Sr., 35 and Gary J. Valentine, 24, white, of Natchez and Cannonsburg, Miss., respectively, were awarded bronze medals for their unsuccessful attempts to rescue Rudolph Dyer, 21, from suffocation at Washington, Miss., September 1, 1940.

Dyer had been overcome by gas in an underground silo, and was lying on silage 25 feet below the open top. Knight lowered himself into the silo in an attempt to rescue Dyer, but he too succumbed to the gas.

Valentine, after trying to pull Knight out, was lowered into the silo and then affected the rescue of both Dyer and Knight. However, the two men had already succumbed to the gas and could not be revived.

Reader's Digest Honors Pickens

His "Death Detail" Chosen As Best Article Of 1930

NEW YORK CITY—(ANP)—The Reader's Digest, internationally known magazine, recently announced that it had chosen the best article written in each of the last 20 years. In its selection of noteworthy manuscripts, the honor for having the best one for 1930 went to Dean William Pickens, treasury staff assistant and noted lecturer.

His article, "Death Detail," was picked out of 400 others for that year by 12 eminent writers who composed the judging committee. These literary authorities averred that "Death Detail," describing the trial and execution of 13 Negro soldiers of the Houston, "Riots," was the best of 1930. Comprising the committee were Bruce Barton, John Erskine, John Kieran, Christopher Morely, William Lyon Phelps, Robert Sherwood, Dorothy Canfield, Helen Hayes, Paul de Kruif, Kathleen Norris, Mary Roberts Rhinehart, and Lowell Thomas. NOV 15 1941

Selection of articles for each of 20 years to be judged by this final committee was originally made by the Digest's regular board of editors, who selects about 400 from in 35 or 40 of the best magazines the thousands written and printed and other periodicals during the given year. From these 400 articles, the committee picks the one which is most outstanding.

Published with 19 others in the Digest's current "20th Anniversary Anthology," the article in the form of a letter by one of the guards to folks back home tells a vivid story of the detention, court-martial and execution of the 13 soldiers.

Spingarn Award Suggested for Chicagoan Who Lead Long Fight

CHICAGO.—Colonel William Henry Huff, poet and attorney-at-law, was endorsed by a large group this week as the "Negro on the American continent who has merited the honor" of the Spingarn Medal, it was announced Wednesday. The award is made annually to the man or woman of African descent in the United States who has made the most noteworthy achievements during the past year or years. The donor was the late Joel Spingarn, former president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. NOV 15 1941

Mr. Huff has been acclaimed by his sponsors as "the man who risked all for those poor, wretched, ragged, untutored millions, broken in mind, body and spirit and shrunken in belly," and the leader whose "crusade not only resulted in a Federal investigation of peonage conditions in Oglethorpe County, Georgia, but opened the eyes of the people of the nation to the presence in the world's greatest democracy to a condition as hideous and heinous as any practiced in the baliwick of Hitler."

HARVARD MEDICAL SCHOOL ADMITS NEGRO STUDENT

Brilliant Young Student First To Be Admitted In 14 Years—Boston Schools Are Divided On Accepting Negro Medical Students.

MAR 8 1941

BOSTON, Mar. 6—(ANP)—Bernard Whitfield Robinson, high ranking honor student at Boston college, whc will graduate in June, is the first Negro student to be admitted to the Harvard Medical school in the past 14 years.

An honor graduate from the Boston Latin school, he has been on the dean's list for the past four years. He is a member of Sigma chapter, Alpha Phi Alpha. The last Negro to enter and graduate is Philadelphia's brilliant young Dr. Douglas Stubbs who received his M.D. cum laude in 1931.

Attention has recently been focused on the plight of the Negro doctors, internes and medical students in their quest to obtain clinical experience and treat patients in the various hospitals, by an article written by the feature writer of the town's leading conservative daily, the Boston Transcript.

An applicant to Tuft's Medical school who is at present a senior in the college department was reported to have been told bluntly, by the dean, "We do not admit Negroes." MAR 8 1941

At Boston university's school of medicine, there are two colored students, one in the first and the other in the second year class.

Agitation for a colored hospital which erupts intermittingly to give the integrationists a headache, presumably to remedy this condition, is unwarranted by two facts. The first—at the Boston City hospital where both student and staff Negro nurses care for colored and white patients, the superintendent, Dr. James W. Manary says, "The system has worked excellently." Second—there are 25,000 Negroes in Boston all directly or indirectly taxpayers who support those city administered hospials and should demand and get recognition.

Union Social Scientist On 1940 Virginia Honor Roll

RICHMOND, Va. — For service "above and beyond what was expected of him," Dr. Henry Jared McGuinn, director of the division of social science at Virginia Union University, was included in a list of 13 outstanding Virginians in the fourth annual Virginia Honor Roll for 1940, published Sunday by the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

A practical sociologist, Dr. McQuinn is the member of the Housing Authority of Richmond.

The selection of this Virginia Honor Roll is a special project of the Times-Dispatch which annually honors those Virginians who have taken an outstanding position of leadership in the affairs of the state and the nation.

PRE-EMINENCE REQUIRED

Says the Times-Dispatch about its Honor Roll: "This newspaper salutes at the end of each year, a limited number of persons who have reflected credit upon the state through the display of courage, ability, intelligence, tenacity, generosity and unselfishness.

"Citizens in every sphere of activity are considered eligible for inclusion, provided they have been pre-eminent in that sphere. It should be stressed that pre-eminence does not necessarily connote statewide prominence.

"The Times-Dispatch makes it a practice to hail the achievements of those whose theatre of action is comparatively limited, provided their achievements are inherently worthwhile . . . A place on the honor roll goes only to those who achieve above and beyond what is expected of them. It is not sufficient to do a job well. It must be done superlatively well."

JAN 1 1 1941

THREE OTHERS HONORED

In the past three years, three other outstanding Negroes of Virginia have been honored on this honor roll. They were as follows: W. M. Cooper, extension director of Hampton Institute; L. F.

Dr. McQuinn, who is credited with doing much to crystalize public opinion favoring federal slum clearance projects in Richmond, was appointed to the Housing Authority created by newly elected Mayor Gordon B. Ambler last fall.

OTHERS ON ROLL

The 12 other outstanding Virginians, who along with Mr. McQuinn achieved notably during the year 1940, were as follows:

JAN 1 1 1941

Lieutenant-Colonel Mills F. Neal, who stepped down from the active management of his tobacconists' supply business to accept the directorship of selective service in Virginia, and who is also the alert president of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce.

Bishop Henry St. George Tucker direct descendant of the Washingtons of Mt. Vernon and presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States.

William B. Thalhimer, outstanding Richmond businessman and merchant, and an active and generous community leader.

Dr. W. W. Waddell, Jr., and Dr. DuPont Guerry of the University of Virginia Medcial School, who discovered that by administering vitamin K to expectant mothers and the newly born, hemorrhages responsible for from 25 to 40 per cent of infant deaths can be prevented.

Mrs. Rebecca Yancey Williams, Richmond author, whose book, "The Vanishing Virginian," dealt with what has been called the "interbellum" period of Virginia's history.

H. Coleman Baskerville, the architect who designed the new hospital of the Medical College of Virginia, the most modern of its kind in the United States.

Brigadier-General Leonard T. Gerow, of Petersburg, who was recently made chief of the war plans division of the Army's general staff, a position of highest importance in the planning of the defense of America.

SERVES COUNTRY

Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., who gave up a $100,000 per year salary and the highest job in the steel industry, to serve his country as raw materials chief of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Dr. Belle Boone Beard, chairman of the department of economics and sociology at Sweet Briar College, who planned the highly efficient merit system for the administration of the public welfare program in Virginia.

John LaTouche, 24-year old Richmonder, who has achieved notably in the sphere of the theatre and music. He authored "Ballad for Americans" and the current Booadway hit, "Cabin in the Sky."

Frederic William Boatwright, president of the University of Richmond, and the oldest University president in point of continuous service in America.

Medal for Negro Achievement Goes to the Author of Best-Selling 'Native Son'

N.Y.

'POWERFUL' WRITING CITED

FEB 1 1941

Novelist, Accepting, Says He Seeks to Depict Struggles of His People for Freedom

FEB 1 1941

Richard Wright, 32-year-old Negro author of the best-selling novel, "Native Son," which is based in part on the case of Robert Nixon, a Negro who died in the electric chair in Chicago in 1938 for killing a white woman, was named yesterday as the twenty-sixth winner of the Spingarn Medal. The medal is awarded annually to the American Negro who "shall have made the highest achievement during the preceding year in any honorable field of endeavor."

The award was announced following a meeting of a committee of persons in public life and advocates of Negro advance held at the offices of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The committee's citation accompanying the award said that it had gone to Mr. Wright "for his powerful depiction in his books, 'Native Son' and 'Uncle Tom's Children,' of the effects of proscription, segregation and denial of opportunities to the American Negro." He has given to Americans "who have eyes to see a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive," the citation said. The committee saluted Mr. Wright as "one of the most powerful of contemporary writers."

Award Established in 1914

The Spingarn Medal was established in 1914 by the late Joel E. Spingarn, for many years the president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, as a reward for achievement among Negroes and to serve as a stimulus to the ambition of Negro youth. Mr. Spingarn died in July, 1939. In his will be set up a trust fund to provide for the continuance of the award.

Accepting the medal, which will be presented at the association's annual conference at Houston, Texas, in June, the author issued the following statement from his home in Brooklyn:

"It is with a deep sense of responsibility that I accept the Spingarn Medal. I accept in the name of the stalwart, enduring millions of Negroes whose fate and destiny I have sought to depict in terms of scene and narrative in imaginative fiction. It cannot be otherwise, for they are my people, and my writing —which is my life and which carries my convictions — attempts to mirror their struggles for freedom during these troubled days."

He accepted the award, he said, in the name of his father, "a sharecropper on a Mississippi plantation, and in the name of my mother, who sacrificed her health on numerous underpaid jobs, and in the name of the millions of others like them, whose hope for peace and security reflects the aspirations of the common people everywhere during this period of war and cataclysmic social change."

Quick Rise to Popularity

Mr. Wright's literary career had been unspectacular until last year. His poems and short stories had appeared in a variety of periodicals from 1931 on. In 1938 Harper's published a book of four long short stories under the title "Uncle Tom's Children." Then in March, last year, his "Native Son" was named a Book-of-the-Month selection and became one of the fastest selling books in recent publishing history. More than 250,000 copies, including the book club's copies, were sold within six weeks.

THE SPINGARN MEDAL AN ISSUE

Editor Joe Mitchell of the St. Louis Argus, rises to remark, that the fight over the Spingarn Medal, as to whom it may go, is likely to cheapen the merit or purpose for which the Medal is awarded. Brother Mitchell says, we all understand that this award, is made primarily by the officers of the N. A. A. C. P. notwithstanding the fact, that a committee is supposedly appointed to make the award. This statement coming from so high authority as Editor Joe Mitchell, lets the "cat out of the water"; and since as a rule, the officers have been passing the Medal around among themselves, from one to another; using a committee as a screen to hide their hand, why should not Dean Pickens have it this time? If all the officers have had a Medal except Pickens why shouldn't he have one too. Is it his color that keeps the officers from giving him one too?

No. It is just a case of favoritism, a disease with which many Negro organizations are chronically afflicted. Like a colony of self centered egotists throwing flowers at each other; forgetting that there is anybody else in the world except themselves. This award supposed to be awarded to that member of the race, who makes the greatest contribution to race progress during the current year. This medal was founded by a Jew, named Spingarn, and at that time, he was president of the N. A. A. C. P. As far back as we can remember the officers of the Association have always awarded the medal to one of their number, without taking into consideration the contribution upon which the medal was awarded, or whether the deed happened during the current year. Among those we remember as having received the medal, though our memory may not be good, were: Drs. John Hope, DuBois, L. T. Wright, James W. Johnson, Walter White and Hon. C. C. Spaulding. It seems to us that it is Dean Pickens' time to have a gold medal to pin upon the lapel of his coat along with other officers, who have been decorating themselves for a number of years.

The N. A. A. C. P. in its long fight to pass anti-lynch law, has done more to block their own game than it has to pass the law; by its confounded inconsistency. The officers of the Association have always preached anti-lynch law, but always voted for the democratic party who oppose anti-lynch law. The Republican party has always opposed jim-crowism and segregation, the Democratic party has always favored Jim-crowism and segregation, and put every jim-crow or segregation law on the statute books that is there. But when the officers of the N. A. A. C. P. go to the poll to vote, they always vote for the democratic party which opposes everything they want, and against the republican party which favors everything they want. They talk one way and vote another. The officers are just as inconsistent in their political policy as they are in awarding the Spingarn Medal. In all games of chance in America, it is not considered good sportsmanship for the officers who offer prizes or awards, for meritorious service rendered to enter the contest with the public. Of course, the officers are the N. A. A. C. P. make an exception to this golden rule in favor of themselves, and award to one of their number the prize or medal, generally.

THAT SPINGARN MEDAL

JAN 3 1941

We regret to see what appears to be a newspaper fight to force the officers of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to award the Spingarn Medal to William Pickens, field secretary of that organization. For an organized movement to be put into motion and heralded to the four corners of the earth to compel the making of this award to one of the secretaries of the N. A. A. C. P., to our minds only cheapens the thing and puts it in the class of the political pawns which, as a general rule, kill every worthy movement that is started for the benefit of the people. We all understand that this award is made primarily by the officers of the N. A. A. C. P., notwithstanding the fact that a "committee" is appointed, supposedly to make the award. And we all understand that other officers of the Association have received this award, including James Weldon Johnson, former secretary; Walter White, present executive secretary, and Dr. Louis T. Wright, chairman of the Board of Directors. And now it seems that Dean Pickens thinks he is entitled to it if the other officers were. But be that as it may, to put up a newspaper fight to force the award cheapens the Spingarn Medal. To our judgment it would be betten to discontinue the awarding of the Medal if it is going to create a quarrel among the officers of the Association and a general suspicion in the minds of the public in the future.

Spingarn Medal To be Awarded Richard Wright

Author of 'Native Son' Selected as Person Making Most Outstanding Achievement in Year 1940

FEB 7 1941

NEW YORK.—Because "he has given to Americans who have eyes to see, a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive," Richard Wright, 32-year-old author of "Uncle Tom's Children," and "Native Son," the 1940 best-seller novel was made the twenty-sixth recipient of the Spingarn Gold Meda at a meeting of the award committee.

The committee's formal citation said the medal was awarded to Mr Wright "For his powerful depiction in his books, 'Uncle Tom's Children' and 'Native Son,' of the effect of proscription, segregation and denial of opportunities to the American Negro. He has given to Americans who have eyes to see, a picture which must be faced if democracy is to survive. The Award Committee salutes Mr. Wright as one of the most powerful of contemporary writers."

On Committee

Members of the award committee are: Col. Theodore Roosevelt, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Marion Cuthbert, national Y. W.C.A. official; Bishop Robert E. Jones, of the M. E. church; Robert A. Pelham, editor and publisher of the Washington, D. C., Tribune; Mrs. Dorothy Backer, wife of the publisher of the New York Post; Dr. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the New York Community church; Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard university; and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, National Youth Administration official.

Makes Statement

Accepting the medal, which will be presented to him at the thirty-second annual conference of the N.A.A.C.P. to be held in Houston, Texas, June 24-29, the noted author issued the following statement from his home in Brooklyn, New York:

"It is with a deep sense of responsibility that I accept the Spingarn Medal. I accept it in the name of the stalwart, enduring millions of Negroes whose fate and destiny I have sought to depict in terms of scene and narrative in imaginative fiction. It cannot be otherwise, for they are my people and my writing — which is my life and, which carries my convictions — attempts to mirror their struggles for freedom during these troubled days.

"To be more explicit, I accept this award in the name of my father a sharecropper on a Mississippi plantation, and in the name of my mother who sacrificed her health on numerous underpaid jobs, and in the name of the millions of others like them, whose hope for peace and security reflects the aspirations of the common people everywhere during this period of war and cataclysmic social change."

FEB 7 1941

The Spingarn Medal Award was instituted in 1914 by the late Joel E. Spingarn, who was formerly president of the N.A.A.C.P. It is awarded annually to the American Negro who has made the highest achievement during the preceding year or years in any honorable field of human endeavor.

"To Call Attention"

Its purpose is to "call the attention of the American people to the existence of distinguished merit and achievement among American Negroes, to serve as a reward for such achievement, and as a stimulus to the ambition of colored youth."

Mr. Spingarn died in July, 1939. In his will he set up a trust fund of $20,000 to pay and provide for the continuance of the annual award.

FEB 7 1941

"Native Son," a Book-of-the-Month club selection for March, 1940, sold more than 215,000 copies within the first week of publication, and during a period of six weeks went beyond 250,000 sales. Today it is still selling a considerable number of copies weekly.

Material for the novel, which created wide discussion, when it was first published, was based partly on boys he met in a Chicago rehabilitation school for Negro "Dead End" kids, and partly on the Robert Nixon case, according to Mr. Wright.

Nixon was a young Negro who died in the electric chair in Chicago in August, 1938, for killing a white woman. Wright wrote the book in Brooklyn, N. Y., after receiving a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1939. The novel has been translated and published in the Portuguese, Russian, German (Swiss publishing house), English (British) and Swedish languages.

Won WPA Prize

"Uncle Tom's Children," a book of four long short stories, won high praise from the critics, when it was published in March, 1938. The stories won for Wright a $500 prize offered by Story magazine for the best work submitted by a WPA writer in a nation-wide contest.

Wright spent two and one-half months in Mexico last year. In collaboration with Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize winner, he has recently completed the dramatization of "Native Son." The play is expected to be ready for production on Broadway in the spring. He is working on a 30,000-word commentary text for a picture book dealing with Negro life in the United States. A novel which seeks to portray the effects of urban industrial civilization upon the personalities of Negro women, has been "moving along", he says and he expects to complete it by next fall.

"SUPERSTITION," a short story.

Race Relations Honor Roll Has Ex-Klansman

FEB 15 1941

NEW YORK—Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, once a member of the Ku Klux Klan, was named to the 1940 Honor Roll in Race Relations for having written decisions condemning forced confessions and lily-white juries.

FEB 15 1941

The roll, announced Sunday morning over the "Wings over Jordan" radio program by Dr. L. D. Reddick of the New York Public Library, includes individuals and organizations—twelve colored and six white—selected annually through a nation-wide poll conducted by the Harlem branch library's Schomburg literature collection.

Also included are:

Colored Honorees

Carol Hansberry, victor in a Supreme Court case against Chicago restrict residence convenants; Dorothy Maynor, concert singer; William (Dolly) King, football, basketball and baseball star of Long Island University; Kenny Washington, former All-American football star, coaching at the University of California at Los Angeles;

Henry Armstrong, triple boxing crown holder; Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, radio comedian; William Grant Still, composer; the Benjamin Mason family, Philadelphia sweepstakes winners who invested in a slum-clearance project; Philippa Duke Schuyler, piano prodigy; Brigadier General B. O. Davis; Countee Cullen, for his book, "The Lost Zoo," and the American Negro Exposition at Chicago.

Other Whites

Albert Einstein, scientist, for utterances in behalf of minority rights; Jack Benny, for unbiased talent recognition evidenced in the roles given Eddie (Rochester) Anderson; the Courier-Journal, Louisville Ky., daily paper; the Library of Congress, for liberalized employment policy, and the University of California for appointing Kenny Washington to its coaching staff.

Three Faculty Members Earn Ph. D. Degrees During Year

PETERSBURG — Dr. John M. Gandy, president of Virginia State College, announced this week several faculty additions and changes in preparation for the 58th school year. Registration for the 1941-1942 session will be held September 19-20.

Three members of the college faculty earned the doctor's degree during 1940-1941. They are T. Nelson Baker, Ph. D. in chemistry, Ohio State University; William T. Carter, Ph. D. in French, University of Michigan, and Augustus C. Phillips, Ph. D. in vocational education, Ohio State University, to be conferred at the next commencement exercises.

This brings the total number of persons holding the doctor's degree now working on the Virginia State College faculty, to eleven.

MRS. ELIZABETH M. ANDERSON, assistant dean of women during 1940-1941, has been appointed dean of women to replace Mrs. Dorothy Johnston Miller who resigned that position to marry. Mrs. Anderson holds the B. S. from the University of Pennsylvania, and M. S. in personnel work from Columbia University.

MISS ROSETTA. R. ANDERSON, assistant nurse, will take over the duties of Head Nurse M. G. Wiley, who will be on leave of absence during 1941-1942 to study at Phipps Institute, University of Pennsylvania. Miss Anderson is a graduate of St. Phillips Hospital.

JAMES A. BAYTON, on leave of absence during 1940-1941 to do graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania, will return as head of the department of psychology.

TO STUDY AT YALE

MISS MARY A. GILLESPIE, graduate in library science from Hampton Institute, will serve as substitute instructor in library science in place of Miss Marie Boswell who has been released for the coming school year to study at Yale University on a fellowship.

ROSCOE C. HOWARD, head of the department of biology, will resume his work after a two-year absence to study at Cornell University.

MISS HELEN H. HOWELL, graduate of Hampton's Dixie Hospital, will serve as substitute assistant nurse in place of Miss Anderson.

MISS SARELDA I. JAMES, on leave of absence during 1940-1941 to study at the University of Michigan, will resume her work as supervisor, directed teaching of mathematics, D. Webster Davis Laboratory High School.

JOHN V. PARNELL, who served as a substitute instructor in biology for Roscoe C. Howard, will return in that same capacity to substitute for Percy H. Baker who has been granted a leave of absence to study during 1941-1942 at the University of Michigan. Mr. Parnell has his B. S. and M. S. degrees in biology from Boston University. He has been engaged in further study at Harvard University.

MISS EMMA LEE PEGRAM, former librarian at Peabody High School, Petersburg, will serve as librarian in the D. Webster Davis Laboratory High School replacing Miss Marion E. Watkins. Miss Pegram is a graduate of Virginia State College.

MISS BLANCHE T. SMITH will fill the position formerly held by Miss Vera Eggleston as critic teacher in Matoca elementary school. Miss Smith holds the B. S. and M. S. degrees from Virginia State College.

MRS. ENID TURNER will return to fill the vacancy in the language department when James Walton Redden, instructor in German, was granted indefinite leave of absence to serve with the United States Army.

WILLIAM L. WATSON will fill the position formerly held by Harold A. Perkins as instructor in horticulture. Mr. Watson has his B. S. from Hampton Institute and his M. S. in horticulture from Cornell University

2 Fellowships Available For Art Students

Hampton Institute Plans Annual National Contest

SEP 13 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, VA.—A national competition to discover two outstanding Negro high school graduates with creative ability in the field of art will be conducted annually by Hampton Institute. Winners of the competition will be awarded fellowships to study art at the Tidewater Virginia college. Each fellowship is valued at $300.

It was announced that contestants should immediately dispatch samples of their original art work to Viktor Lowenfeld of the art department at Hampton Institute. They must be graduates of accredited high schools, have definite artistic inclinations and desire to become teachers of art.

Though this is the first year the competition has been open to all, the plan was tried out last year by awarding the fellowships to two Hampton graduates. One of the winners, Joseph Gilliard, is being retained as a teaching fellow in Hampton's art department. He will be an instructor in sculpturing, pottery making and general ceramics. The other winner, Marcellus Portilla, has been forced to postpone his creative work in the field of painting and architectural design because of selective service.

Broadening its work in the field of art, Hampton now offers courses in the Division of General Studies which include architecture, art, dance, design, drama, music and photography. Under Mr. Lowenfold and Miss Helen Kendall, emphasis is given in painting, sculpturing, graphics and ceramics. In the Division of Home Economics, the art department offers courses in art structure and appreciation, costume design, house decoration and arts and crafts.

A Janitor-Chemist

Sam May served as janitor at the University of Alabama School of Chemistry for 30 years. Unable to get a formal education himself, he found in his tasks there an outlet to his interest in science.

Among university students Sam May's knowledge of science was legendary. At times he was credited with the qualities of a super-genius. It was a fact that he had memorized all the formulas of standard chemistry books, including advanced formulas in quantitative analysis.

Recently Sam May died. The Tuscaloosa News quotes Dean Stuart J. Lloyd, of the School of Chemistry, to the effect that in his spare time this imaginative janitor had done research which promises to be a major contribution to science. Using okra, castor beans, kudzu, banana branches, raime, wistaria plants, sisal and other products, he had achieved some success in making rope, cord, fabric and insulating materials.

Here is another example of the widespread urge in the South to utilize what we have to create a higher level of living. It is another example, too, of the costly failure to properly utilize all our human resources. — Montgomery Advertiser.

HONORED FOR 60 YEARS' SERVICE WITH UNION LEAGUE CLUB

William Selden Miles (right) accepting award from J. Herbert Case yesterday

William Selden Miles, 79-year-old Negro, was honored yesterday by members of the Union League Club at the completion of sixty years of service for the club.

The tribute was paid at 4:30 P. M., in the card room of the clubhouse at Park Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street, in the presence of a large group of members, headed by the club's president, Alfred H. Cosden, and Henry L. Stoddard, secretary.

J. Herbert Case presided and presented in behalf of the club a purse of more than $600 to Miles, who is captain in the card room and wears twelve gold stripes on his sleeve. The gift money was entered in a bank book, and will be increased by more contributions from the members

"I'm a happy man," Miles said in accepting the gift." Two things in life I've always wanted, to win the twelve stripes, each representing five years of service, and to be a good servant."

"Peace be with you!" he added solemnly.

SEP 2 3 1941

Afterward he said, while standing near the club's noted portrait of President Lincoln, painted by Emanuel Leutze during the Civil War, that he was born in Powhatan County in Virginia, and came from a slave family. His home is in Park Ridge, N. J.

"I came to New York in 1881 from Virginia just after President Garfield was assassinated," he recalled, "and this was my first job. I never count the days and I never look at the clock, which means that I'm not a member of any union.

New York was a different city from now when I started to work at the club in its old site. I attended the opening of the Brooklyn Bridge, and saw the first horse-drawn buses start on Fifth Avenue. Well do I recall the blizzard of 1888."

In making the presentation, Mr. Case said it was fitting that the club should honor an American of the Negro race. He recounted how the club, when it was organized in 1863, immediately became the center of active support for the Union cause in New York. It recruited and financed two regiments of Negroes, which had to be taken to Rikers Island for safety during the draft riots. When the Twentieth Regiment of Negro troops was ready to leave for the front, members of the league, he said, led the way from the clubhouse in Union Square to the Canal Street pier.

White Boy, 13, Makes Heroic Rescue Effort

Water Hole On Maupin Farm Is Scene of Death

PORTSMOUTH — A 13-year-boy, Clarence Southall, 156 Key Road, was drowned Wednesday afternoon as a result of what police believe to have been a playful stunt of a companion, also 13.

The two boys were playing at a huge water hole on the Maupin Farm, located just off the George Washington Highway, near the Beltline Railroad. The Southall boy was carried out into depeer water by his companion and then released, investigating police were informed.

The boy, finding himself suddenly in water over his head, began to scream for help, police reported, and his companion then left the water, donned his clothes and departed, according to the police report.

The prostrate form of the boy was later pulled out of the water by a white boy, Wellford Buchannan, also age 13.

A pullmotor squad was large number of public-spirited county citizens who appeared in rushed to the scene from the Portsmouth Police Headquarters but all efforts to revive were futile.

Dr. E. T. Glover, city coroner, viewed the body and permitted its removal to the Pritchett Funeral Home where burial arrangements were made.

The victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Southall. He is survived by four brothers, Leon, Vernette, Linwood and Melvin Southall; and a siter, Miss Margaret Southall. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late Wednesday night.

The Maupin Farm has been the scene in recent weeks of extensive excavation work. An huge fleet of trucks has been hauling dirt from the farm to the navy yard where low land is being filled in. The water hole, or lake, in which the boy was drowned, resulted from the excavation work, it was learned. Recently small boys have been using it as a swimming hole.

Sergeant W. T. Johnston and Officer R. C. Journee, Sr., handled the preliminary investigation. The police report listed two witnesses: Leroy McClouse, 16, of 722 Lindsay Ave., and William Smith, 13, of 686 Fayette St.

Works Of Art By Dr. Carver To Be Shown

Tuskegee Will Open Exhibit Of Famous Scientist On Nov. 17

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The world-famous institution of higher learning for negroes, Tuskegee Institute, will bestow another honor Nov. 17 upon its most aged, humble and distinguished faculty member.

That person is Dr. George Washington Carver, born a slave, who rose to become known as "the ebony Pasteur" of chemistry, but whose abilities with easel and brush have gone unnoticed for more than 50 years by all but connoisseurs of art.

The Carver art room in the Carver Museum, which houses such discoveries as paints from cow dung and clay, imitation marble from wood shavings, picture frames from peanut hulls and plastics from beans, will be formally opened on that date.

While the public knows him as a chemist, Carver many years ago had a picture hanging in Luxembourg Gallery, and some of his subjects, such as "Paeonies," have been described as "America's best." Others have been requested by widely-known galleries.

Holding his deeply religious belief that "God furnishes the materials and moves my hands," most of Carver's paintings are of nature—fruits and flowers and landscapes. A miscellaneous group to be housed in the art room is done in "Curtis browns," vegetable colors developed by Carver's young assistant, A. W. Curtis, Jr.

One exhibit will feature a picture frame containing more than 1,000 separate pieces, woven together without nails, glue or strings, whittled by Dr. Carver when he was a small boy and assembled 42 years ago, after he reached Tuskegee.

One collection of paintings features studies done with Alabama clays, one of which, "Peaches," was asked by Luxembourg Galleries.

Carver has spent the last several weeks selecting canvases for the display, many of the pictures having been packed away half a century. He built all the frames, too, and supervised the hangings.

Received Ph. D. And M. S. Degrees In June

Dr. and Mrs. Walter S. Davis received the Ph. D. and M. S. degrees from Cornell University.

Mrs. Davis majored in Education and her thesis was written on "Providing For Individual Differences Through the Activity Program." She is a member of the Mu Chapter of Pi Lambda Theta Sorority of Cornell University, a national honorary society for professional women in the field of education, and a member of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority. She is a former teacher in the Indiana and Nashville public school systems.

Dr. Davis studied in the fields of Agricultural Education, Animal Husbandry and Animal Breeding. His dissertation, "A Study of Establishing Negro Young Men in Farming", has attracted much attention and should be of great assistance in helping agricultural workers establish Negro young men in farming.

Dr. Davis won several honors while at Cornell and is recognized as one of the "Cornell Greats" in the field of Agriculture. He has served as Teacher-Trainer in Agricultural Education at Tennessee A. and I. State College since 1933.

BRAVE ACT OF NEGRO YOUTH

Drowned After Saving White Boy

A case of saving a life but losing his own occurred last last Saturday afternoon about 1 o'clock in the Coffee Bluff river

While in swimming a white boy was found to be in danger of drowning and was noted by Charles Battle who hurried to his rescue. The boy was carried safely to land but in turning young Battle evidently was affected with the cramps which prevented him from swimming, resulted in drowning. The body was not found until early Tuesday afternoon near the place of drowning.

The funeral took place Wednesday morning from the Nicodemus Baptist Church. It was largely attended by white and colored friends. It was conducted by Rev. L. M. Terrill. Tribute to his worth was given by a white friend.

The deceased is survived by his father, Charles Battle; mother, Mrs. Francey Battle; sisters, Miss Henrietta Battle; a broter, Charles Battle, Jr., and other relatives.

Robb's Funeral Home conducted the funeral.

COLORED WOMAN IS GRADUATE IN REAL ESTATE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, July (ANP) Mrs. A. L. Foster, formerly Mildred Randolph of New York City, has the distinction of being the first woman of any race to receive a four year certificate in real estate from the Central Y. M. C. A. School of Business Administration, it was learned last week.

Mrs. Foster succeeded in completing the four year course in two years. She studied property management and property appraisal under Percy Wagner, regional director of F. H. A., the only woman of any race to take this course. She received the certificate in 1940 and not satisfied to stop her studies, she continued and was awarded the degree of bachelor of science in commerce in January, 1941, graduating, however, with the June class. On June 27 she was notified that she had successfully passed her examinations for a real estate broker's license which she has received.

Mrs. Foster was well known in New York having been born there and having attended high school and Columbia university. She was a charter member of Rho chapter of Delta Sigma Theta. She lived with her uncle, Dr. Leo Fitz Nearon and her mother, Mrs. Louise Randolph.

A week after Mrs. Foster took her degree she saw her son Albon finish the eighth grade, the youngest member of his class. Mrs. Foster and her family live in Glencoe, a suburb of Chicago, in a home which she herself designed. The Fosters have another son, Leonard, who at nine years of age, is in the seventh grade.

RECEIVES AWARD

Richard Wright, author of 'Native Son," a best-seller of 1940, was given the Spingarn Award as the Negro who made the most outstanding in his particular field during the past year, Friday night at Good Hope Baptist Church. Elmer A. Carter of the National Urban League made the presentation.

In his acceptance speech Wright told Negroes to think more in terms of adventurous living. He advised them to travel and break some of the taboos generally placed on the race by ts own members and members of other races.

He disclosed that he was writing a book on the history of the Negro in America and that it would be his most ambitious undertaking. The largest crowd of the four-day meeting witnessed the presentation.

LENDING SCHOLARSHIPS

THE OMEGA PSI PHI FRATERNITY which now gives $1,000 annually in free scholarships to deserving Negro students desiring a college education, is considering a new plan whereby instead of giving these scholarships the money is loaned the recipients, who are given from 10 to 12 years to repay it. In a letter to members of the fraternity, presenting the plan, U. S. Bond of Epsilon Phi Chapter of Madison, Ark., explains the idea as follows:

'In lending scholarships you perpetuate a fund that will grow as big as the years that mark its age. For instance, we are now giving $1,000 per year. If we loaned 1,000 per year for six years, at the end of the sixth year we will have an outstanding account receivable of $6,000. We could reasonably assume that the person who received the first $1,000 would by this time be out of school and on his way to success, at least to the extent that he or she would be able to start re-paying us on her debt to the scholarship fund . . . If 25 percent of the first years loan were repayed, we would have $1,250 capital, until the twefth year when the entire $6,000 would mature. . . . By following up a student, once we have decided upon him, means that we will be able to see some definite results of our project."

Sounds like a good idea to us, if for no other reason than the fact that it is a good thing to have young people realize that they can't get something for nothing. And in accepting a scholarship they immediately assume an obligation that will give purpose to their college training. We think it feasible and congratulate Mr. Bond for suggesting it.

THE Pulitzer Prize Committee has been working its way down to Westbrook Pegler for some years now. It has reached bottom at last. That this unscrupulous enemy of labor and civil liberties should receive the award for distinguished reporting is a grim commentary on the state of commercial journalism. The same corruption of judgment is reflected in the award of the drama prize to Robert E. Sherwood for his war-mongering attack on the Soviet Union, There Shall Be No Night. The war bias of the Pulitzer committee, composed of men like William Allen White and Arthur Krock, is further revealed in its decision to create a special reward for the New York Times. The award to the Times for its foreign news coverage is in reality a tribute to the perseverance of that paper in whipping up hysterical support for the conscription act, the lend-lease act, convoys, and a new AEF. MAY 13 1941

The committee could find no novel deserving of its benediction, despite the fact that Richard Wright's Native Son was the obvious successor to last year's prize-winning novel, The Grapes of Wrath. Perhaps one should be grateful that even a Pulitzer committee did not have the courage to nominate Kenneth Roberts' Oliver Wiswell, a fitting companion for Sherwood's play and Pegler's poisoned columns. The prizes for biography and poetry this year are undistinguished. The editorial cartoon award was given to Jacob Burck of the Chicago Times. Mr. Burck was formerly associated with NEW MASSES and the Daily Worker.

By and large, the choices this year are an official endorsement of the cultural reaction accompanying the war. It is getting to the point where honest writers sigh with relief when the Pulitzer committee passes them up.

How to Win a Pulitzer Award

In view of the 1941 Pulitzer prizes to Westbrook Pegler and Robert Sherwood, it is in order to give a little advice to aspirants on how to win next year's awards.

First, a series of brilliant newspaper articles on these topics: "The conspiracy of the unemployed and organized labor to Eat." "The subversive movement to abolish the poll tax system," or a first-rate expose of the "Persistent attempts to undermine the institution of lynching." MAY 7 - 1941

Either of these is in the best Westbrook Pegler tradition, and ought to win, at least, first prize. If especially good, they might bring also an autographed set of Pegler's columns on "How to purify the labor movement by wiping it out."

Second, a play entitled "There shall be no Soviet Union—but there shall be war," to be directed by Roosevelt, Churchill and Hitler. If one uses the nom de plume "Robert Sherwood," the prize is in the bag.

These proposals are all bound to meet the "non-political art" criteria set up by th Pulitzer award committee. In fact, whe the award committee refers selections to th banker-bondholder trustees of Columbia Un versity for final judgment, the committe might get some awards also.

For the Pulitzer prizes—like the Gallu poll and other such strange bellwethers o public opinion—have a striking resemblanc to the ideas of those who sit in the seats o the mighty, and nothing in common with the interests of the people. MAY 7 - 194

P. S.: Pegler's column yesterday attacked peaceful picketing by Local 3, of the A. F. of L. Electrical Workers, as a "mob of rioters." In other words, Pegler has started out immediately to win the 1942 Pulitzer award.

Michigan Senior Gets Phi Beta Kappa

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—(ANP)—At the 18th annual honor convocation of the University of Michigan, April 25, Jean Emily Fairfax was one of 49 seniors nominated for membership in Phi Beta Kappa national scholarship fraternity.

This was the fourth honorary society for which Jean Fairfax was selected because of outstanding scholastic achievement. The others were: (1) 1938, Alpha Lambda Delta, National Freshman Honor Society for Woman; (2) 1940, Phi Kappa Phi, National Scholastic Honor society; (3), 1941, Alpha Kappa Delta, National Sociological Honorary fraternity.

Jean Fairfax is the daughter of the late Dan Fairfax, member of the Weste n University varsity football team, his alma mater, and Inez Wood Fairfax, alumna, Kansas University, a former teacher in the schools of Cleveland and now a social worker at juvenile court.

MAY 10 1941

After graduating with honors from Glenville High School, Jean was the recipient of a four year scholarship given by Alpha Omega chapter, Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, of which she has since become a member and basileus of the chapter at Ann Arbor.

During her entire four years at the University of Michigan, she has maintained an outstanding record, as evidenced by the elections to the four honor societies and the selection of Jean in her junior year as one of 30 to take the initial tutorial course at the university. She was also a member of the University choral union; the Student Religious Association Fellowship of Reconciliation

NEGRO BOY DOES HEROIC DEED

David Ruff Saved Francis Cooner, Jr., From Death In Barn

David Ruff, 13-year-old negro boy, is being given high praise for his heroic attempt last Thursday afternoon to save the life of little Francis Cooner and his success in getting the little boy out of a burning barn at the Cooner home near Connie Maxwell Orphanage.

Little Francis, four and a half years old, and his younger brother, Martin Wells Cooner, two and a half, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cooner, were playing in the barn as they often did. A fire starting in a pile of straw soon had the inside of the building a roaring furnace and the younger child ran to safety, but Francis was trapped in the loft.

David happened to go to the barn for a drink of ice water, realized immediately the danger and climbed to the roof of the shed with a hatchet and removed a number of weather boards from which Francis escaped, but he already had been badly blistered from the intense heat and injured from the dense smoke and he died the next day.

David was modest in talking about his unusual feat for a boy of his age. "I knew Francis couldn't get out and I climbed the fence at the barn and up on the top and I cut off the boards. I heard him crying and saying he was mighty hot. When he got through the hole I cut I helped him down to the ground. I didn't get nervous or scared, but I worked fast."

Members of the family have expressed deep appreciation of David's heroic act and will reward him.

The story of his valiant efforts also have been reported to the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for investigation.

Gets Symphony Assignment For 2 Shows

NBC To Air Dean Dixon Music June 21, 28 For Hour

(Picture on Front Page)

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—(ANP)—Fear of adverse reaction from Southern listeners, it is claimed by radio network managers, has hindered them from giving Negro musicians the opportunites they deserve.

JUN 21 1941

Welcome news, however, comes from NBC in the announcement that Dean Dixon, 26, conductor from Harlem, has been given a contract to lead its Summer Symphony Orchestra in two consecutive concerts on June 21 and 28 from 9:30 to 10:30 p. m., EDST.

Leonard Carlton of the New York Post in his column "Listening In" stated that "Dixon has been the city's most active advocate of community musical organizations. His network assignment is a long delayed recognition of his valuable work." This series is an extension of the winter concerts directed by Arturo Toscanini.

WON ACCLAIM

Dixon, who for almost a decade has been prominent as organizer and director of community choral and instrumental musical groups, won enthusiastic critical acclaim in New York last month after a performance by his own "Dean Dixon Symphony Society Orchestra," an organization of amateurs he founded while a student at DeWitt Clinton High School. The players, selected without regard to race, color or creed, range in age from 12 to 72 years.

In addition to his symphony, Dixon leads a choral society bearing his name, a people's chorus in Newark, and a chamber orchestra comprised of expert players from the NBC Symphony, the New Friends of Music Orchestra, the New York Philharmonic and other first rank musical groups. He also gives free courses in music appreciation to both white and Negro children.

GIFTED AND VERSATILE

Considered one of the most gifted and versatile serious musicians ever to come from Manhattan's Harlem, young Dixon read music at three and a half. After graduating from high school he entered the Institute of Musical Art at Juillard as a violin student. He later won a fellowship of the Juilliard Graduate School where he studied with Albert Stoessel, distinguished conductor. Dixon is now working for a Ph. D. at Columbia University.

The idea for the young conductor's amateur symphony was hatched in the basement of a YMCA off Harlem's Lenox Avenue, where Dixon, then in high school, and two companions, a violinist and pianist, met regularly to play classical music. Dixon was "director," using a pencil for a baton.

Believing that there were other young amateur musicians who would be eager for an opportunity to play in an environment of classicism, Dixon organized the group which now bears his name. It has given one public performance a year and many special benefit concerts.

MRS. FDR INVITED

Among the works to be presented by Dixon in his first concert with the NBC Summer Symphony, Saturday, June 21, will be two famous overtures, the "Academic Festival Overture" by Brahms and Tchaikovsky's "Overture to Romeo and Juliet"; "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss and "Danse Macabre" by Saint-Saens. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was guest of honor at the Dixon Symphony Concert last month, will be invited to attend the broadcast in NBC's studio 8-H.

First Student In History Of Chicago U. To Get Masters Degree At Age 17

JUL 5 1941

First student in the history of Chicago university to obtain a master's degree at 17, J. Ernest Wilkins Jr., has enrolled in summer school to work toward a Ph.D. in mathematics since he has seven courses already of the required 17, he expects to have it by next June.

The young man, whose accomplishments are not limited to the strictly academic, is also interested in ping-pong and since he began playing the game in 1936, has won nine trophies in state, community and campus contests. For two years he was university champion.

Indicative of his sense of humor is his liking for the works of P. G. Wodehouse, all of which he's read.

Wilkins comes from a family of unusual brilliance. His two brothers one 14 and one 15 are a freshman and sophomore at the University of Wisconsin. His father, J. Ernest Wilkins, Sr., is an attorney who was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1918 with honors and a reputation in mathematics.

The young scholar's mother holds a master's degree from the University of Chicago, and is a teacher at Wendell Phillips high school.

Cortez Peters Breaks World's Typing Record

JUL 5 1941

Although winding up third best in the world's championship typing contest on standard machines held at Sherman hotel here June 20 before a capacity house, Cortez W. Peters broke the old world's record, and in winning a new event, established a record for portable typewriters.

CORTEZ PETERS
In Blindfold Exhibition

Close on the heels of Miss Margaret Hanna, who operated an all-electric machine, and Albert Tangora, Peters punched the typewriter keys at the rate of 141 and a fraction words per minute. Tangora broke his old record (141 words per minute established in 1937 year of the last contest) with 142 net words. Miss Hanna, using the all-electric typewriter, won with 149 words per minute for the hour-long contest.

Many observers considered an electrically operated machine was not fair competition in a contest with hand operated typewriters.

Peters won the world's championship on portable machines with 115 net words per minute for 20 minutes of typing. For his efforts in this event, he won a gold medal.

The third place bronze medal did not discourage Peters, who promises to eclipse the record set by Miss Hanna.

NEGRO YOUTH MAKES A BRILLIANT RECORD

Valedictorian Of Class At Old New England College. Makes Highest Number of "A" In All Subjects

JUL 4 1941

BRUNSWICK, Maine, July 1—At the 136th Commencement of Bowdoin College at Brunswick, Maine, David Watson Daly Dickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Dickson of Portland, Maine, graduated this morning, climaxing a brilliant undergraduate career.

Dickson's Commencement Speech, "The Liberal Arts College Today," won the Goodwin Commencement Prize for the best undergraduate commencement oration. Standing first in a class of one-hundred forty-one students, and receiving an A.B. degree, summa cum laude, with high honors in English. Dickson became the twelfth Negro to graduate from Bowdoin in the past one hundred forty-seven years.

In 1937 Dickson graduated from Portland High School as valedictorian of his class, and as an outstanding participant in numerous extra-curricular activities. After winning a competitive State of Maine Scholarship, Dickson entered Bowdoin in the fall of 1937. His name appeared on the Dean's List for four years, and he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic society, in his junior year, at which time he was awarded the Goodwin Phi Beta Kappa Prize. He was a member of the Debating Council which he served as Manager and President. He played in the college band, and was Sports Managing Editor of the College Weekly, the "Orient," during his third year. In his senior year, Dickson was President of the Classical Club, and Co-Chairman of the Red Cross Drive Committee.

Some of the numerous prizes and scholarships won by Dickson in the past four years were the Bradbury Prize in Debating, the H. L. Fairbanks and Plummer Prizes for excellence in Public Speaking, the 1868 Speaking Prize, The Adams Debating Prize, The Bertram Smith Prize Scholarship for excellence in English Literature, the Pray English Literature prize for the best major paper in English, the Brown Extemporaneous English Composition Prize, and the Henry W. Longfellow Graduate Scholarship for post-graduate work in Belles Lettres.

Dickson received the grade of "A" in all subjects throughout his four college years, thus establishing a record only once before duplicated in the history of the college. He was the second member of his family to be elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and the third of his family to attend Bowdoin, a small New England college, all of whose Negro graduates have been outstanding students. Although the number of Negro students who have attended Bowdoin, is small, this college has been closely associated with Negro education. The first Negro to graduate from an American college, graduated from Bowdoin in 1828, and General Otis Howard, founder of Howard University, Washington, D. C., was a Bowdoin graduate.

A grant from the Julius Rosenwald Fund and a scholarship from Harvard University, will make it possible for Dickson to continue his studies in English at the Graduate School of that Institution, next year.

Typewriter Man

A colored man last week sat before a desk in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman pecking away on typewriters in the World's Championship special contest to win third place on the standard machines and first on the portables.

He was Cortez W. Peters who has competed with the best typists the world has ever known. Last week was the eleventh contest in which he had participated. During his career as a contestant he has won first place two times; second, six times; third two times; and sixth, one time.

Peters has been typing for twenty-one years. His unmatched ability has gained for him and his people considerable prestige and respect. In his capacity as demonstrator for the Royal Typewriter company he performs his feats before hundreds of thousands of white people every year. He is the only Negro that demonstrates with typewriters before white audiences. He is not confined to any geographical location but pecks away on the keys before audiences from Maine to California. He thus becomes an ambassador of good will for the colored people. He demonstrates to the nation that where unusual ability is present the color line disappears. Because most of his demonstrations are before students of high school and college ages he is able to aid in influencing the thoughts and attitudes of the younger generation concerning the ability of Negroes.

Peters has demonstrated to the nation in general and to colored people in particular that courage and ability coupled with the proper technique are sufficient to shatter prejudices in many instances. Attesting to this fact was his position as secretary to Congressman John M. Nelson of Wisconsin from 1924 to 1937.

In addition to his work as a typist-extraordinary, Peters is a business man. His business is to prepare men and women for jobs as stenographers, typists, secretaries, accountants and business people. He has three schools located in Baltimore, Washington and Chicago that boasted an enrollment in 1940 of nine hundred. He has been able to place every single graduate. Many have been given government and civil service jobs. When one of the governmental departments asked for key-punch operators who had pursued a six-weeks course of training, Peters was the only man in Washington who had equipment for which students could train for the jobs. He was asked by whites to give them the exclusive privilege of training on the machines at thrice the tuition paid by colored. Peters informed them that his school was operated for Negroes and would not change its policy. He thus was able to place many colored key-punch operators.

We believe that the race is proud of such business ability as Peters represents. His efforts to raise the status of the colored people and give them the tools with which to earn a livelihood will put them nearer to social and economic security.

CHICAGO, July (ANP) Mrs. A. L. Foster, formerly Mildred Randolph of New York City, has the distinction of being the first woman of any race to receive a four year certificate in real estate from the Central Y. M. C. A. School of Business Administration, as learned last we

Mrs. Foster succeeded in completing the four year course in two years. She studied property management and property appraisal under Percy Wagner, regional director of F. H. A., the only woman of any race to take this course. She received the certificate in 1940 and not satisfied to stop her studies, she continued and was awarded the degree of bachelor of science in commerce in January, 1941, graduating, however, with the June class. On June 27 she was notified that she had successfully passed her examinations for a real estate broker's license which she has received.

Mrs. Foster was well known in New York having been born there and having attended high school and Columbia university. She was a charter member of Rho chapter of Delta Sigma Theta. She lived with her uncle, Dr. Leo Fitz Nearon and her mother, Mrs. Louise Randolph.

A week after Mrs. Foster took her degree she saw her son Albon finish the eighth grade, the youngest member of his class. Mrs. Foster and her family live in Glencoe, a suburb of Chicago, in a home which she herself designed. The Fosters have another son, Leonard, who at nine years of age, is in the seventh grade.

Negro Custodian of Law Library Reads Court Rulings Just for Fun

APR 20 1941

(The Associated Press)

Nashville, Tenn., April 19.—A tall, soft-voiced Negro, a one-time field hand with a fifth-grade education who reads court opinions "for my own enjoyment," now is an active aid to the finest legal minds of Tennessee.

He is Aaron Taylor, custodian of the 20,000-volume state law library and at 65 a veteran of almost forty years' continuous service with the state.

Possessing a thorough understanding of most of the technical terms common to the legal profession, Aaron converses with the lawyers and judges who visit the library in their own tongue and often is able to help them locate references for briefs and arguments.

Although the clerk of the supreme court is ex officio librarian of the state's collection, it is Aaron who has day-to-day supervision over the stacks located in the imposing new supreme court building. He takes an obvious pride in the gleaming floors, the beautifully paneled rooms and the modernly arranged shelves filled with the legal volumes he knows so well.

Aaron laughed self-consciously when it was suggested he knew enough law to pass the state bar examination.

APR 20 1941

"Oh, I doubt that," he exclaimed. "Besides, I never fancied studying law or being a lawyer myself. Occasionally, I read briefs and abstracts, but that's just for my own enjoyment."

Boy, 16, Gets Medal For Preventing Train Crash

APR 19 1941

MEMPHIS, April [illegible] (ANP)—Sixteen-year-old Jesse L. Williams was presented a bronze medal by J. R. Burns, white, trainmaster of the Memphis terminal, in behalf of the Illinois Central railway, for his prompt reporting of a broken train rail, and preventing a possible train wreck.

APR 19 1941

The presentation was made at the 14th anniversary meeting of the Illinois Central Railway Colored Employees Service club, held Thursday night. Telling how he came to discover the broken rail, young Williams said: "I was riding my horse beside the I.C. tracks about 7:30 a.m., on Feb. 3, and from a passenger train which sped by me I heard a bumpy noise that sounded as if it were coming from the wheels or something on the track. After it had passed I went to the spot where the noise seemed to be coming from and found about a foot of the steel rail broken and missing. I immediately went on to Woodstock and told the station master what I had found."

APR 19 1941

Burns, in making the award, said that the timely reporting of the incident by Williams, probably saved the lives of many passengers, as a crack southbound passenger train due later in the day, would have passed over the broken rail and probably would have been derailed at the spot.

Preventative for Scurvy Being Prepared By Howard U. Chemist

APR 26 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A professor of chemistry at Howard University has been doing research work for the past three years on a substance which is believed to be a preventative for the disease known as "scurvy," it was revealed this week.

The substance, known as "Ene-diols" which was prepared by Dr. R. Percy Barnes, is now being tested by Prof. C. G. King, professor of chemistry at the University of Pittsburgh.

Although "scurvy" a disease which develops due to lack of Vitamin C, (known as ascorbic acid) causes an average of only thirty deaths a year in the United States, numerous persons suffer from mild attacks of the disease, which weakens blood vessels and lowers personal efficiency.

APR 26 1941

Dr. Barnes' research has centered around the preparation and study of the behavior of "Ene-diols," which is closely related structurally to Vitamin C, and is expceted to prove superior to ascorbic acid as a preventative for "scurvy."

NOT HABIT FORMING

The significance of "Ene-diols" in its relationship to Vitamin C, can be illustrated by the relationship of "novocaine" to the drug cocaine. Cocaine, a naturally occurring drug obtained from coca leaves, was long used as a local anesthetic. But it is a habit-forming drug.

However, from a knowledge of the constitution of cocaine, the chemist has improved upon nature by producing the drug "novocaine" which is superior to cocaine, in that it is an excellent local anesthetic and is not habit-forming.

Dr. Barnes, who was recently selected to teach the course in explosive chemistry now being offered by Howard University as part of the national defense program, believes that the preparation and study of the behavior of substances closely related (as "Ene-diols" to Vitamin C) may be of great importance to humanity.

First Woman Anesthetist In Race Graduates Next Month

APR 26 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Proof that women are branching out into more and more fields is to be found in next month's graduation class of Meharry Medical College.

The school will again lead the Negro medical field when it graduates the first Negro woman anesthetis in medical history Catherine Carson Dandridge, officials claim.

Miss Dandridge will find an open field for her services. Negro hospitals, as well as medical schools, it has been pointed out, have been forced in the past to rely on the services of white nurses as anesthetists.

APR 26 1941

IS WELL PREPARED

The young medical student is well prepared for her work. A native of Youngstown, Ohio, she claims New Castle, Pa., as her home, where she lived while attending high school. After graduating from this high school, she came to Meharry in 1936. Here she took a four-year registered nurse's training course and was graduated last May.

She then entered the last phase of her training at Meharry and for a full year has been engaged in study and training in the field of anesthetics.

HAD YEAR'S TRAINING

APR 26 1941

One of the remarkable things about her forthcoming graduation, officials of the college state, is the extent of the training she has received.

"Whereas top-ranking white medical schools train their anesthetists not more than nine months," Dr. Edward L. Turner, Meharry president stated, Meharry's course is one full year of study and training."

Dr. Turner, in commenting upon Miss Dandridge's record, declared: "If Miss Dandridge's isn't the first Negro woman anesthetist in all medical history, she is certainly the first we have ever heard of, or can discover anywhere in America."

H.U. Prof. Finds New Treatment for Scurvy

APR 26 1941

WASHINGTON

Dr. R. Percy Barnes, professor of chemistry at Howard University, has been doing research work for the past three years on a substance which believed to be a preventative for the disease known as "scurvy," it was revealed this week.

The substance, known as "Ene-diols," is now being tested by Prof. C. G. King, professor of chemistry at the University of Pittsburgh.

Although "scurvy," a disease which develops due to lack of Vitamin C (known as ascorbic acid) causes an average of only thirty deaths a year in the United States, numerous persons suffer from mild attacks of the disease, which weakens blood vessels and lowers personal efficiency.

Award Rosenwald Fellowship to Son of Pastor

APR 25 1941

Lloyd Harris Hughes, an instructor of history at Western University, Kansas City, Kans., has just been awarded a $1,500 Rosenwald Fellowship to complete his doctorate at the University of California where he will enter this fall. He is the first colored Phi Beta Kappa from the University of California where he took his master's, majoring in history.

Mr. Hughes, wife, Mrs. Jesuita Hughes, is an honor student at Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo., and graduates in June.

Young Hughes is a native Missourian, is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Fred A. Hughes, the pastor of St. James A. M. E. Church here in St. Louis and was named for A. W. Lloyd of this city, who is the former Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of Missouri

Ala. Teachers Must Wait for Equalization

FEB 8 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—Alabama teachers must wait until the next regular session of the Legislature in 1943 to provide for equalization of their salaries with whites' in keeping with the recent U.S. Supreme Court action.

Governor Frank M. Dixon has said he would not call an extra session to meet this and other emergency developments although a committee of city and county school superintendents has been named to confer with him on the advisability of such a session.

Equalization Of Teachers' Pay May Be Forced

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Jan. 28 (AP)—Possibility that equalization of salaries of white and negro teachers of equal qualifications may be forced under a U. S. supreme court decision will be used as a basis for a request for federal aid to education in the south, Alabama school superintendents voted.

Dr. C. B. Glenn, superintendent of Birmingham schools, was named to head a committee to bring the subject before the National Association of School Administrators in Atlantic City, Feb. 21-22.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent, explained that the supreme court had ruled in a Virginia case that race could not be used as a basis of determining teacher salaries. Collins expressed the belief that negro salaries in Alabama "will be raised" and that changes must be made in the state's system of distributing school funds.

Declaring he believed the question presents "a chance to drive home a new claim for federal aid" to the south in equalizing educational opportunities, Dr. Glenn said President Roosevelt had told him he was in favor of such aid.

An Epochal Decision

The meeting of the State Board of Education at Montgomery last week, at which time steps were taken to equalize salaries for Negroes and white teachers in the public schools of Alabama, may well be regarded as epochal, as it is a marked departure from differentials that have obtained in this state ever since the public school system was founded.

The action results from a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in a test case that came up from the local courts in Virginia, the decision making it mandatory that salaries in the dual school system be placed on a basis of equality.

The immediate effect of the action taken by the board will be to postpone an eight-month school term in this state. Governor Dixon had set aside $938,000 out of the general fund for that purpose, but $200,000 of that amount will be needed to raise salaries of teachers in the Negro schools and some $300,000 additional will be needed to pay salaries of teachers who have raised their qualifications by added training and experience.

At this same meeting of the school board, a bond issue of $50,000 by the Negro State Teacher College at Montgomery was voted. A similar increase in funds for that school had been made necessary previously by another Supreme Court decision that requires equal advantages in higher educational institutions for the two races or else admission of Negroes to the schools for whites. Graduate work now is being done at the Montgomery school, which also offers courses in law and medicine.

State School Leaders To Use New Pay Basis In Plea For U. S. Aid

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)—A group of Alabamians who hope to use the problem of equalizing white and Negro teachers' salaries as the basis of an appeal for federal aid to education in the South will attend a meeting of the National Association of School Administrators, opening this week-end in Atlantic City, N. The State Association of County and City School Superintendents recently named Dr. C. B. Glenn, Birmingham, as head of a committee to bring the question before the national organization. Dr. Glenn said at the time President Roosevelt had told him he was in favor of federal aid to equalize educational opportunities.

Pay schedules of Alabama teachers—white and Negro—were placed on the same basis by the State Board of Education this week.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent, headed a group of Department of Education officials who left Friday for the meeting.

Others from the central department attending including Dr. R. L. Johns, director of administration and finance; Dr. A. R. Meadows, director of research and surveys; Dr. W. Educators To Discuss Problem Of Adjusting Negro Teachers' Pay

FEB 18 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)—The problem of adjusting salaries of Negro school teachers is due to come up for consideration Wednesday at a meeting of the State Board of Education.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent, said a dilemma presented by a U. S. Supreme Court decision that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' pay would come up for discussion.

A committee of the State Association of County and City Superintendents named to draw up recommendations to the State Board met Monday, but leaders said they failed to reach any conclusions.

The superintendents' organization named the committee several weeks ago to study the problem and make recommendations.

Among other matters to be taken up by the State Board Wednesday will be textbook adoptions for the next six years.

Those attending Monday's conference included George Hulme, Fort Payne, president of the A. E. A.; H. G. Dowling, Tuscaloosa; John Bryan, Bessemer; W. M. Jackson, Selma; Ed James, Perry County; C. M. Dannelly, Montgomery; H. G. Greer, Monroe County; C. J. Martin, Andalusia; W. J. Jones, Wilcox County; C. A. Donahoo, Gadsden, and E. B. Norton, superintendent of Covington County schools.

Inequality Still Exists in Ala. Teachers' Pay

MAR 8 1941

NEW YORK — The adoption in Alabama last week of an equal minumum salary scale for colored and white teachers created the impression that both groups are now receiving the same pay, but this is not the case.

The truth is that all teachers have the same beginning salary but above this equal minimum there are still large differentials in favor of white teachers.

The NAACP has announced that it will continue to press for actual equality. It was also learned that the Alabama, teachers, through their State organization, are planning to initiate court action to secure complete equalization.

MAR 8 1941

2 Million Needed

It has been estimated that it will cost the State two million dollars to equalize salaries perfectly. According to an announcement from Montgomery on February 20, the State allotted only $200,000 out of a total of $500,000 to colored teachers for the purpose of bringing them up to the minimum.

In concrete terms, this action by Alabama means that whereas a colored teacher in the first rank formerly had a minimum of $67.75 a month, he now has a minimum of $70 a month, an increase of $6.25.

White teachers in the first rank used to begin at $85. They now start at $70. The new scale represents a loss for white teachers, but only on the minimum level.

State Officials Accused Of Employing Ruse To Evade U.S. Ruling

By E. M. GOODE

MONTGOMERY. — (ANP) —The Alabama state board of education voted to equalize salaries between white and Negro teachers at its meeting here Wednesday.

The board adopted a single uniform minimum salary schedule for teachers irrespective of race, to replace the former separate schedules for white and colored teachers.

A total of $500,000 was voted to care for this equalization during the 1941-42 term, $200,000 of this sum to go to teachers, mostly white, who have qualified by experience or additional training to receive salaries above the minimum.

The new single schedule which by law creates the same salaries for teachers who have the same training and experience regardless of race, was put into effect to meet the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court that states could not have separate salary schedules based or race. There are several peculiar angles to the Alabama practice, however.

The new schedule fixes a minimum which represents a raise for Negroes but it is a reduction for whites. Thus while the new minimum of $40 is $2.50 above the $37.50 which was the previous minimum for Negroes; it is also $10 below the former minimum of $50 for whites.

MAR 1 1941

Where the inequality is continued by this clever evasion of the spirit of the law, is, as Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, announced: none of the whites who were getting $50 per month will be reduced. The effect, therefore, will be to still pay whites $10 more than Negroes are to receive.

The new minimum salaries are as follows:

Rank 1: Master's degree and five years of college training, $70.

Rank 2: College graduation with four years of training, $60.

Rank 3: Three years of college training, $50 per month.

Rank 4: Two years of college training, $45 per month.

Rank 5: Less than two years of college training, $40 per month.

County and city boards may supplement these salaries out of local funds.

Average Teacher Pay In Alabama Is Below Relief Workers, Claim

FEB 17 1941

Only Three States Have Lower Salary Limit, According To Hulme

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — George W. Hulme, president of the Alabama Education Association, declares that Alabama's state allotment schedule (mistakenly called the minimum-salary schedule) sets a minimum monthly salary for the school term for teachers in the lowest classification of $50 for whites and $37.50 for Negroes.

"This," he said, "is lower than the average rate of $54 a month for relief workers on federal projects. Only three other states, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee, have lower minimum salaries for teachers than Alabama."

Hulme was discussing a recent issue of The Education Bulletin, published by the association, which shows that teachers in the public schools of Alabama were paid lower average salaries in 1938-39 than in 1929-30. "There has been an increase in teacher salaries since the minimum program became effective," said Hulme. "However, teaching positions in the public schools of Alabama have increased from 16,567 in 1929-30 to 18,707 in 1938-39, an increase brought about by an enrollment which increased from 622,888 to 691,319 during the same period."

The bulletin reveals that both monthly and annual average salaries for all teachers were lower in 1938-39 than in 1929-30. This is also true for average salaries when separated into racial groups and grade levels, save for elementary colored teachers' salaries which show a rise in average annual salaries and in average monthly salaries on a 12-month basis. This exception is explained by increased terms for Negro elementary schools under the minimum program act.

The increased enrollment and teaching force has prevented a return to pre-depression teacher-salary levels in spite of increased apportions, according to The Education Bulletin which discusses minimum-salary standards for teachers. The bulletin further points out that school leaders have continually stressed the fact that sufficient funds were not being provided to enable them to raise salaries to the pre-depression level while rewarding teachers for increased training and service, or to provide an elementary term of eight months without shortening the high school term.

Mr. Hulme further said that 24 states have some sort of minimum-salary standards for teachers while six others apportion funds in such a way as to tend to establish salary standards though no definite minimum is set.

SINGLE SALARY SCALE ADOPTED

Negro Teachers To Draw Same Pay As White Under Schedule

FEB 20 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 19—(AP)—The State Board of Education adopted Wednesday a single minimum salary schedule for white and Negro teachers, and voted to allocate an additional $500,000 from state funds in 1941-42 for increasing wages.

Gov. Dixon estimated the new scale, which increased the minimum for Negroes, would amount to a $200,000 yearly boost for teachers of that race.

Of the additional $300,000 which the board voted to allocate for salary hikes and eliminations of inequalities, educational sources predicted most of it would go to white teachers who move into higher brackets through added training and experience.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, said that while the new scale lowered the minimum for whites no reductions were contemplated and added that all white and some negro teachers already drew more than th eminimum for their race

Adoption Mandatory

Adoption of the single scale, Collins said, was made mandatory by a recent U S Supreme Court ruling that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' salaries.

The consolidated scale, as compared with the abandoned schedules:

FEB 20 1941

	New	Old Negro	Old White
Rank I	$70	$63.75	$85
Rank II	60	56.25	75
Rank III	50	48.75	65
Rank IV	45	45.00	60
Rank V	40	37.50	50

In general, rank I requires a master's degree and five years of college training; rank II, a bachelor's degree; rank III, three years of college, and rank IV, two years of college, and rank V, two years of college.

Under the 1935 minimum program act, the state will pay counties up to the minimum salary scale for all teachers paid this amount or more. Counties may supplement salary allotments.

After allocatio nof the 10 per cent for increases, the board specified that any 1941-42 funds in excess of those available for 1940-41 should go toward lengthening school terms.

State Finance Director A. R. Forsyth has estimated $938,000 will be available to schools from a general fund surplus at the end of the current fiscal year, Sept. 30, in addition to regular appropriations.

Besides combining the minimum salary schedule, the board approved a $50,000 bond issue by the Negro State Teachers' College here to match a federal grant for construction of a dining hall.

It also adopted the report of its course of study committee.

Half-Million Earmarked To Raise Teachers' Pay

FEB 20 1941

Of This, $200,000 Will Equalize Salaries Of Negroes

Salary increases for Alabama school teachers for the 1941-42 term, estimated at approximately $500,000 in the aggregate, were voted by the State Board of Education Wednesday. Of this, an estimated $200,000 will go to boost salaries of negro teachers in line with recent U. S. Supreme Court decision banning separate racial pay schedules for teachers having the same qualifications. The other estimated $300,000 will go to teachers, mostly white, who have qualified for increases under existing law by virtue of added experience and training.

The board adopted a single uniform minimum salary schedule for teachers irrespective of race, to replace the separate schedules for white and colored teachers. The new single schedule raises the minimum for negroes and reduces it for white teachers. It was stated, however, that in actual practice no reduction in white salaries would take place. Dr. A. H. Collins, State superintendent of education, pointed out that the schedules fixed a minimum, with no reference to the maximum. Thus while the new schedule raises the minimum for negroes, it does not require any reduction in salaries already being paid to white teachers.

Arrangement Called A "Trick And Trap"

MAR 5 - 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(SNS)—A sampling of sentiment among dues-paying members of the ASTA who seldom earn enough to bear their expenses to the annual convention reveals a hot dissatisfaction with the revised but unreformed salary schedule adopted by the Alabama State Board of Education "equalizing" the minimum pay scale for Alabama teachers.

Apparently acting to avoid a salary suit or to hoodwink Negro teachers, last week Alabama educational officials adopted a new salary schedule that made uniform the figures in the compulsory minimum level but failed to make the salaries the same for those doing the same class or work as ruled by the U. S. Supreme Court.

It thus created an invisible salary schedule for white teachers and raised slightly the visible salary schedule that will be used as a disguised uniform pay schedule. In some ranks, where the most Negro teachers are believed found, no pay changes were made at all in the revised schedule.

Some of the teachers described the new pay arrangement as a "trick and trap salary schedule" invented to circumvent the law and thus keep the gap between the salaries of Negro and white teachers as they have always been in Alabama

Alabama Has Equal Minimum Pay Scale For School Teachers

MAR 8 1941

News has reached the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that the State of Alabama on February 20 adopted an equal minimum salary scale for white and Negro teachers in the state.

Unless the action is examined closely, the impression is created that Negro and white teachers are now drawing the same salaries; but this is not the case.

The truth is that all teachers, both Negro and white, now start at the same salaries; but above this equal minimum, there are still the huge differentials in favor of white teachers.

According to an announcement from Montgomery, Ala., February 20, the state allotted about $200,000 out of a sum of $500,000 to Negro teachers for the purpose of bringing them up to the new minimum. The remaining $300,000 went to white teachers.

In concrete terms, this action by Alabama means that whereas a Negro teachers in the first rank formerly had a minimum of $63.75 a month, he now has a minimum of $70 a month, an increase of $6.25.

MAR 8 1941

White teachers in the first rank used to begin at $85. They now start at $70. The new scale represents a loss for white teachers, but only on the minimum level.

Negro teachers in the lowest rank (fifth) used to begin at $37.50 a month, and under the new scale they begin at $40.

This new minimum scale does not in fact equalize salaries between white and colored teachers all down the line. There is still a wide difference between a Negro teacher, for example, who has a master's degree and five years of experience, and a white teacher who has a master's degree and five years of experience.

The campaign which has been carried on in several states with the help of the N.A.A.C.P. has been aimed at securing equal pay for equal training and experience

ATLANTA, Ga.—(SNS)—

Teachers of the Fifth Congressional District Saturday went on record as ready to "bring pressure in order to secure equality of economic and educational opportunities for all persons regardless of race, creed or color."

In their resolutions adopted after a one-day session at the Booker T. Washington High School, the teachers said they will seek such equality by building up good will, involving the influence of all organizations and, if necessary, making application to the courts.

URGE DEFENSE TRAINING

The teachers also urged efforts to secure for colored youth and adults training in all of the national defense program, which a discussion revealed was discriminatory in many instances. Members of the group were advised to register and vote and to plan a definite program for the registration of all eligible persons.

Another provision called upon the state to make an adequate provision for graduate study by colored.

MAR 29 1941

The Saturday program presented the representatives from the several counties comprising the fifth district was composed of authorities on the state educational setup the defense program, the National Youth Administration for Georgia and pay for colored was nothing more than was put in the Federal Constitution seventy years ago.

SURVEYS BEING MADE

M. L. Cousins, of the Georgia Department of Education, colored division, in a feature address of the morning, told his hearers that Georgia was one of the remaining Southern states which had made no provision for graduate and professional study, but said surveys and studies were being made in this direction. He admitted that the recent interpretation by the Supreme Court with regards to equal educational opportunities and professional study for Negroes from March through November of 1939, recommending that scholarships be granted Negroes who desired such advancement. He said the Board of Regents adopted the recommendation, but that a week or two late the U. S. Supreme Court ruled that equal educational opportunities must be given within the confines of the individual state and that it was never put into effect.

The official said that official of the state educational department and representatives of colored educatonal groups were to confer at Paine College on April 9 and attempt to work out a plan "best for all of us."

CAUTIONS AGAINST COURTS

"Something must be done to meet the problem," he admitted advising legal action only when the teachers could get no step taken by those in charge. He explained what the other Southern states and cities are doing about salary equalization and higher study, which ranged all the way from "nothing" to the "hundred per cent" stand of the city of Knoxville, Tenn.

Representing M. D. Mobley, director of the National Defense Program of Georgia, Mr. Womack was bombarded with questions concerning the discrimination alleged under the national emergency. The speaker said that it was the policy of the state group to follow definite instructions from Washington that persons receiving part-time instruction in trades such as tooling, mechanics and machinery be engaged in the trades at present or possessed of some experience in them. In most instances, he admitted, this automatically eliminates Negroes in the vital mechanical and machinist trades. He said that courses being offered Negroes included carpentry, cooking, brick masonry and in a few instances, sheet metal, auto mechanics and welding.

WELDING CLASS FAILING

A welding class at Columbus, Ga for colored—the only one in the state—he revealed as failing because attendance was so low. The speaker said that the only successful classes of this sort were from the WPA rolls, against which he argued as undermining to the courage to work and independent spirit among men. About 750 are being given defense courses in the state, about one-third of whom are colored, Mr. Womack revealed. That labor unions are playing a vital part on the shaping of the entire defense program was not to be denied, the speaker stated.

Attorney A. T. Walden's address formed the basis for the greater portion of the resolutions adopted by the teachers. He recommended education of the public to the injustices inflicted upon the minority group, use of the ballot and recourse to the courts. He advised the teachers of Georgia to bgein a legal fight now and get what the courts cannot and will not deny in equalization of salaries and facilities.

FILE PETITION TO BOARD FOR EQUALIZATION

State Association Takes Official Action To Get Salary Hike

BIRMINGHAM—(ANP)—

The education commission of the Alabama State Teachers association Monday mailed a petition to the Jefferson County Board of Education, according to Dr. E. W. Taggart, chairman, asking for a conference at their next meeting with view to working out plans for equalization of the salaries of Negro Jefferson county teachers to those of the white teachers.

Details of the petition were not made known. However, it was the general opinion that the commission is seeking a solution to the differential salary problem through conference rather than court action.

It was speculated that the commission was on a double manevuer—one to adjust details of equalization of salaries without resort to the courts and the other to clear the way for legal action if such becomes necessary.

Everywhere court action has been taken for salary parity the procedure has been to file a petition with the board as a preliminary step. Cities like Knoxville, Chattanooga, and more recently New Orleans, have worked out salary parity programs in conference.

For five years the ASTA has been preparing for "action on equalization" of Negro teachers' salaries to those of white teachers and is understood to have raised enough initial money to finance that purpose.

It was observed that Dr. J. E. Bryan, superintendent of Jefferson county schools, said in a story published in the Birmingham World, October 24, that he "had made a study of the Virginia Plan of solving the salary equalization problem and was modeling the salary system of Jefferson county upon it."

DEC 6 1941

Presence of Atty. Thurgood Marshall, special counsel of the NAACP, in Birmingham last Sunday was being interpreted as a certainty that the petition mailed to the board was a step in the strategy of systematic and sustained legal action for removal of color discriminations in the salaries of Negro teachers.

Dr. Taggart would not comment for quoting on whether they had found a teacher who was willing to file a test suit. It could not be determined immediately the reactions of the local Negro leaders in education.

In Atlanta, A. T. Walden is handling the case with the advice and assistance of Mr. Marshall.

Other states where colored teachers have taken court action on their right to be paid decent salaries are Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Florida and Louisiana.

Involving an approximate total of $225,000 annually, the equal pay case in New Orleans, La., is under advisement by the court and decision is expected in about two weeks.

Alabama Equalizes Teachers' Salaries

The Alabama Board of Education has adopted a single minimum salary for all teachers, regardless of race, effective for 1941-42. Five hundred thousand dollars was appropriated, of which $200,000 will be used to raise the salaries of Negroes to the minimum, and $300,000 to raise the salaries of white teachers who qualify above the minimum.

APR 3 1941

All teachers of the first rank—a Master's degree and five years' experience— will be paid a minimum of $70.00 a month; all teachers of the fifth rank—less than two years of college—will receive $40.00 a month. Negro teachers of the first rank have received $63.75 minimum salary; white teachers $85.00. Negroes of the fifth rank have been receiving $37.50. Under this new salary scale the minimum salaries of all Negro teachers are raised and the minimium salaries of white teachers are lowered.

Defense And Court Decisions 'Endanger' Education Standards

A. E. A. Bulletin Sees Two Threatening Clouds On Horizon Of Schools

School standards throughout Alabama are being "endangered" by the sudden establishment of large national defense projects in the state and by recent Federal Court decisions interpreting the fourteenth amendment in its relationship to education for the minority races—Negroes in Alabama.

Such is the assertion in the monthly "Education Bulletin" issued by the Alabama Education Association in Montgomery. The Bulletin refers to the two factors as "two threatening clouds upon the horizon of Alabama's public schools."

The Bulletin points out:

"The defense program has moved rapidly. Little prior planning was possible. None could foresee where defense projects would locate. So, the sudden inrush of workers with their families to areas where defense projects developed has brought severe strains upon the schools of such areas. Personnel and facilities are inadequate in such areas to meet the demands of enormously increased enrollments.

"The Mobile, Anniston, Selma and Childersburg areas in Alabama are some of the localities affected by these conditions. Neither the local units nor the state of Alabama is financially able to meet the sudden and almost overwhelming strain thrown upon the local schools by the national defense program."

Concerning the recent Federal Court decisions regarding the education of Negroes, The Bulletin says:

"The courts have ruled in two decisions that equal salaries must be paid to white and colored teachers, with equal training and ability. In another decision the Supreme Court ruled that a state must provide college and professional training for Negroes equal to that for whites.

"The meaning of these Federal Court decisions are serious and far-reaching in view of the ability of Alabama to make them effective. An estimate, based upon the number and training of the teachers now employed in Alabama schools, concludes that to raise the salary level of Negro teachers to that of white teachers would require an additional $3,000,000.

"This does not consider the extra Negro school buildings needed. It makes no provision for necessary additional Negro teachers and for necessary additional transportation facilities for Negroes. It would not provide for colored professional schools on the college level. All these are necessary to equality in education for the Negroes of Alabama."

To offer an equal education for Negroes in Alabama "would require a leveling off process." The Bulletin reported. "White schools would have lower standards; white teachers would be paid lower salaries."

Federal aid is the principal hope held out by The Bulletin as a solution for the problems.

Education And Defense

An educational emergency is facing Alabama, according to the education bulletin published monthly by the Alabama Education Association. That emergency has two sources: changes made necessary by the defense program, and recent federal court decisions affecting the education of Negroes.

The rapidity with which the defense program has moved has created problems of providing educational facilities in areas of defense projects such as Childersburg. Neither local units nor the state government have emergency funds for taking care of such situations.

And as for Negro education, the A. E. A. bulletin estimates that $6,000,000 would be needed to make an adequate start toward equalizing education for the two races in Alabama. To bring equality in the salary level would mean $3,000,000 annually.

These problems, critical and pressing, lead the A. E. A. bulletin to the conclusion that Congress should pass immediately the measure known as the "educational finance act of 1941," which would provide additional federal aid for education in the states and territories.

The suggestion is based on the opinion, now generally held, that educational opportunities should be equalized not only within states, but also among states and sections of the nation. That principle prevails in Alabama in minimum program measures which, although there are some inequities in their administration, are soundly and wisely based on the idea that the strong should help the weak so that both may be benefited.

The bill now before Congress specifically and fully protects state control of schools, says the A. E. A. bulletin. It carefully leaves to the states and localities questions of educational policy, although the fact that there are limits to such a policy is evidenced by the court decisions regarding equality of educational training for all elements of the population.

The A. E. A. bulletin concludes: "Without federal aid, in some form, Alabama cannot meet the emergencies created by national defense and the requirements of the federal court decisions without suffering a tragic lowering of its educational standards. Action is required. Unified and immediate action is needed. The influence of all interested individuals and groups, the power of the entire state must be brought to bear. An emergency faces education in Alabama."

New Birmingham School Term May Cost Accredited Listing

Board Sets Up 174 Days, Two Days Below Fixed Minimum, But Hopes For Increased Revenues

Adopting their 1941-42 budget, the Birmingham Board of Education Saturday set up a short school term of 174 days for the coming year, based on "revenues now in sight"

The 174-day term is six days short of a full school term—considered to be 180 days—and two days below the 176-day term established as the minimum schools may operate and still remain on the accredited list.

City schools ran 180 days last term by borrowing $125,000 from the City Commission. However, the board will have to repay $41,000 on this loan during 1941-42.

F. D. McArthur, president of the board, at a meeting Friday afternoon, emphasized that the budget—which must be in the hands of the State Department of Education Monday—is based entirely on estimated revenues and that receipts may exceed expectations

Members of the board debated at length whether to set the 1941-42 term for 180 days with an anticipated deficit, or whether they should adopt the 174-day term in accordance with revenues in sight.

William J. Christian, board member, urged the term be established for 174 days "because that's all the funds we have in sight and we don't want to fool anybody." Mr. Christian, an accountant, added, however, "I believe we'll get enough money to run the full term."

The budget, adopted on the motion of Mr. Christian, estimates receipts at $2,664,394 and expenditures at $2,657,390. Included in anticipated receipts is $110,000 the board expects to receive from increased property assessments of the Equalization Board.

Expenditures of the board in 1941-42 will include payment of $41,000 to the City Commission on a $125,000 loan borrowed to run schools a full term this year.

Asked if the board would increase pay of Negro teachers in accordance with a recent ruling of the Supreme Court, President McArthur replied: "Whatever money derived from the state by virtue of a uniform arrangement of salary schedules by the State Board of Education will be passed on entirely to the colored teachers."

The Supreme Court ruled there could be no discrimination in salaries of teachers because of race, color or creed.

In other actions Friday afternoon the board:

Employed William M. Franklin as auditor for the board; agreed to borrow $65,000 to meet July 1 expenses of payrolls and other expenditures; accepted three coal bids and rejected three damage claims.

The board declined to pay damages to Jack Walden, Woodlawn High School student and son of T. C. Walden, 4128 South Fourth Avenue, who was accidentally burned in initiation ceremonies of the "W" Club. The Woodlawn Athletic Association paid the youth's doctor and hospital bills, amounting to about $120. J. T. Stokely, legal counsel for the board, said no legal liability rests with the board in such a case.

Another claim brought by Jack Boswell, son of R. A. Boswell and former Ensley High School student, was also rejected by the board on the same grounds of "no legal liability." C. J. Going, second assistant superintendent, said Boswell wrenched his knee playing football, necessitating an operation. He pointed out that a release had been signed by the boy's parents before the football season began.

A claim for damages brought by Miss Olivia Fernandez, who said she was struck and injured by a Board of Education truck at Twenty-First Street and Seventh Avenue, North, was likewise turned down.

The board awarded coal contracts to: National Coal & Coak Company, $2.90 per ton f. o. b., 2,500 tons; Colonial Coal & Coke Company, $2.84 per ton f. o. b., 3,250 tons, and Lacey Red Ash Coal & Clay Company, $2.45 per ton f. o. b., 3,250 tons.

Other members of the board present, in addition to Mr. Christian and Mr. McArthur, were Mrs. J. A. Dupuy, Donald Comer and Lawrence Stevens.

NEGRO TEACHERS GO ON EQUALITY BASIS

State Salary Schedule Removes Discrimination

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 20. (U.P.)—The state board of education today had removed discriminations against Negro teachers in its minimum salary schedule in a move which it hoped would comply with a recent United States Supreme Court decision.

Former schedules had fixed minima for Negroes at 75 per cent of that for whites. The new scale—effective next fall—provides the same schedule for both.

The court ruled against discrimination as to race or color for teachers of equal training and experience.

The new schedule raises former minima provided for Negro teachers and lowers that for white teachers but Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, said it would mean increased pay next year for many teachers of both races.

This will be possible, he said, because of increased funds to be available for schools from an estimated general fund surplus of nearly one million dollars.

The board voted to apply what it called "a considerable proportion" of the new funds to increase salaries and employ additional teachers.

"For lack of money, we have not been allotting the maximum salaries allowed in the allotment schedule," said the state superintendent. "Now a portion of the anticipated increase in revenues will enable us to allot the maximum allowed in the allotment schedule."

Educational authorities had not completed detailed estimates of the additional amount needed to finance the new salary schedule but preliminary estimates ranged from $400,000 to $600,000.

The new minimum salaries are as follows:

Rank I, master's degree and five years of college training, $70.

Rank II, college graduation with four years of training, $60.

Rank III, three years of college training, $50 per month.

Rank IV, two years of college training, $40 per month.

County and city boards may supplement these salaries out of local funds.

The state board also adopted the report of the committee on course of study and approved nominees of the state superintendent for the seven-member state textbook committee.

The superintendent is ex officio chairman of the latter group while other members will be:

Dr. John E. Bryan, superintendent of Jefferson County schools; W. L. Davis, principal of Central High School in Florence; T. H. Kirky, Lanett city superintendent; Miss Fay Kirtland, Selma elementary principal;

Miss Charlotte Peterson, principal of Montevallo elementary school; G. S. Smith, superintendent of Lamar County schools; A. B. Wells, head of the social science department of Lanier High School in Montgomery.

The committee will list the textbooks from which new adoptions will be made by Governor Dixon, Dr. Collins and A. R. Forsyth, state director of finance, who, under the law, comprise the textbook purchasing board.

State board of education members present were Governor Dixon, ex officio chairman; Dr. Collins, Donald Comer, Birmingham; Mrs. W. A. Gresham, Russellville; Harry M. Ayers, Anniston; A. H. Carmichael, Tuscumbia; N. D. Denson, Opelika, and L. H. Ellis, Columbiana.

State Education Board To Study Negro Salaries

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—The problem of adjusting salaries of Negro school teachers is due to come for consideration tomorrow at a meeting of the State Board of Education.

Dr. A. H. Collins, State school superintendent, said a dilemma presented by a United States Supreme Court decision that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' pay would come up for discussion.

A committee of the State Association of County and City Superintendents named to draw up recommendations to the State board met yesterday, but leaders said they failed to reach any definite conclusions.

The superintendents' organization, a unit of the Alabama Education Association, named the committee several weeks ago to study the problem and make recommendations, but Collins and E. B. Norton, former A.E.A. head, said no "definite opinion" was formed at yesterday's meeting.

"We talked the problem over, had a general discussion, but formed no recommendations," said Collins. Norton's statement was substantially the same.

Among other matters to be taken up by the State board tomorrow will be textbook adoptions for the next six years.

Those attending yesterday's conference included George Hulme, Ft. Payne, president of the A.E.A.; H. G. Dowling, Tuscaloosa; John Bryan, Bessemer; W. M. Jackson, Selma; Ed James, Perry County; C. M. Dannelly, Montgomery; H. G. Greer, Monroe County; C. J. Martin, Andalusia; W. J. Jones, Wilcox County; C. A. Donahoo, Gadsden, and Norton, who is superintendent of Covington County schools.

State To Raise Teachers' Wages

White And Colored Instructors Go On Equal Minimum Pay

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 20.—(AP) Alabama's white and negro teachers went on a single minimum salary schedule today and the state board of education authorized an additional $500,000 for increasing wages in 1941-42.

The new scale will increase the minimum for negroes. Governor Dixon estimated they would receive salary increases totaling $200,000.

From the additional $300,000 the board voted to allocate for pay increases and elimination of inequalities, educational sources indicated most of it would go to white teachers and who move into higher salary brackets through added training and experience.

Although the new scale lowered the minimum for white teachers Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintended of education, said no reductions were contemplated.

Collins pointed out adoption of the single scale was made mandatory by a United States Supreme Court ruling that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' salaries.

The consolidated scale, compared with the old schedules:

	New	Old Negro	Old White
Rank 1 ...	$70	$63.75	$85
Rank 2 ...	60	56.25	75
Rank 3 ...	50	48.75	65
Rank 4 ...	45	45.00	60
Rank 5 ...	40	37.50	50

Rank 1 generally requires a master's degree and five years of college training; rank 2 a bachelor's degree; rank 3 three years of college; Rank 4, two years of college and rank 5, less than two years of college.

Alabama Group Hits Tactics

Free Suffrage Declared "Twin" Of Equalization

MAR 1 9 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—"I have never lived in anything more facist than the South," declared Dr. J. W. Nicholson, president of the Alabama State Teachers' association, in session here March 12-14.

MAR 1 9 1941

Teachers turned down the "gradual" equalization theory of the State because it offered no definite time period for realization and approved the report of their education committee which called for legal action to do away with color differentials in teacher salary schedules.

"DON'T COMPROMSE"

Dr. E. W. Taggart of Birmingham keynoting Wednesday night at a joint session of the PTA and ASTA told the teachers, "Let's equalize, don't compromise." He took these fighting words from a message of Talladega college students who contributed $65 to the salary equalization fund.

MAR 1 9 1941

Dr. R. L. Johns, state official, called the salary equalization problem serious, remarking, "We are trying to surround it; we are creeping up on it." He said that Alabama's minimum salary law had "operated to equalize educational opportunity" and that it had "evened up (Negro salaries to white) a little, although it has a long way to go." He claimed that the Negro teachers had "confused present status with present trends" and went on to argue that in 1930 white teachers received an annual salary of $891, Negro $330 (disparity of $561) and that in 1940 whites received average annual salary of $825, Negro $395 (difference of $430). Over the 10 year period the gap between white and Negro salaries had narrowed $65 but was still $430 apart. His "favorable trend" arguments reveal that it would take over 75 years to erase the differentials under that pace.

Dr. Johns recited other differentials in education, sectional, regional, etc., obviously to show that racial inequalities belonged in that category, although he did not directly group it with these others.

MAR 1 9 1941

"SERIOUS SITUATION"

Commenting upon the "serious situation," Dr. J. E. Bryan, Alabama NYA administrator and superintendent of Jefferson county schools, said salary equalization has "got us around the collar, around the neck," speaking on NYA activities for Negroes in Alabama.

Thursday morning Prof. Edward Yeomans, Jr., white, spoke on "Cooperatives" and Cornelius King of Washington talked on "Credit Unions."

Thursday night Prof. H. S. Smith read the speech of Dr. R. B. Atwood, president of Kentucky State college, which dealt with techniques and tactics for fighting for equalization of teachers' salaries. Dr. Nicholson delivered the president's annual address.

Dr. Milton J. Wright, of Wilberforce university spoke on the subject, "Government Program for National Defense," Friday evening.

MAR 1 9 1941

"MASTERPIECE OF EVASION"

Dr. Rayford W. Logan of Washington described the "minimum equality salary schedule" of Alabama as a "masterpiece of evasion" and spoke of the makers as "artists of evasions." He traced the benefits Negroes have recevied in war and showed the effectiveness of "pressure groups." He pointed out how the government, labor unions, states, National Chamber of Commerce and National Manufacturers association had been guilty of "buck passing" in respect to the Negro in national defense.

"Don't let anybody tell you anything can't be be accomplished with pressure at the right time," he said.

In the business session the vote commission declared that free suffrage was the "twin program" of salary equalization and declared the "disfranchisement destroys democracy."

Reelected were Dr. W. W. Nicholson, Talladega, president; W. A. Shields, Tuskegee, treasurer; F. L. Paul, Birmingham, executive secretary; H. C. Trenholm, research secretary. New officers are R. A. Carter, Normal, vice president; and J. A. Edwards, Montgomery, executive committee.

ALABAMA TEACHERS STUDY SCHEDULE OF SALARY SCALE

MAR 1 5 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(By Emory O. Jackson for ANP)—At stake in the meeting of the Alabama State Teachers Association here, is the fate of the decision of the federal courts striking out discriminatory salaries for Negro and white teachers possessing the same qualifications.

Alabama public and educational officials have manipulated to circumvent this ruling by devising a new salary schedule which is uniform at one point but which is discriminatory nevertheless. They set a minimum for Negro teachers but no maximum and disregard altogether their experience and additional training.

Here is the new salary schedule which claims to equalize the Negro and white teachers' salaries:

MAR 1 5 1941

	New Negro	Old White	Old
Rank I	$70	$63.75	$8
Rank II	$60	$56.25	$7
Rank III	$50	$48.75	$6
Rank IV	$45	$45.00	$60
Rank V	$40	$37.50	$5

Prior to this Alabama had made motions at providing graduate education by setting up a university hull at the state college at Montgomery. In reality Negroes in Alabama have no opportunity to receive graduate professional technical and mechanical training as is the case with the ivory skins.

MAR 1 5 1941

Skittish and fear-driven by the latest ruling of the federal courts on discriminatory salaries, the state of Alabama concocted a tricky evading salary schedule a few days apparently to get the jump on the Negro teachers' organizations that has a three-year old fight underway to correct unward uneven teachers' salaries upon race and color.

Alabama invented a salary fraud based upon the same pattern used to disfranchise Negro citizens. While the state revised its salary schedule so that outwardly it would appear to be uniform for white and black teachers, it also left an opening for greater discrimination. It reduced the salary schedule but left the pay check of white and black teachers about the same gap apart.

Alabama does not in reality have a state salary schedule, but rather a state salary pattern. It is used to allocate funds to city and county boards of education. Working that way, the job of discriminating in salaries is passed on the local boards. That removes the danger of any organization attacking the state and would obviously compel the filing of suits against every city and county board of education in Alabama before total salary parity over the state can be accomplished.

Poorly paid teachers and unenlightened teachers will hardly immediately bestir to break down this new barrier. Doubtless the state authorities count upon the selfishness of satisfied teachers and the corruptness of a low type of Negro leader to inspire in their behalf.

Alabama's parity law works this way. There are three steps beginning with a base or minimum and going outward according to experience. It is divided into five ranks, according to certification. It does not make it compulsory to pay beyond the first step or the minimum. The local superintendent is given discretion to pay any "worthy" teacher above this. As it currently operates all white teachers are paid above this but generally Negro teachers are paid no more than the minimum. This, you see, is the new parity law.

MAR 1 5 1941

Two things to watch are these: Southern states with separate salary schedules are watching the Alabama salary scheme whoih tries to get around the constitution without breaking it. The other is the conduct of the Alabama State Teachers' Association.

If Alabama teachers accept this invisible salary schedule which still provides for and protects salary discriminations based upon color and race, they will have conspired against black Americans, and the supreme court, and true democracy.

Alabama Teachers Get Pay Increases

MAR 1 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 27—Of the approximately $500,000 of salary increases for Alabama school teachers, voted Wednesday by the State Board of Education in session here, for the 1941-42 term, an estimated $200,000 will represent increases in the salaries of Negro teachers. The remainder will go to teachers who, made eligible by added experience and training, have qualified for salary increases already provided for by law. Most of these teachers are white.

The Board's action is in line with the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in a test case appealed from the state of Virginia, holding that Negro teachers of like experience and training are entitled to receive the same salaries as white teachers giving the same instruction, and that there can be no separate salary scales for teachers, based on race or color.

A single uniform minimum salary schedule for teachers, irrespective of race, was adopted for application in Alabama, replacing the separate schedules for white and Negro teachers. While the new single schedule raises the minimum for Negro teachers and lowers it for white teachers, it is understood that no reduction in salaries of white teachers will actually take place—no reference being made to a maximum in the schedules which fix a minimum. The result is, however, a definite raising of the minimum of salaries for Negro teachers.

Before adjourning, the Board of Education authorized the issuance and sale of $50,000 of bonds to be used in matching Federal funds for financing construction of a new dining-hall at the State Teachers' College for Negroes, located here.

Ala. Equalizes Teachers' Pay; Inequality Cited

MAR 1 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—The Alabama State board of education voted to equalize salaries of colored and white teachers at its meeting here Wednesday and adopted a uniform minimum salary schedule for all teachers to replace the former separate schedules.

A total of $500,000 was voted to care for this equalization during the 1941-42 term, $200,000 of this sum to go to boost the salaries of colored teachers up to the minimum and $300,000 to go to teachers, mostly white, who have qualified by experience or additional training to receive salaries above the minimum.

The new schedule was put into effect to meet the recent decision of the U.S. Supreme Court that States could not have separate salary schedules based on race. There are several peculiar angles to the Alabama practice, however.

Equality Continues

The new schedule fixes a minimum which represents a raise for colored teachers but is a reduction for whites. Thus, while the new minimum of $40 is $2.50 above the $37.50 which was the previous minimum for colored teachers; it is also $10 below the former minimum of $50 for whites.

Where the inequality is continued by this evasion of the spirit of the law, is, as Dr. A. H. Collins, State superintendent of education, announced that none of the whites who were getting $50 per month will be reduced. The effect, therefore, will be continue to pay whites $10 more than the colored teachers are to receive.

New Minimums

MAR 1 1941

The new minimum salaries are:

Rank 1—master's degree and five years of college training, $70.

Rank 2—college graduation with four years of training, $60.

Rank 3—three years of college training, $50 per month.

Rank 4 — two years of college training, $45 per month.

Rank 5—less than two years of college training, $40 per month.

County and city boards may supplement these salaries out of local funds.

TEACHER SALARY SCALE DEPLORED

Program Is Proposed To Improve Standards In Alabama

(From Yesterday's Final Edition)

In a statement deploring the salary scale of Alabama teachers, Miss Lorine Barnes, Birmingham teacher welfare committee chairman, outlined to A. E. A. delegates Thursday a six-point program recommending changes designed to improve the economic status of the average Alabama teacher.

The program, as given by Miss Barnes, recommends:

1. That the public be so informed as to make possible through legislative action a nine-month school term for Alabama children.

2. That an insistent drive be made for federal aid, which is necessary to provide adequate education in Alabama.

MAR 29 1941

3. That salary standards for elementary and high schools be equivalent.

4. That a campaign be waged to make every teacher and P.-T. A. worker a voter.

5. That rural school leaders influence the best homes to board teachers.

6. That credit unions be established by teachers in every city and county.

MAR 29 1941

Miss Barnes recommended that all persons eligible for the education retirement plan cooperate in promoting its success, and expressed gratitude to Gov. Dixon and the Legislature for their efforts in behalf of a teacher retirement system.

OTHER STATES HAVE COMMON PROBLEM WITH ALABAMA

MODERN FARMER
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Alabama school authorities are reported to be considering the equalization of the salaries of Negro teachers with the salaries of white teachers, before court action is invoked. The State Superintendent, Dr. A. H. Collins, sees one of three ways to accomplish this. One way requires securing $2,000,000 in new money; another, cutting down the legal seven months' school term by one month; still another, reducing the white teachers' salaries to meet the Negro teachers' salaries.

MAR 15 1941

Alabama wants to comply with the decision of the Federal Courts on this much agitated subject of salary differentials on the sole grounds of race. The news story carrying Dr. Collins' suggestions on the only procedures which will accomplish this end are good for a little analysis. Were two of the suggestions made to shock the State's incoming legislature into appropriating the needed $2,000,000? Were either of these same two ways suggested in order to give the Negroes who are inclined to resort to the courts cause to pause?

MAR 15 1941

Teachers' salaries are becoming more and more a sore disturbance to State and County boards of education. The Federal Government, through the Supreme Court and district courts has taken a firm stand with the 14th amendment as the basis for its stand. The Federal Government through the Congress gives large sums of money to support public education. Though the Federal Government will not reverse its stand on salaries, could or would it reverse its policy of appropriations to support education?

Guessing the right answer to this question may be causing the boards of education their greatest concern.

Alabama invented a salary fraud based upon the same pattern used to disfranchise Negro citizens. While the state revised its salary schedule so that outwardly it would appear to be uniform for white and black teachers, it also left an opening for greater discrimination. It reduced the salary schedule but left the pay check of white and black teachers about the same gap apart.

Alabama does not in reality have a state salary schedule, but rather a state salary pattern. It is used to allocate funds to city and county boards of education. Working that way, the job of discriminating in salaries is passed on to the local boards. That removes the danger of any organization attacking the state and would obviously compel the filing of suits against every city and county board of education in Alabama before total salary parity over the state can be accomplished.

Poorly paid teachers and unenlightened teachers will hardly immediately bestir to break down this new barrier. Doubtless the state authorities count upon the selfishness of satisfied teachers and the corruptness of a low type of Negro leader to conspire in their behalf.

Alabama's parity law works this way. There are three steps beginning with a base or minimum and going outward according to experience. It is divided into five ranks, according to certification. It does not make it compulsory to pay beyond the first step or the minimum. The local superintendent is given discretion to pay any "worthy" teacher above this. As it currently operates all white teachers are paid above this but generally Negro teachers are paid no more than the minimum. This, you see, is the new parity law.

Two things to watch are these: other Southern states with separate salary schedules are watching the Alabama salary scheme which tries to get around the constitution without breaking it. The other is the conduct of the Alabama State Teachers association.

If Alabama teachers accept this invisible salary schedule which still provides for and protects salary discriminations based upon color and race, they will have conspired against black Americans, and the supreme court and true democracy.

PAY IS UNIFORM AT LOWEST POINT, BUT NO PROVISION IS MADE FOR ADVANCEMENT

State Association to Discuss Discriminatory Parity and May Take Action to Bring About Real Equality

MAR 14 1941

By Emory O. Jackson

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP)—At stake in the meeting of the Alabama State Teachers association here, March 12-14, is the fate of the decision of the federal courts striking out discriminatory salaries for Negro and white teachers possessing the same qualifications.

Alabama public and educational officials have manipulated to circumvent this ruling by devising a new salary schedule which is uniform at one point but which is discriminatory nevertheless. They set a minimum for Negro teachers but no maximum and disregard altogether their experience and additional training.

Here is the new salary schedule which claims to equalize the Negro and white teachers' salaries:

	New	Old Negro	Old White
Rank I	$70	$63.75	$85
Rank II	$60	$56.25	$75
Rank III	$50	$48.75	$65
Rank IV	$45	$45.00	$60
Rank V	$40	$37.50	$50

Prior to this Alabama had made notions at providing graduate education by setting up a university hull at the Negro state college at Montgomery. In reality Negroes in Alabama have no opportunity to receive graduate, professional technical and mechanical training as is the case with the ivory skins.

Skittish and fear-driven by the latest ruling of the federal courts on discriminatory salaries, the state of Alabama concocted a tricky parity-evading salary schedule a few days back apparently to get the jump on the Negro teachers organization that has a three-year old fight underway to correct uneven teachers' salaries based upon race and color.

Ala. Governor Refuses Action On Equal Pay

FEB 15 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 13—Gov. Frank Dixon refuses to heed the petition of the white School Superintendents Conference asking him to call a special session of the State Legislature to equalize colored and white teachers pay in acocrdance with a recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling and the decision of the Federal District Court.

The superintendents pointed out that appropriations for the increased salaries must be allotted from the huge surplus accumulated in the Alabama Educational Trust Funds. The next session of the Legislature is scheduled for 1943.

Dixon Opposes Special Session

Legislature Will Not Be Reconvened To Study School Problem

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 28—(AP)—A suggestion that Alabama's Legislature be called into extraorddnary session to consider financial and other problems of the schools was met by Gov. Frank M. Dixon today with a flat statement that "there will be no special session."

The State Association of City and County School Superintendents named a committee yesterday to confer with the governor tomorrow on the "possibility and advisability" of re-convening the legislators to make additional revenues available and talckle other school problems.

The proposal to confer with the governor was made after Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent, had told the local administrators that an estimated surplus of $500,000 to $750,000 would accrue in the educational trust fund this year, possibly more next year.

This fund, Collins asserted, will not be available to schools "unless the legislature is called in special session" and passes an appropriation law. He added to reporters later that "I am in favor of a special session, if the balance reaches a half million dollars."

Dixon said last night that a legislative session would "consume any surplus" in the state treasury, and repeated a previous assertion that the solons would not be reconvened except in the event of a "dire emergency."

The governor said it was his impression that state law requires that any surplus in the educational trust fund must go toward lowering ad valorem property taxes, and added:

"I have asked Attorney General Lawson to inform me definitely what the law provides, and I expect to follow the terms of the present law. If it (the surplus) must be used for lowering ad valorem taxes, I have asked the attorney general to inform me as to the proper procedure.

"There will not be a special session of the legislature."

Another subject which the school administrators said needed attention was a United States Supreme Court mandate in a Virginia case to the effect that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' salaries.

The question has not arisen in Alabama courts, but Dr. Collins expressed belief changes must be made in Alabama's teacher pay system, which places the minimum salaries of negro teachers at 75 percent of that received by white teachers with equal certificates.

The committee named to meet tomorrow and ask for an audience with the governor is composed of H. G. Greer, Monroeville, president of the state superintendents' organization; G. W. Hulme, Ft. Payne, president of the Alabama Education Association; Frank L. Grove, Montgomery, A. E. A. executive secretary; John E. Bryan, superintendent of Jefferson County schools; Walter Jackson, Selma, and E. B. Norton, Andalusia.

Dr. C. B. Glenn, superintendent of Birmingham schools, was appointed head of a committee to solicit the aid of the National Association of School Administrators, meeting in Atlantic City next month, in using the negro salary problem as a basis for efforts to obtain federal aid for southern education in a program of equalization with other sections.

BOARD ADJUSTS TEACHERS' PAY

Kentucky Officials Adopt Single Scale For White and Negro School Salaries.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 19.—(AP)—The State board of education adopted today a single minimum salary schedule for white and Negro teachers, and voted to allocate an adidtional $500,000 from State funds in 1941-42 for increasing salaries.

Governor Dixon estimated the new scale, which increased the minimum for Negroes, would amount to a $200,000 yearly boost for teachers of that race.

Of the additional $300,000 which the board voted to allocate for salary hikes and elimination of inequalities, educational sources predicted most of it would go to white teachers who move into higher brackets through added training and experience.

Dr. A. H. Collins, State superintendent of education, said that while the new scale lowered the minimum for whites, no reductions were contemplated and added that all white and some Negro teachers already drew more than the minimum for their race.

Adoption of the single scale, Collins said, was made mandatory by a recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' salaries.

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 24—(AP)—A group of Alabamians who hope to use the problem of equalizing white and negro teachers' salaries as the basis of an appeal for Federal aid to education in the South will attend a meeting of the National Association of School Administrators, opening last week end in Atlantic City, N. J.

The State Association of County and City School Superintendents recently named Dr. C. B. Glenn, Birmingham, as head of a committee to bring the question before the national organization. Dr. Glenn said at the time President Roosevelt had told him he was in favor of Federal aid to equalize educational opportunities.

ALABAMA MOVES FORWARD

MAR 22 1941

Alabama has moved a step forward in providing equal salaries for white and Negro teachers out of the little money appropriated for public education.

The leaders of Alabama know that it is the only way to solve the problem now since several of the states have had Supreme Court rulings on the salary status as it affects the two group of workers.

The equalization in Alabama, however, is a gesture at Democracy. The equalization is at the bottom and not at the top, and the white teachers with inferior qualifications still draw more money than most of the experienced and skilled Negro teachers.

To equalize salaries properly it is said, Alabama would have to spend $2,000,00 whereas only $200,00 has been spent so far toward equalization.

The Negro teachers of Alabama are not fooled in the scheme they are still pressing their claims for an equitable equalization.

Half-Million Earmarked To Raise Teachers' Pay

Of This, $200,000 Will Equalize Salaries Of Negroes

Salary increases for Alabama school teachers for the 1941-42 term, estimated at approximately $500,000 in the aggregate, were voted by the State Board of Education Wednesday. Of this, an estimated $200,000 will go to boost salaries of negro teachers in line with recent U. S. Supreme Court decision banning separate racial pay schedules for teachers having the same qualifications. The other estimated $300,000 will go to teachers, mostly white, who have qualified for increases under existing law by virtue of added experience and training.

The board adopted a single uniform minimum salary schedule for teachers irrespective of race, to replace the separate schedules for white and colored teachers. The new single schedule raises the minimum for negroes and reduces it for white teachers. It was stated, however, that in actual practice no reduction in white salaries would take place. Dr. A. H. Collins State superintendent of education, pointed out that the schedules fixed a minimum, with no reference to the maximum. Thus while the new schedule raises the minimum for negroes, it does not require any reduction in salaries already being paid to white teachers.

The new uniform minimum schedule is as follows: For teachers holding rank one certificate, $70 a month; rank two, $60; rank three, $50; rank four, $45; and rank five, $40. The rank of certificates held by a teacher is determined by number of years of college training and the type of courses studied. In general, a rank one certificate requires a master's degree and five years of college training; a rank two certificate, college graduation with four years of training; rank three, three years college training; rank four, two years college training; while teachers with less than two years college training are granted rank five certificates.

Under existing separate schedules, the minimum pay for white teachers is $85 for rank one, $75 for rank two, $65 for rank three $60 for rank four and $50 for rank five. The schedule for negroes is three-fourths these amounts.

The estimated total increase of $500,000 in teachers' salaries for next year will come out of the general fund surplus. It has been estimated that this will amount to $938,000 at the end of the present fiscal year, Sept. 30 Salary increases provided for Wednesday will of course cut down the amount available for school term extension. The State Board of Education took cognizance of this fact in its resolution authorizing the increases.

The board authorized sale of $50,000 worth of bonds to match Federal funds for erection of a dining hall at State Teachers College, Montgomery.

Negro Salaries Tough Problem

State Board Of Education Faced With Decision Tomorrow

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 18 (AP)—The problem of adjusting salaries of negro school teachers is due to come for consideration tomorrow at a meeting of the state board of education.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state school superintendent, said a dilemma presented by a United State Supreme court decision that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' pay would come up for discussion.

A committee of the State Association of County and City Superintendents named to draw up recommendations to the state board met yesterday, but leaders said they failed to reach any definite conclusions.

The superintendents' organization, a unit of the Alabama Education Association, named the committee several weeks ago to study the problem and make recommendations, but Collins and E. B. Norton, former A. E. A. head, said no "definite opinion" was formed at yesterday's meeting.

"We talked the problem over, had a general discussion, but formed no recommendations," said Collins. Norton's statement was substantially the same.

Among other matters to be taken up by the state board tomorrow will be textbook adoptions for the next six years.

49th State Meeting Of Negro Teachers Held In Montgomery

MONTGOMERY.—The 49th annual session of the Colored Alabama State Teachers Association ended here Friday after a two-day session.

One of the chief items of discussion was equal pay for equal work for white and Negro teachers.

MAR 20 1941

Dr. R. L. John, of the Alabama Department of Education, said a comparison of white and Negro teachers' salaries in the last ten years showed that white teachers' salaries had declined from an average of $891 in 1930 to $825 in 1940, a difference of $66 per year, while the salaries of Negro teachers in the same time had advanced from $370 to $395 per year. He said that legal action was not the best method for Negro teachers to use to make the state do anything to help them, but it might cause them to lose some of their best friends as well as hurt the cause of education.

He said that a ten per cent increase would be made in 194[illegible] for Negro education but local boards would decide whether this should go for increased salaries, for new school buildings or for additiona teachers.

Dr. R. W. Logan, Negro educator, of Washington, D. C., disagreed with Dr. John and said legal action should be taken to secure equal pay for white and Negro teachers, as provided in a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court.

MAR 20 1941

Teachers interviewed by a Southern News Almanac representative said "We will continue to fight for equality."

E. O. Jackson, of Birmingham, said "eventually we will win."

Officers for the following year are: Dr. J. W. Nicholson, Talladega, president; Dean R. A. Carter, A. and M., Normal, Ala., vice-president; Felix L. Paul, Birmingham, executive secretary; W. A. Shields, Tuskegee, treasurer; H. C. Trenholm, Montgomery, research secretary.

Refuse To Be Hoodwinked Into Compromise On Salary Scales

BULLETIN

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—In reply to a question on equalization of teachers salaries, Dr. R. L. Johns, state educational official speaking on a symposium of the Alabama State Teachers convention warned, "Court action to try to push the state to do this wouldn't be the best thing. You'll regret it. You will lose many of your white friends and hurt the cause of education."

He enlarged the view to say that the state was making the right approach although it might not be as rapid as some desired.

MAR 22 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP)—"I have never lived in anything more fascist than the South," declared Dr. J. W. Nicholson, president of the Alabama State Teachers association, in session here March 12-14.

Teachers turned down the "gradual" equalization proposal of the state because it offered no definite time period for realization and approved the report of their education committee which called for legal action to do away with color differentials in teacher salary schedules.

Dr. E. W. Taggart of Birmingham keynoting Wednesday night at a joint session of the PTA and ASTA told the teachers, "Let's equalize, don't compromise." He took those fighting words from a message of Talladega college students who contributed $65 to the salary equalization fund.

MAR 22 1941

Dr. R. L. Johns, state official, called the salary equalization problem serious, remarking, "We are trying to surround it; we are creeping up on it." He said that Alabama's minimum salary law had "operated to equalize educational opportunity" and that it had "evened up (Negro salaries to white) a little, although it has a long way to go."

He claimed that Negro teachers had "confused present status with present trends" and went on to argue that in 1930 white teachers received an annual salary of $891 Negro $330 (disparity of $561) and that in 1940 whites received average annual salary of $825, Negro $395 (difference of $430).

Over the 10 year period the gap between white and Negro salaries had narrowed $65 but was still $430 apart. His "favorable trend" arguments reveal that it would take over 75 years to erase the differentials under that pace.

Dr. Johns recited other differentials in education, sectional, regional, etc., obviously to show that racial inequalities belonged in that category, although he did not directly group it with these others.

Commenting upon the "serious situation," Dr. J. E. Bryan, Alabama NYA administrator and superintendent of Jefferson county schools, said salary equalization has "got us around the collar, around the neck," speaking on NYA activities for Negroes in Alabama.

Thursday morning Prof. Edward Yoemans, Jr., white, spoke on "Co-operatives" and Cornelius King of Washington talked on "Credit Unions."

MAR 22 1941

Thursday night Prof. H. S. Smith read the speech of Dr. R. B. Atwood, president of Kentucky State college, which dealt with techniques and tactics for fighting for equalization of teachers' salaries. Dr Nicholas delivered the president's annual address.

Dr. Milton J. Wright of Wilberforce university spoke on the subject, "Government Program for National Defense," Friday morning.

Dr. Rayford W. Logan of Washington described the "minimum equality salary schedule" of Alabama as a "masterpiece of evasion" and spoke of the makers as "artists of evasion." He traced the benefits Negroes have received in war and showed the effectiveness of "pressure groups."

He pointed out how the government, labor unions, states, National Chamber of Commerce and National Manufacturers association had been guilty of "buck passing" in respect to the Negro in national defense.

"Don't let anybody tell you anything can't be accomplished with pressure at the right time," he said.

In the business session the vote commission declared that free suffrage was the "twin program" of salary equalization and declared the "disfranchisement democracy."

Re-elected were Dr. J. W. Nicholson, Talladega, president; W. A. Shields, Tuskegee, treasurer; F. L. Paul, Birmingham, executive secretary; H. C. Trenholm, Montgomery, research secretary. New officers are R. A. Carter, Normal, vice president; and J. A. Edwards, Montgomery, executive secretary.

Alabama Adopts Equal Minimum Salary Scale For School Teachers

MAR 8 1941

NEW YORK—The State of Alaiama on Feburary 20 adopted an equal minimum salary scale for white and Negro teachers in the state, it was announced by the NAACP, this week.

The impression is created that the Negro and white teachers are now drawing the same salaries; but this is not the case.

The truth is that all teachers, both Negro and white, now begin at the same salaries; but above this equal minimmum, there are still the huge differentials in favor of white teachers.

According to an announcement from Montgomery, Ala., February 20, the State allotted about $200,000 out of a sum of $500,000 to Negro teachers for the purpose of bringing them up to the new minimum. The remaining $300,000 went to white teachers.

In concrete terms, this action by Alabama means that whereas a Negro teacher in the first rank formerly had a minimum of $63.75 a month, he now has a minimum of $70 a month, an increase of $6.25.

MAR 8 1941

White teachers in the first rank used to begin at $85. They now start at $70. The new scale represents a loss for white teachers, but only on the minimum level.

Negro teachers in the lowest rank (fifth) used to begin at $37.50 a month, and under the new scale they begin at $40.

This new minimum scale does not in fact equalize salaries between white and colored teachers all down the line. There is still a wide difference between a Negro teacher, for example, who has a master's degree and five years of experience, and a white teacher who has a master's degree and five years of experience.

Schemes And Tactics Used To Deter Just Teacher Wage Levels

MAR 17 1941

MAR 17 1941

By STAFF WRITER

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —SNS— It is interesting to look over the tactics and schemes of appeals that have been used to either offset or defer correction of the various salary inequalities in the pay of Negro teachers since by negative confirmation the U. S. Supreme Court knocked out discrimatory teachers' salaries based on race and color.

Long before, something like little over two years, the District Federal Court at Ashville, N. C. last summer outlawed unequal salaries rated on race and colored, brought by the Norfolk, Va. teachers, the Alabama State Teachers Association had been waging a campaign for funds to go into court for salary equalizations.

An enterprising newspaper reporter interviewed Dr A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education a few weeks ago on the salary parity question with Dr. Collins, pointing out that Alabama would have to in his opinion, conform to the court ruling. He was reported as saying it could be met by lowering the pay of white teachers, cutting the school term, or by an additional outlay of $2,000,000 by the State Legislature.

All three instances, it was later interpreted by Negro thinkers were appeals to resentment, and, did not reflect a friendly attitude.

Comenting on the opinion of Dr. Collins, Governor Dixon hinted at circumstances of the decision by saying that he thought the issue could be met without doing any of the three things suggested by Dr. Collins.

MAR 17 1941

At a meeting this winter as State Teachers of Negro educators from all over the South. John Temple Graves, well-versed newspape columnist, usually friendly in his speaking and writings of sound activities, advised agoinst attempts at new gains (obviously talking about salary parity) during the national crisis.

A meeting of state superintendents of Alabama cities and counties brought forth the appointment of two committees, one to take up the question with a natio education body and inspire them to use the salary-parity issue to get Federal aid to state education and the other to work out a revision of the state's salary schedule, which was expressedly discriminatory, based solely on race and color.

That committee on revising the salary schedule has reported, and the state has a uniform minimum salary schedule which embodies the essentials of the old schedule discrimatory pay for reasons of racial identity.

Plainly, Alabama has appealed to resentment; Mr. Graves to patriotism; the Governor fell back on beating the law (circumvention); the superintendents seek to pass the cost on the the Federal government, and the State Board of Education moved to hide the racial differentials by shrewdly devicing the old schedule.

All these "tactics and schemes" have been detected by Negro educators of the ASTA.

The ASTA leaders have kept their intentions guaded. No one seems to know exactly what course the fight for salary-parity will take That will come out in the report of the education commission this Friday.

MAR 17 1941

But the views of the supporting teachers, those from the rural sections, especially, are loudly known. Frantically they are inquiring of every one they think should know, "What are thy going to do about salaries.?"

Salary parity, symbolic issue of total educational equality, is no longer considered just a campaign of the teachers, or a profession or an organization, but a public issue. Sentiment seems to be, to use the phrase of a Montgomery newspaper editorial, "devoted to making the American schools absolutely free and equal."

"SELLING CIVILIZATION SHORT"

To the Editor The News:

Our schools are in a pitiful condition. Our buildings are not in the best condition in the world. Our Negro school buildings are in a dilapidated condition, most of them. Most of them are but firetraps. Something should be done for them right away.

Our great city, Birmingham, is not giving its future citizens what they deserve. They are due everything. We are facing a short term which is not good for any school system.

I read in your paper a few days ago that there was a shortage of teachers in Mississippi. There soon will be a shortage of teachers in Birmingham if something is not done about salaries. Good teachers are leaving the schools for more money. With the cost of living rising, teachers cannot make ends meet on these small salaries they are making. All industries have given raises. Everybody has received a raise but the teachers.

Teachers in the Birmingham public schools received two pay cuts during the depression, but they are still working under a cut. The cut received by other city employes has been put back and they are asking for another raise, which they rightfully deserve. Teachers are not paid enough. The teachers have prepared themselves for their jobs and they are due some consideration for this preparation.

The state, county and city are selling civilization short in Alabama when it comes to education. Our schools are overcrowded and our teachers are underpaid.

We stress in our schools the "American way of life." We are constantly reminding the people that they are living in a democracy. I think we are getting away from our democracy when it comes to the treatment of our Negro teachers. From your article a few days ago I see that the salaries paid Negro teachers are pitiful. We have a number of well-trained Negro teachers, but the salaries paid them are not representative of a democracy. These teachers are not given justice.

The United States Supreme Court has spoken in behalf of the Negro teachers of Birmingham and Alabama. The Negro teachers have waited a long time for the city and county to do something about the decision of the court, i.e., the right thing. If something is not done soon there will be some type of fight in the courts.

Negro teachers pay just as much for their clothing as the other teachers pay for theirs.

Too much money is leaving Birmingham to help take care of some poor counties in Alabama. Birmingham gets the money, but enough of it does not come back to take care of its schools.

We say that Birmingham is a great city. If we are to keep Birmingham the great city it is, we must do something for its school children and its teachers. JAMES THOMAS, JR.

Average Teacher Salaries Lower Than That Of Relief

MONTGOMTRY, Ala. Feb. 14, 1941 George W. Hulme, President of the Alabama Education Association, stated today that Alabama's State Allotment Schedule (mistakenly called the Minimum-Salary Schedule) sets a minimum monthly salary for the school term for teachers in the lowest classification of $50 for whites and $37.50 for Negroes. "This," he said "is lower than the average rate of $54 a month for relief workers on federal projects. Only three other states, Georgia, Mississippi, and Tennessee, have lower mimimum salaries for teachers than Alabama."

Hulme was discussing a recent issue of the Education Bulletin, published by the Association, which shows that teachers in the public schools of Alabama were paid lower average salaries in 1938-39 than in 1929-30. "There has been an increase in teacher salaries since the Mimimum Program became effective." said Hulme. "However, teaching positions in the public schools of Alabama have increased from 16,567 in 1929-30 to 18,707 in 1938-39, an increase brought about by an enrollment which increased from 622,888 to 691,319 during the same period."

The Bulletin reveals that both monthly and annual average salaries for all teachers are lower in 1938-39 than in 1929-30. This also true for average salaries when seperated into racial groups and grade levels, save for elementary colored teachers' salaries on a twelve-month basis. This exception is exjlained by increased terms for colored elementary schools under the Minimum Program Act.

The increased enrollment and teaching force has prevented a return to predepression teacher-salary levels in spite of increased appropriations according to The Education Bulletin which discusses Minimum Salary Standards for teachers. The Bulletin further points out that school leaders have continually stressed the fact that sufficient funds were not being provided to enable them to raise salaries to the pre-depression level while rewarding teachers for increased training and service, or to provide an elementray term of eight months without shortening the high-school term.

Mr. Hulme further stated that twenty-four states have some sort of mimimum salary standards for teachers while six other apportion funds in such a way as to tend to establish salary standards through no definite minimum is set.

Low Salary Standard Of Alabama Teachers Deplored In Report

Action Is Demanded By Welfare Committee To Correct Existing Evil

Low salaries of Alabama teachers were deplored Thursday morning in a report delivered to delegates of the Alabama Education Association by Miss Lorine Barnes, of Birmingham, A. E. A. teacher welfare committee chairman.

Miss Barnes said the average elementary teacher's salary in Alabama is $57 a month and the average high school teachers' salary is $87 a month. Lowest rank white teachers get $50 a month, as compared with $54 for workers on federal projects, she added.

Miss Barnes continued: "Since the teacher has the most vital job in America in training youth for social and economic living, this committee recommends:

"1. That the public be so informed as to make possible through legislative action a nine-month school term for Alabama children.

"2. That an insistent drive be made for federal aid, which is necessary to provide adequate education in Alabama.

"3. That salary standards for both elementary and high schools be equivalent.

"4. That a campaign be waged to make every teacher and P.-T. A. worker a voter.

"5. That rural school leaders influence the best homes to board teachers.

"6. That credit unions be established by teachers in every city and county."

Miss Barnes expressed gratitude to Gov. Dixon and the Legislature for appropriating revenue to establish a teacher retirement system Oct. 1, 1941, and recommended that all eligibles connected with public education join in the retirement plan.

MAR 27 1941

She asserted "one of the weakest association links is that teachers have little part in the work of local, district and state association programs. They lack representation on the executive committee of the A. E. A.; only one has ever served as president of the association during its six years of existence; very few have been given a chance to serve in local and district associations except in minor offices.

"This does not represent democratic procedure. There will be quickened interest in education matters, stronger schools and better teaching if we can bring to bear the great power of the 13,793 white teachers in Alabama. It can be done whenever teachers are made to feel they count.

"Therefore the committee recommends: 1. That a teacher be regularly elected to serve on the executive committee of the A. E. A. 2. That teachers be given the presidency of the A. E. A. in rotation with other educators. 3. That teachers be elected in regular rotation to serve in all offices in local and district associations."

"No Compromise" Plea Made By Dr. Taggart In Wage Inequalities

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(SNS)—"Let's equalize and don't compromise," pleaded Dr. E. W. Taggart, of Birmingham chairman of the education commission charged with devising a formula of action to eliminate salary and other educaticnal differentials in Alabama schools, in his keynote speech before a joint session of PTA and ASTA delegates at Tullibody Hall of State Teachers College Wednesday night.

He spoke from the subject, "Implementing Democracy For National Defense". He told the teachers to wage the darndest fight of your life" for salary equality, obviously by inference rejecting the state's "solution."

"Don't scuttle the fight."

"Don't be sold down the river".

Those were the fighting words of Dr. Taggart who said that students of Talladega College in donating a sum of $65 to fight to equalize the salaries of Negro teachers to those of the whites attached the instructions: "Let's equalize and don't compromise." He asked the teachers to adopt this sentence as their "action slogan."

Mrs. C. S. Johnson of Nashville, Tenn. opened the speech-making with an address. "The Parent-Teacher Job of Defense". Most of her speech dealt with recent studies on youth and their problems. She remarked that the "we must let youth know they mean a great deal to America and everything to us".

"In his "picture of life in a democracy" Dr. Taggart said that " as good as America may be, she is not good enough", listing numerous evils including the "conditioning" to these evils rather and than educating to overcome them

He declared that "an ignorant America is a week America; a weak America is a defenseless America." He said that the "human factor is the key to democracy."

MAR 25 1941

In that same picture he took up the working of democracy by pointing out that less than 3,000 Negroes vote in the entire state of Alabama and that in Jefferson county where there are 176,000 Negroes there are approximately 1,000 voters.

At the meeting Friday afternoon the ASTA will hear several reports of which that of the education commission seems to stand foremost. Sentiment seems to be swelling in favor of "showdown instead of slowdown action" for an equal salary schedule that will be truly conformed to the spirit and sustance of that of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Around the meetings were going on considerable gossip that a "peace bloc" from Birmingham composed of teachers "appeased" by a meager "ten percent raise" in the city school system would seek to "stop the fight" for equalization of teachers salaries.

E. J. Oliver, principal of Fairfield High School, is heading the nominating committee. With exception of about two all the incumbents are expected to be put back into office. The executive committee in session Wednesday recommended Felix L. Paul, of Birmingham, as executive secretary, which action is almost paramount to his re-election. William Bolden, president of Jefferson County Teachers, said that he would seek the office of vice-president now held by B. A. Hudson.

The PTA re-elected Mrs. Odessa McKinney president.

Only Three States Have Lower Salary Limit, According To Hulme

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — George W. Hulme, president of the Alabama Education Association, declares that Alabama's state allotment schedule (mistakenly called the minimum-salary schedule) sets a minimum monthly salary for the school term for teachers in the lowest classification of $50 for whites and $37.50 for Negroes.

"This," he said, "is lower than the average rate of $54 a month for relief workers on federal projects. Only three other states, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee, have lower minimum salaries for teachers than Alabama."

Hulme was discussing a recent issue of The Education Bulletin, published by the association, which shows that teachers in the public schools of Alabama were paid lower average salaries in 1938-39 than in 1929-30. "There has been an increase in teacher salaries since the minimum program became effective," said Hulme. "However, teaching positions in the public schools of Alabama have increased from 16,567 in 1929-30 to 18,707 in 1938-39, an increase brought about by an enrollment which increased from 622,888 to 691,319 during the same period."

The bulletin reveals that both monthly and annual average salaries for all teachers were lower in 1938-39 than in 1929-30. This is also true for average salaries when separated into racial groups and grade levels, save for elementary colored teachers' salaries which show a rise in average annual salaries and in average monthly salaries on a 12-month basis. This exception is explained by increased terms for Negro elementary schools under the minimum program act.

The increased enrollment and teaching force has prevented a return to pre-depression teacher-salary levels in spite of increased appropriations, according to The Education Bulletin which discusses minimum-salary standards for teachers. The bulletin further points out that school leaders have continually stressed the fact that sufficient funds were not being provided to enable them to raise salaries to the pre-depression level while rewarding teachers for increased training and service, or to provide an elementary term of eight months without shortening the high school term.

Mr. Hulme further said that 24 states have some sort of minimum-salary standards for teachers while six others apportion funds in such a way as to tend to establish salary standards though no definite minimum is set.

MINIMUM PAY RATE SET FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Double Standard Of Pay Is Abolished For Alabama Teachers

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 21. —(INS)— Complying with a recent United States Supreme Court ruling, the State Board of Education met in Montgomery Wednesday and abolished the double standard of pay for Alabama school teachers.

An entirely new minimum schedule was designated to apply to white and Negro school teachers replacing the former scale by which Negro teacher minimum salaries were 75 per cent of that of white teacher salaries.

For example, the former minimum for teachers with a masters degree and no experience was $85 a month with the minimum for Negro teachers of that rank 75 per cent of that or $63.75. The new minimum for both races is $70 a month.

Superintendent A. H. Collins pointed out that this would not mean white teachers now being paid more than the minimum would have their pay reduced. There will, he said, be no reductions in their pay whatsoever. The principal change, he pointed out, is that Negro teachers receiving the minimum or less than $70 would be moved up to that new minimum.

One official estimated that this alteration would consume approximately $200,000 of any adidtional money the schools get while another $300,000 would be taken up by increases in salaries to white and Negro teachers who by next year will have, by experience and training, reached higher pay brackets.

SINGLE SALARY SCALE ADOPTED

Negro Teachers To Draw Same Pay As White Under Schedule

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 19 (AP)—The State Board of Education adopted Wednesday a single minimum salary schedule for white and Negro teachers, and voted to allocate an additional $500,000 from state funds in 1941-42 for increasing wages.

Gov. Dixon estimated the new scale, which increased the minimum for Negroes, would amount to a $200,000 yearly boost for teachers of that race.

Of the additional $300,000 which the board voted to allocate for salary hikes and eliminations of inequalities, educational sources predicted most of it would go to white teachers who move into higher brackets through added training and experience.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, said that while the new scale lowered the minimum for whites no reductions were contemplated and added that all white and some negro teachers already drew more than the minimum for their race

Adoption of the single scale, Collins said, was made mandatory by a recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' salaries.

The consolidated scale, as compared with the abandoned schedules:

	New	Old Negro	Old White
Rank I	$70	$63.75	$85
Rank II	60	56.25	75
Rank III	50	48.75	65
Rank IV	45	45.00	60
Rank V	40	37.50	50

In general, rank I requires a master's degree and five years of college training; rank II, a bachelor's degree; rank III, three years of college, and rank IV, two years of college, and rank V, less than two years of college.

Under the 1935 minimum program act, the state will pay counties up to the minimum salary scale for all teachers paid this amount or more. Counties may supplement salary allotments.

After allocation of the 10 per cent for increases, the board specified that any 1941-42 funds in excess of those available for 1940-41 should go toward lengthening school terms.

State Finance Director A. R. Forsyth has estimated $938,000 will be available to schools from a general fund surplus at the end of the current fiscal year, Sept. 30, in addition to regular appropriations.

Besides combining the minimum salary schedule, the board approved a $50,000 bond issue by the Negro State Teachers' College here to match a federal grant for construction of a dining hall.

It also adopted the report of its course of study committee.

Race Wage Parity Troubles Teachers

The problem of adjusting salaries of negro school teachers is due to come for consideration Wednesday at a meeting of the State Board of Education.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state school superintendent, said a dilemma presented by a United States Supreme Court decision that race could not be used as a basis of determining teachers' pay would come up for discussion.

A committee of the State Association of County and City Superintendents named to draw up recommendations to the State Board met Monday, but leaders said they failed to reach any definite conclusions.

The superintendents' organization, a unit of the Alabama Education Association, named the committee several weeks ago to study the problem and make recommendations, but Collins and E. B. Norton, former A. E. A. head, said no "definite opinion" was formed at Monday's meeting.

ALABAMA TEACHERS' SALARY

APR 10 1941

Pay of Alabama school teachers is shown to be $696 per annum, compared with $1,380, the national average, in a bulletin just issued by the Alabama Education Association. Though they must invest many thousands of dollars to prepare for their profession, they receive less than 50 per cent of the average salaries paid to policemen, firemen and mail carriers. Top pay for Alabama teachers was received in 1929-30, when the average was $761. During this same period, however, the national average was $1,420.

Alabama's low per capita wealth and high birth rate keep Alabama school finances at a low level. Despite this pr[illegible] pay for Alabama teachers is entirely too low.

APR 10 1941

Although this publication has steadfastly opposed the growing tendency to call upon Santa Claus for "free" money, via the federal government, help from the wealthier parts of the country seems the only means by which to bring Alabama education finances to a national par. Teachers should not be required to accept starvation wages in their all-important task of educating young America.—Cullman Democrat.

NEW PARITY RATING LEAVES OPENING TO DENY UNIFORM PAY

MAR 15 1941 184 MAR 15 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 13.—(By Emory O. Jackson for ANP)—At stake in the meeting of the Alabama State Teachers' Association here this week, is the fate of the decision of the Federal courts striking out discriminatory salaries for Negro and white teachers possessing the same qualifications.

Alabama public and educational officials have manipulated to circumvent this ruling by devising a new salary schedule which is uniform at one point, but which is discriminatory nevertheless. They set a minimum for Negro teachers but no maximum and disregard altogether their experience and additional training.

Here is the new salary schedule which claims to equalize the Negro and white teachers' salaries:

MAR 15 1941

	New	Old Negro	Old White
Rank 1	$70	$63.75	$85
Rank 2	60	56.25	75
Rank 3	50	48.75	65
Rank 4	45	45.00	60
Rank 5	40	37.50	50

Prior to this Alabama had made motions at providing graduate education by setting up a university hull at the Negro State college at Montgomery. In reality Negroes in Alabama have no opportunity to receive graduate, professional technical, and mechanical training as is the case with the ivory skins.

Skittish and fear-driven by the latest ruling of the Federal courts on discriminatory salaries, the State of Alabama concocted a tricky parity-evading salary schedule a few days back apparently to get the jump on the Negro teachers organization that has a three-year-old fight underway to correct uneven teachers' salaries based upon race and color.

Alabama invented a salary fraud based upon the same pattern used to disfranchise Negro citizens. While the State revised its salary schedule so that outwardly it would appear to be uniform for white and black teachers, it also left an opening for greater discrimination. It reduced the salary schedule but left the pay-check of white and black teachers about the same gap apart.

Alabama does not in reality have a State salary schedule, but rather a State salary pattern. It is used to allocate funds to city and county boards of education. Working that way, the job of discriminating in salaries is passed on to the local boards. That removes the danger of any organization attacking the State and would obviously compel the filing of suits against every city and county board of education in Alabama before total salary parity over the State can be accomplished.

Alabama's parity law works this way. There are three steps beginning with a base or minimum and going outward according to experience. It is divided into five ranks, according to certification. It does not make it compulsory to pay beyond the first step or the minimum. The local superintendent is given discretion to pay any "worthy" teacher above this. As it currently operates, all white teachers are paid above this minimum. This, you see, is the new parity law.

ALABAMA MOVES AN INCH

MAR 15 1941

Alabama moved a step forward at the end of February when she equalized the minimum salary scale for white and Negro teachers, and pay for both starts at he same figure.

Negroes are so prone to excessive enthusiasm over the most picayune gains, that we hasten to point out that Alabama only did this because she knew, after the victories in Maryland, Virginia and Kentucky, that equalization of teachers' salaries was unavoidable and inevitable.

Alabama equalized salaries at the bottom but not at the top, where it counts most, feeling that its colored teachers would be satisfied with this gesture of democracy.

White teachers with inferior qualifications still draw more money than the most skilled and experienced Negro teachers.

MAR 15 1941

To equalize salaries justly, Alabama would have to spend $2,000,000, whereas only $200,000 has been spent so far toward equalization.

Happily, the Alabama colored teachers are not fooled. They are prepared to back the N.A.A.C.P. to the limit.

W.W. Hill, Fort Payne, Is Chosen To Head School Administrators

Election of Supt. W. W. Hill, of Fort Payne, as president, discussion of equalization of Negro and white salaries, and showing of the film "Romance of Alabama Roads" climaxed activities of the state Association of School Administrators of the A. E. A. in Birmingham Thursday.

To serve with Hill for the coming term will be Supt. Leroy Brown, of Cleburne County, vice president, and J. Clyde Orr, superintendent of Bessemer Public Schools, reelected secretary-treasurer. All three men were elected unanimously.

After joint meetings with the attendance supervisors Wednesday morning and the secondary school principals in the afternoon, the Association of School Administrators held its annual banquet Wednesday night at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel.

Mrs. L. M. Lowery, president of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers, extended greetings to the group from her association, and a special musical program was presented by the Orpheus Male Glee Club, directed by R. A. Martinson.

Feature of the banquet program was a program of modern dance by Alabama College students under direction of Miss Mildred Caldwell.

H. G. Greer, Monroeville, outgoing president, conducted the Thursday morning session which was attended by school superintendents from all parts of Alabama.

Tells Alabama Teachers 'You'll Regret Court Action'

APR 5 - 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — In reply to a question on equalization of teachers' salaries, Dr. R. L. Johns, state educational official speaking on a symposium of the Alabama State Teachers convention warned, "Court action to try to push the state to doing this wouldn't be the best thing. You'll regret it. You will lose many of your white friends and hurt the cause of education." He enlarged the view to say that the state was making the right approach although it might not be as rapid as some desired.

ASTA leaders observed that in Dr. John's symposium speech he did not say that court action was improper and that if resorted to Negro teachers could not win. His "you will regret" statement was evaluated as an attempt to intimidate and discourage the fight which from the nature of discernible interest on part of the assembled teachers seemed ineffable.

Many teachers openly sniggled in their sleeves, apparently trying to be courteous, as Dr. Johns through statistics sought to show that Alabama through slow process was headed towards the same goal as the ASTA members and that a fight was useless in addition to being dangerous.

The presiding officers had to stop the questions being put to Dr. Johns who was willing to answer them but adjournment time had far passed.

ALABAMA EQUALIZES TEACHERS' SALARIES

APR 17 1941

The Alabama Board of Education has adopted a single minimum salary for all teachers, regardless of race, effective for 1941-42. Five hundred thousand dollars was appropriated, of which $200,000 will be used to raise the salaries of Negroes to the minimum, and $300,000 to raise the salaries of white teachers who qualify above the minimum.

APR 17 1941

All teachers of the first rank—a Master's degree and five years' experience—will be paid a minimum of $70.00 a month; all teachers of the fifth rank—less than two years of college—will receive $40.00 a month. Negro teachers of the first rank have received $63.75 minimum salary; white teachers $85.00. Negroes of the fifth rank have been receiving $37.50. Under this new salary scale the minimum salaries of all Negro teachers are raised and the minimum salaries of white teachers are lowered.

Florida School Board Must Answer Pay Suit

MAY 3 - 1941

Vernon McDaniels' Injunction Petition Must Be Answered By May 5—Cites Salary Differential.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 1—The Escambia County School Board has only until May 5 to file an answer to the petition for an injunction against it brought April 11 by Vernon McDaniels, principal of Washington High School here, for equal pay to white and colored teachers who are equally qualified.

The petition states that the State Board of Education requires identical certification for both white and colored instructors, and that the educational background for each group had to be the same.

The complaint sets forth that Mr. McDaniels has been a teacher and a principal in the public school system of Escambia County for more than thirteen years. White high school principals, it states, are paid $200 at the start, while McDaniels, after thirteen years of teaching, receives only $165.

The court is requested to issue a permanent injunction against the defendants from making any distinction solely on the grounds of race or color in fixing salaries paid to white and colored teachers and principals in the public schools. Violation of the Fourteenth Amendment is charged.

Handling the case for Mr. McDaniels is Thurgood Marshall, special counsel, and S. D. McGill, of this city, member of the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Judge To Decide If Negro Teacher Gets Same Pay as White

GAINESVILLE, July 1. —(A.P.)— Federal Judge A. V. Long took under advisement today a mandamus proceeding brought by a Negro high school principal in which the plaintiff asked the court to compel an Escambia county school board to pay Negro school teachers of that county the same salary schedule as that given white instructors.

Attorneys for the plaintiff argued that the present salary schedules are alleged to be based solely upon race, color and previous conditions, and therefore discriminatory and in violation of the fourteenth amendment of the United States constitution.

Motion for Dismissal Is Denied

Norfolk Case Is Cited By Judge In His Decision

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The case of Vernon McDaniel, principal of Washington High School, Pensacola, Fla., versus the Escambia County Board of Public Instruction, was given a hearing in the United States District Court at Gainesville Tuesday, July 1, before Judge Augustuine V. Long, who overruled motions of the attorneys for the defense to dismiss the case.

Attorneys for the defense, Phlop D. Beal, Jr., of Pensacola; Keen and Allen of Tallahassee; J. Velma Keen, of Tallahassee, and Lamar Sara, of Tampa made motions to dismiss the case on the grounds that:

2. The defendants contend that the plaintiff, McDaniel, being a principal of one of the high schools does not represent a class other than "principals."

3. The act of the defendants is not violative of the fourteenth amendment because the state constitution provides that a county public system, and that if there is any discrimination between the salaries paid to white and colored teachers, it is the act of the county school system and not of the State.

PROVE CLIENT'S RIGHT

Attorneys S. D. McGill of Jacksonville, and Thurgood Marshall of the NAACP legal staff, represented the plaintiff and decisively impressed the court as to the right and legality of their client in the fight for the same salary received by white principals of Escambia County with similar qualifications, followed by Judge Long's overruling of motions of the attorneys for the defense to dismiss the case.

Judge Long in his deliberation stated:

CITES NORFOLK CASE

"This complaint is in most respects similar to the complaint filed in the case of Alston vs. School Board of the city of Norfolk, and in passing upon a similar motion to dismiss, the Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit, speaking through Judge Parker said: 'that an unconstitutional discrimination as set forth in these paragraphs hardly admits of argument.

"'The allegation is that the state, in paying for public services of the same kind and character to men and women equally qualified according to standards which the State itself prescribes, arbitrarily pays less to Negroes than to white persons. This is as clear a discrimination on the grounds of race as could well be imagined and falls squarely within the inhibition of both the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment.

"Secondly, though defendants admit that the schedule of salaries now maintained and enforced by the defendants is discriminatory as to salaries paid colored teachers in the elementary and high schools, they contend that plaintiff McDaniel does not represent a class because of the fact that he is a principal of a high school and not a teacher therein.

"This contention must fall as the principals of the high schools and the teachers therin and teachers in the elementary schools are all members of the same profession and are required to be possessed of certain qualifications prescribed by the board.

UNIFORM SYSTEM REQUESTED

"As to the third contention, the constitution of the State of Florida requires that the legislature shall provide for a uniform system of public free schools and provide for the liberal maintenance of the same. Art. 12, sec. 1. The legislature has established a system of free public schools; provision has been made for the establishment of separate schools for white and colored children. In section 12 of Article 12, 'White and colored children shall not be taught in the same school, but separate impartial provisions shall be made for both.'

"The constitution provides for a board of education and defines its powers; it provides for the appointment of superintendent of public instruction; provides for the assessment of and collection annually by each county for the support of the public free school system; provides for the constitutional tax of one mill for the support and maintenance of public schools; and provides for the division of counties into convenient school districts.

"In this case there is no statutory salary schedule, but there is a salary schedule established by administrative ruling of an administrative agency of the state, and the prohibitions of the Fourteenth Amendment certainly apply to the acts of such agencies.

VIOLATES 14TH AMENDMENT

"The inhibition contained in the Fourteenth Amendment means that no agency of the state nor of the officers or agents by whom its powers are exerted shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

"Who ever by virtue of public position under a state government deprives another of property, life or liberty without due process of law, or denies or takes away the equal protection of the laws, violates the constitutional inhibition; and as he acts in the name and for the state and is clothed by the state's power, his act is that of the state. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339.

"As pointed out by Judge Chestnut in Mills v. Lowndes, they are qualified school teachers and have the civil right as such to pursue their profession without being subjected to discriminatory legislation on account of race or color.

"It is no answer to this to say that the hiring of any teacher is a matter resting in the discretion of the school authorities. Plaintiffs, as teachers qualified and subject to employment by the state, are entitled to apply for the positions, and to have the discretion of the authorities exercised lawfully and wihout unconstituted discrimination as to the rate of pay to be awarded them if their applications are accepted.

"The Court is of the opinion that the motion to dismiss should be denied and will enter appropriate order denying the motion to dismiss and providing time for the filing of an answer."

Vernon McDaniel, 34, graduate of Bishop College, Marshall, Tex., reopened the fight for equalization of salaries of Florida teachers last January by filing petition with the school board of Escambia County for equal salary with that of the white principal with similar qualifications, and framing similar functions.

SALARY DIFFERENCE

His petition, McDaniel pointed out that a white principal with similar qualifications and no experience was receiving $200, or minimum salary, while he, with maximum service received only $165. Shortly afterward, the case was entered into the District Court.

John E. Gilbert, formerly, a principal of Brevard County previously entered a mandamus suit against the superintendent and board of education of Brevard County for equal salary with white teachers after his petition to the board was denied. Local and the Florida Supreme Court ruled against him. He may, however, be credited with the beginning of the fight for salary equalization in Florida.

As special note is the fact that while Gilbert lost his position as a result of his action, Vernon McDaniel and his wife have both been re-appointed to teaching positions for next term.

CITES NORFOLK CASE

"This complaint is in most respects similar to the complaint filed in the case of Alston vs. School Board of the city of Norfolk, and in passing upon a similar motion to dismiss, the Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit, speaking through Judge Parker said: 'that an unconstitutional discrimination as set forth in these paragraphs hardly admits of argument.

"'The allegation is that the state, in paying for public services of the same kind and character to men and women equally qualified according to standards which the State itself prescribes, arbitrarily pays less to Negroes than to white persons. This is as clear a discrimination on the grounds of race as could well be imagined and falls squarely within the inhibition of both the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment.

"Secondly, though defendants admit that the schedule of salaries now maintained and enforced by the defendants is discriminatory as to salaries paid colored teachers in the elementary and high schools, they contend that plaintiff McDaniel does not represent a class because of the fact that he is a principal of a high school and not a teacher therein.

"This contention must fall as the principals of the high schools and the teachers therin and teachers in the elementary schools are all members of the same profession and are required to be possessed of certain qualifications prescribed by the board.

UNIFORM SYSTEM REQUESTED

"As to the third contention, the constitution of the State of Florida requires that the legislature shall provide for a uniform system of public free schools and provide for the liberal maintenance of the same. Art. 12, sec. 1. The legislature has established a system of free public schools; provision has been made for the establishment of separate schools for white and colored children. In section 12 of Article 12, 'White and colored children shall not be taught in the same school, but separate impartial provisions shall be made for both.'

"The constitution provides for a board of education and defines its powers; it provides for the appointment of superintendent of public instruction; provides for the assessment of and collection annually by each county for the support of the public free school system; provides for the constitutional tax of one mill for the support and maintenance of public schools; and provides for the division of counties into convenient school districts.

"In this case there is no statutory salary schedule, but there is a salary schedule established by administrative ruling of an administrative agency of the state, and the prohibitions of the Fourteenth Amendment certainly apply to the acts of such agencies.

VIOLATES 14TH AMENDMENT

"The inhibition contained in the Fourteenth Amendment means that no agency of the state nor of the officers or agents by whom its powers are exerted shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

"Who ever by virtue of public position under a state government deprives another of property, life or liberty without due process of law, or denies or takes away the equal protection of the laws, violates the constitutional inhibition; and as he acts in the name and for the state and is clothed by the state's power, his act is that of the state. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339.

"As pointed out by Judge Chestnut in Mills v. Lowndes, they are qualified school teachers and have the civil right as such to pursue their profession without being subjected to discriminatory legislation on account of race or color.

"It is no answer to this to say that the hiring of any teacher is a matter resting in the discretion of the school authorities. Plaintiffs, as teachers qualified and subject to employment by the state, are entitled to apply for the positions, and to have the discretion of the authorities exercised lawfully and wihout unconstituted discrimination as to the rate of pay to be awarded them if their applications are accepted.

"The Court is of the opinion that the motion to dismiss should be denied and will enter appropriate order denying the motion to dismiss and providing time for the filing of an answer."

Vernon McDaniel, 34, graduate of Bishop College, Marshall, Tex., reopened the fight for equalization of salaries of Florida teachers last January by filing petition with the school board of Escambia County for equal salary with that of the white principal with similar qualifications, and performing similar functions.

John E. Gilbert, formerly a principal of Brevard County previously entered a mandamus suit against the superintendent and board of education of Brevard County for equal salary with white teachers after his petition to the board was denied. Local and the Florida Supreme Court ruled against him. He may, however, be credited with the beginning of the fight for salary equalization in Florida.

SALARY DIFFERENCE

At special note is the fact that while Gilbert lost his position as a result of his action, Vernon McDaniel and his wife have both been reappointed to teaching positions for next term.

FLA. EQUAL PAY FIGHT OPENS IN JACKSONVILLE

Court Sustains Legality Of Grounds For Action By School Head

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—The case of Vernon McDaniel, principal of Washington high school, Pensacola, versus the Escambia county board of public instruction, was given a hearing in the United States District Court at Gainesville, Tuesday, July 1, before Judge Augustine V. Long, who over-ruled motions of the attorneys for the defense to dismiss the case.

Attorneys for the defense, Philop D. Beal, Jr., of Pensacola; Keen and Allen of Tallahassee; J. Velma Keen of Tallahassee; and Lamar Sara of Tampa made motions to dismiss the case on the grounds that:

2. The defendants contend that the plaintiff, McDaniel, being a principal of one of the high schools does not represent a class other than "principals."

3. The act of the defendants is not violative of the fourteenth amendment because the state constitution provides for a county public school system, and that if there is any discrimination between the salaries paid to white and colored teachers it is the act of the county school system and not of the state.

Attys. S. D. McGill of Jacksonville, and Thurgood Marshall of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People legal staff, represented the plaintiff and decisively impressed the court as to the right and legality of their client in the fight for the same salary received by white principals of Escambie county, with similar qualifications, followed by Judge Long's over-ruling of motions of the attorneys for the defense to dismiss the case.

Vernon McDaniel, 34, graduate of Bishop college, Marshall, Texas, reopened the fight for equalization of salaries of Florida teachers last January by filing petition with the school board of Escambia county for equal salary with that of the white principal with similar qualifications, and performing similar functions.

In his petition, McDaniel pointed out that a white principal with similar qualifications and no experience was receiving $200, or minimum salary, while he, with maximum service receiced only $165. Shortly afterward, the case was entered into the District court.

John E. Gilbert, formerly a principal of Brevard county, previously entered a mandamus suit against the uperintendent and board of education of Brevard county for equal salary with white teachers after his petition to the board was denied. Local courts, and the Florida Supreme court ruled against him.

He may, however, be credited, however, with the beginning of the fight for salary equalization in Florida.

Of special interest is the fact that while Gilbert lost his position as a result of his action, Vernon McDaniel and his wife have both been reappointed to teaching positions for next term.

Holds Plaintiff Entitled To Job Without Penalty

State Maintains It Is Not Involved In Salary-Fixing

PENSACOLA, Fla.—(S N S)—In what was regarded as a virtual decision of the case, Judge Augustine V. Long of the United States District Court denied a motion to dismiss a suit brought by Vernon McDaniel, colored school principal, alleging unconstitutional discrimination against him and other colored teachers in Escambia County.

An order denying the motion was filed with Clerk Logan Hill in the court here Saturday and at the same time Judge Long filed an accompanying ruling in which he held that the plaintiff was entitled to employment without discrimination as to the rate of pay.

COLORED ATTORNEYS

McDaniel, principal of George Washington High school here, sued through Attorneys McGill and McGill of Jacksonville and Thurgood Marshall of New York. Motion to dismiss was filed by Philip D. Beall, Jr., attorney for the board of public instruction, defendants, and the motion was argued by Beall and J. Velma Keen and Lamar Sarra, of Tallahassee.

McDaniel's suit alleged that he was paid only $165 per month while the minimum pay for white principals is $200 per month. The suit also recited a salary schedule showing a discrepancy between salaries of white and colored teachers generally.

The suit alleged that the salaries differed even though education, certification and other qualifications were alike, and said the discrimination was in violation of the Fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, the amendment forbidding laws discriminating against any one because of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

The motion to dismiss maintained that the state was not involved because salaries were fixed by the school board and trustees. It also contended that McDaniel did not represent a class, because he was not a principal, and not a teacher.

CONTENTIONS DISALLOWED

Judge Long disallowed both contentions, holding as to the latter claim that the "contention must fail as principals of high schools and teachers therein and teachers in the elementary schools are all members of the same profession" and have certain qualifications prescribed by the school board for employment. As to the first contention the ruling pointed out that the school board is an agent of the state.

Judge Long said the McDaniel case was similar in most respects to the case of Alston vs. City of Norfolk, of which Judge Parker of the Fourth circuit court of appeals commented: "That an unconstitutional discrimination is set forth in these paragraphs hardly admits of arguments."

COMMENTS FURTHER

Commenting further on the local case, in which a declaratory ruling to correct the policy of the school board in setting salaries is sought, Judge Long said of the Negro teachers:

"They are qualified school teachers and have the civil right as such to pursue their profession without being subjected to discriminatory legislation on account of race or color. It is no answer to this to say that the hiring of a teacher is a matter resting in the discretion of the school authorities. Plaintiffs, as teachers qualified and subject to employment by the state, are entitled to apply for the positions, and to have the discretion of the school authorities exercised lawfully and without unconstitutional discrimination as to the rate of pay to be awarded them if their applications are accepted.

"The court is of the opinion that the motion to dismiss should be denied....."

The defendants were given 20 days in which to file an answer.

No Grounds For Argument

THE case of Vernon McDaniel, Pensacola, Florida, high school principal, against the Escambia County Board of Public Instruction happily follows close upon the signal victory for democracy won last year by colored Virginia teachers in the city of Norfolk.

In denying a motion for dismissal of the case by defense attorneys July 1, Judge Augustine V. Long, of the United States District Court at Gainesville, necessarily concurred with the opinion of Judge Parker of the Federal Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals that the Alston case was an unconstitutional discrimination of such magnitude as to even hardly admit argument.

In spite of the historic precedent set by the Norfolk case, Florida's defense attorneys made the disingenuous request to dismiss the complaint on the grounds that the discrimination was not unconstitutional and that the Fourteenth Amendment was not violated.

Any school boy could have prepared this brief for Messrs. Beale, Keen and Sara. It is the stock-in-trade argument used on all occasions, when the rights of colored Americans below the Mason-Dixon line are at stake.

But Southern courts are rapidly tiring of being the laughing stock of civilized nations with decisions motivated by race prejudice. They do not relish the naked fact that their vaunted culture and intelligence is a choice morsel of ridicule.

Reduced to simplest terms, the Norfolk and Florida cases, and all others that will follow, are: the Southern states, like other states of the nation, have established educational standards. These standards require strictly defined qualifications for those charged with their administration and execution.

Therefore, by no magical juggling of the principles of logic and cold reason can they justly set up a sliding scale of compensation to appease their inherent prejudices against their colored brothers when they meet the requisites the states themselves have established. Fifteen, twenty-five, forty-five years ago, the average southern colored teacher was far below par, providing some justification for salary differences. But this is 1941.

The Virginia victory won by Alston vs. the School Board of the City of Norfolk, and all others that will follow, cannot be filed away as triumphs for the American Negro. They must be earmarked as victories for American democracy.

Negro Teachers Ask For Salaries Equal To Those of Whites

Hillsborough county Negro teachers yesterday asked the school board for salaries equal to those of white teachers, in a letter written by the Hillsborough county unit of the Florida State Teachers' organization, composed of Negro teachers.

The letter cited court decisions involving the city of Norfolk, Va., in the U. S. circuit court of appeals and also a Florida case. The letter was signed by Ben D. Griffin, president of the Negro teachers' group.

The county employs about 150 Negro teachers in 40 schools. The average pay for a Negro teacher was $655 for a nine-month term, but with a 10 percent raise this year, it will total about $720.

Recommendation Made For Duval County White Teachers To Receive Increased Pay--What About Our Colored Teachers?

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(SNS)—

An article was carried this week by one of the daily papers relative to an increase in salaries for the Duval County white teachers.

Supt. W. Daniel Boyd in presenting his proposed salary schedule for white teachers, stated that this was not really an increase of salaries; but that it was a restoration for the cuts in paychecks that all teachers took in 1935, which was 35 percent.

Two weeks ago, the teachers, of Escambia County, won for themselves the right to receive equal salaries with the white teachers. Following is the proposed salary from the superintendent's office for white teachers of Duval County:

Following is the present salary for white teachers:

Years	A	B	C	D
1	$1170.40	$1125.00	$1026.00	$ 918.00
2	1215.00	1170.00	1053.00	945.00
3	1260.00	1215.00	1080.00	972.00
4	1530.00	1485.00	1350.00	1170.00
5	1584.00	1530.00	1386.00	1197.00

40	2178.00	2025.00	1782.00	1584.00

The first three years are probationary years of teaching in Duval county. If the teacher is then appointed for the fourth year, he becomes a tenure teacher.)

Following is the present salary scale fo rwhite teachers:

Years	A	B	C	D
0	$1170.40	$1120.00	$1019.20	$ 918.40
1	1192.80	1142.40	1041.60	940.80
2	1220.80	1170.40	1069.60	968.80
3	1248.80	1198.40	1097.00	996.80

Over	1512.00	1456.00	1344.00	1232.00

Explanation of letter classifications:

A—Teachers with master's degree; teachers who have ha five years' college or university training above high graduation.

B—Teachers with bachelor's degree; teachers who have had four years' college or university training above high school graduation.

C—Teachers with L. L. or its equialent, teachers who have had a two-year normal course, or its equivalent, taken in a standard university or college.

D—Teachers with first grade, second grade or primary certificate; no college training is required of teachers in this classification. In many cases, however, D-class teachers in Duval county have received some training in standard universities, varying from two to three hours to fifty or sixty hours.

Will a salary schedule for Colored teachers be presented for restoration of cuts that they took also in 1935? Why couldn't the superintendent have said that this is a schedule for all teachers.

These two questions are utmost in our minds, since it is only a short time before the school year will open; and before the superintendent can act his recommendations must be approved by the school board. We are hoping that our teachers will get an increase. We are also hoping that if these teachers get an increase that the superintendent and the board will be so kind to release a similar story to the press as was done in regard to the white teachers.

Edwards Argues Against Cut In School Budget

Sherrill Sets Public Hearing on Financial Issue for Wednesday

Justificaion of the original school board budget for 1941-42 was argued yesterday in letters from Superintendent A. S. Edwards to members of the county budget commission.

The budget commission had lowered the original outlay by $55,000, with the principal item the instructional budget which was reduced by $22,000.

Edwards asked the amount be restored on the ground that it was needed for salaries of Negro teachers who were expecting increases on a parity with white teachers and for additional teacher enrollments.

In announcing receipt of the letter, J. H. Sherrill, chairman of the budget commission, said the commission realized an emergency had to be met and that an increase might be obtained with the permission of the state superintendent.

He said a public hearing would be held on the proposed budget next Wednesday at 2:30 p.m., after which the budget will be certified to the state office for its approval.

Appealing the elimination of the $10,000 budgeted for new buildings, Edwards told the commission there was an unpaid balance of $6,000 appropriated for architects fees last year and for trade school incidentals. The remaining $4,000 would be used for other construction, he said.

Sues School Board For Equal Salaries

NOV 16 1941

Difference Of 41 Per Cent Is Made In Tampa

Plaintiff Is Graduate Of Atlanta Univ.

TAMPA, Fla.—(A N P)—Suit was filed recently in federal district court here by the Hillsboro county unit of the Florida Teachers' association against Hillsboro county school board for equal salaries. The petition was made by Miss Hilda Turner, teacher in the public schools here, who is represented by the law firm of McGill and McGill, Jacksonville, Florida, and Atty. Thurgood Marshall, NAACP member.

Miss Turner has worked in the public school system for 12 years, with only a meagre increase of salary annually. Her maximum salary was recently reached and she only received $87.68 per month as compared with $148.13 for a white teacher with the same experience and training. Miss Turner is a graduate of Atlanta university and has done graduate work at Atlanta and Northwestern universities, the latter at Evanston, Ill.

A difference of 41 percent between salaries of Negro and white teachers for the same type of work requiring the same degree of preparation exists. White teachers are paid on a graduated scale with substantial increases yearly. Training and experience are both considered in determining the salary. Negro teachers are paid more or less arbitrarily with a maximum reached after ten years' service and with no serious regard for qualifications.

The wage discrimination is practiced generally throughout the south in utter disregard for the United States Supreme court ing in September, 1939, in the c of Melvin Austin versus the of Norfolk, Va. The court ru was in favor of Austin.

A formal request for salary justments was presented by l teachers to the school board, the request was ignored and was immediately filed. Rece a similar case in the Gainesv district brought a ruling f Judge Long that the case McDaniels vs. Escambia cou was in the same category as case upheld by the U. S. preme Court. This was the f case of this kind contested in state.

40% Differential Between Pay Of Negroes, Whites Precipitates Action

NOV 15 1941

TAMPA, Fla. — The Hillsboro County unit of the Florida Teachers association filed suit Monday, Nov. 3 in the federal district court against the Hillsboro County School Board for equal salaries.

The plaintiff, Miss Hilda Turner, is represented by the law firm of McGill and McGill of Jacksonville and Atty. Thurgood Marshall of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People staff.

There is a difference of 41 per cent between the salaries of Negro and white teachers for the same type of work requiring the same degree of preparation. White teachers are paid on a graduated scale with a substantial increase each year Training and experience are both considered in determining the salary. Negro teachers are paid more or less arbitrarily with a maximum reached after 10 years service and with no serious regard for qualifications.

NEGRO TEACHERS SUE FOR SAME PAY AS WHITES

Contend There Is Discrimination

A suit to compel the county school board to pay Negro teachers on the same basis as white teachers was filed in federal court yesterday by Hilda T. Turner on behalf of herself and 160 other Negroes employed in the county school system.

It was brought against Ed J. Keefe as chairman of the school board and E. L. Robinson as county superintendent.

Discrimination against Negroes in the salary schedule is a violation of the 14th amendment of the constitution, which guarantees equal protection of the laws to all citizens regardless of race or color, the suit charged.

Cites Difference

Under the school board's salary schedule, Hilda Turner, who holds a bachelor's degree and has been teaching 11 years, receives $87.43 a month. This was said to be the maximum for Negro teachers. A white teacher with the same qualification and experience is paid $132 a month, the suit alleged. The starting pay for a Negro teacher with four years of college work is $66 but for a white teacher is $90.75, under the salary schedule cited in the suit.

"The said discrimination in the schedule of salaries being paid and to be paid is based solely on race or color and amounts to an unlawful discrimination which constitutes a denial of due process of law and equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the 14th amendment to the United States constitution, and is therefore unconstitutional and void," the suit said.

"Salaries of all teachers and principals in the public schools of Hillsborough county are paid out of the public school fund, which is raised by means of taxation upon the inhabitants of Florida and their property."

Asks Permanent Injunction

The suit asked the court to issue a permanent injunction "forever restraining and enjoining the defendants from making any distinction solely on the grounds of race or color in the fixing of salaries paid white and colored teachers employed in the public schools of Hillsborough county."

S. D. McGill, Negro lawyer of Jacksonville, filed the suit. It followed a formal request to the school board by Negro teachers a month ago for a salary scale equal to that of white teachers. The board replied that no funds were available for the increases.

This is the first time the long-established practice of a double standard pay scale for school teachers has been attacked here, and attorneys knew of no court ruling on the question elsewhere in the state. Hence the outcome of the suit was expected to have a far-reaching effect in Florida schools.

Pensacola Fla Journal
November 2, 1941

Full Term Assured

APPROVAL by State Superintendent Colin English of the increased Escambia county school budget assures a full nine-month term of all of the schools—elementary and high schools—for the 1941-42 year.

Sanction by the state education department head came swiftly after acceptance by the state comptroller and county board of the new 100 per cent cash value tax rolls and delay in the district trustee and millage election, as requested by state authorities, until Dec. 16.

The new budget shows a net increase of $104,115 over that of last year. This increase was granted by the state to permit of another month of instruction, and to take care of other increased costs. Therefore, the millage is not reduced in full in proportion to the increase in assessments. However, the general and district millage is reduced from 10 to 5.4 each. If it had been reduced the full proportionate amount, it would be 4 mills for each.

The state superintendent did shave the millage contemplated by the school board slightly, from 5.75 to 5.4. This was accomplished by granting the budget commission's request, that the additional $25,528 allocated by the state because of the greater average daily attendance here last year be deducted from the amount to be raised by local taxes. The full amount was not deducted, but about $21,000 was, giving the budget a net gain of $4,528. The state also recommended that $8,000 in expected tax redemption payments be added to anticipated receipts and put in a contingent fund. These steps upped the budget as prepared by the school board and approved by the budget commission from $851,059 to $862,878.

This increased the budget by $104,115 over the $758,763 of last year. But the state took into consideration the additional cost of $75,000 to $80,000 for a ninth month increase in Negro teachers' salaries of about $5,500, increase in bus drivers' pay of about $4,500 and the cost of 1,000 increase in enrollment which has made addition of about 15 new teachers and clerical assistants necessary at an estimated cost of about $12,000.

It appears, therefore, that the state superintendent has recognized the growing needs of Escambia county and the fact that Escambia county wants to spend more of its tax money on schools to provide a full term. It is likely that the budget commission will approve the changes asked by the state and that a long step forward will have been taken in placing the public school system on a firm financial and instructional foundation. All of which must be credited to the Holland tax program, without which tax values could not have been increased and additional revenue obtained, and to the willingness of the people to follow the governor's leadership.

The board's blasts at the budget commission are to be expected, though apparently they are unnecessary and only to create friction where harmony and co-operation are more to be desired.

Naturally elected officials dislike a superior agency telling them that they must whack expenses here and there, but this is the duty of the commission. It must see that all funds budgeted are absolutely needed and that they are efficiently expended. The budget body is the taxpayers' safeguard against loose methods or extravagance and it should be especially helpful at this time when federal taxes for defense are soaring.

It ill-befits school board members drawing $100 a month each to criticize public service performed by civic-minded members of the budget commission working without one cent of remuneration.

At the same time, the budget commission should not be miserly and should not hamstring the operation of the school system. We do not believe that is the intention of the commission, for its chairman has stated that the school board has been allowed to budget sufficient for a nine-month school term and that is the paramount public desire at this time.

Other improvements and reforms must come, but they cannot all come at once. This is the stated policy of the school board in acting on the school survey recommendations. Certainly it is the board's policy in rejecting the demand for compliance with the recommendation that the 21 special tax districts be consolidated into not more than three large districts.

It will be recalled that the school board delayed action on this recommendation when it was first broached, that the board later opposed the action of a countywide citizens' and trustees' meeting at Molino where it was voted to ask the legislature to pass a bill consolidating the districts. At that time board members said passage of such a bill by our elected representatives in Tallahassee would be "dictatorship" and that the people should be given an opportunity to express themselves in a referendum election.

Later they pointed to a general bill which would give all school boards authority to call such district consolidating elections, but after months passed and the election date neared the board rejected a suggested method of consolidation filed by the superintendent and called the election with the same large number of befuddling and inefficient districts.

The board in taking this action has gone contrary to the basic recommendation of the survey. Perhaps it feels that time is needed to "educate" the people to the greater efficiency and basic soundness of a few large districts rather than 21, each with its set of trustees trying to get all they can for their schools without regard to the general countywide welfare of the public school system.

Now the election has been delayed for more than a month and new election notices will have to be advertised, but it is a safe bet that the board again will fail to try to carry out district mergers, though "the people" have the right to vote and the threat of "dictatorship" is removed.

The point is that the board is not carrying out all survey recommendations at once and cannot be expected to and should not criticize the budget commission by citing the survey recommendation that additional revenue be raised locally for school operation. Assuredly, the budget commission has approved this step by permitting an increase in local revenue budgeted from $212,000 last year to $334,500 this year, or more than $122,000.

There should be no conflict between budget commission and school board. Members of both bodies should be seeking the same obejctives — to provide a full-term, modern public school education for the county's children at the lowest possible cost to the taxpayers. If both groups strive to accomplish these aims wholeheartedly and without ulterior motives, they should be able to work harmoniously and in the interest of all of the people.

To Let Negro Salary Suit Follow Course

The county school board yesterday decided to let a suit brought by Negro school teachers seeking higher pay take its regular course through the courts so a definite decision can be obtained on the question of whether Negro teachers must be paid as much as white teachers.

Hilda T. Turner recently filed suit in circuit court on behalf of herself and 160 other Negro teachers, charging that the lower salaries paid Negroes were in violation of the 14th amendment.

"The board will fight the suit through the various courts because that is the only way we can get a final and definite decision," said Superintendent E. L. Robinson.

Business Man Pledges Aid To Instructors Fired For Campaigning

TAMPA, Fla.—Miss Hilda T. Turner, teacher at Middleton senior high school, has filed suit in federal court seeking to force the county school board to pay Negro teachers salaries equal to those of white teachers. She is being supported by the Hillsboro County branch of the Florida State Teachers' association, headed by Ben. D. Griffin, president. DEC 20 1941

The county board has announced that it will fight the case, which is to come up December 18.

The complainant is a graduate of Atlanta university, holding a bachelor of arts degree and a life certificate as a teacher from the state board of education. She receives a salary of $87.83 as compared with salaries of $148.62 received by white teachers with the same qualifications.

The complainant charged that the difference in salary was "solely because of race" and therefore was a violation of the 14th amendment of the U. S. constitution, providing equal rights for all citizens. She asked the court for a permanent injunction, restraining the school board from paying Negro teachers less than the salaries paid white teachers with similar qualifications and positions. DEC 20 1941

The suit is the outcome of a meeting called by Noah W. Griffin, executive secretary of the Florida State Teachers' association, in which a petition was made to the county school board for equal pay. The answer to the petitioning letter completely ignored the requests and in the next meeting plans to file suit were made.

G. D. Rogers, business man of Tampa and Bradenton, offered a gift of $50 in case of court negotiations. He also offered a job "to any teacher who suffers as a result of the procedure now being taken by the teachers," and assured them a much higher salary than they now get.

Atty. McGill of Jacksonville filed the case. He will be assisted in the court proceedings by Thurgood Marshall.

Negro Tutors Sue Over Pay

A federal court suit by Palm Beach county negro teachers seeking equalization of salaries with those paid white teachers was filed Tuesday as a sequel to the recent similar demand of Dade county negro instructors before the school board.

The suit, filed in the name of Charles Stebbins, negro teacher in Palm Beach county for three years, declared the discrimination under which negro teachers are paid less than white teachers is based solely on race and color and is in violation of the fourteenth amendment to the United States constitution.

Same Qualifications

Although they have the same professional qualifications and certificates, the suit alleges, the negro instructors' salaries are from $15 to $35 per month less than those paid white teachers. The court is asked to enjoin permanently the continuance of this custom.

A similar contention was laid before the Dade county school board last month by the Dade County Negro Teachers Association, but S. Meredith Moseley, principal of Booker T. Washington school and member of the association, said the board had taken no action.

In the Pensacola district some time ago, a federal court suit in a similar case, resulted in an order requiring the school board to work out a five-year plan of equalization.

Seeks Same Salary As White Principal In Fla

FEB 8 1941

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Vernon McDaniel, principal of Washington high school, Pensacola, this week re-opened the fight of Florida teachers for equalization of solary by filing petition with the superintendent and school board of Escambria county for equal salary with that of the white principal of smlilar qualifications and performing similar functions.

McDaniel, 34-year-old graduate of Bishop college, Marshall, Texas, has spent 13 years in Escambria county both as teacher and principal. He has completed his graduate work for M. A. degree and requires only the writing of his thesis.

Before becoming principal of the school, McDaniel taught mathematics and coached the football team for six years. The last seven years has been spent as principal of the school.

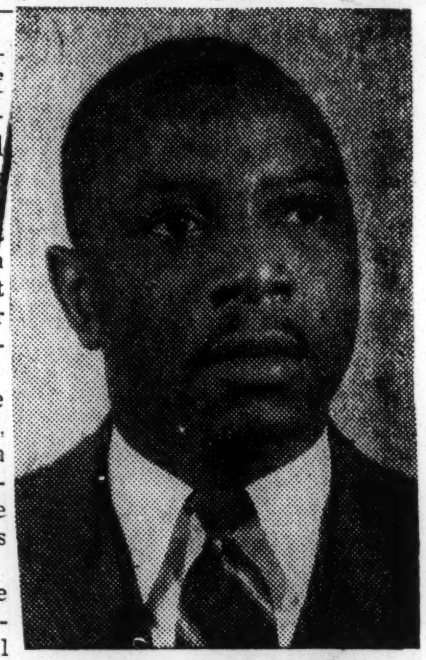
In petitioning the superintendent and board of Escambia county for equal salary, McDaniel points out that the white principal with similar qualification and no experience at all was receiving $200 as minimum salary, while he with maximum service gets only $165.

In this fight, it is supposed by many that McDaniel faces the same fate of losing his job as John E. Gilbert who brought a mandamus suit against the school board of Brevard county about two years ago. In response to such probability, McDaniel very courageously states, "the sacrifice is worth a dozen jobs."

The teachers of Escambria county and the teachers of the Florida State Teachers association are 100 per cent behind this effort to wipe out the salary differential.

In its regular session, the Florida State Teachers association unanimously went on record as assessing each member $2.50 to carry on the fight.

While McDaniel is still awaiting a reply on his petition, plans are on foot to file similar petitions in other counties if it becomes necessary to do so.



VERNON McDANIELS

John E. Gilbert, a former principal of Brevard county, brought a mandamus suit against the superintendent and board of education of Brevard county for equal salary with white teachers after his petition was denied.

The local courts however, as well as Florida supreme court ruled against him. Since that time, Melvin Alston and the teachers of Norfolk, Va., have won an injunction for the equalization salary.

The result or outcome of McDaniel's petition will have much to do with future steps in Florida teachers fight for equal pay.

Fla. Teachers Reopen Battle for Equal Pay

FEB 8 1941

JACKSONVILLE Fla. — The battle of Florida teachers for equalization of their salaries with those of whites was reopened, last week, by Vernon McDaniel, principal of Washington High School, Pensacola.

Mr. McDaniel filed a petition with the superintendent and school board of Escambia County asking that his salary be equalized with that of a white principal of similar qualifications, who is performing similar functions.

FEB 8 1941

Cites Inequalities

In his petition for equalization, Mr. McDaniel points out that a white principal with similar qualifications and no experience receives minimum pay of $200 while he, with maximum services, is paid only $165.

Mr. McDaniel, 34, is a graduate of Bishop College, Marshall, Texas, has spent thirteen years in Escambia County as teacher and principal and has completed his graduate work for a M.A. degree and requires only the writing of his thesis.

Backed by State Group

In this fight it is supposed by many that McDaniel, like John E. Gilbert, who brought a mandamus suit against the school board of Brevard County about two years ago, will lose his job. In response to such probability, McDaniel declared, "the sacrifice is worth a dozen jobs."

The teachers of Escambia County and the Florida State Teachers' Association are 100 per cent behind this effort to wipe out the salary differential. In its regular session the Florida State Teachers' Association unanimously went on record as assessing each member $2.50 to carry on the fight.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Feb. 20.—Members of the Escambia County School board may voluntarily equalize the salaries of Negro school teachers, it was said here this week following a meeting of the board at which the board attorney declared a law on the state statute books compels the county to pay equal salaries.

Board Chairman O. J. Semmes believes the board should raise the teachers immediately in order to avoid the possibility of having to pay the salaries retroactively which he declares would put a financial burden on the county. His attitude may establish a precedent.

The board began consideration of the salary question following the recent petition of Vernon McDaniels for equal pay with white teachers holding the same job with the same qualification. Mr. McDaniels is principal of the Brooker T. Washington High school.

Negro Principal Asks Court To Equalize Wage

Injunction Is Sought Against School Board By McDaniels

Federal court yesterday received application for an injunction against the county school board seeking to equalize the salaries of white and Negro principals and teachers in circumstances where the qualifications of the two groups may be the same.

The suit was filed by Vernon McDaniels, principal of the Washington High school for Negroes, for himself "and others similarly situated."

The petition argued that the state board of education required identical certification for both white and Negro instructors, and that the educational background for each group had to be the same.

Maintaining that Negro salaries were less than those paid to the white educators only "because of race and color discrimination," the petition alleged that the present schedule of salaries was in direct repudiation of the amendment to the United States constitution.

A. S. Edwards, superintendent of the board of public instruction, was the only member of the board named in the prayer for relief. Edwards was out of town yesterday and could not be reached for a statement.

Oliver J. Semmes, chairman of the school board, however, sharply criticized McDaniels' step in taking court action to accomplish his own and other Negro teachers' salary aims.

He said, "I don't see why he did not come to us or send a delegation so that we could discuss the matter in an amicable fashion at a round table conference."

He did state, however, that a similar suit had been brought successfully in Alabama.

PAY OF NEGRO TEACHERS

TAMPA.—The School Board has decided to increase the salaries of the teachers in Hillsborough county. Very good. They could do better by giving the negro teacher in the county the standard salary. He gets the very same certificate to teach, only after identical conditions are fulfilled. The state makes appropriations for the teachers irrespective whether white or colored. How come then that the negro teacher gets only about half the salary of the white teacher? To penalize a teacher 40 or 50 percent simply because of black skin is a grave injustice.

PAY OF NEGRO TEACHERS

SARASOTA.—Your subtle editorial "Negro Teachers" will not lead anyone to believe that you advocate justice for the negro teacher. It seems as if you were making a deliberate attempt to becloud the issue.

The plea is not for a "squarer deal in salaries," but for equal salaries. There is no difference in "degrees of instruction, class of work, or standard of living." The negro does his job as well, with fewer facilities, as has been proven. He has the same standard of living, often higher, as the whites in his wage group. Negro teachers are not supposed to be "trained, capable, experienced, worthy of the jobs" but are! The state doesn't have two sets of qualifications. So why have two salary scales, eh?

Negro Teachers

We find much justice in the plea of the negro teachers of this county for a squarer deal in salaries. The figures show that the negro teachers get average pay of $720; white teachers get $1200.

There's a difference, of course, in degrees of instruction, in the class of work, in standards of living, etcetera, as well as in race. But, getting down to basic facts and common fairness, should there be that much disparity in pay?

Negro teachers are supposed to be trained, capable, experienced, worthy of the jobs—or they wouldn't have them. It isn't disparagement of the white teachers to say the negro teachers should get more. It may be contended that they do not merit the same salary scale as the white teachers—but $720 against $1200 doesn't look right.

MORE ON NEGRO TEACHERS

TAMPA.—We noted an editorial in The Tribune concerning salaries of negro teachers. It's the policy of The Tribune's editorial staff to be fair and impartial and to speak out boldly on matters of vital interest. As a group, we appreciate that fact; however, we feel that certain conclusions were drawn before investigating equipment and physical plants of negro schools. As such, negro teachers must be penalized in teaching technique, salaries and standards of living. White and negro teachers are being paid to do identical work; if they don't, it's an administrative or supervisory problem to see that it's done, for all will agree that the negro has the ability.

Mississippian Testifies Before Senate Committee

TO EQUALIZE ADVANTAGES

Even With Maximum Effort, State Cannot Hope To Approach National Average Expenditure Without Help

By GEORGE MORRIS

From The Commercial Appeal
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, April 30—Even with the maximum effort, Mississippi can never hope to reach 50 per cent of the national average for schools without Federal aid, J. S. Vandiver, state superintendent of education, told the Senate Committee on Education and Labor Wednesday.

MAY 1 - 1941

Mr. Vandiver appeared as a witness in behalf of legislation which has been pending since 1936. The bill would provide Federal funds for states, based upon scholastic population and financial ability of states to meet a minimum standard of educational facilities.

Praises Administration

Mississippi schols, Mr. Vandiver told the committee, have a fine and business-like administration. The whole problem, he said, was in doing too much with too little. Pointing out that with a mild climate, a god system of highways and the practicabilty of consoldation, Mississippi can operate schools for less per capita than many other states, Mr. Vandiver added that "if we are to maintain the same quality of schol work as other parts of the United States, the South will need funds equal to at least three fourths of the national average of expenditures per pupil.

"Mississippi is near the top among the states in her effort to provide schools for her children. Because of lack of resources our state finds it possible to increase by only a few dollars the present per capita expenditure of $28.19."

The records before the committee show that the expenditure per capita in New York is $147.65 and the national average is $83.87.

Negro education in the state is not being neglected, according to Mr. Vandiver. The last session of the Legislature, he said, provided free textbooks for all children in public schools. The Mississippi Training School in Jackson for negroes was established and steps are under way for establishing a junior high school for negroes in the Delta, he said.

MAY 1 - 1941

Schools For Negroes

"Agricultural high schools for negroes have been established in several parts of Mississippi and are operating successfully. Plans are being made to establish more of these in other counties. In the adult education program the negro has fared extremely well. Vocational schools have been provided in a great many of the negro high schools of the state. In a large number of the counties a county-wide one mill levy has been made by the Boards of Supervisors, a large part of which is used for improving negro school buildings.

"If the Thomas-Harrison Bill should become a law and $300,000,000 be appropriated annually for schools," declared Mr. Vandiver, "then every state could on a statewide basis reach an average of from $60 to $70 per child. Every poor school district in any state regardless of how high the statewide average might be could be brought up to this level, and there are a great number of poor districts in many of the states. In many states the variation in expenditures between rich and poor districts on a classroom basis is about six to one."

Equal Wages For Teachers Worry South

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
U. P. Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA, Ga., May 1 (UP)—The problem of paying Negro teachers wages equivalent to those paid white instructors is perplexing southern states due to a U. S. Supreme Court ruling abolishing the wage-scale discrimination in school systems.

Only three states have any program by which they can meet the ruling of the Supreme Court. In North Carolina an agreement has been reached with Negro teachers to increase their stlaries gradually for four years until they are on a par with minimum salaries of white instructors.

GENERAL

Star of Zion
Charlotte, N. C.

NEGRO TEACHERS MUST FORCE THE ISSUE

Every state with separate schools for Negro and white children has an organized State Teachers' Association. Since the decisions of the Federal courts were handed down outlawing differentials in salaries on the basis of race, these associations have taken on new life. They represent the educated Negro leaders of the South who are moved only partly by their own personal grievances to contest the discriminations against them. Their greatest incentive comes from their consciousness that the inarticulate portion of their race, both adult and youth, expect them to lead the way in the fight for the application of the principles of democracy.

MAY 8 1941

Negro teachers are caught on the horns of a dilemma. If they pursue the course which leads to success for the race, they stand a good chance, individually, of losing their jobs; if they fail to pursue this course, they, indubitably, both collectively and individually will lose their influence and position with their own people. Supported by a white public opinion, growing increasingly favorable to their demands, they doubtless recognize that their chances of success without white retaliation are steadily increasing.

In Tennessee, B. O. Duggan, commissioner of education, says no distinction is made between white and Negro teachers. Tennessee, according to Duggan, pays on a basis of training and experience.

Seven States Worried

Alabama, with educators protesting vigorously, is experimenting with program calling for increased taxes to handle $200,000 necessary to raise the wage level of Negroes. Former schedules fixed Negro minimum wages at 75 per cent of that set for whites.

Southern school leaders almost unanimously agree that federal aid will have to be forthcoming if the problem is to be solved. It is estimated that the increase in Negro salaries would cost state governments more than $10,000,000 annually.

"In order to insure a uniform salary scheduls, I estimate $1,000,000 a year would have to be added to the state salary fund. And the only way I see to meet this would be through increased federal aid."

Heavy Cost Foreseen

The second major crisis confronts southern states if they are forced to give Negros equal facilities in schools. Such a requirement would mean the installation and upkeep of law schools, medical schools, laboratories, etc. These would run state school expenditures into figures which are beyond the hope of reality, school officials say.

Recently representatives from southern states met in Atlanta to "hold informal discussions—not as a means of circumventing the Supreme Court ruling—but on chances of obtaining federal aid to raise both white and Negro teachers' salaries."

In Georgia an official said if the court decision was enforced Georgia would have to drop the seven-months school law. This law sets up the statewide teachers salary scale for whites and Negroes. Abolition of this scale would leave the court decision with nothing to act upon in Georgia, according to this official.

Money May Be Lumped

He said this action simply would mean that Georgia would apportion each County with a lump sum of money to pay teachers.

The official said counties are not touched by the court ruling. Thus, they could pay whatever salaries they desired. He said, however, that he didn't think the state would take such drastic action.

Alabama, $200,000; Florida $1,250,000; Georgia, $900,000; Louisiana, 1,000,000; Mississippi, $1,950,000; North Carolina, $1,000,000; South Carolina, 2,250,000; Virginia, $250,000 for Richmond alone. No state estimate available. Tennessee, not affected.

Christian Recorder
Philadelphia, Pa.

EQUAL TEACHERS SALARIES

MAY 8 1941

All along the Christian Recorder has contended for equal distribution of educational funds. Negro teachers of equal training and tenure should receive the same pay as white teachers. School terms and facilities should be the same. The argument that the white people carry the burden of taxes breaks down. Every man who works, produces, consumes or pays rent is a tax-payer, indirectly if not directly.

MAY 8 1941

Since the Negro teachers and pupils have suffered so long, instead of a gradual increase over an indefinite period the Recorder suggests an equal base pay now, and a gradual increase of all as the years go by. A southern Governor said to a group of race teachers not long ago: "You don't want to build up by pulling down the other fellow." Neither should the other fellow get or remain up by keeping you down. If we are going to have democracy its ideals must be practical, irrespective of color, or race. Here again the United States Supreme Court has ruled.

TEACHERS IN 3 MORE STATES ASK EQUAL PAY

Louisiana, Georgia And Tennessee Units Move For Standard Wage

NEW YORK — JUL 2 1941 suits for the equalization of teachers' salaries are being fought in three states by the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In Atlanta, Ga., plans were made last month by the Atlanta Citizens Committee on Equalization of Teachers' salaries, Attorney A. T. Walden of Atlanta and Thurgood Marshall of New York, special counsel for the N.A.A.C.P. to petition the Atlanta School board requesting equal pay for colored and white teachers.

The campaign for equalization in New Orleans, La., struck a temporary snag when the local school board refused Thurgood Marshall permission to appear in behalf of Joseph McKelpin in whose name the equalization fight is being made there.

The board claimed their meeting was an executive session not open to the public. New Orleans citizens are continuing the fight. The differential there is reported to be $275,000 a year.

Clarence B. Robinson, teacher in the public schools of Chattanooga, Tenn., filed suit in the district court of the Eastern District of Tennessee on June 10, for equalization of salaries paid to Negro and white teachers there. 25 Millions a Year Needed to Equalize Teachers' Salaries

BALTIMORE — It will take $25,000,000 a year to equalize colored and white teachers' salaries in eighteen Southern States, Walter White, national secretary of the NAACP, told the Maryland Educational Association at its dinner session Friday evening at the YMCA which closed its one-day meeting.

The salary equalization fight of the NAACP, which has been successful in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina and is being pushed in Tennessee, Louisiana and Florida, has cost the association $35,000 so far.

Mr. White said teachers had contributed $6,000 of this sum.

He warned Maryland teachers not to be complacent about their new status, but stressed the necessity of sharing their benefits so that equalization of salaries would be a universal thing.

All States Must Yield

"Not until every Southern State equalizes salaries of colored and white teachers will your position be tenable," Mr. White said.

Dr. D. O. W. Holmes, president of Morgan State College, who preceded Mr. White on the program, told the group that the legal enactment of equalization will give teachers not only a cultural wage, but other things, too.

White teachers are being given a real test of democracy through the equalization of salaries, Dr. Mabel Carney, white, professor of education at Columbia Teachers' College, said.

She added that whites are being put in the debt of colored teachers who are engaged in the fight because the whole matter of Federal aid is being brought into the open.

NOV 1 1941

Dr. Carney said the majority of Southern States are unable to pay either colored or white teachers salaries comparable to those paid in Northern States. To raise colored salaries means these States must accept Federal aid which means salaries for both groups comparable to Northern teachers' salaries.

Joint Reports Made

A final report of the joint committee of NAACP and Maryland State Teachers' Association representatives, given by the treasurer, Dr. George B. Murphy, revealed that more than $2,000 has been contributed by the Maryland group to NAACP headquarters.

It was voted that the pen with which Governor Herbert O'Conor, signed the bill equalizing colored and white teachers' salaries be placed in a suitable frame and put on exhibition at the Morgan State College library.

Ways of making the school more effective through the coordination of community agencies, a more extensive curriculum and library, leisure time training, and vocational education were discussed during the general session, held at Douglass High School, Friday afternoon.

Dr. Weglein Talks Democracy

Dr. David E. Weglein, white, superintendent of schools, pointed out the urgency of a proper understanding by both teachers and students of what a government of democracy really is and its significance during this time of crisis.

NOV 1 1941

"The school's part in this program of national defense is to teach the principles of democracy more emphatically and more vigorously," he declared, "for while it grants certain rights and privileges, it demands in return certain duties, responsibilities and obligations of its citizenry.

New Yorker Hits Dual System

"Today, more than ever before, children must be taught to understand and live democracy; to appreciate the blessings which we enjoy under our government and a loyalty which will make them willing to make sacrifices to preserve our democracy, if that be necessary."

On this same subject, Dr. Carney, emphasized the fact that for a teacher to be able to effectively teach democracy to her students, she must be working in a school system which carries out the ideals of democracy in its supervision and direction.

Complimenting the group on its success in having won its case for the equalization of teachers' salaries, Dr. Carney solicited the encouragement and support of the Maryland teachers for those of other Southern States who are still suffering under this handicap.

Dr. Imes Speaks

In a brief address, Dr. G. Lake Imes, principal of the Vocational Defense Training School, pointed out the benefits of these institutions in preparing the citizenry to take advantage of the opportunities now open to them in the national defense industries.

Dr. Francis M. Wood, director of schools, presided. Announcements were made by Cato Anderson, president of the State organization.

Teachers' Salaries 23 Years Ago

WE don't know exactly when the fight for better pay for teachers began but we do know that the Journal and Guide has been in the thick of it for forty years. Browsing through a bound volume of the Journal and Guide for the year 1918—twenty-three years ago—we came across the following editorial under the caption "Give the Teachers More Pay":

> Justice and reason both demand that the request of the school teachers of Norfolk for more pay be met with favorable action. And it appears that in readjusting the pay of the teachers the disparity in the pay of white and colored teachers should be reduced. We do not mean that white teachers should receive less. They are entitled to all they are asking for, and more, but we think that human considerations should prompt the authorities to adjust the pay of people doing identically the same work with more equity. There is not much justice in a system that fixes the maximum pay for a colored teacher at less than the minimum pay for a white teacher when both are paid out of the same public funds for doing identically the same work.

The foregoing was written and published in the Journal and Guide before some of the young teachers now in the public schools were born. It was written while some of them were still in grammar school and while others were in college. It goes to prove that we do not get what we want by merely asking for it, but we have to work for what we want patiently and persistently. It goes to show that often we have to cross a desert in order to reach a verdant plain; that often forests must be cleared before we have fertile fields for planting. And it shows that newspapers are public servants that never tire of striving for the public's good.

EQUAL SCHOOL WAGE DECREE HITS SOUTH

Programs Upset By Ruling On Negroes' Pay

DISCRIMINATION IS BARRED

No Distinction Made In Tennessee, Duggan Says—Arkansas And Mississippi Affected By High Court Order

By JOHN B. M'DERMOTT
United Press Staff Writer

ATLANTA, Ga., April 26.—The problem of paying negro teachers wages equivalent to those paid white instructors is perplexing Southern states due to a United States Supreme Court ruling abolishing the wage-scale discrimination in school systems.

Another ruling requires equal educational facilities for negro and white children.

APR 27 1941

Tennessee O. K.

Only three states have any program by which they can meet the ruling of the Supreme Court. In North Carolina an agreement has been reached with negro teachers to increase their salaries gradually for four years until they are on a par with minimum salaries of white instructors.

In Tennessee, B. O. Duggan, commissioner of education, says no distinction is made between white and negro teachers. Tennessee, according to Duggan, pays on a basis of training and experience.

Seven States Worried

Alabama, with educators protesting vigorously, is experimenting with a program calling for increased taxes to handle $200,000 necessary to raise the wage level of negroes. Former schedules fixed negro minimum wages at 75 per cent of that set for whites.

Southern school leaders almost unanimously agree that Federal aid will have to be forthcoming if the problem is to be solved. It is estimated that the increase in negro salaries would cost state governments more than $10,000,000 annually.

John E. Coxe, superintendent of education in Louisiana said recently:

"In order to insure a uniform salary schedule, I estimate $1,000,000 a year would have to be added to the state salary fund. And the only way I see to meet this would be through increased Federal aid."

Heavy Cost Foreseen

The second major crisis confronts Southern states if they are forced to give negroes equal facilities in schools. Such a requirement would mean the installation and upkeep of law schools, medical schools, laboratories, etc. These would run the state school expenditures onto figures which are beyond the hope of reality, school officials say.

APR 27 1941

Recently representatives from Southern states met in Atlanta to "hold informal discussions—not on a means of circumventing the Supreme Court ruling — but on chances of obtaining Federal aid to raise both white and negro teachers' salaries."

In Georgia an official said if the court decision was enforced Georgia would have to drop the seven-months school law. This law sets up the statewide teachers salary scale for whites and negroes. Abolition of this scale would leave the court decision with nothing to act upon in Georgia, according to this official.

Money May Be Lumped

He said this action simply would mean that Georgia would apportion each county with a lump sum of money to pay teachers.

The official said counties are not touched by the court ruling. Thus, they could pay whatever salaries they desired. He said, however, that he didn't think the state would take such drastic action.

Estimates of the annual costs of complying with the salary ruling and steps taken toward conformance are:

APR 27 1941

Alabama, $200,000; Florida, $1,250,000; Georgia, $900,000; Louisiana, $1,000,000; Mississippi, $1,000,000;. North Carolina, $1,000,000; South Carolina, $2,250,000; Virginia, $250,000 for Richmond alone. No state estimate available. Tennessee, not affected.

EQUAL WAGES FOR TEACHERS WORRY SOUTH

School Programs Upset By Court Decree On Negroes' Pay

Race Teachers Underpaid In Twelve States

Frontier Hails Suits Filed by Tutors

NOV 18 1941

In the lead editorial this month, "The Southern Frontier," publication of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc., calls attention to the marked discrepancies between the pay of white and Negro teachers. The Frontier hails the increasing number of suits by colored teacher associations against public boards of education to equalize teachers' salaries.

The table of average yearly salaries in the South released by the Frontier is as follows:

State	White	Negro
Alabama	$ 816	$387
Arkansas	625	367
Florida	1,133	569
Georgia	886	398
Louisiana	1,026	368
Nississippi	750	237
North Carolina	916	647
Oklahoma	1,059	923
South Carolina	939	388
Tennessee	887	580
Texas	1,195	704
Virginia	912	598

NOV 18 1941

"The question of salaries is merely preliminary, an entering wedge, which doubtless will be followed by others. It is, conceivably, unconstitutional to differentiate in the expenditure of on the basis of race. Teachers' public funds between children salaries are reflected in the per capita cost.

Current Expenditures per Child Enrolled

State	Year	White	Negro
Ala.	1938-39	$36.03	$10.65
Ark.	1939-40	26.84	10.63
Fla.	1937-38	55.44	2164
Ga.	1939-40	43.38	12.47
La.	1938-39	60.37	12.62
Miss.	1938-39	38.96	4.97
N. Car.	1937-38	39.31	21.71
Okla.	1939-40	49.75	51.52

Texas	1939-40 (appro'd)	54.06	26.32
Va.	1828-39	30.18	18.22

"Then comes the question of capital investment. The financial picture of the Southern public school system, is practically complete with the consideration of this third differential:

Value of Buildings, Grounds, and Equipment per Child Enrolled

State	White	Colored
Alabama	$114.71	$23.93
Arkansas	111.46	31.01
Florida	265.56	70.33
Georgia	139.13	34.69

S. Carolina	172.35	32.79
Texas	226.51	72.86
Virginia	157.46	60.43

"To those who know something of school conditions in the South, nothing more is needed than these three tables. The money is not here to wipe out the differentials on the basis of race; nor is the money here to wipe out the differentials on the basis of geography. But differentials must be wiped out."

Why Not Equal Pay For Equal Work?

DEC 1 - 1941

A few months ago a group of teachers asked a group of citizens to join them in their efforts to get the city board of education to discontinue its policy of discrimination in salaries on the basis of race and raise the colored teachers' salaries to those of the white teachers of similar rank.

According to reports the average city teacher gets about 60 per cent of the amount paid white teachers of corresponding educational training.

In the state as a whole the average white teacher receives annually $886.00 and the average colored teacher $398.00.

DEC 1 - 1941

A special citizens committee was organized under the chairmanship of Rev. M. L. King for the specific purpose of aiding the Atlanta teachers in their fight to win equal pay.

Failure to get a satisfactory agreement with the city board of education after several conferences, the committee filed a petition last week with the board in behalf of William H. Reeves, a teacher in the David T. Howard Junior High School, asking that his salary be raised to that amount received by white teachers with his qualifications. Reeves' petition states that "this discrimination is being practiced against Negroes solely on account of their race or color, in violation of the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution and therefore unconstitutional."

DEC 1 - 1941

Similar actions have been made against school boards in Maryland, Virginia and Florida by teachers with the legal aid of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and each has resulted in victory for the race.

The Reeves case has not reached the courts yet and it is to be hoped that the board of education will recognize the injustice and discrimination in its past action and voluntarily agree to equalize the teachers' salary without the waste of the taxpayers' money through litigation.

We believe equal pay should be given for equal qualification and equal service rendered.

SOUTH MAY ASK U. S. GOVERNMENT TO PAY TEACHERS

MAR 28 1941

Region Lacks Money To Equalize Salaries; But All Is "Rosy" In Tennessee Says Duggan

ATLANTA, March 27—(ANP)—Last week, for the first time in history, city, county and state education boards of 10 southern states, sought ways and means of complying with the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court—that colored teachers in public schools must be paid salaries equal to those of white instructors doing similar work.

From reliable sources it was learned that the pay increase would cost state governments more than 10 million dollars annually and that federal aid may be necessary if the ruling is to be complied with, soon. In both state and local districts, it was said the pay increase to colored teachers would vary, but the salaries of some would be up as high as $500. Average increase per teacher would be about $200, it was estimated. MAR 28 1941

In Nashville, B. O. Duggan, State Commissioner of Education, stated that the decision would not greatly affect Tennessee, as the State Board of Education based its salary scales on training and experience, made no distinction between white and colored teachers. Local districts in a few counties might be affected, he said.

In Virginia, where Richmond, alone, faces an increase of $250,000 in its teachers' budget, no State program has been planned. Each city, town and county must solve it sproblems of teachers' salaries it was explained.

In other States, estimates of annual costs of complying with the salary ruling and steps taken toward conformance are as follows:

Alabama—$200,000. Will be met from increased revenue from existing taxes.

Arkansas—$675,000. No program.
Florida—$1,250,000. No program.
Georgia—$900,000. No program.
Louisiana—$1,000,000. No program.
Mississippi—$1,950,000. No program.
North Carolina—$1,000,000. Will effect the increase over a period of four years.
South Carolina—$2,250,000. No program. MAR 28 1941

Officials of state educational systems in the South also are bothered by the possibility that it may be necessary to expend large sums to build, equip and maintain higher institutions of learning to conform to the United States Supreme Court opinion that Negroes be furnished equal facilities for training for the professions, such as medicine and law.

ANOTHER SALARY SUIT

MODERN FARMER
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Kentucky enters the list of states with a "salary differential" fight on its hands. A junior high school teacher at Louisville petitions the Board of Education to raise her salary from $1,490 to $1,750, the salary of white teachers doing similar work. MAR 15 1941

The local board of education, having the power to determine teachers' salaries, has set a scale of salaries for Negro teachers at 15 per cent less than the amount paid white teachers.

Louisiana Colored Teachers' Association turned down a resolution calling for equalization of teachers' salaries in that state. This action was maneuvered according to the report by "chameleonite tutor-leaders." MAR 15 1941

Luverne, Ala., Journal
March 19, 1941

We do not favor Federal money for our schools for more than one reason. First federal money would mean mixed schools, were it pressed by the Negroes and to give some of them an inch, he would try for a mile. Second, some educated Negro might make application to teach in a white school. Why not? The white school is supported by federal money, and you must not violate the 14th Amendment. A Negro could be put up to making application to enter the Luverne High school. Of course he would be denied, then a Mandamous would be filed. A federal court would rule that the Negro must be admitted, under heavy penalty. We have separate schools and we don't want mixed schools, and the way to keep from having mixed schools is to keep federal money out of our schools. You can educate a Negro to the "Top Notch" and he will still be a Negro. Some of our superintendents are clamoring for federal money. They claim that teachers are not getting as much salary as men and women get working for the State. The teacher only works 20 days and calls it a month while those working for the State must work 26 days per month. Let Alabama educate its children and pay the teacher all it can without Federal money.

Federal Funds Sought To Equalize Pay Of Teachers

Fifteen Southern States Would Require $25,000,000 Annually To Raise Salaries—Added Millions Needed To Bring Schools Up To Standard.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 17—A bill to provide Federal aid to the States for public education, providing for equitable division of funds between colored and white schools in States having separate schools, was introduced in the Senate last Thursday by Senators Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, and Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, Democrats.

APR 19 1941

The bill provides that in States having separate schools for colored pupils the colored schools shall receive not less than their pro rata share of Federal funds without reduction in the proportion of State and local funds they now receive.

It creates a board of apportionment in the Federal Security Agency. One of the duties of this board would be to determine the nature and extent of educational inequalities existing among the States.

In making this determination it is to take into consideration "the need for equalization of educational opportunities for minority races," due to "the financial implication of Federal court decisions interpreting the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States as it relates to equal rights to educational opportunities."

APR 19 1941

An equitable division of funds in a State having separate schools is defined in the bill as "any plan of apportionment or distribution which results in the expenditure, for the benefit of such minority racial group, of a proportion of said funds not less than the proportion that each such minority racial group in such State bears to the total population of that State."

The term "minority race" or "minority racial group" is defined as "any race or racial group that constitutes a minority of the population of the continental United States."

APR 19 1941

In his statement explaining the bill, Senator Thomas said that recent Federal court decisions interpreting the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution as it affects equal educational opportunities for colored people have created an urgent need for funds to make these decisions effective.

The fifteen States having the heaviest colored population, he stated, would require $25,000,000 a year in additional funds to raise the average salary of colored teachers to the average of white teachers. This additional sum, he said, represents about 80 per cent more than it now spent for salaries of colored teachers.

If expeditures for buildings and equipment are taken into consideration, he estimated that about $80,000,000 a year in additional funds would be required.

If colored pupils attend school in the same ratio as white pupils, he said, the additional amount required would be $100,000,000.

If school building facilities are to be equalized, he added, it will be necessary to make capital outlays totaling about $325,000,000.

Senator Thomas estimated that $50,000,000 is needed annually to begin to make effective the Fourteenth Amendment as it affects equal educational opportunities for colored people. This sum may be expected to increase, he said, until it greatly exceeds $10,000,000 a year or more than 20 per cent of the total expenditures for elementary and secondary schools in the jim-crow States.

IS IT WORTH THE PRICE?

At Birmingham the other day the Alabama Education Association closed its annual convention with a demand for federal aid to the schools so as "to equalize educational opportunity" throughout the nation. The A. E. A. in its resolution says that these would be "administered and controlled through regular state school agencies."

The proposal of federal aid for the schools, so as to bring the schools of the South up to the level of the rest of the country, has long been a matter of discussion down here. We need federal aid—we need it desperately to offset the flow of money, humanity and natural resources out of the South into the North, East and West. But can it be obtained without the sale of our birthright? The Alabama Education Association says that federal aid would be "administered and controlled through regular state school agencies," but can this be done?

We have federal aid for highways, and ask any public official or highway man about it. The federal government lets the state administer and control these funds, but the federal government throws enough restrictions about that money to wrap every dollar in a pound of red tape. The grades on those federal-aid roads have got to be so-and-so, the curves have got to be just this way and not that way. The material has got to meet definite federal specifications, and so on down the line. With the federal money which has come into the states through the relief agencies in recent years, it has been the same way. The WPA in its work has so many restrictions and regulations about trucks, personnel, hours and the type of construction that the officials in many an Alabama county would long ago nave thrown the whole program overboard had it not been for the desperate need for the employment by the people involved.

There is no earthly reason to believe that we can get federal aid for education in the South without this red tape. It is well and good for the A. E. A. to suggest that these funds be administered by the regular state school agencies, and the Southern congressmen might even succeed in getting such a bill passed, but a year wouldn't pass before the professional reformers of the East would be clamoring for restrictions on the way that money was to be spent. The Negro vote is the balance of political power in a half dozen of the most populous states in the union, and it wouldn't be a year before the delegations from these states began crying for "justice in the South" in the same manner that they have cried out for the federal anti-lynching bill and the Geyer anti-poll tax bill. It wouldn't be a year before they would be demanding federal control on what we teach in our schools and how we teach it, and it is a foregone conclusion that in the name of "democracy" they would call for mixed schools in all Southern states receiving federal help.

We suggest to the Alabama Education Association, and to all other school bodies in the South, that they tread with extreme care. The schools of the South need money, but money isn't everything. There are things in the South which we must not surrender, we must not abandon, no matter how many hundreds of millions are offered us. An educated people is important, but we even grow so rash as to say that education is not the cure for all our problems. It is no economic panacea. If we accept this money we may be called upon to sacrifice principles which are a thousand times more important to us than all the federal assistance ever devised by all the professional spenders in Washington. We of the South have borne our own load in the past. We have been poor, but we have kept our pride. We do not believe that the South is yet ready to sacrifice this pride for a mess of federal patronage.—Greensboro Watchman.

BECAUSE TEACHERS ARE BACKWARD

The NAACP reported last week that it will take $25,000,000 to equalize teachers' salaries in the Southern States having separate schools.

In order to win a stake of that size, Walter White announced that $35,000 had been expended by the association in preparation of the cases filed to date.

The sour note is the fact that teachers themselves have contributed but $6,000 of this sum.

With any such sum as 25 millions as a prize, it would appear that all teachers' associations, State and national, would subordinate other activities to the raising of funds to get better pay.

In Maryland, where equalization was made legally possible, $500,000 was at stake and the court costs were $4,000.

NOV 8 1938

At that rate the court costs for the whole country would approximate $200,000.

Assuming that any group unwilling to contend for its rights does not deserve them, most of us would be minded to let teachers stew in their indifference and disorganization, except for one fact—namely, that the school children are the chief sufferers from poorly paid teachers.

The net result is that even if the teachers and their associations are backward, the public must make the fight and raise the funds for NAACP teachers' cases, because the children will profit most in the long run.

GENERAL

Salary Equalization In State Colleges

MAR 1 5 1941

There has been and is much discussion in Georgia as well as in the other Southern states about the equalization of teachers' salaries. Most people think of this as applying only to the public schools on the elementary and secondary levels. But (it is a fact that just as rank discrimination is practiced in the colleges of the State University system of the South as in the public elementary and high schools. For example, in the University system of Georgia the presidents of the Negro units do not get the same salaries as the white presidents of similar units and men having similar experience and training. The Negro professors in the Negro units do not get the same salaries as white professors in white units of the University system.

The Journal holds that our Negro presidents, deans, and professors should get exactly the same salaries as those paid whites who have similar qualifications and are doing similar work, because they are in similar positions.

WE BELIEVE THAT THE BEST WAY TO ACHIEVE PARITY OF PAY IN THE VARIOUS UNITS OF THE SYSTEM IS TO HAVE THE UNIVERSITY BOARD OF REGENTS ESTABLISH A COMPULSORY SALARY SCALE TO BE CARRIED OUT IN EACH AND EVERY UNIT OF THE SYSTEM WITHOUT THE ADMINISTRATORS HAVING ANY OPTION ABOUT THE MATTER. If an administrator appoints a man to a position the fixed salary for that position should be paid him regardless of what unit he is in and what race he belongs to.

South May Ask Federal Aid to Pay Teachers

MAR 29 1941

ATLANTA — (ANP) — Ten Southern States are seeking ways and means of complying with the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, that colored teachers in public schools must be paid salaries equal to those of white instructors doing similar work.

From reliable sources it was learned that the pay increase would cost ten State governments more than $10,000,000 annually and that Federal aid may be necessary if the ruling is to be complied with, soon.

In both States and local districts, it was said the pay increase to colored teachers would vary, but the salaries of some would be upped as high as $500. Average increase per teacher would be about $200, it was estimated.

Mississippi Plans Way

State superintendent of schools, J. S. Vandiver, estimated that the increase in salaries would cost Mississippi $1,950,000, but explained that the State is now making every effort to equalize educational advantages for both colored and white.

He explained that the additional amounts to raise "colored as well as white teachers' salaries to a living wage," would have to be procured from the Federal government.

Tennessee Not Worried

In Nashville, B. O. Duggan, State commissioner of education, stated that the decision would not greatly affect Tennessee, as the State board of education based its salary scales on training and experience, made no distinction between white and colored teachers. Local districts in a few counties might be affected, he said.

In Virginia, where Richmond, alone, faces an increase of $250,000 in its teachers' budget, no State program has been planned. Each city, town and county must solve its problems of teachers' salaries, it was explained.

Annual Costs Vary

In other States, estimates of annual costs of complying with the salary ruling and steps taken toward conformance are as follows:

Alabama — $200,000. Will be met from increased revenue from existing taxes.

Arkansas—$675,000. No program.

Florida—$1,250,000. No program.

Georgia — $900,000. No program.

Louisiana—$1,000,000. No program.

Mississippi—$1,950,000. No program.

MAR 29 1941

North Carolina — $1,000,000. Will effect the increase over a period of four years.

South Carolina—$2,250,000. No program.

Officials in the South also are bothered by the possibility that it may be necessary to expend large sums to build, equip and maintain higher institutions of learning to conform to the Supreme Court opinion that colored be furnished equal facilities for professional training.

TIME FOR THOUGHT

In Alabama the lowest schedule of salaries for teachers gives white teachers a minimum of $50 a month and Negroes $35.50. This is less than is paid for relief workers on federal projects. Their wage is $54, and a man who has never attended school a day is eligible to draw the $54 a month, while young men and young women who have spent thousands of dollars and many years of hard study to prepare themselves for teaching, draw a much smaller salary, and that for a period of six to eight months. There's something radically wrong. It doesn't seem to be chargeable to the educational system, for it costs less per pupil in Alabama than most any state in the Union. Many states pay three and four times what we have to pay in Alabama. It takes money to operate a great school system, and we might as well make up our minds to increase appropriations for educational purposes in Alabama. The Dixon administration made an increase of $1,500,000, but it was not sufficient to give the needed relief. Increased cost of transportation, increase in number of pupils and the salary scale increase about consumed this appropriation, and our school terms are no longer. How can we expect to educate our children as well in six months as New York does in nine months? Teachers should be paid better salaries and minimum school terms increased to nine months for all schools.--Pickens County Herald (Carrollton).

School Terms And Salaries

In his address before the Alabama Education Association yesterday, Gov. Dixon touched on a question which, in the final analysis, must be settled by the people of Alabama themselves; and so it is well to have this issue put plainly and in the light of the fullest possible information.

Gov. Dixon told the A. E. A. that his administration and the Legislature had provided sufficient funds to extend the rural elementary schools to an eight-month term, but that the additional money went into increased pay for teachers and for additional teachers. (Let it be noted here that Gov. Dixon said he was not criticizing this policy but was merely stating the facts.)

Gov. Dixon said: MAR 28 1941

Before the 1939 Legislature met I made a complete and comprehensive study of our school system. I found exactly what it was costing to educate an Alabama child, under the conditions and at the rates of pay prevailing in 1937-38. The recess finance and taxation committee reviewed these figures and accepted them. More than enough additional was added by legislative appropriations to extend the seven-month term, of the rural elementary schools, at those same rates of pay, for another month.

The plan at that time was to require this additional month for this additional money. The plan was abandoned at the request of the educational group, who asked that the decision be left to them as to whether the additional term could be given or salaries raised and teachers added.

What became of the money? It was used to increase your salaries, my friends, and to employ additional teachers.

I am interested in imputing no blame. It may easily be that the course followed by your school teachers in using the money as they did was wise. But I am vitally interested in a fair presentation of the facts. MAR 28 1941

It is my opinion that the teachers of this state certainly are not overpaid. It is my opinion that our people, given the facts, will approve of the law and the action of the Board of Education in using the additional money for increased salaries rather than for lengthened school terms. My plea is that there be complete frankness in the matter—an open admission on all parts that the 1939 Legislature was as generous as the wealth of our people would permit, an open admission in explanation of the fact that the increase from 1937-38 to 1939-40 was used, nearly in its entirety, otherwise than to increase the term, and a justification of this policy.

The governor added that, "rather than change the settled system," his own vote in the recent meeting of the Board of Education on the disposition of the additional $938,000 hoped for this fiscal year "was similar to that of the other members." It is a "defensible point of view," he said, adding that the point he was making was that "the choice between extending the terms and increasing the salaries is a choice which, under the law, lies in the discretion of the education authorities of the state and not of the governor or of the Legislature."

In reply to this, Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, defended this policy and said that the teachers of Alabama are not getting half the average pay for teachers in the nation and that Alabama has not begun to raise teachers' salaries to a level comparable to the pay of state employes with comparable training.

Thus the question is presented whether Alabama must choose between longer school terms and better pay for its teachers, or whether it can have both.

In order to have a fair presentation of this question, it is necessary to look at the facts concerning teachers' salaries in Alabama and elsewhere. Dr. Collins said that the pay of teachers in this state did not average half that of teachers in the nation as a whole. For six of the 10 years from 1929-30 to 1938-39 the average pay in Alabama was less than half the average for the nation, and at its lowest point, in 1932-33, was only 36.9 per cent of the national average, or barely more than a third. In that year the average teacher's salary in Alabama was only $488 annually, compared to a national average of $1,322 at that time. MAR 28 194

In the last school year for which figures are available, 1938-39, the average pay nationally was $1,380 and the Alabama average was $696, or 51.4 per cent of the average teacher's salary for the nation as a whole.

At no time in this period—and doubtless at no time in history—has the average teacher's salary for Alabama been more than 53.5 per cent of the average for the nation. This was the ratio in 1929-30, when the Alabama average was $761 and the national average was $1,420.

Thus we see that the average pay for teachers in Alabama has consistently been very low as compared to the national average. But that is not all that the figures show. They show also that teachers' salaries in Alabama have been restored less rapidly from the low point of the depression than have salaries in the nation as a whole. Teachers in Alabama in 1938-39 averaged 91.5 per cent of the pre-depression salary in this state, while nationally the recovery in teachers' pay has amounted to 97.2 per cent of the 1929-30 figure.

In comparison with pay for other kinds of work, teachers' salaries, both in Alabama and in the nation, make a very poor showing. Industrial wages and salaries, for example, are higher than ever before, and in various lines of work the average remuneration is higher than at any other time. The pay of teachers, however, both in the state and in the nation, remains lower than it was in 1929-30. MAR 28 1941

It is a serious question, therefore, that has been presented to Alabama. We do not believe the people of the state want to choose simply between longer terms and better pay for teachers. We believe they would like to have longer terms and better pay for teachers. The people of Alabama know that we cannot have as good schools as other states if we pay our teachers only half as much on the average as the rest of the nation pays. MAR 28 1941

FEDERAL SCHOOL AID NEEDED

APR 17 1941

Educators Of 14 Southern States Meet In Atlanta

ATLANTA.—Federal aid is the answer to vexing problems facing state school systems in the South, is the decision of educators from fourteen Southern states who met here Monday.

The immediate problem facing the educators was a recent ruling of the United States Supreme Court requiring equal pay for white and Negro teachers in public schools for the same services and qualifications. Also the greater problem raised by the court's ruling that states must maintain equal facilities for Negro and white school children. APR 17 1941

Educators were not optimistic about getting the money. Although it was pointed out the sums estimated were not a drop in the bucket compared with daily expenditures for war purposes.

The teacher salary item in these fourteen states where one-third of the nation's school population lives would amount to an increase of 25 million dollars per year. This would include the raising of present Negro teachers up alongside the white teachers in salaries, plus salaries of additional Negro teachers that would have to be hired to bring Negro schools up to present white school standards.

It will require 325 million dollars to raise Negro schools, buildings and facilities to a level to comply with the court's ruling.

To take care of the program the educators estimate it will require 50 million dollars per year now, with increased amounts in future years. APR 17 1941

Senate Bill 1313 passed recently by the Georgia legislature provides for acceptance of Federal aid.

Represented in the meeting were the states of Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Kentucky.

Says Dixie Split 50-50 on Race Parity in Education

APR 19 1941

ATLANTA (ANP)—White people of the South apparently are divided half and half on the question of providing equal public school advantages for colored children, according to a statement by R. B. Eleazer, educational director of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, based on a poll recently taken by the Institute of Public Opinion for the National Education Association.

In this poll, 45 per cent of adult Southern whites interviewed on the subject favored equal advantages for colored children, 46 per cent were opposed, and 9 per cent expressed no opinion. Seventy-eight per cent of Southern colored persons interviewed expressed themselves as favorable, 11 per cent were opposed, and 11 APR 19 1941 declined to express an opinion.

In the North the favorable vote was much higher, running to 86 per cent of the whites interviewed and 96 per cent of the colored. The average for the country as a whole was 78 per cent in favor of equal advantages, 16 per cent opposed, and 6 per cent undecided.

Salary Equalization In State Colleges

MAR 15 1941

There has been and is much discussion in Georgia as well as in the other Southern states about the equalization of teachers' salaries. Most people think of this as applying only to the public schools on the elementary and secondary levels. But (it is a fact that just as rank discrimination is practiced in the colleges of the State University system of the South as in the public elementary and high schools. For example, in the University system of Georgia the presidents of the Negro units do not get the same salaries as the white presidents of similar units and men having similar experience and training. The Negro professors in the Negro units do not get the same salaries as white professors in white units of the University system.

MAR 15 1941

The Journal holds that our Negro presidents, deans, and professors should get exactly the same salaries as those paid whites who have similar qualifications and are doing similar work, because they are in similar positions.

WE BELIEVE THAT THE BEST WAY TO ACHIEVE PARITY OF PAY IN THE VARIOUS UNITS OF THE SYSTEM IS TO HAVE THE UNIVERSITY BOARD OF REGENTS ESTABLISH A COMPULSORY SALARY SCALE TO BE CARRIED OUT IN EACH AND EVERY UNIT OF THE SYSTEM WITHOUT THE ADMINISTRATORS HAVING ANY OPTION ABOUT THE MATTER. If an administrator appoints a man to a position the fixed salary for that position should be paid him regardless of what unit he is in and what race he belongs to.

SOUTH HAS PROBLEM FROM COURT RULING

Negro Teacher Salaries Must Equal White

MILLIONS ARE NEEDED

Mississippi Faces Question Of $1,950,000 More Each Year—Tennessee Will Not Be Greatly Affected

By The United Press

ATLANTA, Ga., March 16.—Educators Sunday night believed Federal aid would be necessary if Southern states comply soon with the recent Supreme Court ruling that negro teachers in public schools be paid salaries equal to those of white instructors.

Compliance with the ruling would increase the pay of negro teachers. It was estimated the increase in negro salaries would cost 10 state governments in the South more than $10,000,000 annually. Additional costs of the increase would fall upon local school districts.

Other Problems

Officials of state educational systems in the South also are bothered by the possibility that it may be necessary to expend large sums to build, equip and maintain higher institutions of learning to conform to the United States Supreme Court opinion that negroes be furnished equal facilities for training for the professions, such as medicine and law.

The benefit to individual negro teachers would vary, both in states and local districts. It was estimated the individual benefit would exceed $500 in some instances and probably would average $200 a year.

Alabama—$200,000. Will be met from increased revenue from existing taxes.

Arkansas—$675,000. No program.

Florida—$1,250,000. No program.

Georgia—$900,000. No program.

Louisiana — $1,000,000. No program.

Mississippi—$1,950,000. No program.

MAR 17 1941

North Carolina—$1,000,000. Will effect the increase over a period of four years, $250,000 annually.

South Carolina — $2,250,000. No program.

Tennessee Little Affected

Tennessee—B. O. Duggan, Tennessee Commissioner of Education, said in Nashville that the decision would not have much effect in that state since the Tennessee Board of Education based its salary scales on training and experience and made no distinction between white and negro teachers. Local districts in a few counties might be affected.

Virginia—$250,000 for Richmond alone. No program—Each city, town and county must solve its problem of teachers' salaries.

EDUCATORS STUDY PAY OF TEACHERS

Some Believed Federal Aid Will Be Required to Meet Negro Salary Raises

Atlanta, March 16.—(U.P.): Educators tonight believed federal aid would be necessary if Southern states complied soon with the recent supreme court ruling that negro teachers in public schools be paid salaries equal to those of white instructors.

Compliance with the ruling would increase the pay of negro teachers. It was estimated the increase in negro salaries would cost ten state governments in the South more than $10,000,000 annually. Additional costs of the increase would fall upon local school districts.

Officials of state educational systems in the South also are bothered by the posibility that it may be necessary to expend large sums to build, equip and maintain higher institutions of learning to conform to the U. Most Southern state educators would say little publicly on the two problems.

Public school officials from Southern states gathered here this week-end and discussed the problems with representatives of the general education board. Those participating in the meeting would not reveal details or conclusions of the discussions.

Some believed an agreement could be reached with negro teachers to increase their salaries gradually until they equalled those of whites. North Carolina has started such a program.

The benefit to individual negro teachers would vary, both in states and local districts. It was estimated the individual benefit would exceed $500 in some instances and probably would average $200 a year.

Region Lacks Money To Equalize Salaries; But All Is "Rosy" In Tennessee Says Duggan

ATLANTA, March 27—(ANP)—Last week, for the first time in history, city, county and state education boards of 10 southern states, sought ways and means of complying with the recent decision of the U. MAR 28 1941

From reliable sources it was learned that the pay increase would cost state governments more than 10 million dollars annually and that federal aid may be necessary if the ruling is to be complied with, soon. In both state and local districts, it was said the pay increase to colored teachers would vary, but the salaries of some would be up as high as $500. Southern Educators Say Federal Help Is Only Equalization Plan

(From Yesterday's Final Edition)

ATLANTA, April 14—(AP)—Southern educators, facing the problem of equalizing white and Negro teachers' salaries in compliance with a recent Supreme Court ruling, concluded at a meeting here Monday that federal aid was the only solution.

APR 16 1941

School superintendents and secretaries of education associations from 14 Southern states attended and issued the following prepared statement after the meeting:

"The unanimous point of view was a desire to carry out the court ruling, if when, and as the financial resources become available. This problem seems insurmountable in most of these states due to heavy educational loads with maximum financial resources despite above average effort in taxation.

"The passage of Senate Bill 1313 was approved as providing from federal sources the fund necessary to carry out the mandate of the federal courts."

Ralph Ramsey, executive secretary, Georgia Education Association and spokesman for the group, said the problem was to find the revenue with which to pay the same salaries to Negro and white teachers with equal qualifications.

Problem Is Faced

At the same time, Ramsey said, Southern educators already are faced with the problem of inadequate salaries for white teachers, many of whom leave the teaching profession each year for better pay in private business.

In recent Supreme Court decisions, the Fourteenth Amendment was interpreted to mean that states were required to maintain equal school facilities for Negro and white children, and pay equal salaries without regard to color.

To carry out the mandates of the Supreme Court, it has been estimated that an outlay of $25,000,000 would be required in additional teachers' salaries alone, or 80 per cent more than is now being paid to Negro teachers.

If school building facilities are to be equalized educators have estimated that $325,000,000 capital outlay would be necessary.

$50,000,000 Required

In order to make the rulings effective immediately, educators have estimated it would require $50,000,000 annually and eventually, $100,000,000.

Senate Bill 1313 calls for "federal grants-in-aid for the support of public elementary and secondary schools in such amounts as will most effectively equalize educational opportunities."

Federal Funds Needed To Equalize Salaries, Atlanta Session Told

ATLANTA—(AP)—Southern educators asserted Tuesday that the problem of equalizing paychecks of Negro with white school teachers, required by a recent Supreme Court decision, could not be met without federal financial aid.

Educational leaders from 14 Southern states meeting here Monday endorsed a bill before the United States Senate which would provide the necessary funds and declared that financial help from the national government was the only way the ruling could be complied with.

Hampered by limited funds, Southern states are faced with the problem of keeping white teachers, Ralph Ramsey, executive secretary of the Georgia Education Association, and spokesman for the group, declared. Many white teachers leave the profession each year for better jobs in private business, he said.

It would require about $25,000,000 to put the salaries of Negro teachers on par with white, it has been estimated, and if physical facilities be included about $325,000,000 would be needed.

The Supreme Court in its decision held that under the Fourteenth Amendment, states must maintain equal school facilities for Negro and white children and pay equal salaries without regard to color.

APR 15 1941

Approximately $50,000,000 annually is needed to give immediate effect to the decision, educators have estimated, and eventually, $100,000,000.

SOUTH DIVIDED ON EQUAL EDUCATION

These results, the statement says, "are believed to be much more favorable to the Negro child than would have been the case ten years ago, and may be taken as an indication of a favorable trend of opinion on this subject. Meantime in most of the Southern States Negro school facilities have been steadily improving though in general the scales are still weighted heavily against the Negro child."

Equal Pay For Teachers

Educators from practically all of the southern states met in Atlanta recently and discussed possibilities of hiking the pay of Negro school teachers up to the level of the pay for white teachers. This meeting grew out of a recent decision of the Supreme Court that under the fourteenth amendment, states are obligated to furnish educational advantages alike for white and black. This, the court ruled, included the payment of white teachers and Negro teachers alike. This decision of the court is not something to be laughed off. Something may have to be done about it. The educators who met in Atlanta seemed to be of the opinion that the federal government should give assistance in educational work. The southern states are not in position financially, to make such increases in teacher salaries as would be involved. Maybe that will be the answer to it. A subsidy from the federal government for the poorer states.

Equalizing [illegible]achers' Pay

At the conference of state authorities in Atlanta a few days ago the consensus regarding the elimination of southern differentials in pay as between white and Negro teachers was that they could not be eliminated in some states without federal aid.

Theoretically, the idea is illogical, since any amount of money available for teaching purposes, however small, could be divided equally between white and Negro teachers.

But the educational authorities are endeavoring to cut down the differences in pay as it exists with regard to the two groups without tearing up duly established salary schedules and effecting reductions in any teacher's salary.

The salaries of southern teachers are already small enough—in fact the better paid teachers receive stipends that are pitiably, even disgracefully, small.

The various states and local communities could eventually bring about an equalization of salaries by raising the Negro teachers' pay and allowing the white teachers to remain on the old level for a definite period, or by granting to the Negroes a larger share of the salary increases provided by state or local governments, in some cases both. But this would be a slow process and would encourage many of the white teachers to desert the profession and enter more remunerative fields of employment.

But if federal aid can be obtained, the states could move quickly toward the elimination of the differentials and at the same time afford all the teachers an income somewhat more in keeping with their capabilities, responsibilities and personal needs.

Left to its own devices in this respect thus far, North Carolina has already made a good start toward wiping out the differentials existing between the salaries of white and colored teachers. But as in other southern states, all the teachers need appreciably larger salaries than the state is now able to provide. North Carolina and Florida spend a larger percentage of their tax income on education than any other states and the same holds true for the South as a region compared to other regions. But the income of the South is so low that our "best" is not good enough. If the teacher differentials are abolished and other steps taken at an early date to elevate the educational standards of the South to the national level, the federal government may have to join with some of the big foundations in aiding southern education. But the South will not accept such aid unless the school authorities in the various states are allowed to use the money and retain control of the schools.

Southern Educators Term Federal Aid Only Way to Pay Teachers Equally

Atlanta, April 14—(AP)—Southern educators, facing the problem of equalizing white and Negro teachers' salaries in compliance with a recent supreme court ruling, concluded at a meeting here today that federal aid was the only solution.

School superintendents and secretaries of education associations from 14 Southern states attended and issued the following prepared statement after the meeting:

"The unanimous point of view was a desire to carry out the court ruling, if when, as the financial resources become available. This problem seems insurmountable in most of these states due to heavy educational loads with maximum financial resources despite above average effort in taxation.

"The passage of senate bill 1313 was approved as providing from federal sources the fund necessary to carry out the mandate of the federal courts."

Ralph Ramsey, executive secretary, Georgia Education association and spokesman for the group, said the problem was to find the revenue with which to pay the same salaries to Negro and white teachers with equal qualifications.

At the same time. Ramsey said, Southern educators already are faced with the problem of inadequate salaries for white teachers, many of whom leave the teaching profession each year for better pay in private business.

In recent supreme court decisions, the fourteenth amendment was interpreted to mean that states were required to maintain equal school facilities for Negro and white children, and pay equal salaries without regard to color.

To carry out the mandates of the supreme court, it has been estimated that an outlay of $25,000,000 would be required in additional teachers' salaries alone, or 80 per cent more than is now being paid to Negro teachers.

If school building facilities are to be equalized educators have estimated that $325,000,000 capital outlay would be necessary.

In order to make the rulings effective immediately, educators have estimated it would require $50,000,000 annually and eventually, $100,000,000.

Represented at the meeting were Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Kentucky.

Federal Aid For Schools

THE case for federal aid to education, already strong, became impregnable when the Supreme Court reminded the Southern states that they must provide equal school facilities for Negroes and equal pay for Negro teachers.

This in substance is the declaration of Southern educators, meeting in Atlanta. Approving Senate bill 1313, the educational leaders of 14 southern states emphasized these facts: these states already are carrying such a heavy burden for education that the best teachers of both races go into other occupations if and when it is possible; in spite of more than average tax levies for education, the proportionately larger number of the school population places more than the average educational task upon Southern shoulders; 25 million dollars will be needed to equalize salaries, 325 millions for equalization of school plant.

The only debate is over the method by which the Federal Government should render aid. The only opposition justified is to any form of federal assistance which will take from the states, North and South, their local liberty and initiative in conducting their own school affairs.

In other words, the federal grants-in-aid should be apportioned to the states according to their needs, without any compulsion from Washington to follow federal dictation in the public schools of the states. Certain reasonable standards in scholastic program may be required, of course. To go beyond that would be the beginning of undermining the local government in America at a vital spot. President Roosevelt has seemingly manifested his awareness of this important qualification. May he not overlook it, now that the question again comes to decision.

Atlanta Teachers Join In Equal Salary Fight

Advises that Matter Will Be Taken to Court When All Other Means are Exhausted—To Confer With Georgia Officials on April 9 at Paine College.

APR 5 - 1941

ATLANTA, April 3—(ANP)—Teachers of the Fifth congressional district were advised Saturday by M. L. Cousins, of the Georgia department of education colored division, to take the matter of equalization of salaries to the courts only when all other means of effecting educational reforms have been exhausted.

Meeting in a one-day session at Booker T. Washington high school, representatives from the several counties of the district went on record as being ready to "bring pressure in order to secure equality of economic and educational opportunities for all persons regardless of creed or color." Plans were made to seek equality by building up good-will, involving the influence of all organizations and, if necessary, making application to the courts.

APR 5 - 1941

Cousins informed the group that officials of the State educational department and representatives of colored educational groups were to confer at Paine College on April 9 and attempt to work out a plan "best for all of us."

Other recommendations adopted by the conference included a statement urging the procuring for colored youth and adults training in all phases of the national defense program, and a provision calling upon the State to take steps toward establishing means of providing graduate study for colored.

Campaign Will Begin at Meeting Here on May 4.

A campaign for higher state salary schedules for Negro teachers will be advanced in a meeting of Negro educators here May 4.

The drive began in Augusta at the annual convention of the Georgia Teachers' Education Association, which discussed at length a United States supreme court decision that a Norfolk (Va.) salary differential between white and Negro teachers was unconstitutional.

APR 18 1941

The May 4 meeting at Booker T. Washington High school will assemble executive directors of the GTEA, President C. L. Harper said, and lead to conferences with state school officials.

"We realize that all school salaries have been a matter of economics in recent years in Georgia," Harper said, "but feel that certainly there should be a beginning toward higher salaries for Negroes when the next school term opens."

The state differential is $80 top for white teachers and $60 top for Negro teachers, both of whom must have had four years' college training.

Harper said the GETA would seek "the start of increases" by conferences with state officials and added "but if we can't get it in that way, it will be taken to the courts."

PROTESTS POOR PAY OF NEGRO TEACHERS

Editor Constitution: At the Georgia State Teachers' conference (colored) which will meet in Augusta soon, the Negro teachers will have as their main issue—equalization of salaries.

The Negro teacher of today realizes he is working at a starving wage and is hoping the state of Georgia will do something about it. It seems that the Negro teacher must appeal to the public to ask for the state legislators to do something.

We really cannot live on the salaries we get now—$25 to $60 per month—nine months' work, and must live three months without salary at all. It is impossible to think a teacher can save enough out of nine months at $25 to $60 to live three additional months without pay. We need a state senate and federal government investigation into monies sent down here by both agencies into the local systems, for even some of this money designated for teachers' salaries does not ever reach the teachers' hands.

'Tis bad enough for the Negro teachers to get such low salaries; then to have part of this misused by local officials with the knowledge of some officials who are fearful to do anything about it or at least are indifferent about it. This is misuse of both state and federal funds.

Negro School Teachers Ask For More Pay

APR 12 1941

AUGUSTA, [AP] — Negro educators turned Friday to an effort to improve their salary scale.

E. J. Cranberry, of Albany, submitted a report showing the state at present pays $25 to $40 a month toward Negro salaries for seven months.

About 5,000 delegates were on hand for the sessions.

President James L. Rant of Darien said efforts had been concentrated on defense training work for Negroes. He urged Negroes to use their franchise intelligently.

"We must teach the young men and young women of our race that there's power in the ballot," he said.

The address last night of Dr. Charlotte H. Brown of Sedalia, N. C., opened the convention.

Harper Chosen GTEA Leader

APR 21 1941

Definite plans leading to settlement of the teachers' salary equalization issue in Georgia were outlined Saturday morning as C. L. Harper, of Atlanta, newly elected president of the Georgia Teachers and Educational Association, presided over the first executive committee since his election.

The committee meeting held at Paine College marked the official close of the 21st session, one of the stormiest in the history of the association.

APR 21 1941

Mr. Harper assured his council that he plans to move forward on the 10 point platform upon which he won the presidency. He announced that a special meeting is to be held at Washington high school on May 4.

SALARY ISSUE

It will be at this meeting, it was explained, when definite strategy will be planned for the campaign ahead in connection with not only the salary issue, but the problems of school busses and defense courses in Negro schools.

The committee members were asked to bring in definite proposals to be acted upon.

The membership of the new board was announced as follows: B. T. Harvey, C. W. Duval, Mrs E. B. Jackson, whose term expires in 1943; E. J. Granberry, B. F. Hubert and Mrs. Cora B. Finley, whose terms expires in 1945; and C. N. Cornell, P. H. Stone, and Alva Taber, whose terms expires in 1947.

Principal Harper was swept into office by a wide majority following a spirited campaign Friday. More than 100 Atlanta teachers from various schools throughout the city appeared on the scene to push the winner's candidacy.

GORDON POOR SECOND

Running a poor second was Asa Gordon of Georgia State College, Savannah. Gordon had been fighting an uphill battle against charges that he was really trying to continue the long reign of the Hubert machine over the association.

APR 21 1941

E. J. Granberry of Albany and L. S. Molette of Griffin were the candidates in the race.

I. E. Washington principal of the G. T. Walker school, Augusta and president of the Richmond County Teachers Association won out over Homer Edwards of Thomson for the vice presidency.

Paul Blackwell of Elberton was the victor in a close three-way race for the secretaryship of the organization. He won out over Mrs. Marine Bacote of McCrea and Mrs. Ophelia McIver of Savannah.

Dean Aaron Brown of Fort Valley State College was elected treasurer from a field of five. Others who were candidates were: J. W. Holley, Albany; J. A. Colston, Macon; James Dickerson, Vidalia, and J. H. Gadsden, Savannah.

APR 21 1941

THREE TO BOARD

Three new members of the executive committee were elected from a candidacy list of nine. They were Alva Tabor, C. N. Cornell and P. H. Stone.

Retiring officers of the association pledged full support to the new officers during the executive committee meeting Saturday morning. James L. Grant, retiring president, who lost in the race for a membership on the committee was voted in as an ex-officer member of the committee .

NEW OFFICIALS PLAN ACTION ON SALARY PARITY

APR 26 1941

By S. GRACE BRADLEY

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 24—The equalization of salaries for teachers in Georgia loomed as an important feature of the two-day annual meeting of the Georgia State Teachers and Educational Association here last week-end.

Because the committee failed to make a report as scheduled by James L. Grant, former president of the Association, a heated discussion was engaged in, leading to a motion to the effect that the new administration immediately begin work on definite plans to obtain something definite from officials as to the equalization of salaries.

The opening session on Thursday evening consisted of welcome addresses by representatives of civic and religious organizations. Prominent among the welcomes was the brief address of Mayor James A. Woodall, who pledged his support in seeing to it that Augusta gets a high school for Negroes.

The rincipal address was delivered by Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, who eloquently plead to the large and appreciative audience to do all in their power for the development of those whose lives they are molding each day. She let fall many vital points, which yet linger in the minds of the large gathering at the Charles T. Walker school, where the meetings were held.

Other speakers during the two-day session were: William Shell, L. M. Lester and R. L. Cousins of the Department of Negro Education; Dr. J. C. Dixon, vice-chancellor of the University of Georgia; W. A. Robinson, Atlanta; J. H. Burgess, president of the South Carolina Teachers' Association; Miss Maenell Dixon, Miss Annie Hall and J. W. Dobbs.

Salary Problems Foremost as Negro Teachers Meet

(Stories by Douglass Hall and others inside).

Salary problems were in the fore front of the program of the Georgia Teachers and Education Association, representing the 10,000 Negro teachers of the state, as the business session opened Friday morning. The convention, however, forecast no action.

A committee headed by E. J. Granberry, of Albany, delayed submitting a report. On it was I. E. Washington, principal of Charles T. Walker School, of Augusta.

The state allows from $25 to $40 a month for the salary of a Negro teacher for seven months and few school districts supplement that.

"There will be no statement at present", Granberry said after his committee had held a meeting

"We have decided to withhold things for a time because of opposing influences."

Dr. J. C. Dixon, vice-chancellor of the University of Georgia, made the principal address of the morning.

"It is more necessary than ever before that all teachers make themselves points of contact from which students may learn the real things that count in making a true democracy.

"If the teacher is a communist or what not the child will be too."

Boost of Negro Teachers' Pay Being Sought

Atlanta, Feb. 7—(AP)—Georgia school officials soon may confront another problem of finances, that of bringing the pay scale for approximately 7,000 Negro teachers in line with the rates for white teachers.

Last October, the United States supreme court in effect held that it is unconstitutional to fix salaries of Negro teachers in public schools, because of race or color, at a lower rate than that paid white teachers.

Georgia has two rates of pay. The scale for white teachers ranges from a minimum of $40 a month to a maximum of $80 from state funds. (Salaries may be supplemented by local school authorities as desired.) Negro teachers receive their pay on a scale from $25 to $60.

Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, said the qualifications of a Negro teacher in the $25 bracket were the same as those for a white teacher in the $40 bracket, and the same ratio applied in the higher salaries.

More of the 7,000 Negroes are in the $25 bracket, however, than there are of the 15,000 whites in the $40 bracket, he explained. Adjustment of the Negro scale upward to equal the white scale would cost an estimated $105,000 a month or more.

Doctor Collins said the question had not yet been raised in his department and no action taken regarding equalizing white and Negro salaries as yet.

Obligation of Georgia Teachers

FEB 15 1941

GEORGIA TEACHERS will convene in their annual meeting in Augusta April 9-11 and other members of the group are wondering what they will do about the fight for equal salaries.

All around the South's largest state, teachers have gone or are going to bat and winning their fight for equal pay insofar as preparation figures. Last week, the Louisville (Ky.) school board agreed to equalize the salaries of all Negro and white teachers starting September, 1941, following an admirable fight by NAACP attorneys. Also last week in Florida, after a race principal filed suit for equal pay, the attorney for the school board involved almost readily admitted that the Florida law DOES require and guarantee equal pay for teachers. Decisions favorable to teacher clients have been rendered in Virginia and Maryland. Alabama teachers are fast laying plans for battle. Still the Georgia teachers' organization sleeps away the time as others go ahead and get what they want.

Surely the instructors of the future generations are not afraid to ask for that which is rightly theirs. If teachers in other parts of the South can get their rights, Georgians ought to be able to do likewise. It is clearly discriminatory and unconstitutional to pay colored teachers less than whites in Georgia as in other Southern states and cities. Teachers are obligated to fight for salary equality and for equalization in other things due Negroes in general. In their positions of leadership, they must not fail their followers. They must qualify for the ballot and teach the masses to qualify and use that instrument of democracy to get the rights that justly belong to the group.

It is hoped that the Augusta teachers' meeting will see born a new spirit and determination of leadership to fight for equalization of salaries. In the wake of their victory, other victories against discrimination and inequality among the endeavors of the race in general must come.

12 Million U. S. Fund for State Schools Seen

M. D. Collins Hopeful Congress Will Supply Huge Outlay.

State Superintendent of Schools M. D. Collins returned from Washington yesterday with hopes that legislation providing $12,678,120 additional for Georgia school teachers' salaries would be enacted by congress.

He appeared before a senate committee to advocate the measure and said he considered its chances of enactment by the senate were "good." He said he understood, however, that more opposition had been manifested in the house.

The legislation, sponsored by Senators Thomas, of Utah, and Harrison, of Mississippi, would boost the average salary paid Georgia teachers from $716 to $1,283, Collins said.

Equalization.

The school superintendent described the measure as being somewhat similar to Georgia's school equalization fund in that it proposes to help equalize educational opportunities in all the states. A federal appropriation of $300,000,000 annually is proposed.

Georgia would get more than $12,000,000, to be used exclusively for teachers' salaries, without any strings attached, Collins said. No federal control over educational policy is envisioned, he added, saying that the government's only interest would be to see that the money was used for the purpose for which it was intended.

At present Georgia spends about $15,500,000 a year for salaries of school teachers and administrative officials. Of this, $11,500,000 is provided by the state under the seven-month school law.

The 10,700 white elementary teachers in the state earn an average of $737.56 a year; the 4,954 white high school teachers, $1,192.12; the 5,836 Negro elementary teachers, $346.14, and the 870 Negro high school teachers, $728.47.

Pay Raise Sought.

Negro teachers, meeting at Augusta recently, adopted a resolution favoring a pay scale equal to that of white teachers, and a meeting to discuss means of achieving this goal will be held this weekend. The present salary scale set up by the State Board of Education runs from $40 to $80 a month for white teachers and from $25 to $60 a month for Negroes.

Dr. Collins was accompanied to Washington by Ralph Ramsey, secretary of the Georgia Education Association; Jere Wells, superintendent of Fulton county schools, and Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta city schools.

FULTON SURVEY TO SEEK UNIFIED SALARY SCALE

Auditor to Study Recommendations For Pay Increases

In compliance with a recommendation of the March-April grand jury, the Fulton County Commission Thursday had authorized a "salary survey" of the Fulton County pay roll, looking towards a unified salary scale for the same type of work in the various departments of the county government.

A study of the pay roll and recommendations will be made by the county auditor, while the commissioners consider the advisability of employing a personnel expert temporarily.

Chairman Troy Chastain said he has been "swamped with complaints" by county employes who claim they have not been treated fairly and pointed out that some veteran employes have received no raises at all, while newer employes had been granted increases.

Jury's Critisicm

The last grand jury, urging further study of the matter by the new grand jury, said that in many instances, Fulton wages and salaries are double those paid by DeKalb County for similar services, and added that the county has no definite wage scale. Other grand juries had criticized the practice of employment and salary fixing on a patronage and political basis.

Ordinary Thomas H. Jeffries advised the board members that, in response to their request in December, he had furnished his pay roll recommendations for 1941 and had repeated these recommendations since, but that these had been ignored. He pointed out that there is an expert clerk in his office who has been on the pay roll 10 years without a salary increase, although many requests have been filed.

Only recently the commissioners secretly hiked the sheriff's pay roll $1,050 per month, without recording the action on the board's minutes. Tuesday they voted to amend the minutes of April 2 to show the legal ratification.

King Reinstated

A. C. King, discharged county employe at the Negro Boys' Industrial Farm, was reinstated Thursday, upon a delayed recommendation of the March-April grand jury. The board acted upon a letter from B. S. Barker, former grand jury secretary.

The letter said the grand jury had authorized a special resolution of recommendation, but that in the press of other business, he, as secretary, had failed to draw and present the resolution before the grand jury was discharged Friday.

King was discharged along with Arthur Atkinson, another employe at the farm, after a fight that resulted in the indictment of Atkinson on a charge of assault with intent to murder King.

Although Atkinson was not eligible for pension, the county commissioners subsequently voted to pay him $50 per month for life, but later rescinded their action. Atkinson had previously been pardoned from a voluntary manslaughter sentence.

Serious Shortage of Teachers For Georgia Schools Reported

Assistant State Superintendent of Schools J. I. Allman said yesterday he had received reports of a serious shortage of teachers for Georgia's public schools.

The superintendent of the Colquitt county schools, he said, had written him that 40 per cent of the county teachers had resigned and that more were resigning every day. The sueprintendent said that as a result he did not know whether county schools could open this fall.

Allman, saying he had received similar reports from teacher employment agencies and other sources, asserted he mailed questionnaires yesterday to all local school officials to determine if sufficient teachers would be available this year to operate the schools.

To assure enough teachers for Georgia's public schools, Allman said he thought the state's wage scale would have to be raised. At present it ranges from $40 to $70 a month for white teachers and $30 to $60 for Negroes. Allman said all adjoining states pay a higher wage.

Not only are other states drawing away Georgia teachers, Allman said, but defense activities and improved business conditions have opened up opportunities for more profitable employment, both with the federal government and private industry.

Reports of the teacher shortage developed even in the face of the recent announcement by the state school board that it was reducing the number of state-supported teachers this year by 650.

25 Per Cent Boost Urged for Teachers

Replacement of 1,500 Who Have Resigned Viewed Gravely by Georgia Superintendents.

Georgia's school superintendents urged a 25 per cent wage boost here yesterday for their hired help—some 23,000 teachers.

In plugging for a salary raise for policy for the entire educational their employes, the superintend- system.
ents sai dit was necessary "to stabilize what threatens to be a very serious situation in teacher supply." More than 1,500 Georgia teachers have resigned in recent months to accept other paying jobs.

Rising living costs also were cited in a resolution adopted at the final session of their annual convention as an imperative reason for increasing the state teachers' salary scale, which ranges from $40 to $80 a month for whites and from $25 to $60 a month for Negroes.

The recommendation included a suggestion that the raise apply only to teachers with certificates for two years' college work in order to encourage "the few remaining teachers" who lack this to secure "at least that minimum of training."

Attorney General Ellis Arnall told the association teachers should be paid on a parity with other state employes rather than "on a parity with porters and janitors."

The attorney general also maintained that a workable democracy must provide some security for faithful teachers in their old age as well as provide a sound fiscal

Special Conference With State Officials Set For Wednesday

APR 8 - 1941

Believed By Some A Move To Keep Teachers From Going To Court For A Decision

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(SNS)—The equalization of teachers' salaries in Georgia definitely crystalized into the chief issue before the annual session of the Georgia State Teachers Association scheduled to open here Thursday, when it was announced Monday night that a special meeting has been called by state officials with representatives of the Georgia Association of Negro Colleges and Secondary Schools, the teachers' association and the Georgia Parent-Teachers Association.

The hastily called conference, said to have been arranged by State Superintendent of Schools M. D. Collins, was being interpreted by members of the teachers' association as a move to forestall any abortive action of the association to resort to the courts in deciding the equalization issue in Georgia.

TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

APR 8 - 1941

The conference is to be held Wednesday evening just a few hours before the association is sheduled to open its agenda of business Friday morning. It was at the Thursday morning session which is to get underway at nine o'clock when the issue of equal teachers' pay was to be raised.

Called to meet with the state officials were B. T. Harvey of Morehouse College and J. W. Holley of Georgia Normal, Albany, representing the Georgia Association of Negro Colleges and Secondary School: James L. Grast of Darien, president of the teachers asscciation and E. J. Granberry of the Georgia Normal, Albany representing the Georgia State Teachers Association; and Mrs. Mattie Reese of Albany, president of the Parent-Teachers Associati is to represent that orga izat

Meeting with this co mposi educational committee will b Supt. Collins, Eexecutive Secretary Ramsey of the Georgia Educational Association, white teachers' organization; E. D. Almand, state comptroller; R. L. Cousins, supervisor of Negro Schools and I. H. Lester, Mr. Counsins' assistant.

It was explained that it is this group of state officials and not the Georgia General Assembly which fixes the wide differentials in the salaries of Georgia's white and Negro teachers. The legislature merely appropriates a fixed sum for education and the expenditure of this money is left entirely in the hands of these officials.

The findings of this Wednesday night conference are to be carried before the main body of the teachers' association Friday morning to be acted up, it was said.

Ironically the teachers in choosing Augusta for their annual meeting, selected the city which can boast the widest differentials in teachers' salaries and educational opportunities in the state.

Though the city provides a junior college and an academy for its white children, the best that can be done for its hundreds of Negro children are subjects only up to the tenth grade.

MINISTERS ENDORSE PAY FIGHT

MAY 3 1941

Savannah News Journal
Savannah, Ga.

ATLANTA, Ga.—(SNS)—Atlanta's Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance Tuesday officially went on record as endorsing the teachers.' equalization effort that is being launched here.

A full quorum of the ministers was on hand to welcome and hear Principal Charles L. Harper, of Booker T. Washington High School and president of the Georgia State Teachers' Association.

Presented to the alliance by its president, the Rev. C. A. Talbert, Principal Harper reviewed the teachers' salary fight in Atlanta and Gerogia.

MAY 3 1941

The ministers pledged cooperation in the fight and said they would make a financial contribution to the effort soon.

Principal Harper was praised by Rev. Mr. Talbert as one of the leading citizens of Atlanta and the state. His unselfish struggle for equalization coming near his retirement age was praised by the Rev. H. J. C. Bowden.

State School Board Would Hike Salaries

Local Boards Asked to Match State Funds

The State School Board Wednesday provided for the raising of salaries of Negro and white schools principals, if local school boards, match the state fund.

In schools having a teaching staff of from five to 20, the principal's basic salary would be supplemented $2.50 a month per white teacher and $2 per month a Negro teacher, conditioned on the matching by local units.

The press was denied a sample allocation to the various counties and cities of the $3,500,00 state equalization fund submitted to the board.

The Board's budget calls for the reduction of 650 in the number of teachers now employed. About 23,000 teachers were employed in the last school term.

The board agreed to pay teachers' salaries for nine months provided local schools were kept open that long. At present the state only guarantees payment of teacher salaries for seven months.

The Finance Committee recommended expenditure of $1,000,000 for the transportation of pupils and a continuation of the $750,000 allotment for library books and textbooks.

TALMADGE VETOES SALARY INCREASES

Overrules Request to Hold Teachers—Board Strikes 23 Undesirable Books

ATLANTA, Sept. 10 (AP).—A proposal to increase salaries of Georgia teachers was sidetracked today, but the state board of education approved a committee recommendation that twenty-three books be stricken from the state's library list.

Mrs. S. C. Patterson, of Homerville, chairman of a special committee, said the books present undesired teachings, such as that the Bible is a myth, that men and monkeys are of common descent, that the south discriminates against the Negroes and that the democratic form of government is not the best.

An appeal from the Eastman city board of education that teachers' salaries be raised to check further resignations was ruled out of order by Gov. Eugene Talmadge. He said such a request from "one special group" could not be considered, adding the board has to deal with the state as a whole.

Since July 1, nearly 1,500 Georgia teachers have resigned. Assistant State School Superintendent J. I. Allman recently said he believed the state's salary scale of $40-$80 a month for white teachers and $25-$60 a month for Negroes would have to be raised if Georgia were to retain its best teachers.

Georgia's Underpaid Teachers Going Into Defense Positions

ATLANTA, Sept. 25—(ANP)—A shortage of teachers, both white and colored, is being noted in Georgia's educational staff's setup. The reason for this shortage is held to be the result of Georgia's teachers being integrated into higher salaried defense positions. Negro and white teachers in the state have deplored the low salaries paid in return for their work in the schools of Georgia, and especially Negro teachers, who are trying to effect an equalization of salaries on par with those of white teachers.

The state board of education's schedule of payments shows marked difference in pay for white and Negro teachers. For example, a white teacher holding a general elementary certificate based on one year of college work and 49 months or more of teaching experience receives a state salary of $60 a month to that of $40 a month for Negro teachers who have the same qualifications and experience. Professional high school or elementary certificates based on three years of college work give whites $70 a month and Negroes, $52.50. Likewise, for four years college work, life professional certificates bring a $20 difference between salaries of white and colored teachers—$80 for the former and $60 for the latter.

GENE OPPOSES PARITY

Recently the federal court ruled that salaries for both white and colored teachers should be on an equal plane. However, more recently, Georgia's Gov. Talmadge said that any measure for the equalization and raise of salaries would be vigorously opposed by him.

Feeling that fair payment for their qualifications and experiences is not being given, teachers of both races are deserting the system for the new fields being opened up by the national defense program which will pay them according to their length of experience and capability in handling positions taken over.

Included among the latest projects announced are a recreation building at Columbia, S. C., to cost $25,653; a venereal disease clinic at Columbia, S. C., to cost $34,200; a health clinic at Hinesville, Ga., $13,390; an elementary school at Moss Point, Miss., $30,000; and an addition to a high school at Newport News, Va., $119,000. Funds for the developments are obtained from a Congressional appropriation of $150,000,000 for the Defense Public Worksp rogram.

Discharge Of Prof. Gordon Is Deplored

NOV 30 1941

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(S N S)—Several articles and editorials advocating equalization of salaries, allegedly written by Prof. A. H. Gordon and published in the Savannah Journal, were responsible for the dismissal of the educator from his post at Georgia State College here, it was learned Saturday from a reliable source.

Persons high in the alumni association of the state college were reported to have made a thorough investigation. They were said to have learned that Prof. Gordon was dismissed by Chancellor S. V. Sanford even though Prof. B. F. Hubert, president of Georgia State, recommended that the educator be retained as a member of the faculty.

NOV 30 1941

SALARY ISSUE RAISED

From another reliable source is was learned that responsible members of the alumni received a letter from Sanford Beaver, white, chairman of the Board of Regents, in which the chairman is alleged to have said:

"Prof. Gordon was not re-elected to his position at Georgia State College for the reason that he had written one or more articles expressing dissatisfaction over the fact that he and others were not receiving the same salaries that were being paid to white professors for similar work."

Chancellor Sanford is said to have taken the position that Prof. Gordon knew when he was elected what the salary was and that he did not have to accept the position unless he so desired.

NOV 30 1941

The Chancellor also took the stand, it was learned, that Prof. Gordon had no right to object publicly to the compensation after accepting the eaching position.

INJURES MORALE

"The attitude taken by Prof. Gordon seemed calculated to injure the faculty morale of our fine Savannah unit, with the result that the Chancellor thought it would be more appropriate for Prof. Gordon to wage his fight for equal salaries from the outside, rather than from the inside of the University System," Chairman Beaver was reported to have said in his letter to two alumni members.

NOV 30 1941

Chairman Beaver, it was learned, also said Prof. Gordon wrote another article on equal salaries after he had been requested not to do so.

Members of the alumni called the dismissal of Prof. Gordon "highly irregular."

The first editorial appearing in the Savannah Journal which is reported to have been "objectionable" to the Board of Regents, took the position that white people in South show that they have no real respect for Negroes in that they generally refuse to give them such titles as 'Mr.', 'Mrs.', and 'Miss".

TOLD TO STOP WRITING

After this editorial appeared in the paper, the Chancellor is reported to have asked Prof. Gordon to refrain from that type of writing.

Prof. Gordon, who was editor of the paper, is reported to have resigned his editorial position at that time.

He denies that editorials appearing in later issues of the paper were authored by him. These editorials criticized the financial support of the Negro units by the regents and continued to discuss equalization of salaries.

Alumni members are satisfied that Governor Talmadge was not responsible for Prof. Gordon's dismissal. This, they feel, will not help Prof. Gordons case in any way, in as much as the Board of Regents recently were given power to rehire all professors of the University System who lost their jobs following a rigid campaign made by the Governor.

SHOULD BE RE-EMPLOYED

Opinion of the alumni, it is understood, is that the reinstatement of Prof. Gordon "would be as necessary as the reemployment of any of the other discharged professors if the Chancellor and Regents are to show that they are really in earnest in correcting irregularities."

Several members of the alumni said that they had very good reason to know and believe "that the special committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools commissioned to investigate irregularities in the University System would consider the case of Prof. Gordon very pertinent."

Louisville Teachers To Get Equal Salaries

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(SNS)—The local school board in an answer filed in the federal court here this week, agreed to equalize the salaries of all Negro and white teachers starting September, 1941.

The answer was filed as a result of the complaint of Miss Valla Dudley Arrington, a Negro school teacher, who had asked the court for a declaratory judgment and an injunction restraining the payment of less salary to Negro teachers and principals than to whites in Louisville solely because of race or color. At present there is a fifteen percent differential between the salaries paid to white and Negro teachers. Miss Arrington was represented by Prentice R. Thomas, local NAACP attorney. LOUISVILLE TEACHERS SALARY CASE TO BE HEARD IN FALL

Louisville, Ky.

Judge Shackleford Miller, Jr., of the U. S. District Court for the Western District of Kentucky, Thursday filed a memorandum on the Louisville teachers' salary case setting trial for the case during the October term of the court.

The case had not been brought to trial previously due to the action of the Louisville Board of Education last spring in passing a resolution to abolish the differential in white and colored teachers' salaries for the coming school year. It was the contention of NAACP attorneys handling the case for the teachers that a court decision should be handed down permanently restraining this or any future school board from going back to the old unequal pay scale.

DEFENSE TO DATE

When the Louisville (Ky.) school board last week agreed to equalize the salaries of all Negro and white teachers starting September, 1941, another victory was chalked up by the N.A.A.C.P. for the principle of equal rights.

The attorneys for the N.A.A.C.P. were Messrs. Prentice Thomas of Louisville and Thurgood Marshall, special counsel from the national office.

JAN 25 1941

Behind them was intelligent, determined organization fortified by the dollars and cents of militant Negroes and the experience of 31 years of fighting for equality.

This victory should inspire all Negroes with renewed determination to wipe out educational, social, political and economic inequalities in every part of the country through intelligent, courageous and persistent attack.

We have not begun to do what we could do if we all made it a point to help the N.A.A.C.P. in these battles for equality by investing a dollar in a year's membership.

As the colored teachers of Louisville, Ky., have won salary equality with white teachers, so can the colored teachers of Dallas, Birmingham, Vicksburg, Memphis, Atlanta, Charlotte, Durham, Nashville, Charleston and Oklahoma City win salary equality.

To pay colored teachers less than white teachers for the same work is clearly discriminatory and thus unconstitutional.

To fight for salary equality is thus not only necessary but obligatory for any one claiming to believe in the American form of government.

But how inconsistent it is to fight for equality of salaries and not fight for equality of transportation facilities, of library facilities, of recreational facilities, of public accommodation, of union membership, of opportunity to work, of the right to associate with and to marry whomever one pleases.

JAN 25 1941

American Negroes must decide to end the contradiction in their tactics of fighting for one kind of equality while acquiescing in certain inequalities.

It is as certain as anything is certain that unless Negroes organize and consistently support, financially and spiritually, a determined and prolonged fight against EVERY form of segregation and discrimination based on color or so-called race, they can never attain full citizenship.

White people, especially Southerners, mention it accusingly whenever Negroes demand the same rights and privileges as other citizens.

Colored people occupying positions of leadership are much too prone to avoid mention of it or to say that Negroes do not want it.

This pussyfooting must stop once and for all time.

Whatever certain leaders may tell white audiences to make them feel good, the majority of intelligent Negroes in the United Staes want exactly the same opportunities, rights and privileges that white citizens possess.

This necessarily includes the right to work where you please, to frequent all public places, to associate with anyone you choose, to pursue whatever studies you wish, to travel with white passengers, to put up at any hotel you choose, and to marry anyone who captures your fancy, regardless of color, race, religion, nationality or ancestry.

The victories of the N.A.A.C.P. in Maryland, in Virginia, in Missouri and in Kentucky in the salary equality cases are an indication of the possibilities if we keep on.

We must adopt the slogan of the late Marshall Foch, "The Attack, always The Attack!"

If we do not fight for what we want, we do not deserve it.

Louisville Votes Equal Salaries For Teachers

MAY 24 1941

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(ANP)—The final chapter was written in the Louisville teachers' dramatic legal battle for elimination of salary differences, when the board of education voted Friday to increase its 1941-1942 payments by $205,000.

Elimination of the wage differential between Negro and white teachers was voted by the board last December and confirmed at the May meeting. Passage of the measure for appropriation of $65,000 necessary to account for the difference merely marked the concluding step.

Thus ends a campaign inaugurated nearly three years ago by the Teachers' Equalization committee and the Louisville chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to erase the differential.

On behalf of herself and 269 Negro teachers in the system, Mrs. Valla Dudley Abbington filed suit in federal court last December against the board, asking that the existing 15 per cent differential in salaries be eliminated.

Despite verbal promises of the board on several occasions to meet these adjustment demands, Prentice Thomas, attorney for the Negro teachers, deemed it advisable to obtain a court decree. To that end, the suit which is pending is set for hearing May 27.

The recently organized Louisville Federation of Teachers had as one of its projects the erasing of sex and race differentials in teachers' salaries.

New Orleans Teachers Plan Action To Force Equalization Of Pay

MAR 22 1941

NEW ORLEANS La.—A group of teachers here who are greatly interested in equalizing the salaries paid to Negro and white teachers, are prepared to initiate a test case in the courts.

With this idea in mind, the local group invited Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in New York to confer with them over the weekend, March 15—16, and advise on legal procedure to obtain their objective.

The New Orleans teachers, in planning their action considered the successful legal action of the N.A.A.C.P. in Maryland and Virginia, and the legal case which has started already in the State of Florida. They bear in mind, also, the fact that the legislature of South Carolina has agreed to consider the equalization of teachers' salaries; and that the legislature of Alabama recently passed a bill equalizing minimum salaries in the state. From this time forward both Negro and white teachers will start at the same minimums in Alabama.

The New Orleans teachers also have studied the recent decision of the Louisville, Ky., school board to equalize salaries in that city.

DISCRIMINATION IN TEACHER'S PAY ASSAILED IN SUIT

Same Salaries for Negro Instructors as White Is Sought

Suit asking a judgment declaring the alleged practice of the Orleans parish school board of paying Negro teachers and principals salaries uniformly lower than those paid white teachers and principals a violation of the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution was filed Monday in federal district court by Joseph McKelpin, Negro teacher at F. P. Ricaud school.

JUN 1941

Named as defendants in the suit, which also asks a permanent injunction restraining continuance of the alleged discriminatory salary schedule, were the Orleans parish school board and Nicholas Bauer, superintendent of the parish schools.

McKelpin, who filed the suit "individually and on behalf of others similarly situated," asserted that his own salary is $1010 per year, in contrast with $1140 paid white teachers of the same qualifications.

He alleged that his salary is paid from the current school funds and that because of the method of paying he is denied an equal participation in the benefits of the portion of his taxes which go into the school fund.

A petition, signed by Negro teachers of the parish, requesting that the alleged discriminatory salary schedule be abolished, was presented the school board on March 9, and at the board's next regular meeting on June 13 the request was denied, the suit averred.

JUN 1941

Asked for a statement regarding the suit, Superintendent Bauer said: "I have no comment to make but, of course, the matter will have to be considered very carefully by the school board."

Times-Picayune
New Orleans, La.

Teacher Salary Suit

Some of the difficulties which the salary equalization suit of a New Orleans Negro school teacher, if successful, would bring upon the local school board, and eventually upon the school system of the whole South, are easily discernible. It would mean, obviously, that large amounts of new revenue would have to be raised to pay the salaries of the Negro teachers or the salaries, and perhaps the qualifications of the main body of teachers would have to be reduced.

JUN 20 1941

A school board member is quoted as estimating that $275,000 a year would be needed to raise the level of Negro teachers' salaries to that of the white teachers. Over the state the difference between the salary levels greatly exceeds that in New Orleans and statistics on the subject indicate that equalization for all the parishes would require between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 a year. School authorities are hardly optimistic over the chances they would have to raise that amount of additional revenue—and especially for a purpose which they do not believe would be a blessing in every respect to the educational system.

One of the goals of state educators is to raise somewhat the Negro teachers' salaries in the parishes where they are unreasonably low, but that plan hardly embraces Orleans where the average pay of the colored teaching force averages considerably higher than the average of white teachers over the rest of the state. Thus any pay equalization in Louisiana is likely to have its complications.

The issue seems to have been transplanted to Louisiana from other areas where Negro organizations have invoked the Fourteenth Amendment in the pay equality drive. It derives its importance from the fact that in recent cases the federal courts have seen much more than appears to the eye in the amendment's requirement that a state must afford all citizens the "equal protection of the law." To have it ruled now that the amendment governs the educational system may raise problems which would better find solution by joint consideration of the Southern states as a group, rather than by the states and cities individually.

Plagued by the low average income of the people, the South has struggled rather successfully to keep at least a part of its educational system on a par with the systems elsewhere. It has not been willing to have its talent and potential leadership handicapped by lack of educational opportunity or lured away by greater opportunity elsewhere. It may become a common Southern problem now to devise ways and policies that will protect standards and maintain progress in the face of the upsetting effect any edict to equalize would have on the educational economy.

Teachers' Pay Bill Menaces Md. Budget

MAR 1 - 1941

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—Administration legislation to equalize white and colored school teachers' salaries started through the General Assembly today, plainly labeled: "explosives—do not touch."

Governor O'Conor's carefully-balanced $106,664,000 biennial budget depends on successful passage of the three bills, sponsored in the Senate by President Arthur Brice, (Democrat), Kentucky, and leaders circulated word they were not to be tampered with.

Under the equilization program, a total of $950,000 would be raisd during the next two years—enough to adjust teachers' salaries and pay Baltimore City $125,000 annually as a rebate for revenue lost with repeal of the old securities tax.

Tax Boosts Planned

Keystone of the plan—embodied in two of th three bills brought in today—are new special taxes on half-mile race tracks and an increase of up to three cents in county tax rats for school purposes.

Added to the revenue thus realized would be funds from an anticipated xcess in liquor taxes and reversion of $90,000 fro mthe State Board of Education's present budget.

MAR 1 - 1941

The proposed race-track tax would levy one per cent on the first $500,000 wagered at each half-mile track, two per cent on the next $500,000, and three per cent on total wagers over $1,000,000. In addition, the statute levies an additional 15 per cent tax on each track's net revenue.

Gov. O'Conor said he planned to make the pay adjustment effective January 1, 1942.

Pending evidence of legislative reaction to the proposed new taxes, O'Conor has held up introduction of his supplementary budget, now virtually complete. Informed sources expected the added appropriations to "come downstairs" from the executive offices early next week.

MAR 1 - 1941

Passage of the budget would break a log-jam of appropriations bills and generally speed up action in both houses. Biggest bugaboo to administration whips is the fear of time to be lost in debate over a number of controversial measures backed up in committee files.

Bill Aimed at Elkton

Presaging a new legislative assault on Elkton's "quick-marriage" proclivities, Senator Wilmer Fell Davis, Caroline County Republican, introduced legislation to strengthen the existing "48-hour delay" law. His bill would make it a felony for a physician knowingly to falsify a certificate of pregnancy to expedite issuance of a marriage license at Elkton.

The proposal followed disclosure that the Cecil County Circuit Court had waived the legal delay of 48 hours between application and issuance of marriage licenses in 30 per cent of the applications filed last year.

Many of these waivers were granted on certificates of pregnancy issued by physicians.

Governor Signs Equal Salary Bill

MAY 3 1941

ANNAPOLIS. — In the presence of five pioneers in the 25-year fight to obtain equal salaries for Maryland teachers, Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor on Monday signed Senate Bill 429, which will eliminate the dual salary scale and add over $400,000 yearly to the income of Maryland's colored teachers.

The five pioneers, Dr. George B. Murphy, William McAbee, H. Grafton Browne, John H. Woodhous, and Jesse L. Nicholas, formed the nucleus of a delegation of civic, educational and political figures who were on hand to witness the final step in making the measure a State law.

Expresses Pleasure

Before passing the document, which will become effective as of January, 1942, to Arthur E. Brice, president of the Senate, and Thomas E. Conlon, speaker of the House of Delegates, for their signatures, the governor commented:

MAY 3 1941

"I am quite certain President Brice and Speaker Conlon share with me the extreme pleasure and satisfaction in signing this bill because it represents a marked and distinct step forward in the educational progress of the State, and particularly as regards the colored teachers.

Incentive to Teachers

"It eliminates a discriminatory provision that has been a law in the State for years. The passing of this legislation was one of the most far-reaching steps taken in the history of education in the State.

"It should provide an incentive for the colored teachers for years to come, because they will know that all of the matters designed by the State for white teachers will also apply to them."

Fight Reviewed

As spokesman for the delegation, Dr. Murphy expressed the gratification of the entire body of colored teachers in the State; traced the battle for equal salaries back to its beginning in 1916, and stated that during the long fight, teachers worked equally as hard to better prepare themselves.

Today, he pointed out, 98 per cent of the 500-odd teachers hold first-grade certificates. Dr. Murphy's remarks were directed to the governor and the heads of both houses of the legislature.

Pen Presented

The pen with which the bill was signed was presented to Dr. Murphy by the governor. It will later be presented to the Maryland State Teachers' Association.

Dr. Murphy, chairman of the legislative committee of the teachers' association, recalled that since 1916, a committee of educators have lobbied during each session of the assembly to have enacted legislation that would result in equal salaries.

Turned to Courts

In 1930, the association sponsored a meeting in Annapolis and invited Walter White, NAACP executive secretary, as the guest speaker. It was at this meeting that the group decided to take the matter into the courts, with the NAACP as their legal representative.

MAY 3 1941

In 1936, the Baltimore Branch of the NAACP was reorganized and the following educational committee appointed: Carl Murphy, Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, Mrs. Enolia P. McMillan, W. A. C. Hughes, Jr., Dr. George B. Murphy, Sr., Carrington L. Davis, Mrs. Geneva Woods, and Jesse L. Nicholas.

Court Victory Recalled

As an outgrowth of this reorganization, the associaion activities were revived and the matter taken in court by Thurgood Marshall, who, with a crack battery of NAACP attorneys, finally emerged victorious in 1939, when Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut decreed that colored teachers in Anne Arundel County be paid salaries equal to those received by whites.

MAY 3 1941

When the General Assembly opened last January, Mr. Hughes, assisted by Josiah F. Henry, resumed the association's lobby and obtained their objective in the closing minutes of the session when the bill was passed.

The delegation of Monday also included:

Mrs. Enolia P. McMillan, president of the State Teachers' Association; Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, president of the Baltimore Branch of the NAACP; Mrs. Geneva Woods, secretary of the educational committee of NAACP; Josiah . Henry, Charles A. Oliver, Joseph C. Parks, executive secretary of the State Teachers' Association; Keiffer Jackson, L. B. Gamby and J. Finley Wilson.

Teachers' Pay Equalization Raises Md. Budget Problem

By the Asso

Annapolis, Feb. 12.—Administration sources said today the knotty question of equalizing white and colored teachers' salaries might involve drastic reductions in Gov. O'Conor's budget—or the levying of additional taxes.

A special gubernatorial committee, named to investigate the problem, disclosed it had agreed on two points: That white teachers' salaries should not be cut and that the obligation should be faced jointly by the State and the counties.

Faced with a court decision that colored teachers should receive the same pay as white instructors, the committee announced after its second meeting that no solution had yet been found to the problem.

The State Department of Education has estimated the equalization would cost $412.000 a year.

Some legislators said the question was one of the most serious problems faced by the State Administration. They added that the counties would not be willing to contribute toward the total cost of the equalization of salaries.

Three major hearings kept State House corridors jammed most of the day, with various minor committees also in session during the afternoon.

Biggest and most vocal on the program was the Senate Judicial Proceedings Committee's first hearing on legislation—familiar in Annapolis—to make women eligible for jury service. Chairman Emanuel Gorfine presided over the hearing, held in the Senate chamber, with both galleries packed.

In the House chamber, Chairman Thomas Dempsey of the House Hygiene Committee, presided over another major hearing on legislation which would revise the set-up of the board of hairdressers and beauty culturists, establish more stringent license requirements, and make board membership a full-time job.

Previously, the Judicial Proceedings Committee devoted two hours to a hearing for labor organizations protecting passage of the administration's antisabotage bill.

The House Ways and Means Committee took up with colored teachers the question of proposed equalization of teachers' pay, while the Senate Finance Committee heard testimony on the State police budget and enabling legislation which would permit the State to buy the Claiborne-Annapolis ferry.

County school superintendents appeared before the House Education Committee in support of a measure which would set up traffic safety courses in high schols, with State policemen as instructors. The committee postponed action on the bill pending a consultation with Baltimore City delegates as to whether the city should be included under the act's provisions.

Thirty new bills dropped in assembly hoppers; five were passed and sent to the Governor and 21 others passed third reading in one house or the other.

The Senate, after brief debate, sent to the House a much-amended bill providing for local distribution of automobile licenses. As finally approved the motor vehicles commissioner would be required under the bill to establish branch offices in county seats to issue tags.

Harford, Howard, Montgomery, Prince Georges, Washington and Frederick Counties would be exempt, while commissioners of Calvert, Garrett, Allegany, Worcester and Carroll would have to decide by January 1, 1942, whether or not they wished to participate.

The bill was sponsored by Senator Dudley G. Roe (Democrat), Queen Anne's, and was introduced by the legislative council originally as a State-wide measure. It met vigorous opposition from the floor and finally was amended down to the status of a local bill.

It was opposed by the commissioner of motor vehicles.

The Senate, by a 19-to-8 vote, passed a bill to provide 29 free medical school scholarships at the University of Maryland. At the same time, the House received a measure, sponsored by Delegate James B. Monroe (Republican), Charles, which would establish free scholarships for one male and one female student from each county and Baltimore City legislative district at Princess Anne College.

Women Jury Plan Killed Again in Md.

MAR 14 1941

Senate Defeats Bill, 16 to 13; Fight Continues On Teachers' Pay

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., March 13 (AP).—Defeat of the women's jury service bill and a blistering attack on one of the State administration's measures to equalize colored and white teachers' salaries headlined proceedings of Maryland's Legislature today.

By a narrow margin of 16 to 13, the Senate voted to table the women's jury service bill, identical to ones introduced—and beaten—at prior sessions.

The motion to table the legislation, permitting women to serve on juries, was made by Senator James J. Lindsay (Democrat), Baltimore County), who led the opposition.

Earlier, Western Maryland Senators attacked the administration's bill to raise the tax rate in the counties by 3 cents during the coming biennium to equalize colored and white teachers' salaries.

Deferred to Tuesday

When it appeared that debate would continue indefinitely, Majority Floorleader Dudley G. Roe (Democrat), Queen Anne County, had the measure made a special order of business for 12:30 p. m. Tuesday. It was up for final passage today.

The women's jury service bill was reported out of the judicial proceedings committee with an unfavorable report. Senator Emanuel Gorfine (Democrat), Fourth District, Baltimore, its author, moved that the bill be substituted for the unfavorable report.

Gorfine said he had received numerous letters and telegrams from women favoring adoption of the legislation. Letters against the proposal were "insignificant in number," he added.

In answer to arguments that women should not be permitted on juries because some cases were "unpleasant," Gorfine pointed out there were women magistrates in Maryland who heard sordid cases.

Lindsay contended Maryland women "don't want to serve on juries. And I will oppose making women do something they don't want to do."

MAR 14 1941

Special Tax Asked

To finance the equalization program, the Governor had legislation introduced to impose a special tax on half-mile tracks, and to increase the tax rate in counties; excess liquor and education funds also would be used for the equalization.

Senator John Funk (Democrat), of Frederick, moved that the bill be recommitted to the Senate finance committee. He and Senators Robert Kimble (Republican), of Allegany, and E. Stuart Bushong (Democrat), of Washington, led opposition to the bill.

Through pressure of a group of delegates, a bill to reduce interest rates charged by small loan companies was brought out of the House insurance and loans committee, and placed on third reading.

The measure, as amended today, would place the interest rate at 2 per cent a month on loans not exceeding $300. Originally, the bill would have cut the rate from 3½ per cent to 1½ per cent.

Lobbying Charged

Delegate Paul L. Cordish (Democrat), of Fourth, Baltimore, committee chairman, opposed a petition bringing the bill to the floor, charging a "certain group of lobbyists" was behind the measure, and saying he wanted to compare the bill with one being prepared by the administration.

The measure was placed on second reading, and passed to third redaing with the 2 per cent amendment by Houck

In the Senate, Senator E. Stuart Bushong (Democrat), of Washington, introduced a bill to require safety inspections of all used cars before certificates of title could be issued to the purchasers. Fees of 50 cents would be charged, and the commissioner of motor vehicles would designate the inspectors.

A "fire insurance rating bureau" to establish uniform rates for fire insurance would be created under a bill introduced by Delegate George W. Ownings, jr., (Democrat), Calvert.

Legislation introduced yesterday in the Senate to put a $2,000,000 "ceiling" on the State's surplus, with revenue in excess of this going to reduce the State real estate tax, brought an expression of approval from Gov. O'Conor.

MISSOURIANS TO USE MORAL SUASION FIRST

APR 18 1941

At Same Time Will Build Sentiment for Court Action

ST. LOUIS, Mo.— One hundred Missourians, the majority teachers, met at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. Saturday, April 12, to discuss ways and means of obtaining equalization of teachers salaries and educational opportunities in Missouri.

The conference, called by the legislative committee of the Missouri Association of Negro Teachers, went on record to "employ all forms of moral suasion and at the same time build sentiment to get the teachers' association to vote for court actions to equalize facilities and salaries at the November session in St. Louis if that seems the only course to pursue in order to get action."

APR 18 1941

25 Organizations Present

Representatives of 25 educational organizations in the state attended the conference which was presided over by Miss Emily Russel, president of the state teachers' association and chairman of the legislative committee.

A lively discussion was held on the merits of court action versus moral suasion as a policy for the association to pursue in order to correct the inequalities in facilities and salaries.

Inequalities in salaries paid white and Negro teachers in Missouri were revealed in a report on the "Equalization of Teachers' Salaries" made by Girard T. Bryant of Kansas City. John A. Clair, also of Kansas City, made a second basic report on the "Equalization of Educational Opportunities."

In his report, entitled "Our Daily Bread," Mr. Bryant said that there is a consistent differential in salaries between white and Negro teachers throughout the entire state in both rural and high school districts.

Inequalities Are Glaring

"The differences vary from only a few dollars per year to as much as five or six hundred dollars," he said. "The most glaring inequalities in the rural districts are in St. Louis and Johnson counties for both male and female teachers; in the high school districts, Crystal City, Nevada, Jackson, Steele, Fayette and Cameron for female elementary teachers."

As to the authenticity of his report, Mr. Bryant said that all figures were taken from the ninety-first report of the "Missouri Public Schools," issued in 1940 by the state superintendent of public education. Checklists were prepared and mailed to superintendents of schools in the 185 districts which contain Negro schools, for confirmation. Of this number, 62 were returned, confirming the figures.

Samples of the differentials between white and Negro teachers' salaries as revealed by Mr. Bryant:

APR 18 1941

Elementary

St. Louis county: white male, $1,154; Negro male, $690; white female, $1,068; Negro female, $495.

Howard county: white female, $609; Negro female, $360.

Boonville: white female, $1,000; Negro female, $650.

Higginsville: white female, $743; Negro female, $495.

Johnson county: white female, $590; Negro female, $256.

High School

St. Joseph: white male, $2,241; Negro male, $1,210.

Brunswick: white male, $1,000; Negro male, $630.

Triplett: white female, $615; Negro female, $350.

With his report, Bryant submitted graphs showing that the elementary teacher who receives $80 a month may consider himself fortunate; that a number of districts are paying their Negro teachers less than $400 a year; that in Savannah, Cameron, Jackson and Steele counties, the teachers' annual salary is on or below the $300 line. Johnson county pays the lowest annual salary.

Besides revealing a differential, the graphs reveal a necessity for raising salaries throughout the state for both whites and Negroes.

A panel discussion on what can be done to equalize educational opportunities and teachers salaries was held with the following participants.

Attorney Sidney R. Redmond, who spoke from the viewpoint of the N.A.A.C.P.; Chester Stovall, representing laymen; C. C. Damel, Lincoln university; Roland L Wiggins, State Department of Education; Miss Bertha M. Black, county teachers' organizations; Alonzo Redmond, district teachers organizations; Burt A. Mayberry, State Teachers' association.

Redmond, president of the St. Louis N.A.A.C.P. branch, reviewed the legal cases dealing with salary equalization.

STATE TEACHERS AGAIN

APR 18 1941

The Legislative Committee of the Missouri State Association of Negro Teachers held a meeting in St. Louis last Saturday. Much discussion with respect to the unequal salaries of white and Negro teachers in the state was indulged in, but nothing concrete was done about the matter.

Girard T. Bryant, editor of the Association Journal, called attention to the fact that the greatest difference in the salaries of rural elementary teachers was in St. Louis and Stoddard Counties, citing the fact that in St. Louis County a male white teacher received $1,154 yearly, while the colored teacher in the same district received only $690 a year. He also stated that Negro teachers received as low as $400 a year in Stoddard County, while the lowest salary a white teacher received was $664.

With all this factual evidence before this committee, nothing was done that will cause a change in any of these conditions.

In view of the fact that this matter has been brought to the attention of the Negro teachers from time to time, year in and year out, and nothing has been done to change this condition, we can only surmise that the state teachers have the wrong sort of leadership—leaders who either have no vision or are too selfish to help what we call the "little fellow" in the rural districts. We are informed that among the state leaders are those who are trying to "feather their own nests" and "make good" with the State Superintendent of Schools for their personal advancement to the extent that they do not give a "whoop" about what becomes of the other fellow.

APR 18 1941

Be it understood that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has the machinery and is willing and ready to assist in the fight to equalize the salaries of the colored teachers with that of the white teachers in the state of Missouri.

Teachers of Missouri Confer With Superintendent King on Salary Inequalities in State

MAY 23 1941

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—Negro teachers from 11 different cities in Missouri held a conference Saturday morning, May 17, with Lloyd W. King, state superintendent of schools, on the equalization of teachers' salaries.

Facts about the inequalities which exist between white and Negro schools in rural Missouri were presented to the superintendent who seemed greatly impressed by the meeting and said that he would make a written statement concerning it soon.

The conference, sponsored by the Missouri State Association of Negro Teachers, was attended by representatives of 17 educational organizations throughout the state.

It was held as a part of the association's program to bring about the equalization of salaries and facilities in Negro rural schools by "moral suasion" instead of by court action. At a recent conference called by the legislative commission of the association, it was decided to use all persuasive means of securing the desired equalization and to take court action as a last resort.

If the "moral suasion" has not produced the desired results by the 1941 convention in November at St. Louis, the association plans more drastic action.

After Saturday's conference, however, leaders of the state association believed that the equalization might be brought about without court action.

At the meeting Saturday in the conference room of the state department of education and in the state capitol building, Miss Emily J. Russell of St. Louis, president of the state association, discussed the purpose of the conference.

Girard T. Bryant, teacher of Kansas City, presented his study of "The Equalization of Teachers' Salaries" which he made for the legislative commission of the M. S. A. N. T. In his report, Mr. Bryant urged Superintendent King to:

1. Use the persuasive influence of his office to bring about a single salary schedule for Negroes and whites in all cases in which they are equally prepared and experienced.

2. If necessary, resort to whatever pressure his office may possess to achieve the desired result.

3. Offer helpful advice in the association's attempts to remedy a problem which is a discredit to the educational system of the state.

The report concluded, "The association believes that through the good offices of the state superintendent, Missouri may be able to bring about salary equalization without resorting to legal redress—a practice having been resorted to in Kentucky, Florida, Virginia, Maryland and Alabama, with more or less favorable results. If it should fail in this attempt, its officers have been instructed to call upon the courts."

John A. Clair of the R. T. Coles school, Kansas City, a member of the special committee on the equalization of educational opportunities in Missouri, made a report on "Equalization of Educational Opportunities."

William M. Alexander, chairman of the vocational education section of the M. S. A. N. T., told of "Needs in Vocational Education."

Burt A. Mayberry, Kansas City, secretary of the state association, spoke on "Supervision of Negro Schools."

Miss Russell presented the following resolution to Superintendent King:

1. That the state superintendent of public schools be requested to set up machinery for the study and personal canvass of the state to be made during the summer of 1941 and to hold conferences with school principals and patrons to determine where expansions of facilities might be undertaken at the opening of school in September, 1941, especially in the areas of vocational education and National Defense training.

2. That the state superintendent of public schools use the influence of his office to eliminate the differentials in salaries paid to Negro and white teachers in cases where the training is equal, and

3. That the state supervisor of Negro schools be required to make a personal inspection annually of the schools for Negroes in Missouri and submit reports on the regular forms prescribed for all schools.

Persons attending the conference were William M. Alexander, Bertha M. Black, Adelle DeBoe, Curtis Gordon, Ruth E. Greene, Emily J. Russell, Pearl Schwartz, all of St. Louis; Girard T. Bryant, John A. Clair, John L. Howell, Rosetta E. Nolan, William A. Smith, R. L. Washington and Burt A. Mayberry, all of Kansas City; Marcia M. Canty, A. L. Hammonds, Roland L. Wiggins, of Jefferson City; John L. Brooks of DeSoto; H. L. Drew of Bunceton; James L. Jones, Columbia; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Penn, Springfield; A. C. Shropshire, Festus; Clarence L. Turpin, Carrollton; R. W. EQUAL SALARY FOR TEACHERS GIVEN BOOM

State Superintendent King Supports Movement

Something like victory in the fight of the Missouri State Association of Negro Teachers for equality of salaries in the state is voiced by Miss Emily Russell, president of the state body following a series of communications with State Superintendent of Schools Lloyd W. King.

As a result of such action, two conferences were held, one, in St. Louis attended by representatives of educational organizations throughout the state; the other in Jefferson City with Superintendent King. At the latter meeting, all of the data that had been collected through a survey of salaries and educational opportunities were presented and requests made for a change in the present set-up.

Superintendent King has stated that he is asking the high school supervisors to bring to the attention of all the city superintendents and board members the fact that the recent Norfolk decision provides for the payment of equal salaries where salary schedules are established.

In a letter to the high school supervisors and rural school supervisors recently, Superintendent King wrote:

"The Norfolk case decided by the Supreme Court made it mandatory for a local school district that operates a salary schedule to pay the scheduled wage to teachers without discrimination as to color; provided that they meet like standards of preparation. Some high school districts in Missouri do not provide payment for Negro teachers on the same basis as they provide for white high school teachers. Will you bring to the attention of your superintendents their responsibility in complying with the decision of the United States Supreme Court in this matter.

"Again, in some instances, teaching units provided for Negro schools are not in fact utilized for the program for Negro children. Money made available for Negro schools should be in fact utilized for Negro schools. Will you bring to the attention of your superintendents their responsibility in this connection."

Superintendent King further states that he has asked Supervisor Wiggins, in charge of Negro schools of the state to visit the schools for Negro this fall to make a report to him in addition to the reports received by the Department of Public Schools from the general high school supervisors.

It was also pointed out that, at the meeting of County Superintendent of Schools, Superintendent King cited the fact that where the teaching unit was made available for the school for Negro children it was to be utilized for the school in point. Supervisor Wiggins has been requested to check cases in violation of this policy as well as the equal pay proposal.

Recently, according to information from Superintendent King's office, such equitable salary schdules have been worked out, especially in Central Missouri.

President Russell has expressed herself as being highly pleased with the consideration given by Superintendent King in these important matters and his plans for the remedy of the situation.

State School Head Asks County and City Boards To Follow Court Ruling

Roland L. Wiggins, Supervisor of Negro Schools, to Check Violations Of Policy of Education Department

SEP 12 1941

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. Missouri school supervisors have been asked to take steps to equalize salaries of their Negro teachers with those of white teachers, according to communications from Lloyd W. King, state superintendent of schools, to Miss Emily J. Rusell, president of the Missouri State Association of Negro Teachers which has been conducting a campaign for equal salaries.

During the summer Miss Russell inquired of the superintendent what action had been taken since the conference on salaries held in May. At this conference representatives from educational organizations in the state presented data on salaries and educational opportunities to the state superintendet

Mr. King's reply to the Negro teachers' president is as follows: "In attempting to alleviate some of the inequalities in salary, we are doing the following specific things:

SEP 12 1941

1." I am asking the high school supervisors to bring to the attention of all the city superintendents and board members the fact that the recent Norfolk decision provides for the equal salaries where salary schedules are established. The enclosed letter to the supervisors outlines our position.

"2. We are asking Mr. Wiggins to visit the schools for Negroes this fall to have a report from him in addition to the report we receive rom the general high school supervisors.

"3. In our meeting of county superintendents of schools, I called to the attention of the county superintendents the fact that where the teahhing unit was made available for the srhool for Negro children, it was to be utilized for the school in point.

"4. I am asking Mr. Wiggins to check cases in violation of the policy also."

(Mr. Wiggins referred to is Roland L. Wiggins, state supervisor of Negro schools.)

In July Mr. King sent a letter of instruction to the high school supervisors and rural school supervisors throughout the state. He called their attention to the Norfolk case making it mandatory for a local school district that operates a salary schedule to pay the scheduled wage to teachers without discrimination as to color; provided that they meet like standards of preparation.

His instructions included the following statements: "Some high school districts in Missouri do not provide payment for Negro teachers on the same basis as they provide payments for white high school teachers. Will you bring to the attention of your superintendents their responsibility in complying with the decisio of the United States Supreme Court in this matter?

"Again in some instances teaching units provided for Negro schools are not in fact utilized for the program for Negro children. Money made available for Negro schools should be in fact utilized for Negro schools. Will you bring to the attention of your superintendents their responsibility in this connection?"

In Miss Russell's reply to the state superintendent she said in part: "May I express our appreciation for your consideration of the salary inequalities and for the procedure that you have planned to correct the present situation. It is our hope that it will achieve satisfactory results.

"May we ask that we be notified of any tangible evidences of its success as may come to the attention of your office."

MISSISSIPPI UNEASY OVER SALARY LAW

U. S. Ruling On Pay To Teachers May Cost State $2,000,000

MAR 29 1941

JACKSON, Miss. — State education officials were reported this week as uneasy over the possibility that court action may be taken to force payment of equal salaries for white and Negro teachers. They were reluctant to discuss the matter for publication or quotation since the issue has not yet been invoked in Mississippi.

Recently the United States Supreme Court refused to review a decision of a Virginia Federal court holding that any salary discrimination between white and Negro teachers in the same grades was a violation of the fourteenth amendment and that equal salaries would have to be paid. Since that time, several states have been confronted with "equal pay" demands.

State legal authorities have informed education officials that they believe the Virginia decision would be sustained in Mississippi if invoked there.

MAR 29 1941

J. S. Vandiver, superintendent of schools, said Tuesday, March 18, that Mississippi would make application to the government for federal funds for state schools without federal control, if the state is required to meet the United States ruling.

It is estimated that an equal pay set-up would cost the state approximately $2,000,000 a year. At a recent convention of the Mississippi Education Association, a special committee's report asked for a more equitable distribution of school funds between white and Negro schools and pupils. It charged that in some counties, funds voted for Negro schools never reach them.

The convention voted to submit the report to a special committee of the state legislature designed to study Negro education and educational problems in Mississippi.

It is expected that the equal pay demand may complicate the M.E.A.'s fight to obtain increased appropriations for salaries and enactment of teacher-retirement legislation.

TEACHERS' PAY HIKE POSSIBLE, SAYS DARBY

Speaks Before Educators At Ole Miss

APR 2 1941

Special to The Commercial Appeal

UNIVERSITY, Miss., April 1—C. J. Darby, president of the Mississippi Education Association, expressed belief Tuesday that in many counties the state can raise the present average white teacher salary of $10.23 per week to $12.50 per week. He spoke before the annual Northwest Mississippi School Administrators' Conference at the University of Mississippi.

Mr. Darby added that he felt the Legislature in its next session would make this increase, in addition to proportionate increases for junior and senior colleges and for the negro schools. The average salary applies for the entire calendar year.

APR 2 1941

Mr. Darby also emphasized the need for a state teacher retirement system.

J. S. Vandiver, state superintendent of education, spoke on the importance of better organization of the school system, and of the need of greater financial support for schools.

APR 2 1941

Col. Forrest Cooper of Indianola urged more thought by all on the many problems of today in his talk on "Americanism."

The conference, attended by 150 school administrators and teachers, was presided over by J. M. Bryant, assistant superintendent of education. Welcome was given by Chancellor A. B. Butts and Dean O. A. Shaw of the School of Education.

Other State Department of Education leaders who led discussions were: D. R. Patterson, director of curriculum; G. J. Cain, director of the budget; E. P. Littlejohn, assistant director of the budget; H. E. Mauldin, director of vocational education and defense program.

R. L. Anderson, director of adult education; Dr. P. H. Eason, director of negro education; J. B. Wheeler, director of rehabilitation and for crippled children; C. S. Hudspeth director of the free textbook program, and Capt. Henry Lee, director of safety and publicity for the State Highway Patrol.

Mississippi Asks U. S. Aid To Make Salaries Equal

MAR 28 1941

JACKSON, MISS., March 27—(ANP)—State Superintendent of Schools, J. S. Vandiver, announced Tuesday morning that applications for federal funds for state schools without federal control will be made to meet the recent United States Supreme Court ruling that Negro teachers in public schools be paid salaries equal to those of white instructors.

MAR 28 1941

It has been estimated that the increase in salaries for colored teachers would cost Mississippi $1,950,000, but Mr. Vandiver said the department of education had not confirmed the figures. He explained that the state is now making every effort to equalize educational advantages of its white and colored children, and that the additional amounts to raise "Negro as well as white teachers' salaries to a living wage," would have to be procured from the federal government.

The superintendent enumerated recent benefits to Negro education, saying: "By the last legislature both white and black schools were provided free textbooks. The Mississippi Training School in Jackson was also provided. Steps are now underway for establishment of a junior college in the Delta section for training the Negro, who already has three approved agricultural high schools, toward which there is a growing tendency."

"In the adult education program, the Negro has fared extremely well, and vocational schools have been supplied in a great many of the Negro high schools of the state.

"Leading educators of Mississippi will continue their efforts before Congress to secure federal funds in the solution of this and other educational problems," he concluded.

Says "Present Manner of Distributing School Fund Is a Lie and Frand" and Further Subterfuge Is Useless—The Supreme Court Has Spoken.

APR 19 1941

BIRMINGHAM, April 17. (ANP)—Frankest editorial discussion of the no-differential salary schedule for teachers doing the same standard of work, comes from the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

The editorial under review strikes up for dragging the whole issue out into the light. It reflects a concern that the salary-parity question has been dodged, ducked and held in verbal prison.

"'Shush, shush!' seems to have been the watchword among the Mississippi educators at their recent meeting in Jackson when the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court holding that there must be no discrimination in our public schools.

"There was a general inclination among leaders to avoid the issue and to keep out of the press all that was said on the subject.

"It isn't any use, gentlemen.

"Present manner of distributing the common school fund is a lie and a fraud on its face. It is not equitable and you know it.

"Further subterfuge or camouflage will be useless.

Federal Funds Are Asked To Up Negro-Teacher Pay

Effects in Mississippi of a U. S. supreme court ruling that negro teachers in public schools must be paid salaries equal to those of white instructors—a situation discussed at length last week by the MEA delegate assembly and held out of newspapers on request—flared into the open here yesterday when J. S. Vandiver, state superintendent of education, said application will be made to the federal government for funds to equalize negro teacher salaries.

The delegate assembly discussed the possibility of seeking federal funds because present state appropriations are not sufficient to carry the extra load, estimated unofficially at $1,950,000, but the delegates adopted a resolution that the press consider these discussions "off the record." Mr. Vandiver's statement, however, has placed the issue in the open.

One prominent state educator said yesterday that if the high court ruling is enforced in Mississippi, it could mean "disaster" to white schools unless federal aid is forthcoming. The situation was also discussed Saturday morning at a meeting of the MEA executive committee called by C. J. Darby, Perkinston, new president of the association.

Maximum Effort

Mr. Vandiver said Mississippi is now putting forth its "maximum effort" to equalize educational advantages of its white and negro children and that any additional amounts to raise "negro as well as white teachers salaries to a living wage" would have to be secured from the federal government.

In all counties of the state, the county superintendent sets salaries for negro teachers except those in city separate school districts. The salary schedules are in accord with the Mississippi laws of 1930, requiring that "in fixing salaries the county superintendent and boards of trustees, must take into consideration the character, professional training, executive ability and teaching capacity of the teacher."

"Mississippi is about at the top among all states in its effort to provide schools for her children," said Superintendent Vandiver, adding that the state department of education "has not made a complete study of what compliance with the supreme court decision would mean in Mississippi schools."

Enumerating recent benefits to negro education, he said, "by the last legislature both white and negro schools were provided free textbooks. The Mississippi Training School in Jackson was also provided. Steps are now under way for establishment of a junior college in the delta section for training the negro, who already has three approved agricultural high schools, toward which there is a growing tendency. In the adult education program, the negro had fared extremely well, and vocational schools have been supplied in a great many of the negro high schools of the state."

Mississippi To Ask Federal Aid In Raising Teachers Salaries

MAR 29 1941

JACKSON, Miss. — Mississippi will seek federal aid in raising teachers salaries, it was announced recently by State Superintendent of Schools, J. S. Vandiver. Applications for federal funds for state schools without federal control will be made to meet the recent United States supreme court ruling that Negro teachers in public schools be paid salaries equal to those of white instructors.

It has been estimated that the increase in salaries for colored teachers would cost Mississippi $1,950,000, but Mr. Vandiver said the department of education had not confirmed the figures. He explained that the state is now making every effort to equalize educational advantages of its white and colored children, and that the additional amounts to raise "Negro as well as white teachers' salaries to a living wage," would have to be procured from the federal government.

RECENT BENEFITS GIVEN

The superintendent enumerated recent benefits to Negro education, stating: "By the last legislature both white and black schools were provided free text-books. The Mississippi Training School in Jackson was also provided. Steps are now underway for establishment of a junior college in the Delta section for training the Negro, who already has three approved agricultural high schools, toward which there is a growing tendency.

"Leading educators of Mississippi will continue their efforts before Congress to secure federal funds in the solution of this and other educational problems," he concluded.

Mississippi Asks U. S. Aid To Make Salaries Equal

North Carolina is the next State that will test the right of a State to pay colored teachers lower salaries.

Now that teachers in Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Alabama and even Georgia and Florida, have filed equal pay suits and in some cases won victories, North Carolina has become ashamed of itself.

Its most conservative citizens now realize that a resort to the courts of law in this case is simply a friendly suit to correct an injustice and ought to be accepted by both races in that spirit.

Every community ought to understand that where colored people feel that the Constitution is ignored or violated they are expected to ask the courts for a ruling.

NEGROES MAY CARRY SCHEDULE TO COURTS

Differential Between Negro And White Teachers' Pay May Yet Cause Fight.

By W. T. BOST.

Greensboro Daily News Bureau
302 Wachovia Bldg., Fayetteville St.

RALEIGH, Aug. 12.—North Carolina school leaders haven't heard much about it yet, but they may hear a great deal, from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who are hotter than ever over a recent act of the school commission in starting teachers with master certificates at $150 a month for white masters and $130 for negroes.

Two race leaders absorbing the bulk of race punishment are Dr. Charles C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual and of the Mechanics and Farmers banks, biggest state negro institutions, and Dr. James E. Shepard, president of the North Carolina College for Negroes. A few years ago when they appeased the association and other negroes to the extent of calling off all proposed litigation for constitutional correction of discriminations, the pair were dubbed "handkerchief heads." That term of reproach put these leaders on the level of the old aunt and uncles who tied up their heads in white cloths.

Drs. Spaulding and Shepard have been advanced in appeasement to "grinners." They represent a race inured to wrongs but still possessed of capacity to "grin and bear it." But recently negro teachers picked up a little change on salary schedules and with the pick-up came the promise of gradual elimination of all discriminations. Drs. Shepard and Spaulding got their baptism as "grinners" on their work in keeping these issues outside the courts. The two men have gone along without legal fights with comes the war in the courts.

Even the Shepard-Spaulding ingenuity is taxed to account for the new schedule of salaries. The grad- their white brethren. But the newer and younger race leadership wel- ual disappearance of the most glaring differentials has heartened these elder leaders no little. By 1945 the last of them is expected to go. But the school commission setting up the new master's order erected it on the old basis. The few masters among the negroes who would have drawn the $150 is regarded so small that the state would have had very little money to put out. But the old discriminations persevere and young negro America is getting very sore.

The resentment rises out of Durham. Over there the whites are preparing to erect a vocational school for white children at a cost of $240,000 and from public funds. The N.A.A.C.P. is expected to step in and halt that structure if one is not also provided for the negro children. The Carolina Times, negro paper generally very much predisposed toward defense of Dr. Shepard and Banker-Insurance Executive Spaulding, breaks out in one terrific assault: "This eternal bickering and begging, this continuous plotting and maneuvering, this forever sidestepping and compromising, this unholy grinning and apologizing, this dastardly bowing and scraping to wring out of the public officials a miser's share of public funds to be spent on this side of the fence has become so humiliating and distasteful that one of Durham's largest negro institutions has declared and avowed that never again will its board of directors permit its president (Spaulding) to stick out his neck to be chopped off. Never again will he be permitted to act as an appeaser or a go-between in the thankless task of promoting a better understanding between the races in this city or county.

"Durham negroes have grinned and grinned. They have grinned at inadequate equipment in all of their schools, they have grinned at no gymnasium in the entire negro school system, while there are nine or 10 in the white schools; they have grinned at makeshift cafeterias in most of their school buildings; they have grinned at school buildings erected without auditoriums; they have grinned at the refusal to give them representation on the board of education; they have grinned at the unequal facilities in the new bus station to be erected and have humiliatingly withdrawn from contending that the 'separate but equal' law be applied to its erection, when they discovered that those who enacted the law never meant it to be enforced. They have grinned at poor police protection in negro districts of Durham; they have grinned at the 24-hour defense training given white boys and girls at the Central high school, without the same provisions being made for negroes. They have grinned at muddy streets, at starvation wages paid domestic servants, and now they are being asked to grin at the expenditure of $240,000 for a vocational school for whites without providing the same type of school for negroes.

"We think this cannot be. The two main grinners (Shepard and Spaulding) in Durham will stay their grins, and peaceful but definite steps by others will be taken to resurrect from the dead, common justice and fairness, in the expenditure of the vocational school money. This is a last resort. all others have failed and negroes in Durham are being forced into an unpleasant task, one that they neither relish nor are able financially to support through the higher courts without the aid of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

The Times does not take up that salary schedule, but this is the universally embarrassing feature of discrimination. Establishment of it changed even the "two main grinners" who find themselves without the finesse and footwork to get around it.

N. C. Teachers May Retire At 60 With Pay

MAR 8 1941

All State Workers Fall Under New Retirement Plan

Staff Correspondence

RALEIGH, N. C.—Another forward step in the protection of the teachers and other employees of this state was made by the North Carolina Legislature here recently when a statewide retirement system for all employees was adoptd.

Thus, teachers and other employees may retire at the age of 60 with an income for life. The new system also provides for an allowance for employees who become disabled for any cause.

The feasure, which was presented in various forms to the two previous legislatures, enables any employee to retire upon reaching the age of 60 years, regardless of the years of service rendered. He may, however, remain in service until he reaches the age of 65. Such persons may remain on their jobs even after reaching 65, provided the employer requests that he continue in the position.

Upon reaching the age of 70 an employee will be retired immediately unless the employee desires that he remain until the end of the year in which he reaches 70, or, with the approval of the employee and the board of trustees of the system he may continue in service for two years following each such requests.

MAR 8 1941

All employees already at the age of 60 are eligible for retirement and will receive as compensation an amount which would be the same had the system been in operation all the time.

From each payroll of every employee included in the system there will be deducted four per cent as his contribution which is the same amount to be contributed by the state.

STARTS JULY 1

For example, a teacher who began or will begin in the employ of the state at the age of 20 years will receive 49.92 per cent of his average salary during the last five years of service. The per cent is slightly smaller for women.

There are approximately 7,300 Negro teachers in the state all of which will be included in the retirement system which goes into effect July 1, 1941. Several hundred clerical, administrative, laborers and mechanics in the state's employ will also profit by the new law.

Bishopville, S. C. Messenger
February 20, 1941

South Carolina white teachers are asking for a $10 per month raise. Negro teachers are demanding that they be paid the same salaries that white teachers get and the national government says that the colored school teachers must not be discriminated against. This means that, according to the national government, South Carolina will have to raise the pay of every negro school teacher so that it will equal the pay of the white teacher. This is one of the many instances in which the national government is sticking its long nose where it does not belong. In states where negroes pay their proportionate part of the taxes they should, and rightly so, receive the same educational advantages as the whites. But, in a state like South Carolina, where the negro is so numerous and where he pays little in taxes he should not receive the same educational advantages, nor should the negro teacher expect the same pay that the white teacher gets, especially since many do not really have the educational qualifications to teach. It looks hard, but we think that it is fair. We would also like to say that a majority of the white school teachers in South Carolina are drawing more money in the teaching profession than they would be drawing in any other line of work that they might be able to get in. They should be satisfied with what they get, especially since this state is in the financial condition that it is in. We don't want to get the teachers on our necks, as it were, but facts are facts.

S. C. Teachers Take Fight For Salary Boost To State Senate

MAR 14 1941

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 27.—(ANP)—Members of the Palmetto State Teachers' association, appearing last Saturday before a joint meeting of the Senate finance and House ways and means committee, renewed their request for a salary increase for colored teachers.

The increase, sought for the next two-year period, would bring the salaries of colored teachers up to parity with white teachers, of similar status. This would conform with a recent decision of the U. S. Supreme court which held that states could not set up a separate salary basis for white and Negro teachers.

MAR 1 4 1941

Favorable action by the general assembly would forestall any legal action by colored teachers to require the State to boost their salaries.

Estimates based on figures from the department of education showed that the state government would have to add about $1,000,000 to the $2,000,000 it now contributes to Negro teachers' salaries, and school districts would have to add to their present annual appropriation of about $200,000 an amount close to $1,200,000.

Allowing for the difference in the length of their teaching terms, the present statewide Negro teacher average for 5,600 employed would be raised from $380 a year to $780 a year. The state would bear $170 of the $400 increase, and the school districts would be required to increase their contribution by $230 for each Negro teacher.

The length of school terms is left to the discretion of district trustees, but the state pays on salaries of both whites and Negroes up to eight months. At present, white schools run 175 days a year and Negro schools 147.

S. C. LEGISLATORS TO STUDY TEACHERS' PAY STATUTES

FEB 14 1941

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (ANP) — The South Carolina legislature's answer to the request of the colored school teachers to equalize their salaries, is the appointment of a committee to investigate the "statutory laws dealing with education and election of school teachers and their salaries."

Several days ago representatives of the Palmetto State Teachers association met with the joint senate and house finance and ways and means committee asking pay comparable with that received by white teachers in the state "so that a court action will not be necessary in South Carolina."

The teachers outlined the following objectives: teachers with similar training and performing the same class of work be paid the same salary; equalization to begin 1941-42 school year; complete equalization in two years; all schools operate not less than eight months; at least one accredited high school in each county free of tuition to all children in the county; transportation be allowed where needed.

S. C. FAVORS SALARY RAISE FOR TEACHERS

APR 27 1941

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 24—(ANP)—Those Negro teachers who hold college degrees will be given a salary increase of $10 per month, if the recommendations of the committee recently appointed to make a survey of education in the state are adopted. The committee has made an extensive survey of salary differences among colored and white teachers, length of school terms, transportation facilities, and the result of its study was submitted Tuesday in a report to the general assembly.

The committee's report revealed that the average salary of the white teacher is $988 annually, while the Negro teacher receives only $391. The number of school buses for white children is 1,644 and for the Negro children eight. The average length of the white term is 175 days and the Negro term is 147 days.

APR 7

"From a study of these figures the committee has reached the conclusion that there are inequalities in the expenditure of funds for education in this state. The nature and extent of this discrimination is more difficult to ascertain . . . " the committee report concludes.

HIGHER PAY FOR NEGROES

Committee Favors Longer Terms For Negro Schools.

Columbia, April 21.—Increased pay for "qualified" negro school teachers and longer terms for negro schools was recommended to the general assembly today by a special committee appointed recently to study the state's education laws.

Other recommendations:

Less power for school district trustees and more authority for the state board of education; sharp reduction of the state's 1,738 school districts; popular election of county boards of education and selection of county superintendents of education by the boards; discontinuance of state aid for pupil transportation.

The recommendation for the longer negro school term specifically proposed an increase from an average of 147 days to 175 days a year, the average for white schools. The negro teacher salary increase would cost the state "not more than $152,720" more a year.

More General Rrecommendations:

Creation of a teachers' certificate division of the state department of education "to immediately work out a satisfactory plan of teacher certification;" continuation by the state board of "the study of the problems which have been mentioned in this report;" a $25,000 annual appropriation for support of the proposed teachers' certificate division and another $25,000 for a "comprehensive" study of public education by the state board.

The committee was composed of D. W. Robinson, Columbia attorney, State Superintendent of Education James H. Hope, Chairman W. B. Harvey of the senate education committee; E. R. Crow, president of the South Carolina association, and Chairman John H. Porter of the house education committee.

Houses Hold Joint Executive Session

Salaries of School Teachers Said to Have Been Discussed at State House

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Each house of the general assembly, the senate in particular, occasionally holds executive or secret, sessions but a joint executive session was almost unheard of until this week.

The house voted Wednesday to resolve itself into "a committee of the whole," in which unlimited discussion is permitted but no formal, or official, action can be taken. A "committee" session may or may not be secret.

It was stated that "a matter of vital interest" was to be aired and that probably some senators would like to be present. The senate was therefore informed of the plan and, although no official invitation, was extended, it marched over in a body just as it does for regular joint sessions. (The only difference in this case was that the president of the senate, who presides over official joint sessions, did not assume the chair.)

The "matter of vital interest" was authoritatively understood to be a proposal for a new method of certification for public school teachers. This plan would, it was explained, meet the situation created by a recent United States supreme court decision, which held that a state could not pay Negro teachers on a different basis from that on which white teachers were paid. A special committee charged with a study of the state education statutes reported to the general assembly April 15 and recommended a method of certification based on "fitness to teach" and "professional development."

Maybank Gives Thought to Bill For Teachers

Governor Burnet R. Maybank said yesterday he would have to give "great thought" to the legislative act awaiting his signature which would raise teachers' pay $80 a year. He said he would issue a "full statement" later, not indicating whether he would sign or veto the measure.

Maybank asserted that "a serious situation is involved in connection with our education program." Some sources expressed belief he was pondering the effect of the proposal on Negro teachers, who, the United States supreme court has held, must be shown no discrimination in teacher pay scales.

The house had inserted in the teacher pay measure $152,000 as recommended for Negro teachers' pay in a special committee report but the senate struck out that amount and left the flat $80 a year increase. Some senators asserted that the leave the $152,000 in the bill would give Negro teachers $160 a year and white teachers only $80 but there was some senate disagreement over that question.

Jesse Anderson of Florence, president of the South Carolina Education association, called upon the governor yesterday, but no statement immediately followed the conference.

Chairman R. M. Jefferies of the senate finance committee, who urged that revenue be provided to meet the teacher pay increase, asserted that the budget would be knocked far out of balance by the estimated $1,100,000 necessary to meet this added expense.

Maybank in a recent radio address announced his endorsement of the bill to increase teachers' salaries but stipulated that it should be paid for by using highway funds not considered earmarked under the supreme court's opinions holding the use of road money invalid for other state purposes.

The governor has until next January to act on the measure. Should he sign the bill before September, teachers would begin drawing the higher amount that month.

TIME AND ESSENCE.

It is a rather tried and long tested South Carolina practice to condemn the legislature for the length of its sessions.

But there are worse things than long sessions of the legislature. And among them is the legislative practice of attempting to do in the last half day what had not been done in the 18 preceding weeks.

These problems of taxation and revenue are complicated and serious problems—they are further complicated now by the plan of the federal government to raise federal tax rates to such levels as no politician ever suspected even in his nightmares—and the least the legislators could have been expected to do was to take the little bit more time that would have been required to consider and study what they were doing.

The legislature of South Carolina takes enough time in any year to do everything right, but then puts through measures of far reaching importance in the closing hours of the session, sometimes without even the semblance of debate and consideration. Most of the legislative errors grow out of this practice of making haste and waste together. And most of them could have been and may be avoided by nothing more complicated than simply taking a little more time.

The confused last day of this year's session supplies the perfect demonstration of the error of the system.

All year the legislators, under handicaps, had struggled with the problem of the state deficit and in the closing days had even worked out something of a solution of it. Then Saturday, with the hour for adjournment already fixed, both houses gave final approval to a bill designed to increase teachers' salaries—a bill which will unbalance the budget by $1,000,000. The effort was made by members of both houses to write some revenue section into the bill and had there been time for proper consideration of the measure it seems likely that some revenue plan to make it effective might have been found before the bill was passed. For its enactment without including the necessary revenue sections does both the teachers and the state grave injustice. Most of the legislative troubles of recent years have grown out of deficits inherited from year to year; the deficit has been the explanation of the ever lengthening sessions. Now the school teachers will be blamed for the deficit and may be finding themselves getting paid again in notes and promises instead of money.

But this is less than half the tragedy. It the day's haste the senate eliminated the $152,720—little enough—which would have been used to increase Negro teachers' salaries as a step toward the voluntary elimination of the inequities in teachers' pay that now exist. This appropriation would have brought the state aid system into conformity with neither South Carolina law nor with the decisions of the United States supreme court, but it would have been an earnest of the state's intention to correct the evils now existing. And the Negro teachers of South Carolina could have defended their foregoing strict compliance with the law as a piece of patriotic cooperation with the state willing to do what it could. Now the legislature's act—unless of course the state department of education can find some way in existing law to do what ought to be done—invites a test case which may have the effect of overthrowing the whole state aid system in South Carolina to the detriment of both whites and Negroes. It was a time that called for statesmanship and the legislators were in a hurry to get home.

It is too late now to do anything about the system this year—the general assembly has adjourned and gone home—but it ought to be worthwhile to give it a little thought now while memories of the session are still fresh and green. It should not be expected of the members of the general assembly that they make no mistakes; the problems they must wrestle with are far more complicated than some of the long distance critics of the legislature appear to understand.

But it ought not to be too much to ask that the same mistake should not be made year after year.

NEGRO TEACHERS' SALARIES

Some recent court decisions have provided South Carolina legislators and private citizens generally with much food for thought concerning the necessity which the state government will apparently inevitably face of paying negro school teachers at the same rate as white teachers.

Commenting on this subject the Charleston News and Courier recently asserted that "it is no more than fair and just, regardless of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, that teachers in the schools, white and black, be paid the same salaries if they be teachers of the same qualifications."

The Columbia Record regards this as a simple statement of the truth; and goes on to say that "some day and the sooner the better, South Carolina must disregard races in school teachers' pay. When a test case from this state is taken to the Supreme Court it will have no choice; and it should move immediately, as some South Carolina districts are already moving, to eliminate racial discriminations; if it takes the initiative upon itself instead of waiting for the courts to compel it, as compel it they will, it can expect the cooperation of the negro school teachers in working out the problem." The Record goes on to assert that abolition of racial discrimination will mean also abolition of discrepancies in length of school term.

The News cannot agree with the News and Courier's proposal, however, for making financial provision for the increased salary payments that would be necessary. The Charleston paper would abolish free schools above the grammar grades for both whites and negroes. "While the maintenance of primary schools for the negroes would be a burden," it says, "it would be more than compensated by the saving from the abolition of free high schools for all."

South Carolina, we think, would not look with approval upon such a backward step in our program of public education. We are rather inclined to agree with The Record that if South Carolina is willing to face the facts and can take care to preserve the revenue sources it has instead of throwing money away on what our contemporary calls "quixotic propositions," it can meet its obligations to both whites and negroes.

But unquestionably there will be required a substantial increase in the appropriations for the public schools. The budget for the state payments for teachers' salaries under the program of state aid to public schools shows $6,384,000 for the payment of salaries to white teachers and $2,012,500 for the negro teachers.

It is evident that another financial problem of no trifling proportions is looming before the legislators of perhaps the rather near future.

Negro Teachers Ask Pay Hike; Court Is Cited

COLUMBIA, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Pay comparable with that received by white teachers in the state was asked today by the Palmetto State Teacher's association "so that a court action will not be necessary in South Carolina" to require the state to raise negro teachers' salaries.

FINANCIAL RELIEF ASKED

Representatives of the association told the joint senate and house finance and ways and means committee that for several years appeals had been made to the state Department of Education, the ways and means committee and senate finance committee "for some financial relief."

A recent decision of the United States Supreme Court held that states could not set up a separate salary basis for negro teachers. The association said it did not want to press court action to require the state to pay higher salaries "because of the unpleasant feeling that will result from such an action."

The association asked no "stipulated amount of money" but said that it was "seemingly impossible to encourage the negro teachers to carry on as they have unless they get some financial relief."

EQUAL PAY SOUGHT

The negro teachers, the association said in a prepared statement, "are asking for equal pay for similar preparation and service. They are asking for at least eight months school term for every negro child and transportation where needed."

The lack of transportation made it impossible for some negro children to attend school regularly, the statement said, and thus contributed to "our high rate of illiteracy and therefore provides fertile soil for the spreading of propaganda, unfavorable to our country.

"Some teachers who have to work under such conditions are not always inclined to be the best type of citizens in that they cannot maintain a decent standard of living and pay their debts."

Among the objectives of the association were:

LIST OF OBJECTIVES

1. Teachers with similar training and performing the same class of work be paid the same salary.
2. Equilization to begin 1941-42 school year.
3. Complete equilization in two years.
4. All schools operate not less than eight months.
5. At least one accredited high school in each county free of tuition to all children of the county.
6. Transportation be allowed where needed.

The association represents approximately 5,600 negro teachers.

State Asked to Give Relief to Negro Teachers—Group Seeks Salary Equality

Columbia, Feb. 5.—(AP): Pay comparable with that received by white teachers in the state was asked today by the Palmetto state teacher's association "so that a court action will not be necessary in South Carolina" to require the state to raise negro teachers' salaries.

Representatives of the association told the joint senate and house finance and ways and means committee that for several years appeals had been made to the state department of education, the ways and means committee and senate finance committee "for some financial relief".

A recent decision of the United States supreme court held that states could not set up a separate salary basis for negro teachers. The association said it did not want to press court action to require the state to pay higher salaries "because of the unpleasant feeling that will result from such an action".

The association asked no "stipulated amount of money" but said that it was "seemingly impossible to encourage the negro teachers to carry on as they have unless they get some financial relief".

The negro teachers, the association said in a prepared statement, "are asking for equal pay for similar preparation and service. They are asking for at least eight months school term for every negro child and transportation where needed".

The lack of transportation made it impossible for some negro children to attend school regularly, the statement said, and thus contributed to "our high rate of illiteracy and therefore provides fertile soil for the spreading of propaganda, unfavorable to our country.

"Some teachers who have to work under such conditions are not always inclined to be the best type of citizens in that they cannot maintain a decent standard of living and pay their debts."

Among the objectives of the association were:

1. Teachers with similar training and performing the same class of work be paid the same salary.
2. Equalization to begin 1941-42 school year.
3. Complete equalization in two years.
4. All schools operate not less than eight months.
5. At least one accredited high school in each county free of tuition to all children of the county.
6. Transportation be allowed where needed.

The association represents approximately 5,600 negro teachers.

To Investigate Teachers Pay

The South Carolina general assembly Tuesday took steps to investigate the statutes "dealing with education and the election of school teachers and their salaries".

A concurrent resolution to create a committee to make the investigation was introduced by the house committee on education and adopted by both houses. The committee would be composed of the state superintendent of education, the chairmen of the education committees of the senate and house, one member appointed by the South Carolina Elucation association and one member appointed by the governor.

supreme court's recent decision on salaries of Negro school teachers was discussed. The court ruled that a state could not pay white and Negro teachers on a different basis.

The senate adopted a concurrent resolution setting today at 1 P. M. for elections to fill vacancies on the board of trustees of the State Medical college and inviting Sam Morris of Del Rio, Texas, to address the joint meeting at 12:30 P. M., "on the question of temperance." The house concluded its 13-minute session before the resolutions arrived there for concurrence.

Medical College trustees whose terms are expiring are Drs. O. A. Matthews of Bennettsville, Thomas A. Pitts of Saluda, John H. Porter of Andrews and Thomas H. Pope of Newberry.

Negro Teacher P Raise Requested

Columbia, Feb. 6. (AP)—The Palmetto State Teachers' association has asked legislative committees to raise negro teachers' salaries to a scale comparable to that of white teachers "so that court action will not be necessary in South Carolina."

The joint senate and house finance and ways and means committees were told yesterday by association representatives that appeals had been made for several years to the state department of education, the ways and means committee and senate finance committee "for some financial relief."

Negroes Seek Equal Salaries in Schools

To Grant Request of Teachers Ass'n. Would Greatly Increase Taxpayers' Burden.

South Carolina's expenditure for Negro teachers' salaries will be more than doubled in the next two years if the requests of the Palmetto State Teachers Association are met.

The association, appearing before a joint meeting of the senate finance and house ways and means committee, asked that Negro teachers' salaries be increased during the next two years so that they would be on the same basis as the salary scale for white teachers.

A recent decision of the United States supreme court held that States could not set up a separate salary basis for white and Negro teachers.

The association requested that Negro teachers' salaries be increased so that it would not be necessary to institute legal proceeding to require the State to boost Negro salaries.

Estimates based on figures from the department of education showed that the State government would have to add about $1,000,000 to the $2,000,000 it now contributes to Negro teachers' salaries, and school districts would have to add to their present annual appropriations of about $200,000 an amount close to $1,200,000.

Allowing for the difference in the length of their teaching terms, the present State-wide Negro teacher average for 5,600 employed would be raised from $380 a year to $780 a year. The State would bear $170 of the $400 increase, and the school districts would be required to increase their contribution by $230 for each Negro teacher, which in the case of Barnwell County would aount to omre than $20,000 to pay such an increase to the 90 negro teachers in the county.

The length of school terms is left to the discretion of district trustees, but the State pays on salaries of both whites and Negroes up to eight months. At present, white schools run 175 days a year and Negro schools 147.

Allowing for the difference in the length of the school terms, South Carolina would increase its total expenditure for Negro teachers' salaries to approxmiately $4,400,000 if the general assembly meets the request of the Negro association.

Klan Chief Attacks Teachers' Petition for Equal Pay

FEB 22 1941

COLUMBIA, S.C.—(ANP)—A petition of teachers here last week for equal pay was the cause of a tirade against the race by the Ku Klux Klan head, Ben E. Adams, which was broadcast Sunday afternoon over Station WEBC, an affiliate.

Adams termed the request "a challenge to white supremacy and a step toward social equality." He further reminded the colored people that they were "an inferior race by divine will," that this was a "white man's country and any colored person dissatisfied with their lot should go elsewhere." He declared that the entire forces of the hooded order would fight any such pay equalization.

Their Goal, Their Aim

In the letter of the secretary of the Society for the Advancement of the Colored people, Walter White, is careful omission of statement of The News and Courier's position that there should be no free schools in South Carolina except elementary. The gist of its contention is that the white people cannot tote the load of high schools and colleges for a population, 45 per cent of which is negro that does not and will not in generations produce a proportionate share of the annual income.

The News and Courier holds that a white and a black cobbler should be paid the same sum for half-soling shoes equally well. The same rule applies to schoolteachers, cotton-pickers, all workers.

While not relevant to The News and Courier's editorials mentioned by the secretary we remind readers now that in all this agitation for negro advancement, whether by negroes or white "liberals", is studied avoidance of the subject of separation of races in schools and other relations. They will answer, "We will cross that bridge when we come to it," but history is that these negro leaders have seventy-two years been trying to bridge the separating chasm.

Endeavors to force the admission of negro students into white Southern colleges the last seven or eight years is an evidence of it.

These negro leaders are not content always with the sending and support by the state of a negro student to a Northern college; they are all for "state rights" translated into state coercion in the matter of opening white state institutions to negroes.

One hears incessant denunciation of "jim-crowism" but never an admission that separation of races in railroad coaches and hotels, however accommodations be identical, is not unjust, cruel or criminal.

The plain truth is that these agencies, directed by persons of exceptional cunning, have for their goal social equality and racial amalgamation. It is a distant goal but never out of their yearning sight.

By this The News and Courier is constantly embarrassed in its insistence that the negro receive a full dollar's worth for his dollar.

Further evidence of it is the demand that white men in the South be forced to admit negroes into their political clubs and primaries—as if Methodists, Masons, or women's federations were without lawful right to maintain exclusive political organizations.

That, we say, is the ever-present embarrassment of The News and Courier in its endeavor to obtain equal and exact justice for negroes and white Southern people.

When Secretary White, his association and negro leaders in general, shall declare, with emphasis, without equivocation, that they will not ask for "social equality" and mixed institutions or anything looking toward them. The News and Courier and others of its way of thinking will be prepared to go far with them in their striving for fair treatment.

They will not say it with emphasis and without equivocation. They will not abandon their goal or turn their eyes from it. They are making gains toward social equality and mingling in some of the great cities, and they are out to get them in the South.

They are contending that the negro cannot hope for justice in Southern state courts, that the federal courts must be their resort, that the "regularly constituted machinery of Southern states" is not sufficient for the negro's protection, that the rights of these states to make and enforce laws must be limited, must be stamped out of existence if necessary to the success of an insidious campaign subordinating Southern states to the mastery of politicians in cities where congregated negroes exert power in partnership with corrupt politicians and are corrupted by them.

The secretary's unctuous inquiry whether The News and Courier "would forbid negroes being given the protection of the courts as is provided in the constitution of the United States" refers of course to the Fourteenth amendment ratified in 1868 when the Southern states were prostrate, governed by negroes deriving their power from federal soldiers. The endeavor this day of the New Deal's court, of which Mr. Frankfurter is the spirit, is renewal of the failed endeavor of seventy-five years ago, and another resistance by the white South may be required to save the states from destruction and by it to save their region habitable by white men. The News and Courier remains a rebel against parts of a constitution choked down the throats of the Southern people when bayonets were at their throats.

As for the financial support of the secretary's association, with pleasure we accept his statement and receive it as information for future guidance.

Negro Equality

To The News and Courier:

Walter White finds it hard to understand why white school teachers are paid higher salaries than negro teachers are paid, for the same kind of work.

Well why is a man paid more for sawing timber into logs than another man is paid for cutting the tree tops into fuel wood? The work is no harder, but the product of the timber sawyer's labor produces more wealth than does the wood cutter's labor. By the same standard we naturally assume that the income of the teacher will be in proportion to the wealth producing capacity of the graduates.

Negroes are willing to work, but reluctant to pioneer, and despite the many negroes that have attended schools, there are very few negro business men, and the negro produces very little wealth, what then shall we tax in order to raise the negro teachers pay?

On every side we hear that the negro wants equality but if white taxes support white schools, and negro taxes support negro schools, is that not equality?

The negro is right in demanding that negro tax money be used for negro benefit, that is equality.

But if the negro wants white tax money to raise the teacher pay, then he should drop the pretense of wanting equality, and honestly admit that it is help he wants and not justice.

The surest way for negro teachers to get more salary is by teaching their students to quit being job hunters, and become job makers, by starting enterprises of their own. Then the negroes will have wealth of their own to tax, and they may then have their own ideas of a proper salary for teachers.

There is no reason to believe that the negro can't operate his own stores, filling stations, garages or even small saw mills, and if they got half the negro trade, they could create substantial taxable wealth.

The puzzle of the age, is why the negro wants equality when he has had it ever since freedom was declared. Why doesn't someone start a clamor for the negro to use his equality.

The truth is, that those who clamor for equality, don't want equality at all. They want amalgamation. And there is a vast difference.

No group wants to be adopted by another group (or race) unless they themselves feel inferior.

All over the United States today the negro is permitted to use and enjoy all he earns, and he is permitted to earn just as much as his talents will allow. And if he asks more than this it is idle to talk about equality, and admitting that it is charity that he wants, he should be satisfied with whatever the white man gives him.

Pay for Teachers

To The News and Courier:

May I on behalf of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and personally thank you for the fine editorial in The News and Courier of February 1, "The Way Out is Plain", in which you make the unequivocal statement that The News and Courier "can think of no ground upon which a white teacher and a black teacher, in public schools, holding first grade certificates, should be paid on different scales".

Some persons, both white and negro, Northern and Southern, were fearful that action by the N. A. A. C. P. in courts of law and of public opinion to equalize salaries of negro and white teachers might cause friction. The head of one of the great educational foundations which has done much to aid education in the South told me several years ago that he feared that such action would result in an increase in tension between the races and be the cause of much hostility on the part of white people. I told him at the time that I had more faith than he had in the intelligence and sense of justice of Southern white people. Recently I had much joy in pointing out that the results had proved that I was correct.

I hope very much that nothing will be done to change the system of free education in high schools for either whites or negroes in South Carolina. Basic in the N. A. A. C. P.'s campaign against educational inequality has been that we do not want one penny less paid to white teachers; most of them are underpaid as it is. We want, however, negro teachers paid no less on the basis of the standards, fairly applied, of education, ability and length of service. That is why the N. A. A. C. P. joined with others in urging revision of the federal aid-to-education bill. This measure originally provided for a federal grant on the basis of the number of educables in each state. We urged its amendment to a basis of need. We saw no reason why the more prosperous states, like New York, should receive from the federal government the same sum per child of school age as the poorer states, like South Carolina. We hope that this bill will be passed and thus enable states like South Carolina to raise the standards of education to a level which would be uniform throughout the country.

May I also comment on the front-page editorial in the same issue of The News and Courier and correct one misstatement. You declare that the N. A. A. C. P. is "largely financed by Northern white 'liberals'." Between 65 and 70 per cent of the income of the association is contributed by negroes, including a good number in South Carolina. The balance of our income is contributed by both Southern and Northern white people who believe in the principles and program of the association. Membership is open to all persons, white or negro, Northern or Southern, who believe that justice and democracy should not be abridged by color or race.

Finally, this same editorial implies criticism of the action of the association in securing a stay of execution of an Alabama negro who we have reason to believe was unjustly convicted because of his race. This action was taken by appeal to the regularly constituted machinery of the law. Would The News and Courier forbid negroes being given the protection of the courts as is provided in the Constitution of the United States? I can think of no more effective way of driving negroes into Communism or other revolutionary movements than by such denial.

Ever sincerely,
WALTER WHITE
Secretary.

South Carolina Teachers Reject Pay Compromise

Spurn Offer To Lengthen Terms In Lieu Of Equal Salaries

MAR 28 1941

COLUMBIA, S. C.—An offer to accept longer school terms and bus transportation for Negro schools, in lieu of salaries on a parity with those being paid white teachers was rejected this week by representatives of the Palmetto State Teachers' association, it was reported in authentic quarters. The offer, it was reported, was made by state officials to the PSTA agents as a compromise in the efforts of Negro teachers to have their salaries hiked some $400 annually in compliance with recent Supreme Court rulings which outlawed salary differentials, based on racal identity in southern schols.

MAR 28 1941

In rejecting the proposed compromise it was cited that the efforts of the PSTA were aimed solely at correcting salary defferences and further, that details and matters incident to longer terms and bus transportation had not been studied by the committee of the body.

Negro teachers sought of the state legislature a few weeks ago, equalization of salaries in order that a court fight will not be necessary in South Carolina. Joint committees from the house and senate have taken the request under advisement and announced that funds are lacking for the parity of salaries. The PSTA hold its annual meeting in Columbia next week-end, April 3-5 and it is expected that the matter of equalizing salaries will occupy first business of the meeting.

Educators Talk Salaries With Negro Leaders

Board Takes No Action But Begins 'Long Study' Of Certificate Report

Representatives of Negro school teachers appeared before the state board of education at a long session here today on the question of state-paid salaries for these teachers, but Governor Burnet R. Maybank said the board has taken no action and that it was just beginning a "thorough study" of the report of the special committee which delved into the matter during the spring.

The governor, who is chairman ex-officio of the board, said it was likely that some weeks would be required for the study that the board has undertaken.

J. P. Burgess, of the Palmetto Education (Negro teachers') association and M. F. Whittaker, president of the State Colored college, at Orangeburg, represented the Negro teachers at today's meeting of the board.

Gov. Maybank said Burgess and Whittaker said they hoped to reach an understanding in South Carolina, "without outside help."

The problem before the board, and one which was before the general assembly of the state, is the recent supreme court opinion holding that there can be no differential in state-paid salaries as between various races.

The report of the special committee which studied the question recommended a new system of certification of teachers in this state, under which teachers would have been paid according to their grade (or merit as teachers), and this was later translated into bill form and introduced in the general assembly, but never passed.

Subsequently, the assembly voted an increase in the salaries of teachers of $10 a month, but leaders point out that this failed to solve the problem of the differential between the scales of pay for white and Negro teachers.

And this problem remained as the board met today and began what may be a prolonged study of the situation. Meeting with the board were two members of the special committee which made the study—Senaotr W. Brantley Harvey, of Beaufort, chairman of the senate committee on education, and D. W. Robinson, Jr., Columbia attorney. Mr. Robinson explained in detail the findings and recommendations of the special committee.

The indications were that nothing immediate would be recommended. And there was no indication that the governor planned immediate action on the bill which raised teachers' pay. This bill was passed on the last day of the 1941 session and the governor has not taken action. He could sign, or veto it or let it become law without his signature.

TEACHERS' SALARY ISSUE LAGS; BILL KITES SALARIES $10

JUN 28 1941

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 26 (ANP) — Gov. Burnett R. Maybank declared Thursday that he had "no idea" of signing a bill increasing salaries of all South Carolina teachers $10 a month unless it was clearly understood what the results would be.

The bill went to the governor for signature minus an amendment which would have provided $152,000 for increases in the salaries of Negro teachers. The amendment was struck out when the measure was passed on the final day of the legislative session.

TO STUDY ISSUES

Representatives of Negro teachers, J. P. Burgess of the Palmetto Education Association, and President M. F. Whittaker, of South Carolina State college, met last week with the State Board of Education and said they hoped to reach an "understanding in South Carolina without outside help."

Maybank in his capacity of ex-officio chairman of the board said, "We are going into this matter thoroughly, and are not going into any precipitate action. We want to do what is best for all concerned and we will be guided by the best minds in the state."

JUN 28 1941

A report submitted by a specially appointed group of legislators who studied educational problems of the state was passed over by the general assembly. Gov. Maybank said the board planned to make a detailed study of the committee's findings.

INTERESTING VIEWPOINT.

While speaking of more pay for Negro school teachers, Senator Sawyer of Georgetown said, as reported in The State last Sunday:

"They're not going to pay the Negroes money, supreme court or no supreme court. If the supreme court does say we must pay the Negroes, how are they going to make us do it? Are they going to send the army to South Carolina to make us do it?....We're running this government."

Senator Sawyer, it appears, has been reading John C. Calhoun, who died a long, long time ago; longer in events, perhaps, than in years.

S. C. TEACHERS TAKE SALARY FIGHT TO THE STATE SENATE

MAR 2 1941

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (ANP) — Members of the Palmetto State Teachers association, appearing last Saturday before a joint meeting of the Senate finance and House ways and means committees, renewed their request for a salary increase for colored teachers.

The increase, sought for the next two-year period, would bring the salaries of colored teachers up to parity with white teachers, of similar status. This would conform with a recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court which held that states could not set up a separate salary basis for white and Negro teachers.

Favorable action by the general assembly would forestall any legal action by colored teachers to require the State to boost their salaries.

Involves Million Increase

Estimates based on figures from the department of education showed that the state government would have to add about $1,000,000 to the $2,000,000 it now contributes to Negro teachers' salaries, and school districts would have to add to their present annual appropriations of about $200,000 an amount close to $1,200,000.

Allowing for the difference in the length of their teaching terms, the present statewide Negro teacher average for 5,600 employed would be raised from $380 a year to $780 a year. The state would bear $170 of the $400 increase, and the school districts would be required to increase their contribution by $230 for each Negro teacher.

MAR 2 1941

The length of school terms is left to the discretion of district trustees, but the state pays on salaries of both whites and Negroes up to eight months. At present, white schools run 175 days a year and Negro schools 147.

Allowing for the difference in the length of the school terms, South Carolina would increase its total expenditure for Negro teachers' salaries to approximately $4,400,000 if the general assembly meets the request of the Palmetto association.

THE STATUS OF THE NEGRO TEACHERS

MAR 1 1941

Negro teachers in South Carolina are asking for equal salaries and eight months school term. These demands are just and right. Negro teachers contribute much to the general welfare of the state. MAR 1 1941

We believe that there is a better day ahead for all teachers. Legislation for one group will help all teachers in our schools.

There are 5,600 Negro teachers in South Carolina and not 1,000 of these teachers have their registration certificates. As a whole Negro teachers are not voting-citizens and the man without a ballot regardless of his college delot is without value in the body politic. Whatever the white man does in the legislature or otherwise to help the Negro race is done largely because of the sympathy he has for the race. The man without the ballot, regardless of his college degrees, is worth much as a political asset.

Educational Leaders of State Meet, Discuss School Matters

School problems, including school finances were discused at a dinner conference held at the Wade Hampton hotel Monday night, among those present being representatives of the South Carolina Education, the state department of education and the state board of education.

E. R. Crow, president of the Education association, called the meeting, and when asked about it yesterday said that no action was taken and that there was merely a discussion of some of the problems of education in the state. Such conferences he believes helpful to the solution of school problems and he hopes to have other representative groups meet from time to time.

Dr. James H. Hope, state superintendent of education, said problems of schools were considered.

Equalization of salaries for similarly qualified white and Negro teachers and equal terms for the white and Negro schools are matters claiming the attention of leaders over the South, and much interest has been taken in the action in Virginia in this matter where a compromise was effected.

School salaries and school terms bear on school finances, as does operation of school buses.

President Crow expressed the opinion that conferences of groups from various bodies, dealing with the schools, would serve useful purposes and aid in bringing about a helpful program.

NEGRO TEACHERS ASK DOUBLED PAY

State Would Bear $170 of $400 Average Boost, Districts $230

Columbia, Feb. 16.—(AP): South Carolina's expenditure for negro teachers' salaries will be more than doubled in the next two years if the requests of the Palmetto state teachers association are met.

The association, apeparing before a joint meeting of the senate finance and house ways and means committee, asked that negro teachers' salaries be increased during the next two years so that they would be on the same basis as the salary scale for white teachers.

A recent decision of the United States supreme court held that states could not set up a separate salary basis for white and negro teachers.

The association requested that negro teachers' salaries be increased so that it would not be necessary to institute legal proceeding to require the state to boost negro salaries.

Estimates based on figures from the department of education showed that the state government would have to add about $1,000,000 to the $2,000,000 it now contributes to negro teachers' salaries, and school districts would have to add to their present annual appropriation of about $200,000 an amount close to $1,200,000.

Allowing for the difference in the length of their teaching terms, the present statewide negro teacher average for 5,600 employed would be raised from $380 a year to $780 a year. The state would bear $170 of the $400 increase, and the school districts would be required to increase their contribution by $230 for each negro teacher.

The length of school terms is left to the discretion of district trustees, but the state pays on salaries of both whites and negroes up to eight months. At present, white schools run 175 days a year and negro schools 147.

Allowing for the difference in the length of the school terms, South Carolina would increase its total expenditure for negro teachers' salaries to approximately $4,400,000 if the general assembly meets the request of the negro association.

Teachers' Pay Fight Taken To S. C. Senate

FEB 23 1941

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(ANP)—Members of the Palmetto State Teachers' Association, appearing Saturday before a joint meeting of the Senate finance and House ways and means committee, renewed their request for a salary increase for colored teachers.

The increase sought for the next two-year period, would bring the salaries of colored teachers up to parity with white teachers, of similar status. This would conform with a recent decision of the U. S. Supreme court which held that states could not set up a separate salary basis for white and Negro teachers.

Favorable action by the general assembly would forestall any legal action by colored teachers to require the State to boost their salaries.

Estimates based on figures from the department of education showed that the state government would have to add about $1,000,000 to the 2,000,000 it now contributes to Negro teachers' salaries, and school districts would have to add to their present annual appropriation of about $200,000 an amount close to $1,200,000.

Allowing for the difference in the length of their teaching terms, the present state-wide Negro teacher average for 5,600 employed would be raised from $380 a year to $780 a year. The state would bear $170 of the $400 increase, and the school districts would be required to increase their contribution by $230 for each Negro teacher.

Negro Teachers Ask Pay Raised To White Level

Equality In Salaries In Two Years Is Sought By S. C. Association

The finance committees of the South Carolina general assembly had before them today a petition from the Negro school teachers association for salaries at the same scale as those paid to white teachers "so that court action in South Carolina will not be necessary."

Not only did the Negro teachers ask for higher salaries, but the statement of their association, as presented to the two committees meeting in joint session, but they also petitioned for an eight-month term and for transportation of Negro pupils "where needed."

The reference to "a court action" grows out of the recent United States supreme court opinion holding that states cannot have different salary schedules for white and Negro teachers. The Negro teachers' association's statement said they hoped to avoid a court action. It asked for no set amount of money but said it was "seemingly impossible to encourage the Negro teachers to carry on as they have unless they get some financial relief."

Six objectives listed in the petition follow:

1. Teachers with similar training and performing the same class of work be paid the same salary.
2. Equalization to begin 1941-42 school year.
3. Complete equalization in two years.
4. All schools operate not less than eight months.
5. At least one accredited high school in each county free of tuition to all children of the county.
6. Transportation be allowed where needed.

The association represents approximately 5,600 Negro teachers.

FAVOR MORE PAY FOR TEACHERS

Special Legislative Committee Recommends Increase For Negroes

Columbia, April 17—Increased pay for "qualified" Negro school teachers and longer terms for negro schools has been recommended to the general assembly by a special committee appointed recently to study the state's education laws.

Other recommendations included:

Sharp reduction of the state's 1,738 school districts.

Popular election of county boards of education and selection of county superintendents of education by the board.

Discontinuance of state aid for pupil transportation.

The recommendation for the longer Negro schoolterm specifically proposed an increase from an average of 147 days to 175 days a year, the average for white schools. Negro teachers salary increase would cost the state 'not more than $152,720" more a year.

More general recommendations:

Creation of a teachers' certificate division of the state department of education "to immediately work out a satisfactory plan of teacher certification," continuation by the state board of the study of the problems which have been mentioned in this report;" a $25,000 annual appropriation for support of the proposed teachers' certificate division and another $25,000 for a "comprehensive" study of public education by the state board.

The committee was composed of D. W. Robinson, Columbia attorney, State Superintendent of Education James H. Hope, Chairman W. B. Harvey of the senate education committee. Chairman John H. Porter, of the house education committee; E. R. Crow of Columbia president of the State Education (Teachers) association.

What Answer to This?

On the subject of more pay for negro teachers The (Columbia) State thus quotes Senator Sawyer of Georgetown:

"They're not going to pay the Negroes money, supreme court or no supreme court. If the supreme court does say we must pay the Negroes, how are they going to make us do it? Are they going to send the army to South Carolina to make us do it? . . . We're running this government."

If one hires two carpenters, one white and one colored, and they do an equal day's work in quantity and quality, The News and Courier holds that one should pay them equal wages. The state is the employer of public school teachers.

Fiscal Hearing To Be Resumed

Committee Still Hopes To Finish Important Phase Of Work Wednesday

The senate finance committee and the house of representatives committee on ways and means, meeting jointly, were to resume this afternoon their hearings for state departments and institutions—and in addition had scheduled a hearing for representatives of the South Carolina Education (teachers') association.

On the question of salaries, the joint committee was to hear the representatives of white teachers this afternoon and the representatives of Negro teachers on Wednesday afternoon.

Nearing the completion of its long series of hearings, the joint committee, meeting at 3 p. m., had scheduled the following hearings for this afternoon:

Winthrop college.
Department of education.
State teachers' association.
Rural Electrification authority.
State highway department.

Senator R. M. Jefferies, of Coleton, chairman of the senate finance committee, announced last week that the joint committee hoped to complete hearings Wednesday. Then it would begin the writing of an appropriations-revenue measure to be submitted to the assembly.

It was expected that the joint committee's sub-committee on revenue would make a report to the entire committee this afternoon. This sub-committee has been studying possible means of increasing revenue.
